

CLASS [REDACTED]

BOOK [REDACTED]

EARLHAM COLLEGE
LIBRARY

(RICHMOND, INDIANA)

BOUGHT WITH THE LIBRARY FUND

ACCESSION No. 13504

INDEX FOR VOLUME XI.

The American Friend

1904

Address of Joshua L. Bailey at the W. C. T. U. Convention 807
 All Sinners 848
 Ancient Meeting House, An 657
 Arbitration Conference, The 41
 Associated Indian Committee Work, The..E. M. Wistar 347

Baptism as Viewed by Friends 312
 Baptism as Viewed by Friends.....Abijah J. Weaver 328
 Battle Cry of To-dayMary Sibbitt 126
 "Behold, I Stand at the Door and Knock" 362
 Belief and Faith 264
 Benjamin Frankland 316
 Benjamin F. Trueblood on Arbitration..Stanley Yarnall 295
 Bible and Spiritual Growth, TheEdward Judson 743
 Bible Institute of Indiana, Western and Wilmington Yearly Meetings, The 544
 Bible as Literature, TheDaisy Barr 195
 Bible School an Evangelistic Force ..J. Lindley Spicer 575 Bit of History, A 497

BORN:

Andrews, 62; Baird, 712; Bowles, 501; Butler, 748; Cash 712; Copeland, 562; Cox, 32; Dillingham, 732; Foster, 337; Freeman, 484; Haines, 100; Harrison, 438; Haworth, 32; Holding, 470; Jeffries, 598; Jones, 517; Kenworthy, 352; Lamb, 470; Lewis, 712; Little, 420; Mekeel, 533; Pemberton, 484; Pennington, 712; Reynolds, 517; Stein, 613; Taylor, 132; Thomas, 762; Towle, 132; Votan, 284; Wall, 533; Wheeler, 132; White, 794.

Cambridgeshire 609

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR:

Topic for First month 17th, 1904, 11; 24th, 29; 31st, 46; Second month 7th, 59; 14th, 79; 21st, 95; 28th, 113; Third month 6th, 129; 13th, 149; 20th, 166; 27th, 182; Fourth month 3d, 198; 10th, 215; 17th 234; 24th, 250; Fifth month 1st, 267; 8th, 283; 15th, 303; 22d, 318; 29th, 335; Sixth month 5th, 349; 12th, 372; 19th, 385; 26th, 403; Seventh month 3d, 417; 10th, 435; 17th, 451; 24th, 467; 31st, 482; Eighth month 7th, 500; 14th, 515; 21st, 531; 28th, 547; Ninth month 4th, 561; 11th, 579; 18th, 596; 25th, 610; Tenth month 2d, 626; 9th, 643; 16th, 662; 23d, 678; 30th, 693; Eleventh month 6th, 709; 13th, 730; 20th, 746; 27th, 760; Twelfth month 4th, 776; 11th, 791; 18th, 811; 25th, 830; First month 1st, 1905, 850; 8th, 871.

Christian Treasure, TheTheodore L. Cuyler 742
 Clear Shining After RainTheodore L. Cuyler 178
 Closed Meeting House, TheJames Bean 826
 Colorado as a Field for FriendsM. Z. Kirk 591
 Continuity of Service, TheC. A. Salmond 757
 Continuous Leadership of the Spirit, The. Amory H. Bradford 866

CORRESPONDENCE:

Another Interested Friend, 115; Beale, J. Bewley, 351; Beeson, Samuel, 81; Bewly, C. Arthur, 483; Bewley, C. Arthur, 680; Bufkin, Thos. K., 268; Carter, Eva M., 777; Cattell, Wm. P. S., 548; Cook, Willis R., 99; Cope, Gilbert, 252; Denkhous, Mathias, 580; Douglas, John Henry, 350; Eddy, C. R., 335; E. 183; Fry, John, 483; Gause, Eber N., 437; Gibson, Isaac T., 437; G., 235; G. W. C., 98; Hadley, L. I., 13; Hartley, L. Ella, 283; Hanson, Milton, 13; Hartley, L. Ella, 236; Hartley, L. Ella, 336; Haven, W. I., 168; Haworth, William P., 320; Hedges, Emma, 61; Hinshan, L., 252; Hobbs, L. L., 304; Hobbs, L. L., 437; Hotchkiss, Willis R., 304; "Indian Rights Association," 873; Interested Friend, An, 81; Jay, Allen, 252; Jones, Charles H., 251; Jones, Charles H., 873; Jones, Elizabeth B., 201; Jones, Sylvester, 98; Lawrence, D. W., 680; Martin, Z. L., 850; Meader, Olney T., 373; Moore, George H., 483; Morris, C. F., 304; Morris, C. F., 664; Newlin, C. E., 580; Nicholson, Timothy, 777; Nicholson, Timothy, 873; Peaslee, A. N., 681; Pope, Hannah M., 793; Purdy, Alex. M., 304; Purdy, Alex. M., 419; Raidabaugh, P. W., 336; Replogle, Charles and May, 793; Redgway, Robt. and Jennie, 469; Small, Cornelius R., 183; Smith, D. Wheeler, 168; Stalker, Charles H., 252; Stout, Lewis E., 516; Swift, Henry H., 501; Swift, W. L., 350; S., J. E., 268; Tatum, William E., 516; Weaver, Mary J., 168; Weesner, E.N., 168; Welling, Frank E., 47; Wood, Thomas, 418; Woodard, T. R., 579; Worth, Wm. W., 236; Wright, Francis A., 873; Wright, Francis A., 418.

Defenders of the FaithJohn E. M'Fadyen 605
 Desert Place, AJohn E. McFadyen 654

DIED:

Akin, Sarah, 217; Albertson, Asenath, 337; Albertson, Mary, 438; Allen, Alfred A., 814; Arnold, Rachel J., 62; Axton, Malinda V., 320; Bailey, Albert R., 82; Bailey, Jedediah, 168; Bailey, Jonathan, 814; Baker, Elizabeth, 62; Baker, Jemima, 100; Bales, Delilah P. Cook, 762; Bangham, Martha Ann, 732; Barnett, Flora A., 337; Barringer, George L., 712; Baylies, John B., 517; Binford, Benajah, 613; Binford, S. A., 14; Birdsall, Julia A., 48; Blackledge, Rhoda Stanley, 14; Blair, Jane H., 533; Blair, Lydia Bowerman, 794; Bond, Charles, 269; Bond, Louisa, 352; Bond, Louisa R., 630; Bond, Sarah A. (Lizmore), 712; Bosley, Della Stout, 217; Bottroff, Lewis, 269; Bowles, Lydia, 562; Bradfield, Emma Dell, 581; Brownell, Sands, 794; Butler, Benjamin, 217; Cadbury, Hannah, 665; Carey, Isaac, 100; Carey, Joel T., 215; Carter, Anna S., 438; Cartland, Isabel, 184; Chapman, Cecil, B., 48; Clark, Alexander, 438; Coate, Fannie J., 470; Coggeshall, Anuel H., 732; Compton, Amos S., 762; Cook, Elizabeth, 284; Cox, Hannah, 152; Crossman, Deborah Wing 168; Crumley, Isaac Newton, 116; Culver, Susan Culver, 14; Curtis, Flarel, 533; Darby, Clara Belle, 100; Davis, Roxana A., 517; Dean, Phebe, 116; De Weese, Hannah Hartley, 32; Diggs, Anna Peacock, 202; Dixon, Solomon, 438; Douglas, Nathan, 420; Draper, S. C., 269; Edge, Dr. John P., 202; Edgerton, Ruth Ann, 420; Edgerton, William, 202; Elliott, Exum, 168; Ellis, Seth, H., 501; Fawcett, Elizabeth, A., 269; Fletcher, Elizabeth D., 814; Fox, Harriet B., 202; Frazier, Caroline, 337; Frazier, Solomon, 732; Garbutt, Eliza J., 748; Green, Joseph, 168; Griffen, Elizabeth Wanzer, 48-62; Hadley, David N., 794; Hadley, Jesse, 100; Hadley, Margaret, 645; Hadley, Noah, 62; Hadley, Simon, 217; Hadley, William, 762; Hadley, William Abel, 284; Haines, Samuel, 794; Hall, J. Della, 420; Hammond, Nathan, 168; Hanson, Elizabeth, 832; Harrison, Joseph, 581; Harrison, Joseph, 517; Haviland, Judith M., 337; Hawkins, Amy

THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

Hill, 217; Haworth, Arthur L., 697; Haworth, Clarence Charles, 62; Heald, Joseph, 681; Heald, Rachel, 14; Heaton, Reuben, 598; Hedgecock, David, 453; Hedges, Lillius Cox, 581; Helton, John, 14; Henley, Eleanor, 517; Hobbs, Laura R., 645; Hobson, Oscar, 116; Hockett, Asa, 100; Hockett, Rachel, 62; Hockett, Sarah Newby, 388; Hodgin, Amy Edna, 470; Hallowell, Walter Kent, 152; Hoover, Solomon Y., 284; Horner, Mattie Irene, 253; Hoskins, Ruth, 152; Howell, Harriet S., 14; Hubbard, Nathan E., 253; Hunnicutt, Martha A., 598; Hunt, Elma B., 284; Hunt, Reuben G., 533; Hussey, Hannah, 337; Hussey, Lawrence, 613; Isaac, Hannah M. N., 420; Jackson, James, 562; Jefferis, John T., 152; Jenkins, Fannie, 598; Jessup, Malinda Kellum, 748; Jewell, Ellen Maxfield, 305; Johnson, Anna M., 794; Johnson, Joseph Grissell, 352; Johnson, Rachel, 269; Johnson, Thomas, W. 352; Jones, Edwin, 501; Jones, Margaret Helen, 517; Jones, Rhoda, 352; Jones, Theresa Lewis, 613; Kellum, Edith, 453; Keltner, Hester M., 832; Kemp, Emily Woodard, 832; Kenworthy, Eliza Gregg, 517; Kimbal, Flora, 184; Knight, John Leslie, 184; Knowles, Katie J., 337; Lester, Mary Hannah, 453; Lewis, Enoch (M. D.), 217; Lewis, John W., 453; Lewis, Nancy J., 100; Liesten Seltz, Nancy A., 337; Lindley, Eliza Jane, 82; Lord, James, 184; Lowe, William, 352; Macomber, Joshua L., 517; Marshall, Christina S., 373; Maxfield, Saloma Cook, 82; McKinley, Esther D., 388; McPherson, Joseph Lewis, 284; Miles Eliz. H., 116; Miller, Thomas Ellwood, 581; Montgomery, Dr. James Worth, 320; Morgan, Isaac W., 549; Morris, Joseph, 832; Mote, Rhoda-Steddum, 405; Mott, Hazel, 373; Myers, Jessie B., 533; Neal, Marietta T., 533; Newby, Martha C., 778; Newby Mary B., 470; Newlin, Bertha, 373; Newlin, Kersey, 337; Newsum, Chirstiana, 517; Nichols, Phebe A., 762; Nordyke, Bernice, 732; Oliphant, Lydia B., 681; Osborn, Jane P., 202; Osborn, Martha Trueblood, 202; Parker, Eli G., 549; Parker, Hannah M., 48; Parker, Joseph R., 613; Patlee, Amy Melva, 665; Peebles, Matilda, 762; Perisho, Jesse C., 284; Perkins, Patience A., 116; Post, Betsy Haviland, 630; Post, Robert, 14; Pritchard, Calvin Andrew, 748; Purinton, Elisha H., 337; Pyle, Nancy F., 100; Ratcliff, Rebecca Townsend, 284; Ratliff, Susan, 269; Rich, Joseph Floyd, 217; Richards, Ethel, 665; Richardson, Joseph T., 732; Ridgeway, Malinda, 337; Ruch, Ferdinand Edward, 116; Sampson, Emma, 284; Schooley, James, 32; Schoonoven, Henry, 748; Schriver, Ella, 373; Sherwood, Emily Neale, 184; Shoemaker, Margaret Ann, 420; Smith, Barclay J., 100; Smith Catherine Morgan, 732; Smith, Mary, 14; Standing, Wilford George, 152; Stanfield, Frank, 152; Stanley, Elam, 100; Stanton, Hannah F., 549; Stevens, Rachel H., 420; Stout, Amos, 697; Stout, Dora, 453; Sutton, John H., 32; Taylor, Lauretta May, 253; Terrill, Lydia L., 337; Thomas, Joanna Bell, 420; Thompson, Joseph, 32; Thompson, Rachel, 217; Thornburg, Edward, 337; Thorne, Mary, 549; Thorne, Susannah, 320; Timberlake, Benjamin B., 420; Tohee, Leah, 438; Towle, Jane, 202; Varney, Anna C., 62; Varney, Eliza P., 202; Viers, Olive B., 284; Vorhis, Luke, 253; Walton, Rufus R., 352; Waring, Sarah, 62; Wasson, Calvin H., 438; Way, Mindie L., 613; Webber, Edwin W., 613; Weesner, Nannie E., 581; White, Angeline Hough, 32-62; White, Elizabeth D., 284; White, Francis, 630; White, Martha A., 152; White, Mary R., 217; White, Mattie, 168; Willets, Jehu L., 697; Williams, Catharine, 352; Williams, Mary, 549; Wixom, Catherine Carmen, 420; Wood, Gail, 794; Wood, James D., 352; Wood, Louis M., 62; Woodard, Adella, 373; Woodard, Michael F., 352; Woolman, Elizabeth S., 152; Wright, William, 697; Wyman, Sarah, 337; Young, Elizabeth, (Winder,) 681.
Each His Own Lamp	J. R. Miller 806
Earnest Workers Anniversary	315
EDITORIALS:
Another Word About Epistle	397
Apostle of Simplicity, An	635
Arch Street Centennial, The	380
Are Friends Interested In Quakerism	23
Art and Life	175
Battle at Home, The	24
Be Not Anxious	395
Becoming Like Little Children	427
Call to the Ministry, The	259
Call to Young Friends, A	539
Can Christianity Still Draw Men	175
Chasm of Sin, The	755
Children and the Theatre	159
Childlike Spirit, The	843
Christian Family, The	91
Church Attendance in New York City	23
Churches in the United States	71
Coming Yearly meetings	243
Crutches in Religion	823
Death of Francis White, The	620
Disease of Formality, The	39
Dublin Yearly Meeting	344
Election, The	756
Evidences of the Resurrection	243
Fact of Sin, The	739
Father and Mother Both Gone	56
Fighting the Saloon	571
First Publishers of Truth, The	604
For the Glory of God	459
Friends in the City of New York	359
Friends in New England	396
Friends in 1903	3
Gains and Losses of a Year, The	55
God and Man at Once	771
Great Work, A	275
Harriet Green Memorial Fund, The	125
Haverford Summer School, The	427
Heart of the Message, The	491
Heroism of Faith, The	207
Home as the Maker of Quakerism, The	555
Importance of Fellowship in Christian Life, The	191
Important Temperance Bill, An	92
Indian Scandal, The	208
Is God Tender-hearted?	587
Is There A Drift Toward Unitarianism?	460
Is Religion A Getting or A Giving?	143
It Works	635
Japan and Russia	39
Joined to the Lord in One Spirit	703
Kind of Consecration Needed, The	475
Learning to Live in A New World	507
London Yearly Meeting	395
Lord Thy God Is One God, The	671
Loss of Perspective	740
Love as the Principle of Fitness for the Kingdom	276
Love Versus Justice	687
Lovers of Truth	3
Making Crime by Reporting It	720
Men of Good Will	107
Message of Despair, The	411
Methodists on Temperance, The	360
Milk for Babies	159
Mohonk Arbitration Conference	379
Most Serious Scepticism, The	360
Movement for Better Divorce Laws, A	844
Needs of the Ministry, The	123
New England Yearly Meetings, An Editorial Letter	443
Now and Here	6
Ominous Liquor Bill, An	380
One Fact to Start With	651
One Taken and Another Left	327
Opening Exercises	176
Pastoral Care of the Membership	207
Plea for Morality, A	491
Portraits of George Fox	24
Preserve the Family Home	224
President's Message, The	824
"Pure Religion"	803
Quaker Ideals and "Frenzied Finance"	864
Religion in Work Dress	291
Religious Education Association, The	160
Religious Teachings in Our Institutions	539
Richard H. Thomas	671
Saloon Fellowship	192
Say to the Mountains, "Be Removed."	71
Setback in Maine, A	619
Seven Practical Suggestions	328
Shall We Have Priests	787
Signs of the Coming of the Kingdom of Heaven, The	223
Simple Life, The	787
Single Church for Rural Districts, A	311
Sins of Saints, The	523

THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

Soul Food	139	Jesus' Friend	Mark Guy Pearse 655
State of Society	508	Jesus Loves Me	Alix 789
Still Another Arbitration Victory	740	Joseph Harrison	577
Substitute for the Saloon	603	Joy a Christian Duty	James E. C. Sawyer 525
Talking About Quakerism	139	Joy of Belief, The	F. B. Meyer 429
Toward the Peace of the World	475
Tribute to Allen Jay, A	292	Law of Growth, The	George Matheson 479
True Succession, The	703	Layman's Religion, A	J. Brierley 845
Under the Juniper Tree	556	"Let No Man Despise Thee"	J. R. Hawkins 526
Value of Wanting, The	619	Letters from Japan	365
Vicariousness	719	License and Liquor Laws in 1706 ..	Jacob Lindley Spicer 496
Wanted—A Wise Leadership	740	Life and Light; Or, What is Christianity ..	Delia Rees 40
What not to Pray For	311	Light in the Desert, The	Clarence M. Case 161
What Came Nineteen Hundred Years Ago ..	863	Lips and the Life, The	Theodore L. Cuyler 346
What Shall the Isolate Young Friend Do ..	259	Literature, Its Place in Missionary Work ..	May M. Jones 448
Women in the Ministry	108
W. C. T. U. in Convention, The	803	"Lord, Shew Us the Father"	847
Working Together	411	Lord's Shut-ins, The	Theodore L. Cuyler 689
Yearly Meeting Epistle	343	Lord, Teach Us to Pray	G. Campbell Morgan 127
Editorial Notes, 24, 140, 176, 224, 244, 260, 344, 428, 444, 460, 523, 540, 571, 588, 604, 620, 652, 672, 704, 720, 756, 772, 804, 824, 844, 865.		Luminous Hours	James E. C. Sawyer 556
Education and Service	Rufus M. Jones 540	Lydia N. Blair	L. L. Hobbs 869
Educational Outlook	544
Effectual Prayer, The	Theodore L. Cuyler 125	Man with the Measuring Reed, The	Henry Force 573
Eleanor Henley	513	Marlboro	J. Lindley Spencer 434
Element and Virtues That Make for Peace.		MARRIED:
Wayne MacVeagh 414		Buckley-Bailey, 438; Carey-Gitchell, 712; Clark-Fosdick, 814; Cosand-Floyd, 168; Dixon-Pinkham, 453; Farr-Stevens, 549; Frederick-Lathrop, 116; Gidley-Day, 732; Green-Thompson, 152; Hadley-McCollum, 814; Harris-Trueblood, 533; Hiatt-Jessup, 814; Hunt-Woodard, 517; Jenkins-Heaton, 82; Jenkins-Kenney, 32; Jones-Johnson, 562; Matlack-Stokes, 613; Maxfield-Jenkins, 549; Moon-Hadley, 581; Morris-Westphal, 470; Murphy-Day, 814; Murphy-Garrity, 814; Pusey-White, 712; Richie-Wood, 305; Sanders-Jones, 48; Sayers-Talbert, 202; Scattergood-Emlen, 305; Smith-Newby, 517; Stanley-Butler, 152; Stevens-Earle, 732; Swift-Metcalf, 438; Terrell-Smith, 517; Tormohlen-James, 337; Trueblood-Hadley, 598; White-Baldwin, 832; Williams-Morris, 814; Wells-Shoemaker, 549; Wood-Birdsall, 613; Wright-White, 598.
Elizabeth T. Larkin	545	Message From the Far East to the Society of Friends in America, A	Gilbert Bowles 721
Encouragement to Hold Religious Conference in Eastern Yearly Meetings	658	"Me Ye Have Not Always"	John E. McFaden 846
English Laws of the Olden Time	J. Lindley Spicer 280	Mission Literature Again	W. Irving Kelsey 557
Epistle of the Corinthians to St. Paul, The.		Missionary Journeys of George Fox in Great Britain, The	John W. Cadbury, Jr. 244
Howard H. Brinton 26		Missionary Journeys of George Fox in Great Britain, The	John W. Cadbury, Jr. 262
		MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT:
Faith That Saves, The	Theodore L. Cuyler 143	Articles—
Farmington	J. L. Spicer 332	America Friends' Mission Work	386
First Declaration of Quaker Faith, The	397	Dignity of a Human Soul	436
For Sufferers	From the Note-book of R. B. M. 179	Empty Consecrations	81
Friends at High Point, North Carolina	368	Indians in Owen's Valley	215
Friends Judged by their Fruits	John Foster 529	Recent Figures from Two Fields	678
Fruits of the Holy Spirit, The	Theodore L. Cuyler 620	Winona Lake Conference, The	482
Fundamental Virtue, The	Robert E. Spicer 741	Work of the Friends' W. F. M. S.	597
Galilee and the Christian Life	Edward C. Moore 432	Africa:
God's Slow Making of Us	227	Africa Industrial Mission	250
		Extracts from Quarterly Report of the Friends' Africa Industrial Mission	627
Health for All	James E. C. Sawyer 788	Extracts of the F. A. I. M. Medical Report, Tenth Month 1st, 1904	872
Helps of Headwinds, The	Theodore L. Cuyler 572	Friends' Africa Industrial Mission	166
Hindering Causes, The	Levi T. Pennington 477	Friends' Africa Industrial Mission	303
Historic Relic, An	Walter C. Woodward 674	In the Africa Industrial Mission	678
How a Welsh Boy Became a Friend	639	In the Africa Industrial Mission	694
		In the Africa Industrial Mission	760-812
Ideals in Life	Augustus T. Murray 492	Quarterly Report of the F. A. I. M., Tenth Month 1st, 1904	871
Image, An	Delia Rees 756	Record of Fourteen Months	96
Imitation in the Religious Development of Children.		Alaska:
Irving King 345		Alaska Christians	303
Indian Tribes of Northern California	Hannah Bean 112	Friends' Mission, Kotzebue, Alaska	468
Influence of Friends in Colonial Pennsylvania.		Friends' Mission, Kotzebue, Alaska	548
Harlow Lindley 4		Friends' Mission, Kotzebue, Alaska	830
In Memorium of William Wendte	466	Kindly Remembered	731
International, Industrial and Individual Peace	622	Kotzebue Work	234
International Peace Congress, The	606	China:
International Peace Congress, The	688	The Situation in China	182
INTERNATIONAL LESSONS:		Dr. De Val in the Home-land (China)	746
Lesson for First Month, 17th, 1904, 10; 24th, 28; 31st, 45; Second month 7th, 58; 14th, 78; 21st, 94; 28th, 112; Third month 6th, 128; 13th, 148; 20th, 165; 27th, 181; Fourth month 3d, 197; 10th, 214; 17th, 233; 24th, 249; Fifth month 1st, 266; 8th, 282; 15th, 302; 22d, 317; 29th, 334; Sixth month 5th, 348; 12th, 371; 19th, 384; 26th, 402; Seventh month 3d, 416; 10th, 434; 17th, 450; 24th, 466; 31st, 481; Eighth month 7th, 499; 14th, 514; 21st, 530; 28th, 546; Ninth month 4th, 560; 11th, 578; 18th, 595; 25th, 610; Tenth month 2d, 625; 9th, 642; 16th, 661; 23d, 677; 30th, 692; Eleventh month 6th, 708; 13th, 729; 20th, 745; 27th, 759; Twelfth month 4th, 775; 11th, 790; 18th, 811; 25th, 829; First month, 1905, 1st, 849; 8th, 870.		Missionary Work in China	532
Is New England Decadent?	Wilmot R. Jones 108	Word from China	60
Is The Hague Court Now Open to All the Nations of the World?	75
Is There Any Great or Little With God	297
Jacob, or How Reformation Halts. Charles M. Woodman 636
Janie's Opportunity	Alix 848

THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

Cuba :				Record of the Olden Time.....	J. Lindley Spicer	211
At Banes, Cuba	167			Reform of Thomas, The		869
Cuban Work	11			Rejected Stones		656
Farewell Meeting for Edith Eva Terrell, A	11			Rejoicing at Guilford College.....		245
Notes from the Cuban Missions	694			Religious Meditation.....	John R. Mott	652
Our First Grave in Cuba	60			Reminiscences of Elizabeth Fry.....	P. M. Darton	435
Jamaica :				Resist not Evil.....	Wm. G. Hubbard	576
Visit to the Leper Home, Spanish Town, Jamaica, A	150			Richard H. Thomas.....		828
Plantain Garden River, Jamaica, West Indies	198			Rivers of Living Waters.....	R. Ella Levering	363
Horses, Harness and Wagon Wanted	663			Sacrament of Life, I, The.....	M. Catherine Albright	445
Japan :				Sacrament of Life, II, The.....	M. Catherine Albright	461
Brumana Conference, The	611			Salvation Army in Germany, The.....	J. J. Mills	293
Christians in the Japanese Army	664			Shall we Have a Yearly Meeting?	W. M. Perry	528
Extracts from Report of Annual Meeting of				Simple Life, The.....	Charles Wagner	704
Friends in Japan	403			Society of Friends in Denmark, The		246
Peace Meeting in Japan, A	663			Some Ancient Queries		465
Representative Meeting in Tokio	436			Some Hard-shell Estimates of Preachers.....	Paul B. Jenkins	827
Society of Friends in Japan, The	251			Some Needs in Modern Evangelism.....	Thomas Newlin	72
Mexico :				Some Notes of Historic Interest in Relation to La Grange
Annual Report of Friends' Mission at Natehuala,				Preparative Meeting		621
Mexico	709			Some Recent Religious Books		283
Friends in Mexico	303			SOME VIEWS ON PRESENT TOPICS:
"H," Matamoros, Mexico	30			Church at Play, The.....	Mead A. Kelsey	144-164
White Harvest Field, A	792			Church Work.....	Levi D. Barr	265
Palestine :				Ministers on the Stage, The.....	Mead A. Kelsey	790
Lebanon Hospital for the Insane	31			"One Shall Be Taken and the other Shall Be Left, The"
Ramallah, Jerusalem, Palestine	627			E. B. Mendenhall		726
Report of the Boys' Orphanage	319			One of Our Needs.....	Jonathan M. Steere	212
Philadelphia :				Our Message.....	Edwin L. Niles	641
Annual Meeting of the Philadelphia Missionary				Pastoral Care.....	Robert E. Pretlow	281
Association	113			Pastoral Care of the Membership, The
The Foreign Missionary Association of Friends of				Abijah J. Weaver		246
Philadelphia	792			Pastoral Need.....	Mary E. Miers	298
Philadelphia Friends' Missionary Association	79			Pastoral Visiting	J. Lindley Spicer	179
Modern Quaker, A.....	Amelia M. Gummere	527		Pastoral Work	Ellison R. Purdy	316
Mohonk Indian Conference, The.....		725		Pastoral Work of a Congregation, The	Isaac Sharpless	230
More Letters From Japan.....	Mary Nitobe	428		Quakerism—Radical and Persistent.....	W. P. Pinkham	559
Morning and Evening		433		Social Pastoral Work.....	Eliza H. Carey	333
Mystery of Life and the Easter Revelation, The.....		228		Thoughts on Preaching	J. Edwin Jay	57
Mystery of Suffering, The.....	George Freeman	867		Unsettling Men's Faith.....	S. A. Wood	744
New Palestine, The.....	Russell H. Conwell	381		"Strangers and Pilgrims"	R. Ella Levering	93
Next Revival, The.....	Theodore L. Cuyler	25		Suffering and the Soul.....	F. B. Meyer	56
Next World's Legal Tender, The.....	H. W. Warren	211		Suffering of Christ, The.....	Alexander MacLaren	676
North Carolina Yearly Meetings		543		Sweetening the Bitter Things.....	Theodore L. Cuyler	773
Nourishment of the Psalm, The.....	Robert E. Speer	672		Symphony of Prayer, The.....	E. R. Hendrix	296
On Receiving Good Things with Joy.....	F. B. Myer	364		Task of Happiness		276
One Standard of Conduct.....	Charles M. Sheldon	7		Task of Joy, The	M. Catharine Albright	825
"Opportunity and Responsibility".....	S. B. Woodward	383		TEMPERANCE DEPARTMENT, 8, 76, 146, 230, 299, 369, 659,
Oregon Yearly Meeting.....		498				727, 809
Our Comforter.....	Edward Judson	865		Texts that have Helped and Comforted Me
Our Father.....	Edward Judson	588		Theodore L. Cuyler		226
Our Spiritual Bodies.....	Alix	367		That They all May be One	E. M. B.	142
Our Spiritual Bodies.....	Alix	367		That Men May Glorify God.....	R. Ella Levering	209
Passing the Golden Milestone.....	Mary Brownell	229		Theatre-going for Children		162
Peace of God, The		75		Theoscope, The.....	H. W. Warren	381
POEMS:				Things Said in London Yearly Meeting.....	J. R. Miller	401
Broadwater Voices.....	Thomas Wistar	327		This One Thing.....	J. R. Miller	512
Centennial Poem.....	Francis B. Gummere	863		"Thus Saith the Lord"	Mary M. Hobbs	176
Forenoon and Afternoon and Night.....	E. R. Gill	123		Tragedy of Judas, The.....	Charles M. Woodman	509
"God Never Closed His Week on Wednesday Eve,"				True Minister, A Man of His Time, A.....	John M. English	589
Dr. R. H. Thomas		831		Truth vs. Imagination.....	Ezra Lamborn	625
His Raiment.....	Lindley M. Stevens	719		Two Bodies of Friends		331
House, But Not A Home, A	Anon.	507		Unconscious Influence.....	Alix	577
In Memoriam, Charles Leroy Michener, M. A., Mary				Unity of Life, The.....	James E. C. Sawyer	278
Grove Chawner		459		Using Wealth in Wisdom	W. L. P.	827
In The Morning	Lindley M. Stevens	651		War Passing Out.....	A Veteran of War	774
Open The Door of Your Heart.....	Edward Everett Hale	92		What the World Owes to the Quakers.....		27
"You Touched A Tender Spot, Old Man"				"What Sayest Thou of Thyself?".....	M. Catharine Albright	361
D. D. Jenkins		293		What Time Is It?	Lindley M. Stevens	476
Pointer, A.....	Alfred Cook	111		"Where the Body is"	Lindley M. Stevens	361
Penal Reforms in America.....		724		Where There is No Vision.....	John A. Simpson	673
Perils of Our Virtues, The.....	Robert E. Speer	208		Why Was Jesus Tempted?	Rollin A. Sawyer	277
Personal Element in the Vocal Ministry, The				William B. Morgan		196
John Wilhelm Rowntree		804		William Gaston Coffin		265
Prayer in the Life of the Christian.....	Charles E. Jefferson	398		Woodbrooke Settlement for Religious and Social Study, The		530
Preaching Outside of the Pulpit.....	Theodore L. Cuyler	524		Worship, A Lost Art.....	A. F. Swift	225
Preparation for Prayer	G. Campbell Morgan	43		W. C. Edinger.....		594
Problem of World-wide Evangelization, The	Thomas Newlin	14		YEARLY MEETING REPORTS:
Progress of Quakerism, The.....	Edwin D. Starbuck	192		Baltimore, 774; California, 463; Canada, 449; Indiana,
Quakerism.....	Amos Sanders	92		675; Iowa, 623; Kansas, 707; New York, 399 Ohio,
Quakerism and the Scholar.....	William Wistar Comfort	412		608; Philadelphia, 276; Western, 640; Wilmington, 593.

Walter Carpenter 1-1-1

The American Friend

Vol. XI

FIRST MONTH 7, 1904

No. 1

	PAGE
EDITORIALS.—Lovers of Truth.—Friends in 1903	3
Influence of Friends in Colonial Pennsylvania Harlow Lindley.	4
One Standard of Conduct. Charles M. Sheldon.	7
TEMPERANCE DEPARTMENT	8
THE INTERNATIONAL LESSON Lesson for First month 17, 1904.	10
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR Topic for First month 17, 1904.	11
MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT	11
CORRESPONDENCE
THINGS OF INTEREST AMONG OURSELVES, 13
DIED	14
EVENTS AND COMMENTS	15

"EARTH'S BEST WITNESS TO THE LIFE DIVINE."

*Not their own, ah! not from earth was flowing
That high strain to which their souls were tuned;
Year by year we saw them inly growing
Liker him with whom their hearts communed.
Then to Him they passed; but still unbroken
Age to age, lasts on that goodly line,
Whose pure lives are, more than all words spoken,
Earth's best witness to the life divine.*

—JOHN CAMPBELL SHAIRP.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.50 A YEAR ❁ ❁ ❁ PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
AMERICAN FRIEND PUBLISHING COMPANY, 718 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

We particularly invite the attention of the readers of "The American Friend" to this column. It will be found useful for almost everyone who wishes to advertise. The cost is 5c. per line each insertion. No advertisement is accepted for less than 25c. Cash with order.

The Conard & Jones Company, Rose Growers.
West Grove, Pa. Catalog Free.

OLD-FASHIONED grandfather clocks repaired at home. If yours needs attention send me a postal or, better, call. My store is within three minutes' walk of the Market Street ferries. Repairing of clocks and watches of every kind. Prompt service and moderate prices. W. L. Berry, Watchmaker and Jeweler, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

THE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION OF FRIENDS is in need of a man who can take charge of Cylinder and Job Presses, Folding Machines, Wire Stitcher, Gasoline Engine and such other machinery as is used in a first-class Printing Office. The man employed must be married, and a member of the Friends' Church, and come well recommended. Plainfield is only 14 miles from the State House at Indianapolis, and we are connected by trolley line and steam cars. The town is a beautiful and healthful village; the Friends have a large Meeting, Sabbath School and Christian Endeavor Society here, and the Western Yearly Meeting meets at this place every year. We have all the advantages of the city of Indianapolis, and half the expense of living in the city. I would be pleased to correspond with any one capable in this line and free for an engagement. Address P. W. RAIDABAUGH, Plainfield, Indiana.

FOR RENT.—One of the best stock and dairy farms in Nebraska. On term of years, with purchase option and on terms that, with industry and good management, the entire property can be paid for within ten years. $2000.00 required to purchase cattle, hogs, horses and machinery on the farm, 920 acres. Running water in each pasture. 300 acres in cultivation. Meadow, alfalfa land and timber. Address, Nebraska, Care of THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

EDMUND AUDI wishes to give private lessons in the French language. Refer to Asa S. Wing, 409 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia. Any persons desiring his services can communicate with him at 1832 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER.—Careful and accurate repairing, with prompt service, has brought me the custom of many Friends. Their patronage is particularly solicited. My store is nearest to the Market Street ferries, and is easy of access from every part of the city. W. L. Berry, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

WANTED.—Competent young woman as stenographer and typewriter. Address "G," office of AMERICAN FRIEND.

Delavau's Remedy

A SPECIFIC FOR
Whooping Cough and Croup

Also a safe and speedy cure for Bronchitis, Bronchial Catarrh and ordinary coughs. 50 Cents a Bottle, at Druggists, or

J. W. S. DELAVAU & CO., Propr's.
N. E. Cor. 6th and Wood Sts., Phila.

We know that every great friendship, though it calls imperatively for self-surrender, is still an enlargement of life, that here in very truth we find ourselves as we lose ourselves.—President H. C. King.

ALL SEAMEN

know the comforts of having on hand a supply of Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk. It can be used so agreeably for cooking, in coffee, tea and chocolate. Lay in a supply for all kinds of expeditions. Avoid unknown brands.

A quarter's worth of Ivory Soap will do more washing than you might suppose, and it may save more than one fine garment from ruin by preserving the color which cheap, impure soap would destroy.

Ivory Soap
99 ⁴⁴/₁₀₀ Per Cent. Pure.

Stenography, Typewriting, Mimeographing and Reporting

LYDIA ARETE CONN,
805 Provident Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

SHORTHAND TAUGHT BY MAIL

or in school. Each student receives personal attention. Moderate rates. Write for full information.

PROVIDENT SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND
805 Provident Building Philadelphia, Pa

Duty and to-day are ours; results and futurity belong to God.—Horace Greeley.

STENOGRAPHING, TYPEWRITING and MIMEOGRAPHING. Prices moderate.

MARY M. KITE
407 Lippincott Building, 12th and Filbert Sts., Phila.
Phone No. 3-33-00

A. M. ADAMS, PRINTING

230 N. Twelfth St., Philadelphia.
BELL TELEPHONE.

The American Friend

"Truth is the highest thing a man may keep."
"That they all may be one."

VOL. XI.

PHILADELPHIA, FIRST MONTH 7, 1904.

No. 1.

LOVERS OF TRUTH.

A PUBLIC SPEAKER recently made the remark that the members of the legal profession are more scrupulously careful to speak the truth and nothing but the truth than ministers of the gospel are. It would not be easy either to prove or to disprove this statement, as it cannot be settled by statistics. The speaker himself, however, was a loyal Christian, and he had no desire to slander anybody. He believed that he was telling the truth when he made the statement. Our first feeling is to resent the implication that Christian ministers are not devoted truth tellers, for the speaker meant to give that impression. He referred with pride to the splendid example of Clay Trumbull, who, while a wasted prisoner during the war, refused to save his life at the expense of telling a lie. He admitted that there are many men left among us who would rather die than tell the least untruth, but he maintained that, as a general rule, the ministerial standard of truth is low. It is to be hoped that the facts do not support the man's opinion, but whether they do or not, it is most certain that Christian men and women are by no means as careful in guarding the truth as they ought to be. "I came into the world," said our Master, "to bear witness to the truth." The apostolic ministers made truth-telling and truth-living one of the most important characteristics of Christianity. The New Testament closes with a powerful and vivid picture of the holy city, in which these solemn words are found: "And outside is whosoever that loveth and maketh a lie." Christianity is through and through a religion of truth—"love the truth," "speak the truth," "seek the truth," "do the truth," are its great words of command. This great emphasis on the truth ought to have produced a great body of truth-tellers and truth-livers. Has it done so? Are we remarkable for our glorious fidelity to truth? Does the name Christian stand as a synonym for truth-lover? These questions can hardly be answered with a clear, bold "Yes." Most Christians probably intend to be truthful. They would perhaps stand, like Clay Trumbull, unflinchingly by the truth on a sharply-drawn issue between truth and falsehood. The great weakness is discovered when we examine the everyday words and the ordinary life. The shadow of careless, inexact statement falls upon much that is spoken. The precious name of some neighbor is blackened because the speaker, who would be very angry indeed to be called a liar, has spread unfounded reports and unexamined rumors, as though it made no difference. It is woefully easy to form a habit of reporting things carelessly and incorrectly without ever meaning to be false. But it does in the end turn out to be false, and it stains one's character almost more than the cold, sudden lie which is afterwards repented of. A life which does not square with profession and with testimony is always serious. Very likely none of us lift our lives quite up to our ideal. We discover a gap between what we are and what we mean to be, but it is quite a different thing to preach or profess a life which is never actually lived. This in time will taint a person's life through and through and whether one realizes it or not will drag him away from the truth as certainly as an occasional spoken lie would do. It is extremely difficult to speak the truth on all occasions, and to live it in the dark and in the light, but nothing else will do for a Christian, and there can be no situation which will in any way excuse us for shaving the truth or for playing loose with things as they are.

FRIENDS IN 1903.*

It will be somewhat depressing to our readers to learn that there has been during the past year a decrease in our membership of 697. One year ago we reported 93,287 Friends in America; now there are 92,590. We shall at a later time give a detailed account of the gains and losses. But no explanation can 1903.	1902.	Loss.	Gain.

* Philadelphia (estimated)	4,400	4,400
New York	3,415	3,545	130
New England	4,462	4,462
California	1,891	1,710	181
Oregon	1,659	1,650	9
Canada	1,080	1,075	5
N. Carolina (1902. No later rep.)....	5,194	5,194
Wilmington	5,864	6,273	409
Ohio	5,601	5,809	208
Iowa	11,022	11,280	258
Western	15,230	15,196	34
Indiana, including Arkansas, 40; Mexico, 600	20,483	20,278	205
Kansas	11,109	11,214	105
Baltimore	1,180	1,203	23
Totals	92,590	93,289	1,133	434
Decrease	699

conceal the fact that this is a serious decrease. It is, too, probably larger than these figures indicate, for we have called the membership in Philadelphia 4,400, which is certainly too large. If we subtract 100 from the Philadelphia estimate, it would make the loss come to about 800.

Both Indiana and Western have gained—the former yearly meeting showing a net increase of 205, and the latter 34. The most astonishing gain, however, is in California Yearly Meeting, which has risen in membership from 1,710 to 1,891—a gain of 181. Oregon has added 9, so that the Pacific Coast and the State of Indiana have the credit for all the gain that has been made throughout the country, though just across the border Canada has added 5 to its previous total.

New England and North Carolina report no change. New York has a loss of 130; Baltimore, 23; Kansas, 105; Iowa, 258; Ohio, 208, and Wilmington, 409.

It is evident that these losses are too wide-spread to be accounted for by any local conditions. They have occurred in conservative and in progressive meetings alike, in pastoral and in non-pastoral meetings, in meetings in which the revival spirit runs strong, and in those in which less evangelistic work has been done. In Ohio and in Iowa there has been no apparent slackening of evangelistic zeal. There are no hostile influences at work, no distrust of the leading workers, no opposing parties, no critical spirit which hampers and blocks the efforts of those who are endeavoring to extend the sway of the Church. And yet the loss in both yearly meetings confronts us.

We do not look for any immediate change in the situation. Most of our readers do not take it seriously enough yet. They will not study it and probe into it and discover how the tide can be turned. They say in quiet confidence, "Oh, things will come out all right in the end." The only trouble with such remarks is that they are not true. Such words never cleared a mortgage off a farm or saved a church, nor ever will do it. We should be thankful for this loss of 800 this year if it would only properly arouse our members everywhere. We have been leaning on all sorts of props, which, one by one, are proving to be insufficient for the burden. Only one thing can make a meeting grow in numbers and in power—it must meet the spiritual needs of the community, it must become in some measure the body of Christ in the neighborhood where it is. Revival meetings and well-delivered sermons and church machinery have their place, but they are good only up to a certain point. They are human instruments, and they have the marks of human weakness upon them. We must not expect too much of them, for they lose their force as all oft-repeated things do. Many of our meetings have become almost as much crystalized as they were before the great uprising a generation ago. The meeting has fallen into a "habit," and the living creature is not in the wheels. A vital change must come before we shall move up again, but it can come by no easy method, and it is just this serious problem which we call Friends to consider with the gravity which it deserves.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

INFLUENCE OF FRIENDS IN COLONIAL PENNSYLVANIA.

BY HARLOW LINDLEY.

The government of the province of Pennsylvania from 1701, when Penn granted his second and more liberal charter, until the separation from the mother country in 1776, was vested in (1) a Governor appointed by the Penns as Proprietaries and confirmed by the King; (2) a Council chosen by the people to assist the Governor, but having no legislative power, and (3) an Assembly, representative of the people to which belonged the power among other things "to appoint committees, prepare bills, impeach criminals, and redress grievances, with all other powers and privileges of an Assembly, according to the rights of free-born subjects of England."

Two important concessions secured by the Assembly previous to 1740 were, first, that to this body belonged exclusively the right not merely of disposing of the public money, but of the means and methods by which it should be raised; and, second, that the decision of the Lieutenant-Governor approving or disapproving a bill passed by the Assembly should be final and not subject to the reversal of the Proprietary.

These concessions were the cause of much friction between the Assembly and the Proprietaries from the beginning. The latter sought in every way to advance their own private interests and would not contribute to the general burden of taxation. On the other hand, the Proprietaries were much opposed to the issuing of paper money whereby the Assembly was in the habit of meeting extraordinary emergencies. Dr. Stillé says that "to irreconcilable differences on the point, and not to religious scruples, are no doubt to be ascribed much of the embarrassment of the English Government in Pennsylvania in raising men, money and supplies for the prosecution of the war." [Pa. Mag. of Hist., X, 286].

The first separate Assembly for Pennsylvania proper met at Philadelphia in 1703, and "by its first resolution showed that the Quakers so dominant in the Province were beginning to acquire a taste for authority, and meant to color their religion with the hue of political power." The charter was more republican in character than those of the neighboring colonies, and the Assembly, elected annually, was to consist of four members from each county and was to meet at Philadelphia.

From this time on until the end of the French and Indian war, the Friends held a controlling influence in the Assembly. At several different times during this period they were called upon to vote money and supplies to carry on expeditions against the French in Canada or in defence of the frontier. Naturally these measures were not in accordance with Quaker principles, and the means of evading them are interesting to notice. Benjamin Franklin says: "My being many years in the Assembly, a majority of which were constantly Quakers, gave me frequent opportunities of seeing the embarrassment given them by their principle against war, whenever application was made to them, by order of the Crown, to grant aids for military purposes. They were unwilling to offend government, on the one hand, by a direct refusal, and their friends, the body of the Quakers, on the other, by a compliance contrary to their principles; using a variety of evasions to avoid complying and modes of disguising the compliance when it became unavoidable. The common mode at last was to grant money under the phrase of its being 'for the King's use,' and never to inquire how it was applied."

Governor Fletcher had said to the Council, Fifth month 16th, 1693: "If ther be anie amongst you that Scruple the giving of money to support waar, ther are a great many other charges in that govermt, for the support yrof, as officers' Sallaries & other Charges, that amount to a considerable sum: Your money shall be converted to these uses, & shall not be dipt in blood. The monie raised there for the support of the govermt shall be employed for the defence of the fronteers which doe give you protection." [Colonial Records, I., 400.]

Franklin says that when powder was wanted for the garrison at Louisburg, and the government of New England solicited a grant of some from Pennsylvania, which was much urged upon the House by Governor Thomas, they would not grant money to buy powder because that was an ingredient of war; but they voted an aid to New England of three thousand pounds, to be put into the hands of the Governor, and appropriated it for the purchase of bread, flour, wheat, or other grain. Some of the Council, desirous of giving the House still further embarrassment, advised the Governor not to accept provision, as not being the thing he had demanded, but he replied: "I shall take the money, for I understand very well their meaning; other grain is gunpowder," which he accordingly bought, and they never objected to it.

These instances suffice to show some of the methods by which the Quakers evaded their conscientious scruples and at the same time complied with the orders of the Crown.

The Quaker element of the population was at first greater than any other, but at the beginning of the eighteenth century when crown officers had been appointed, the number of inhabitants outside of the Society of Friends were soon in the majority. They, however, seem to have retained their position in the Assembly, and were in the majority there. This may be due to the influence exerted by them upon the Germans in the province. Evidence in favor of this view is found in the history of Northampton and other counties, which tells us that "In later times, say about 1753-'56, the Germans having become numerous and therefore powerful as make-weights in the political balance, were much noticed in the publications of the day. They were at that period of time, in general, very hearty co-operators with the Quakers or Friends, then in considerable rule in the Assembly. A MSS. pamphlet in the Franklin Library at Philadelphia, supposed to have been written by Samuel Wharton, in 1755, shows his ideas of the passing events, saying that the party on the side of the Friends derived much of their influence over the Germans, through the aid of C. Sauers, who published a German paper in Germantown, from the time of 1729, and which, being much read by that people, influenced them to the side of the Friends, and hostile to the Governor and Council. Through this means, says he, they have persuaded them that there was a design to enslave them, to enforce their young men by a militia law to become soldiers, and to load them down with taxes, etc. From such causes, he adds, have they come down in shoals to vote (of course, many from Northampton), and carrying all before them." The same account goes on to say that "all who are not of their party they call 'Governor's men,' and themselves, they deem strong enough to make the country their own! Indeed, they come in, in such force, say upwards of 5,000 in the last year, I see not but they may soon be able to give us law and language, too, or else by joining the French, eject all the English. That this may be the case is too much to be feared, for almost to a man they refused to bear arms in the time of the late war, and they say it is all one to them which king gets the country, as their estates will be equally secure." It seems the French had turned their hopes upon this great body of Germans by promising them land grants in the Ohio region.

The influence of the Friends in the Assembly seems to have been distasteful to many persons in the Province, especially to the frontier inhabitants who suffered from the Indian attacks because of lack of defense. Benjamin Franklin, having attempted in vain to prevail with the Assembly to pass a militia law and make other provisions for the security of the Province, in 1747 proposed to try what might be done by a voluntary subscription of the people. To promote this he wrote and published a pamphlet entitled "Plain Truth," in which he stated the helpless condition of the frontier and the necessity of union and discipline for defense. This pamphlet was translated into German to be circulated among the German population in Pennsylvania. An answer to it, entitled "Necessary Truth Which Upheld Quaker Principles of Non-resistance," was written and published in 1748. Jared Sparks says the argument proceeds upon the ground that war is unjustifiable, and not to be guarded against by "arms, ammunition, and a feasible posture of defense," but by cultivating the peaceful virtues, and a Christian temper, and relying on assistance from heaven to avert the calamities brought upon the world by the evil designs of men.

Franklin's effort evidently had little effect, for the Assembly continued to debate the question of taxes on proprietary lands instead of fortifying their borders. The grievances of the people are set forth in a petition addressed "To the King's Most Excellent Majesty," in 1756. This petition, signed by "sundry of Your Majesty's dutiful & loyal subjects, Inhabitants of the Province of Pensilvania, in Behalf of Themselves and Others," urges the King to withhold his sanction from a certain military bill, recently passed by the Pennsylvania Assembly, and also urges that the Quakers be forever disqualified from sitting as members of the Assembly. By the military bill a volunteer force was to be raised of those who were willing and desirous of being united for military purposes, and these were to be thoroughly organized. The petition was endorsed "Pensilvania. For the Inhabitants in General Agt their Quaker Assembly," and the arguments for the petitioners were heard before the Lords of Trade in London, and agents of the Quaker Assembly are also reported to have been heard. After an exposition of the dangerous situation and defenseless condition of the Province, the petition asserts "That, from long experience, we have no hopes of seeing the aforesaid grievances redressed here, while a great majority of men, whose avowed principles are against bearing arms, find means continually to thrust themselves into the Assembly of this Province, and who have been frequently called upon to put the Province in a posture of defence, both by messages from their Governors, and petitions from great numbers of their constituents, in different counties, but have, always, evaded the point, and spun out the time by unreasonable disputes, altho' nothing be required, for this purpose, but the bare sanction of a Law, to collect and conduct our natural strength as a colony."

The argument following the petition further states "that all the world agrees, that America, ought to be defended, but yet that the King alone, cannot control any Assembly, and much less, a Quaker Assembly," and that "the Quakers in Pennsylvania have, upon every application, for sixteen years now passed, refused to raise a militia, refused to put the country in a posture of defence, refused to raise men or money for the King's service, declare themselves principled against all military measures, and at length declared even self-defence to be unlawful, and that at a time when the Indians and enemy were in the heart of their country, burning and destroying the inhabitants with unheard-of Crueltys and Barbaritys."

The petitioners claim the petitions came from English, Scotch, Irish, Dutch and German settlers; from members of the Church of England, from Presbyterians and their ministers, from Independents, Anabaptists, and their teachers, Jews and Christians, all sorts of persons, "Quakers only excepted."

They further petition that "The Assembly, from their perverse obstinacy, having turned a deaf ear to the repeated demands, from all the inhabitants, the petitioners now pray that relief, from his Majesty, which their own Assembly, unnaturally, deny them," and they go on to urge that this is not only their own cause, but that of his Majesty, the public, America and Great Britain, and as such requires consideration. That considerable destruction and some loss of life resulted from the failure of the Assembly to provide frontier defense earlier than they did cannot be questioned, yet, in defense of the Friends just here one would naturally ask why, if their measures were so detrimental to a large body of the people, they continued to be elected to the Assembly as representatives for sixteen years.

When it became apparent at last to the Quaker members of the Assembly that warlike proceedings were unavoidable, they were obliged to choose between acceding to the popular demand or adhering to their non-resistant principles by retiring from the government. Grahame says: "With a rare virtue they adhered to their religious principles and resigned the political authority which they had enjoyed since the foundation of the colony." Authorities differ as to the exact time of this change. "Stillé alleges that the Quaker supremacy terminated in the year 1754. Grahame goes a little further, assigning 1756 as the time. While McKean gives the date of the American Revolution as contemporary with the actual extinction of Quaker political power. At all events, it would certainly be erroneous to suppose that this 'rotation in office,' so to speak, was effected suddenly, all at once,—in a day, as the ancients were accustomed to found their cities. On the contrary, it was doubtless a very gradual process. A number of Quakers quietly seceded from the Assembly, declining to accept the offices of government under a political régime by which a military establishment was sanctioned, and indeed even required. Their example was followed by other members of the Society, till, at first their majority was extinguished, and ultimately few, if any, Quakers remained in the Legislature." The last statement of this quotation must refer to a limited period, and not to the period succeeding the Revolution, for the Quakers regained their power to some extent after the war closed, and we find a number of them again holding office in the Assembly. The date given by Dr. Stillé, 1754, is certainly too early, for it was in 1756 that the argument above referred to was made before the Lords of Trade in London to forever disqualify Quakers from sitting as members of the Assembly.

The controversy between the proprietaries and the people as represented in the Assembly brought the question of taxation into prominence, and had its influence upon the revolutionary struggle later on. Both the Assembly and the people generally agreed that the proprietary estates should be taxed in common with other property, but the people, as the petition cited shows, thought "that a time when the Province was called upon to endure all it had suffered between 1740 and 1756 was ill chosen to interpose objections, either about taxing the proprietary or any other constitutional or religious scruples against measures intended to defend the Province against hostile incursions."

When peace was declared in 1763, all parties united in petitioning the King to purchase the jurisdiction of the Province from the proprietors. Such a petition was drawn up by Franklin, setting forth the increasing property and power of the proprietaries and the danger of such a power in the State intervening between the Crown and the people.

The Friends were strongly in favor of the establishment of a royal government in place of the proprietary one. The general opinion of the Friends was that "the power of the government ought, in all good policy, to be separated from the power attending that immense property and lodged where it could be properly and safely lodged, in the hands of the King." Lossing says that this attempt to crush feudal power and remove all barriers between the supreme governor and the governed was the first great step toward revolution in Pennsylvania. Several successive Assemblies favored the proposition and Franklin was appointed provincial agent to urge the measure before the King. However, the proprietaries were able to arrange matters in a way so that the opposition gradually subsided and the government remained unchanged.

University of Chicago.

ONE STANDARD OF CONDUCT.

BY CHARLES M. SHELDON.

I have never yet found a man who claimed that because I was a minister, and he was something else, I therefore ought to be better than he. The same standard of conduct holds for all. If to ask the question, "What would Jesus do?" lies at the heart of all Christlikeness, then it is just as imperative for the newspaper man to ask it as for the preacher. A newspaper has no more right to exist for its own glory, or for the gratification of ambition, or for the making of money, as its first reason, than a church has a right to exist for the purpose of making money or building up its own glory. The president of a railroad has no more right to conduct the affairs of the railroad for his own aggrandizement, or simply to make money, as the first reason, than a Sabbath School has a right to exist for the same purpose.

The first object of every man ought to be to do the will of God. No one is excused from obedience to this command because he is a merchant or a lawyer or a bank director, instead of something else; but the old comprehensive principle of "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God," places the same standard before all men. It is disobedience to this command which has given us the words "secular" and "religious," and which has made men say we cannot apply the teachings of the Sermon on the Mount to business and politics. And so far has much of the business and politics of the world departed from any real attempt to do the will of God, that an honest effort to-day to follow Christ in business or political life would result in a great change of methods and a complete upheaval of many present practices. Yet the eternal standard holds good; it will never change as long as God's commands remain the same.

When Jesus said, "Follow me," He was not talking simply to ministers, Sabbath School superintendents, teachers or a little circle of men who could easily follow Him without loss or trouble. But He spoke to the whole world, regardless of a man's occupation, regardless of the fact that he was in business instead of in the ministry. And under this same law of conduct, nations as well as individuals are bound. A nation has no more right to seek anything first, except the kingdom of God, than an individual has. It is owing to the fact that nations have disregarded this first great principle of action that they have gone down in ruin successively. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God" is an undying command of Christ, and one cannot follow Him at all or be His disciple anywhere, if he attempts to evade this great command.

If to ask, "What would Jesus do?" is the only thing for me, a preacher of the gospel, to ask, it is also the only thing for the President of the United States to ask, or for any king or ruler to ask, or for the richest man in the world to ask—or for anybody. For it is God's world, and He will never be satisfied with a division of His ownership which shuts Him up to a small part of it, or leaves Him out of any section of it.—From the "Congregationalist."

Temperance Department.

Issued Monthly, under the care of the

TEMPERANCE ASSOCIATION OF FRIENDS, OF PHILADELPHIA
YEARLY MEETING.

All communications should be addressed to

ANNA EASTBURN WILLITS, Editor, 343 E. Main Street, Haddonfield, N. J.

The Executive Committee of the Friends' Temperance Association, on the 28th, was alive to the needs of the hour. Ella B. Green's visit to many towns in Pennsylvania and New Jersey, in the interest of Scientific Temperance Instruction; the report of the lecture committee, which proposes having six lectures by Oliver W. Stewart the last of the Third month; the good results of the distribution of literature and Bibles, were all presented and met with words of commendation.

"In view of the enormous evils which afflict us as a people because of our heavy consumption of alcohol, it is necessary in the best interests of the State, both present and future, that scientific teaching as to the effects of alcohol on the human frame should be given in all elementary schools, under the control of the Education Department and at the expense of the State."

It is now understood clearly that there is no evil thing among us that the drink habit does not aggravate, and no good thing that it does not antagonize. More than everything else the saloon fosters and sustains the drink habit. It is now mere commonplace to say, "The saloon is a standing menace to our civilization." Every law passed for the regulation of the liquor traffic has its reason in the character of the business.

A W. F. M. Society has recently been organized at Cherokee, Okla., and are pushing their work vigorously. The women members are most all members of the W. C. T. U., who are doing very efficient work in helping to keep the morals of the town at a high standard, it being through their work, along with the earnest efforts of the pastors and the loyal temperance workers, that the town is free from saloons in this saloon Territory. John Snively, of the Friends' meeting, has recently circulated a pledge, binding the citizenship of the town to use their influence, means and power to keep the town free from saloons, which was signed by ninety-nine per cent. of the voters.

Scientific temperance is the study of the physiological reasons for obedience to the laws of health, including those that teach total abstinence from alcoholic drinks and other narcotics. In the latest manuals of instruction this study has been reduced to a "pedagogical form"—in other words, has been carefully graded to the developing capacities of pupils, furnishing thirty lessons of progressive matter per year from the first primary through the six grammar years and the first year in the high school. Familiarity with the whole subject will enable one to recognize the points that are necessary steps connecting one class of facts with those that follow and to make out courses of study accordingly.

I wish all our friends could only know what remarkable battles that are now being waged in almost every country in Europe to-day—in France, Belgium, Russia, Germany—on the question of restricting or prohibiting the liquor traffic. In some instances the governments are increasing the licenses. In others they are warning the people against the use of intoxicants, while in some countries labor unions are urging workmen to abstain from intoxicants. Last fall the National Temperance Society inaugurated a world-wide Twentieth century pledge-signing crusade, which is encircling the globe. We have sent out free two million and a half pledges and printed and circulated over one and a half million pages of literature, and established the crusade all over our country and in every state in Europe and in Great Britain, and recently inaugurated the movement in Cape Colony, South Africa, in Bombay and in Australia. So that the pledge is really circling the globe.—"Christian Advocate."

At the great Liquor Dealers' Convention held at Pittsburg, Pa., where 28 different States were represented, the National President, E. L. Jordan, in his address made the following significant remarks:

"To be honest and not to deceive ourselves, if we glance over this great country we find that prohibition, local option, high license and unjust legal restrictions are in the ascendancy and growing more popular in the different States at the present time than ever before. . . . Peer into every city, town and hamlet; then read the city ordinances; visit the council chambers in the various cities; visit the different legislatures and the halls of the Congress of the United States; consult with your lawmakers, and you will be astonished at the combinations arrayed against the traffic that we represent."

It should be said that the report of the Committee of Fifty is an unjustifiable attack upon the system of the temperance education that has helped to make our nation the admiration of the world, and the charge that the teaching of the indorsed school physiologies is unscientific, is unsustained by any evidence they bring forward. While there is much valuable material in the experimental work reported by the committee, the attacks upon this instruction are unwarranted by the facts and unjustifiable from the standpoint of principle. The defense of moderate drinking by the Committee of Fifty, is subtle and sophistical. As representatives of the mothers of the children in the public schools under this instruction, who know the good it is doing, we utter our solemn and emphatic protest against any attempt to minimize or remove it. We agree with the Committee of Fifty that they will find it no easy task to do so and that in such an effort they will be compelled to reckon with the mothers and best citizens of the nation.

While church, temperance organizations, the school, and, for the most part, the press, teach the lessons of temperance, the conditions of employment, both mental and manual, now largely enforce it. Men who drink cannot be safely trusted, for example, to man railways, mines, factories and other agencies of modern industry, and those who earn subsistence for themselves and families must conform to the requirement of securing employment, and one which to-day is more insisted upon by employers than it ever was before is abstinence from drink.

This is principally the result of a changing industrial system. When the population consisted chiefly of farmers and of mechanics in small shops, the public concern in the personal habits of the individual was a minor one. But with the introduction of railways and modern industrial machinery, it began to be seen that drunkenness or loose habits of drinking so endangered lives and property that it could no longer be tolerated in those upon whom any considerable responsibility rested. This, even more than the agitations of moral reformers, has led to a decline in the excessive use of strong liquors in this country, for intelligent workingmen everywhere are beginning to recognize the fact that in these days it does not pay to get drunk.

QUAKER SERMON TO A LIQUOR SELLER.

"Friend, that is the most damning part of the business. If thee would only sell to drunkards and loafers, thee would help to kill off the race, and society would be rid of them.

"But thee takes the young, the poor, the innocent and the unsuspecting, and make drunkards and loafers of them.

"When their character and money is gone, thee kicks them out and turn them over to the other shops to be finished off, and thee ensnares others and sends them on the same road to ruin."

THE AMERICAN ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE.

Washington, D. C., Twelfth mo. 10th, 1903.

To Our Temperance Friends Throughout the Country:

No more important general legislation affecting the temperance question has been proposed for over a decade than the Hepburn- (H. R. 4072) Dolliver Bill (Senate 1,390). This measure is simply designed to make State legislation on the liquor question effective by allowing the laws of the State to have complete jurisdiction over liquor shipped into the State, both before and after delivery. Prohibition, whether State-wide or local, and all forms of local option legislation will have a fair test without this law. The bill is before the Judiciary Committee in both houses of Congress. We have determined to concentrate our energies upon this measure, and in this we have the full co-operation of the legislative department of the W. C. T. U. until it shall be passed. We shall give careful attention and reliable information in ample time in every emergency in this contest. We again urge our friends to be prompt and effective in carrying out our plans.

The special thing desired now is short, courteous appeals to Senators and Congressmen on the committees, and your own Congressman, to do everything in their power to secure the prompt and favorable consideration of the measure by the committees and its early passage in both branches. For this purpose the names of Committees in Senate and House are herewith appended.

Very sincerely and fraternally yours,

EDWIN C. DINWIDDIE,

Legislative Superintendent American Anti-Saloon League.

Senate Judiciary Committee: George F. Hoar,

Massachusetts; Orville H. Platt, Connecticut; Clarence D. Clark, Wyoming; Charles F. Fairbanks, Indiana; Knute Nelson, Minnesota; Louis E. McComas, Maryland; Chauncey M. Depew, New York; John H. Mitchell, Oregon; Augustus O. Bacon, Georgia; Edmund W. Pettus, Alabama; Charles A. Culberson, Texas; Joseph C. S. Blackburn, Kentucky; Thomas M. Patterson, Colorado.

House Judiciary Committee: John J. Jenkins, Wisconsin; Richard W. Parker, New Jersey; De Alva S. Alexander, New York; Vespasian Warner, Illinois; Charles E. Littlefield, Maine; Lot Thomas, Iowa; Samuel L. Powers, Massachusetts; Robert N. Nevin, Ohio; Henry W. Palmer, Pennsylvania; George A. Pearre, Maryland; James N. Gillett, California; David A. De Armond, Missouri; David H. Smith, Kentucky; Henry D. Clayton, Alabama; Robert L. Henry, Texas; John S. Little, Arkansas; William C. Bentley, Georgia.

THE PAST YEAR'S VICTORIES.

BY WILBUR F. CRAFTS.

Reformers should be scrupulously just to their allies in reviewing the year's victories. The facts as to those won at the National Capital in 1903 are as follows: The one legislative act in which the National Anti-Saloon League's Legislative Superintendent had the leading part was the second half million appropriation for gymnasiums and amusements and other substitutes for "canteens" at army posts. The International Reform Bureau drew the only direct temperance measure brought into Congress from the outside, the amendment to the immigration act by which liquor selling in government immigrant stations was forbidden. It passed the House almost before the ink was dry, and in the Senate was somewhat re-enforced by the W. C. T. U. The Anti-Saloon League's Legislative superintendent was at that time busy with defending the anti-canteen law and so did not get his appeal to his great constituency in behalf of this bill until the victory was won. The debate on this immigration prohibition was the occasion of the introduction of the successful amendment to exclude liquors from the Capitol, but the credit for that victory belongs almost entirely to Congressman Landis, who introduced it on his own motion, as Congressman Little had done in a previous Congress. But thousands of W. C. T. U. petitions in previous years in behalf of the Reform Bureau's Ellis bill had prepared the ground into which Congressman Landis cast his amendment at the right moment. The defeat of the opium monopoly in the Philippines, which had the support of the Philippine government and the War Department, was accomplished by the Bureau in half a week by a telegraphic vote to the President in behalf of a veto on this iniquity.

This is the full record of definite results on temperance measures in 1903 at the National Capital, but it must not be forgotten that the "Christian lobby" of three at the Capital could do nothing but for the temperance work done in every Congressional district by the Prohibition party, the W. C. T. U., the Anti-Saloon League and other temperance workers, and by national agencies, like the National Temperance Society and the National Temperance Committees of the Methodists and Presbyterians.

Washington, D. C.

The International Lesson.

FIRST QUARTER.

LESSON III.

FIRST MONTH 17, 1904.

THE BAPTISM AND TEMPTATION OF JESUS.

Matthew 3: 13 to 4: 11.

GOLDEN TEXT.—And lo, a voice from Heaven, saying: This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.—Matt. 3: 17.

DAILY READINGS.

Second-day, First mo. 11.—The baptism of Jesus. Mark 1: 1-11.

Third-day, First mo. 12.—Fulfilling all righteousness. Matt. 3: 7-17.

Fourth-day, First mo. 13.—Another Heavenly voice. 2 Pet. 1: 15-21.

Fifth-day, First mo. 14.—Tempting God. Deut. 6: 1-7.

Sixth-day, First mo. 15.—Enduring temptation. Jas. 1: 1-21.

Seventh-day, First mo. 16.—Able to succor. Heb. 2: 1-18.

First-day, First mo. 17.—Tempted like ourselves. Heb. 4: 1-16.

Time.—The baptism was probably early in the year 27 A.D. The temptation followed immediately.

Place.—The exact situation is not known, but it was at one of the fords of the Jordan. Bethabara. In the Revised Version (John 1: 28) the word is Bethany, and the situation is given as "beyond the Jordan."

13. "Then." The time is uncertain. Jesus was about 30 years old (Luke 3: 23). "To the Jordan." Probably the ford near Jericho. "To be baptized of him." Why was Jesus baptized? is a question often asked, and to which many answers have been given. John's baptism was a baptism of repentance for men; it could not have been such for Jesus. It was not only confession, but also the beginning of a new life. So with Christ it was the public consecration to His ministry, the beginning of His proclamation of the gospel. It was also an act which was done in fulfillment of the older dispensation. He, by this act, denounced rather than renounced sin. See also verse 14.

14. "But John would have hindered him." Amer. Rev. Ver. This conveys the meaning of the original far better than the old version. "I have read," etc. Compare verse 11.

15. "For thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." Exactly what this means is not very clear; perhaps all that has been said in the note on verse 14.

16. "When he was baptized." How the rite was performed is not described in the Bible. Here there seems little doubt that it was by partial or whole immersion. It is rather interesting that the representations of the baptism which have been found in the Catacombs of Rome always represent John as pouring the water on the head of Christ. In that early Christian treatise, the "Didache," baptism is to be performed "in running water," or it may be by "pouring" water thrice upon the head. "Went up straightway from the water." Amer. Rev. Ver. Not "out of," but "from." Luke says Christ went from the water praying (Luke 3: 21). "He." Jesus. John also saw this (John 1: 34). The account in Luke says that the Holy Spirit appeared in "bodily form as a dove." The dove is the symbol of gentleness, peace and love. "Abode." The Spirit visited men in former times. He came and went. Here He abode. John 1: 33.

17. The endorsement of his mission. "The descent of the Spirit was (1) a sign of Christ's identity to the Baptist; (2) the public inauguration for His mission; (3) a seal to Christ Himself of His Father's acceptance and fitting Him for that mission."

4: 1. "Then." Immediately, it would seem. "To be tempted." Again the question rises, why? The chief answer must be that only thus by knowing what temptation really is by practical experience could he understand the temptations of man, and be really "able to succor them that are tempted" (Heb. 2: 17, 18). "Of the devil." It is not needful to discuss how; the fact of the temptation is the important thing.

2. "Forty days." According to Luke the temptation extended through the whole forty days (Luke 4: 2).

3. "The tempter." The trier, one who makes proof of. The temptation came at a time of great physical weakness. Hunger is one of the hardest things to bear, and has driven men to commit the most revolting deeds. "Command." The knowledge that He could do this made the temptation of surpassing force, and the more so because it would be to do that which in itself was harmless. "To have yielded would have made his humanity a mere appearance." This temptation was through legitimate and natural desires.

4. It is written." From the Septuagint, Deut. 8: 3. Compare Revised Version. God can sustain life without common food, as He taught the Israelites with manna. "I will work no miracle to satisfy my own will and destroy this sense of human weakness, but will trust Him."

5. "The holy city." Jerusalem. "Pinnacle." Probably that part of the roof which looked down upon the valley of Hinnom, the bottom of which would be about 600 feet below.

6. "If thou art." Again an appeal to the consciousness of Divine power. This temptation was spiritual. "The former temptation was to distrust God's providence, this to presume upon it." "For it is written." The tempter turns Christ's own words upon Him. There are few arguments more specious than citing scripture with a wrong application. The quotation is from the Septuagint (Psa. 91: 11, 12), and is not complete. There is no inducement to any rash action. It has been pointed out that perhaps there was still more in this temptation—that to appear to the people in a strange way, as the Messiah was expected to appear, and thus prove His Messiahship by an outward sign of wonders.

7. "Again it is written." Scripture is answered by Scripture. The reference is to Deut. 6: 16. See also Num. 20: 7-12.

first meeting in this village, which is called Potrerillo, was held a week ago last night. There were about fifty persons present, including the leading men of the village. Although it was new to them, yet there was a unanimous expression of the desire that the services be continued. Though no collection was taken the people of their own initiative made an offering amounting to sixty cents. As the bay must be crossed to reach there each trip costs forty cents Spanish silver.

S. J.

The girl we have in the house has begun to teach the children's class in the Pueblo Nuevo Sabbath School, a work she enjoys very much. We are putting a good deal of our time and strength at present on training and teaching those who give promise of being useful workers in the Church. They are our hope. Their earnestness and eagerness to learn are very gratifying. One evening we visited the home of three young girls who attend most faithfully and are my mainstays in the meeting on the hill, and they help also in the Sabbath School there and here in the church. We went to help them a little on their Endeavor lesson, and although rather late, found them ironing so that they could attend the Endeavor meeting the next evening, as it is against Cuban custom to go out in the evening after ironing.

Ten of the members of the Endeavor Society of Gibara Monthly Meeting, with some previous help in the study and preparation of the lesson, are able to lead the meetings of the Society with credit. Five of these are doing special public work in the cause of Christ as superintendents or teachers in our Sabbath Schools in the city.

M. M. J.

A FAREWELL MEETING FOR EDITH EVA TERRELL

Wilmington Yearly Meeting has recently opened a mission station at the town of Puerto Padre, on the island of Cuba. For this purpose they have been very fortunate in securing the services of Emma Phillips, late Martinez, who has had an experience of ten years in successful missionary work among Spanish-speaking people, seven years in connection with the work of Friends in Mexico, and three years at Gibara, Cuba, under the employment of the American Friends' Board of Foreign Missions. That organization has loaned the services of Emma P. Martinez to Wilmington Yearly Meeting for a definite period of time, for the pioneer work required in establishing a new mission. She, with her husband, Francisco Martinez, about the middle of Tenth month, sailed from Gibara, Cuba, where they had just been married, to Puerto Padre, 50 miles up the coast. Here they at once found favorable surroundings in such things as desirable location, official welcome, and open-hearted, hungry citizens.

They began their work without delay, and are to be joined near the beginning of the New Year by Edith Eva Terrell, one of Wilmington Yearly Meeting's most valued members. She is a daughter of the late James H. Terrell, and is a young woman of sterling character and deep religious experience. She is a graduate of Wilmington College, class of '98, has had experience as a teacher in the schools of her native county, and has spent three years in the Cincinnati Training Hospital, where she graduated last year as a trained nurse.

On the 11th of Twelfth month, at Wilmington, Ohio, her yearly meeting held an all-day farewell meeting, preparatory to her leaving for her new field of work. There were present Thomas C. Brown, of Carmel, Ind., and Mahalah Jay, of Richmond, Ind., the former president and the latter secretary of the American Friends' Board of Foreign Missions, with which organization Wilmington Yearly Meeting works in harmony.

Thomas C. Brown gave the address of the morning, in which he emphasized the advantage of the reflex action of foreign missionary work upon the home church.

Under the supervision of the local W. F. M. S. a bountiful basket dinner was served in the basement at the noon hour, giving opportunity for friendly greeting and social good feeling.

The college chorus class, in the service of song, added much to the interest of the afternoon exercises. Edgar Stranahan, who was sent last winter by the missionary board of Wilmington Yearly Meeting to Cuba to assist in selecting a suitable place for the new mission, gave to all, by means of map and chart, a clear idea of its location, and an appreciation of responsibility in the possibility of its growth and development. He was followed by Albert J. Brown, president of Wilmington College, on the "Relation of the Church Through its Educational Institutions to the Evangelization of the World."

Then Eva Terrell, in a beautiful address, told the story of her call to the foreign field so simply and with such unassuming humility, that she carried the hearts of her audience with her, and they were baptized into deep sympathy and interest, while the spirit of "God speed thee" prevailed. Under this covering, Robert Pretlow, of Wilmington Meeting, led the congregation into a season of earnest prayer, while they consecrated their missionary to her work and themselves to her support. With the same spirit prevailing, Thomas C. Brown asked for pledges of assistance, and received, or set on foot that which when carried out will insure the continued support of Eva Terrell for a period of five years in the field.

Thus closed one of the most memorable days in the history of the yearly meeting. We had hoped to welcome on the same day our home-coming missionary, Martha E. Hadley, who for the past four years has labored at Kotzebue, Alaska, and whose duties to her family call her home at this time. But service in California among the supporters of the mission where she has worked detained her. With the prospect of her early arrival from her station in the far north, and with Eva Terrell waiting for the sailing of vessel to carry her to the distant south, Wilmington Yearly Meeting is indeed in a state of welcoming the coming and speeding the parting missionary.

ELLEN C. WRIGHT.

Correspondence.

On Third-day evening, the 22d of Twelfth month, I started to Park View, a suburb of Portsmouth, Va., for the purpose of leading the weekly Holiness Association meeting. While passing through a dark place just beyond the city limits, I was attacked by an unknown person for an unknown cause. We suppose robbery was the intention, as there has been much robbery and assaults upon citizens in that region lately. The man was prepared for throat-cutting, and struck me with some kind of metal knuckles, with knife attachment. My throat was cut through into the larynx, but the murderous hand was overruled by "the angel of the Lord that encampeth round about them that fear Him and delivereth them," so that the knife missed the vein and artery of my neck, which it was the evident intention of the man to sever.

My life is not only spared, but the healing hand of God is precious upon me, and I am rapidly recovering.

I desire to say to the many Friends who have sent personal letters to me and my family in this time of trial that we greatly appreciate your sympathy and here answer the questions as to my hurt and present condition.

L. I. HADLEY.

UNION HIGH SCHOOL.

Union High School, located at Westfield, Hamilton County, Indiana, was organized more than forty years ago. It is owned and controlled by an association of stockholders, nearly all of whom are Friends.

The town of Westfield has been for more than sixty years the center of the largest and most compact body of Friends in the world. About 3,000 members live in the west half of Hamilton County.

This institution owes its existence and support to the public spirit and energy of those who, while desirous of promoting the educational interests of our youth; in preparing them for college and the active pursuits of life, have ever kept in view the necessity of having these safe-guarded by influences and training that make for the moral and spiritual interests of our children. These aims have, in the main, been well met in the life of Union High School.

For a generation the name and fame of this institution as an educational center have extended over and beyond the limits of this county, with its three quarterly meetings, and its power and influence have been felt and acknowledged by the public generally outside the limits of our own denomination. Many of its graduates are filling honorable places in other educational institutions, north, south, east and west. Others have risen to eminence in literature, law, medicine and business.

The school has been fortunate in the character of its teachers. Among these may be mentioned the names of Lewis A. Estes and wife, Huldah C., who taught in the sixties and early seventies; Absalom Rosenberger, now president of Penn College; Phebe Furnas, J. Frank Brown, Morris E. Cox, James and Amos Sanders, as well as others, who have followed later. The school is now under the charge of Professor Irvin Stanley and wife.

But of late, on account of the building up of a number of institutions of equal grade within the radius of its former influence, and coming in competition with it, support has largely withdrawn from Union High School. It now requires a struggle for the school to maintain its former position and relative rank. An excellent public commissioned high school is now flourishing in the same town. But the friends of Union High School have not despaired, nor do they intend to surrender while there is hope.

However, in view of unseen possibilities, at the last annual meeting of the stockholders, held February 15th, 1903, the following amendment was proposed to the "Articles of Association." This will be acted upon at the next annual meeting, to be held February 8th, 1904:

"Whereas, During the years past there have grown up relations between Earlham College and Union High School which have been helpful to the school, and which might be largely increased by a closer co-operative affiliation between the two institutions:

"Therefore, in consideration of such benefits as have arisen and are likely to arise from said co-operative affiliation, be it

"Resolved, That Article VI. of the Articles of this Association be and is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Article VI. (a) The directors shall have power to levy and collect any assessment or assessments on the amount of each member's stock in the Association, to be used for promoting its efficiency, provided the amount of the levy does not exceed ten per cent. annually. (b) The directors and officers are hereby authorized and instructed to convey by deed and contract to Earlham College the real estate, personal property, funds and trusts belonging to and in possession of Union High School Association, together with all other property of which it may in the future become possessed, to be held by said college in trust, but managed and operated by and for the benefit of Union High School Association, as heretofore, except with the advice and aid of the Board of Trustees of said college, as they may elect to offer it. With the further provision that if in the future conditions should arise so that Union High School should be suspended and cease to be operated as a school for a period of two or more successive years, then, by the terms of said deed and contract, Earlham College shall become the sole and absolute owner in fee simple of said real estate and personal property, and all trusts and funds as above mentioned shall pass absolutely to Earlham College."

It is hoped that the above amendment will be thoughtfully considered, and the action thereon redound to the best interests of Friends' educational work.

MILTON HANSON.

Things of Interest Among Ourselves.

A First-day morning meeting is being regularly held in the city of Pittsburg.

John M. Watson's address for the next two months will be 107 East Cherry Street, Richmond, Va.

At Portland Monthly Meeting, Ind., held the 26th ult., three persons were received by request and two by certificate.

Pres. Isaac Sharpless is making an extensive visit through the central West, visiting mainly educational centers.

During the holiday vacation some improvements were made in the Friends' Select School Building, Philadelphia.

Amos Cook and wife, recently of Springdale, Ia., greeted the meeting at Pasadena First-day the 20th ult.

Tilman Hobson entered upon a several months' evangelistic campaign in connection with the Presbyterians of California the first of the year as the "Quaker Evangelist."

Edwin McGrew attended quarterly meeting at Toronto on the 19th and 20th of last month, where his visit was much appreciated.

Willmot R. Jones, who is head master of the Stamford High School, has been elected president of the State Educational Association of Connecticut.

Ida L. Curtis, a minister in the meeting at Pasadena, Cal., fell from her wheel the 19th ult., and broke two bones in her left wrist.

Dr. Richard H. Thomas, of Baltimore, has been spending a few days at Haverford and acceptably attended Haverford Meeting on Fifth-day, the 31st ult.

Tilman Hobson, who has been engaged in evangelistic work since his return to California, enjoyed the holidays at home in Pasadena with his family and hosts of friends.

William L. Pearson has been spending the college holidays in the East. He was favored in the ministry at Twelfth Street Meeting, Philadelphia, on First-day of last week.

At Christmas exercises held in Friends' Meeting House, Pasadena, Cal., the local minister, Harry R. Keates, was the recipient of a turkey.

William Littleboy and his wife, of Birmingham, are to succeed Joshua and Isabella Rowntree as wardens at the Woodbrooke Settlement. The work there is steadily progressing.

The Brooklyn "Eagle" of Twelfth month 21st, printed the Forefathers' Day address delivered in Lafayette Avenue Church, Brooklyn, by Rufus M. Jones.

Robert E. Speer, of New York, expects to address a meeting at Haverford, Pa., on the evening of First month 6th, at 6.30 o'clock. He will also address the students' meeting at Bryn Mawr College the same evening at 8 o'clock.

Amos Davis and wife, both ministers from Tiff City Mission, Oklahoma Territory, have recently located at Owenyo, Cal. L. E. Arenson, of Adair, Ia., has also purchased a home at Owenyo and expects to move there with his family of six in the near future. They are Friends, and will be a help to the meeting.

Rosa E. Virtue, of Hartonville, Ind., and lately from Lembi, Idaho, recently labored in a series of meetings at Boise City, Idaho, which resulted in three renewals. The services were held in the G. A. R. Hall. She is now conducting revival services at Star, Idaho.

At the annual meeting of the Association of Indiana Teachers, held at Indianapolis during the holidays, President R. L. Kelly, of Earlham, was re-elected president of the County Institute Instructors' Association, and was elected president of the Association of Indiana Colleges.

The people of Friendsville, Tenn., and surrounding country have been greatly blessed by the labors of Amos Cook and wife, of Harveysburg, O., who recently conducted a series of meetings in that place. As many as twenty-five persons claimed special blessing. Amos Cook and wife are now holding meetings at Hickory Valley, Tenn., after which they will return to Friendsville.

The next meeting of the Friends' Educational Association will be held at No. 140 North Sixteenth Street, Philadelphia, on Seventh-day, First month 16th, at 2.30 p.m., which all interested are invited to attend. "The Deeper Meaning of the Teaching Function" will be presented by Luther H. Gulick, of Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, N. Y., and a general discussion will follow.

Willis Bond, of Watseka, Ill., began a series of meetings at Danville, Ind., Eleventh month 30th, and continued for two and a half weeks, with results of a very definite character. A goodly number confessed Christ and are following Him in simple faith, while the whole church was built up to a remarkable degree. Z. H. and Leona B. Doan go to Watseka to assist Willis Bond early in the new year.

Pleasant Valley Monthly Meeting met at Pleasant Valley, Stafford County, Kan., the 26th ult. The presiding clerk being absent, J. S. Bond was appointed clerk for the day. A communication was received from the North End Mission, Wichita, Kan., asking for help. A committee of two was appointed to solicit funds for the same. Alison R. Wall announced his intention of making an extended visit among Friends.

On the evening of the 21st ult. about thirty neighbors and Friends of Rebecca D. Hockett gave her a surprise at the home of her son, Norton Hockett, Hugoton, Kan., in honor of her 85th birthday. The evening was spent pleasantly, and some small tokens of love in the way of presents were given. Rebecca D. Hockett is the mother of twelve children, eight of whom are living, and has fifty grandchildren and more than sixty great-grandchildren.

New London Quarterly Meeting was held at Russiaville, Ind., the 5th and 6th ult. President L. L. Hobbs, of Guilford College, N. C.; J. A. Ellis and Anna J. Cook, from Kokomo Quarterly Meeting; and Guernsey Dicks, of Fairmount, Ind., were the ministers in attendance, and acceptable service was rendered by them. Three of the meetings belonging to New London Quarterly Meeting are to be blessed with new houses. The one at Reserve was dedicated a short time ago. New London and Bethel hope to have theirs completed in the near future.

H. R. Keates and family arrived in Pasadena, Cal., the 3d ult., and were gladly received by the Friends. A public reception was tendered them on the 15th, at which time words of welcome to the Pacific coast were spoken by Levi Mills, of Whittier; Professor C. E. Tebbetts, of Whittier College; J. H. Douglas, general superintendent of evangelistic work; Tilman Hobson, field worker, and local pastors of the city, beside representatives of Pasadena meeting. In his response Harry Keates said: "I believe to-night I am here in accordance with God's leading. I came to be what I can be to the local meeting, and to the yearly meeting, and in blessed fellowship with the ministers of this city." He invited the hearty co-operation of every member to mutually live and work and pray for each other.

William Perry Haworth, formerly of Kansas City, Mo., is now located in the meeting at Noblesville, Ind. His work began in Tenth month, with the good will and ready co-operation of the membership, but with a long-standing debt on the point of foreclosure. The trustees, however, very ably assisted by William P. Haworth, have thoroughly canvassed the meeting, and the debt will soon be lifted, with the probable exception of about $600, the interest upon which is already provided for during an indefinite period. While the meeting has lost heavily by removals during the preceding year, the plans are being perfected for an active campaign for new material. Minnie Bassett, of Carmel, Ind., began a revival effort in the meeting this week.

The day set apart in commemoration of Christ's birth was happily observed at Wyandotte Indian Mission. The exercises at the government school showed what earnest effort, Christian sympathy and patience can accomplish in the hearts and intellects of the untutored minds of "the children of the forest." A boy belonging to the Ottawa tribe acted as Santa Claus and performed his part with great skill. Every one looked happy. Even the missionaries were remembered and received a box containing $12 in currency as a token of kind appreciation from the teachers, employees and school at large. A real refreshing came recently to the mission by the timely visit of Nixon and Louisa Rush, whose effective labors will long be remembered.

Cherokee Meeting, Oklahoma Territory, is rapidly growing, rising from a membership in the past two years of two or three families to thirty-six whole families and six parts of families, in all 153 members. The work is well organized; every department is being cared for. The Bible School is well equipped, recently purchasing Tunison's complete set of maps, blackboard, and having cradle roll, home department, and taking missionary work. A large Junior Endeavor is doing splendid work, both in home and foreign missions. They are raising funds to adopt an orphan in the African Industrial Mission. The Christian Endeavor is growing rapidly and doing splendid work. In connection with the mid-week prayer meeting a systematic Bible study has been organized. Recently the members of the meeting gave the local minister, John E. Snaveley and wife, a surprise. The evening was spent in a social way. At a given signal a very beautiful bookcase was pushed into the room. The company then assured them that it was but a token of their appreciation of services rendered during past years and an evidence of their hearty unity in the work for the coming year. The meeting has been much encouraged in the past three months by visits from various Friends, Willis R. Hotchkiss giving a stirring address on the world's needs. Nixon Rush and wife spent Thanksgiving in the meeting. Isaac Ellis, of Ames, Ia., and Amos R. Cook and wife have had very acceptable service there. John F. Hanson recently spoke to the young people in his unique way, putting before them the highest ideals of life, and on the following evening he spoke to the citizens on the temperance issue. Arrangements are being made with Nathan and Esther Frame to hold a series of meetings in Second month, 1904.

DIED.

BINFORD.—At his home in Damascus, O., Eleventh month 6th, 1903, S. A. Binford, in his 75th year. He was a birthright Friend, and died trusting in Jesus as his Saviour.

BLACKLEDGE.—At her home, five miles south of Hay Springs, Neb., Twelfth month 3d, 1903, Rhoda Stanley, wife of Joseph Blackledge, in her 46th year. She was a minister and evangelist and labored together with her husband in gospel work for twenty-five years. They made their home in Iowa and Nebraska, but also traveled in Christian service in Kansas, Minnesota and Canada.

CUIVER.—On a train near Modesto, Cal., en route from Newberg, Ore., to Wichita, Kan., Twelfth month 20th, 1903, Susan Ella Culver. The deceased was a member of Stella Monthly Meeting, Oklahoma. She became a Friend by conviction. She was laid to rest at Bucklin, Kan., where she had formerly lived.

HEALD.—At her home near Fulton, Morrow County, O., Twelfth month 14th, 1903, Rachel Heald, wife of Joseph Heald, and daughter of Abraham and Mary Morris, aged 77 years. A birthright member of Friends, she was ever a consistent advocate of its principles.

HELTON.—At Tribblett, Mo., Twelfth month 18th, 1903, John Helton, aged 74 years. The deceased was a charter member of the local meeting at Portland, Ind.

HOWELL.—At Salma, O., Twelfth month 5th, 1903, Harriett S., daughter of Samuel C. and Deborah Steere Howell, aged 23 years. As the end drew near she repeated the text, "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me."

POST.—At his residence, Pawling, N. Y., Twelfth month 24th, 1903, Robert Post, at the age of 82 years.

SMITH.—At her home, near West Elkton, O., Twelfth month 13th, 1903, Mary Smith, in her 83d year. She was a faithful member of Elk Monthly Meeting, Ohio.

Events and Comments.

It is hoped that the test of "noiseless" wheels on one of the street railways in New York city may prove satisfactory, and that it may lead eventually to the removal of one of the prolific causes of unnecessary noise in all cities.

The trunk-line railroads have agreed to make special low rates on agricultural machinery for export. This will mean cheaper machinery for farmers in Argentina, Russia, Australia and elsewhere who are growing grain to compete with America in Western European markets.

According to the annual report of the Interstate Commerce Commission, 164 passengers were killed in train accidents during the year ending Sixth month 30th last. In two train accidents of last week some ninety passengers were killed or mortally hurt. It is evidently to be a very bad record in this particular which the current fiscal year will have placed against it.

While unprecedentedly large numbers of alien workmen are returning to Europe on account of the slackening of employment, the inflow continues high above the record figures of a year ago. This crossing of high record currents in transatlantic migration is unusual. There is a decrease in immigration from Italy and Sweden, but an increase from other DOCTOR'S SHIFT.

Now Gets Along Without It.

A physician says: "Until last fall I used to eat meat for my breakfast and suffered with indigestion until the meat had passed from the stomach.

"Last fall I began the use of Grape-Nuts for breakfast, and very soon found I could do without meat, for my body got all the nourishment necessary from the Grape-Nuts, and since then I have not had any indigestion and am feeling better, and have increased in weight.

"Since finding the benefit I derived from Grape-Nuts I have prescribed the food for all of my patients suffering from indigestion or over-feeding and also for those recovering from disease where I want a food easy to take and certain to digest and that will not overtax the stomach.

"I always find the results I look for when I prescribe Grape-Nuts. For ethical reasons please omit my name." Name given by mail by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The reason for the wonderful amount of nutriment, and the easy digestion of Grape-Nuts is not hard to find.

In the first place, the starchy part of the wheat and barley goes through various processes of cooking, to perfectly change the starch into Dextrose or Post Sugar, in which state it is ready to be easily absorbed by the blood. The little parts in the wheat and barley which Nature can make use of for rebuilding brain and nerve centers are retained in this remarkable food, and thus the human body is supplied with the powerful strength producers so easily noticed after one has eaten Grape-Nuts each day for a week or ten days. "There's a reason."

Get little book, "The Road to Wellville," in the package.

countries, and particularly Russia and Austria-Hungary.

John Alexander Dowie bade farewell to his Chicago adherents at a meeting in the Auditorium last week. After an all-night "watch meeting" in Zion City New Year's Eve, Dowie left for New Orleans, and will travel to San Francisco via the Southwestern route, stopping at various large cities en route. He intends to sail from the latter port First month 21st for Australia, and counts on being back in Chicago next Sixth month.

Citizens' mass-meetings in Chicago, called to consider the reign of thuggery and highway robbery, have resulted in the creation of a committee of twenty-five prominent citizens to plan a course of action. The desperate nature of the situation may be judged from the recommendations being made by members of this committee. Citizens are urged not to carry money and valuables with them on the streets; they should not go out nights more than is absolutely necessary.

The Salvation Army, in keeping with its annual custom, distributed Christmas dinners to 25,000 of New York's poor. Beginning at 10 o'clock, 5,000 baskets, each containing a satisfying dinner for a family of five persons, were distributed. Five thousand of the city's homeless poor Friday night sat down to tables laden with turkey, cranberry sauce and other good things of the season. Commander Booth-Tucker was in personal charge, assisted by the entire staff of the Army in New York.

The decision of the Supreme Court of Nebraska that dealing in options in grain on the floor of the Chicago (or any other) Board of Trade is gambling, and that liabilities incurred in such dealings are not valid in law, if it is supported by a later decision, will materially affect a form of business of very considerable proportions. Nice ethical questions are involved in all forms of speculation, and a growing ethical sense undoubtedly some day will condemn many forms of speculation now considered both legal and moral.

Secretary Hester's statement of the world's visible supply of cotton, issued last week, shows the total visible to be 3,889,853 bales, against 3,786,014 bales last year. Of this the total of American cotton is 3,235,853 bales, against 3,129,014 bales last year, and of all other kinds, including Egypt, Brazil, India, etc., 604,000 bales, against 657,000 last year. His weekly cotton statement shows for the twenty-five days of Twelfth month, an increase over last year of 155,000 bales. For the 116 days of the season that have elapsed the aggregate is ahead of the same days last year 87,000 bales.

Five hundred and eighty-six persons met death in ten minutes at a fire in the Iroquois Theatre, in Chicago, at a matinee performance the afternoon of the 30th ult. Scores were trampled to death in the frenzied panic and rush for life. Many were suffocated by gas, and others were burned outright. The fire started from the stage, and the asbestos curtain failed to work. The flames instantly swept into the auditorium, and escape was practically impossible. Chicago is in mourning. New Year celebrations were not observed. Strenuous measures are being enforced to prevent a recurrence of a like catastrophe.

THE OLD RELIABLE

Absolutely Pure
THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

James Gordon Bennett has perfected a plan to lay out and adorn a large park to be dedicated to the public use and pleasure of the citizens of New York in memory of his father, the founder of the New York "Herald." The park will lie between the Boulevard Lafayette and Broadway, north of One Hundred and Eighty-second Street, and land now owned by James Bennett will be devoted to this end. Landscape architects and gardeners are working on the designs. Upon the highest elevation within its bounds will be reared a monument to James Gordon Bennett, the elder.

The Pan-American Railway Company, with headquarters at Guthrie, and with $250,000,000 capital stock, to build a line from Port Nelson, on Hudson Bay, British America, to the Argentine Republic, has been chartered. From Port Nelson the road is to run via Winnipeg, in Manitoba, through the States of North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, Indian Territory and Texas, thence through Mexico, Central America, the Republic of Panama, Colombia, Ecuador and Peru, into the Argentine Republic. A branch line is provided, running from Peru through Chile to Valparaiso. The total length is 10,000 miles.

The fourth cable connecting New York with Continental Europe will probably be completed during the coming year, thus doubling the direct cable service between Germany and New York. The new line has been completed as far as Fayal. The German Government agreed to pay $178,500 to the German Atlantic Telegraph Company if the line was completed to the Azores by First month 1st, 1904, and this has been accomplished. An agreement between the government and the company provides for the payment of another sum if the second half of the cable is laid and in operating condition before First month 1st, 1905. It is believed that the line will be in operation some months before that time.

The American Friend Premiums

A BOY'S RELIGION, FROM MEMORY

By RUFUS M. JONES

NO subject teems with greater interest, or is fraught with greater issues than the religious development of early childhood. It is the foundation work of character, yet it is little understood by parents and less by children. Here is a most helpful work for young and old alike. It is the simple narrative of the religious awakening in a young soul which strikes a responsive chord in every heart. The work is beautifully printed on deckle-edged paper, and bound in a striking and original design. It is handsomely furnished with illustrations of places and persons mentioned in the text. Price, $0.75.

THIS BOOK (postpaid), with ONE NEW Subscription. Both for $1.50
THIS BOOK (postpaid), with a RENEWAL Subscription. Both for $2.00

Aunt Charlotte's Stories of Bible History

By CHARLOTTE M. YONGE

Size $7\frac{1}{2} \times 10$ inches. Handsomely bound in cloth. Printed in gold and many colors. 250 pages. Over 100 illustrations.

CONTAINS over 100 stories from the Holy Book, richly embellished with 19 full-page Color Plates and Photo-Engravings, together with nearly 100 other illustrations. Beginning with the dawn of creation, every important historical event in the Bible is brought out in the order of their happening, thus leading the little ones along the most pleasant ways from Genesis to Revelation.

This book will give the Bible a new charm for children, and they will read it with a new understanding. Price $0.75.

THIS BOOK (postpaid), with ONE NEW Subscription. Both for $1.50
THIS BOOK (postpaid), with a RENEWAL Subscription. Both for $2.00

The New Child's Life of Christ

By HESBA STRETTON

CONTAINS choice Biblical Pictures from the world's leading artists, thirty-two of which are full-page illustrations. The book presents the Life of Jesus as it is understood by the most devout and careful students of His Life. The graphic descriptions and the accurate and beautiful illustrations take one into the very midst of the sacred scenes and subjects. This volume throws a flood of light on the sacred pages, and leads the tender reader to the foot of the cross. Price, $0.75.

THIS BOOK (postpaid), with ONE NEW Subscription. Both for $1.50
THIS BOOK (postpaid), with a RENEWAL Subscription. Both for $2.00

Size $7\frac{1}{4} \times 9\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Rich cloth binding. Stamped in gold and colors. 250 pages. Profusely illustrated.

THE BARNARD EDITION

—OF—

The Pilgrim's Progress

By JOHN BUNYAN

PROBABLY no book, except the Bible, has been printed in such immense numbers, and has had so wide a circulation among readers of all ages. It should be in every home where children live. The Barnard Edition of "The Pilgrim's Progress" is the only edition containing nearly sixty full-page pictures and fifty portrait and character illustrations, by Barnard and others; four full-page chromo-lithographs; the beautiful poem "The Little Pilgrim"; also, 388 Bible references, making in all 327 quarto pages, 8×10 inches, printed on double thick, extra quality, super-calendered paper. It is tastily and elegantly bound with extra silk cloth.

It is the cheapest finely illustrated book published. Price, $1.50.

THIS BOOK with ONE NEW Subscription. Both for $1.50
THIS BOOK with a RENEWAL Subscription. Both for $2.00

(For The Pilgrim's Progress add 20 cents for postage.)

Any one of the above books sent on receipt of price.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND, 718 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

According to the "Railway Age" of Chicago, new steam railroad track built in the United States this year amounts to 5,723 miles, or thirty-nine miles more than was constructed in 1902. About one-half of this new mileage has been laid in the gulf and southwestern sections, principally in Oklahoma and Indian Territory. While this rate of yearly construction is more than double what it was during the years of depression preceding the recent boom, it is small compared with the extent of building which went on twenty and fifteen years ago, when new construction on two occasions rose above 10,000 miles a year.

Neither the army nor the Church are as influential in France to-day as when Dreyfus was hounded out of the army into exile, and later set free in a way which could satisfy no honorable man. Anti-Semitism, too, has declined in France in the interval. Hence it is that the ministry, led by M. Combes, has dared to re-open the Dreyfus case, examine the evidence against him dispassionately, and order a retrial before a civil tribunal. And France takes it as calmly as if it were naught, whereas it is a very splendid illustration of the fact that man sooner or later does justice to his kind, becomes ashamed of passion and contemptible prejudice, and decides to play fair.

Josef Mayr, the impersonator of Christ in the Ober-Ammergau Passion Play for the last three times it has been given, has died, being somewhat over 50 years old. Mayr, like those who have preceded him in this great personation, was a

KNOWS NOW

Doctor was Fooled by His Own Case for a Time.

It's easy to understand how ordinary people get fooled by coffee when doctors themselves sometimes forget the facts.

A physician speaks of his own experience:

"I had used coffee for years and really did not exactly believe it was injuring me, although I had paulitation of the heart every day.

"Finally one day a severe and almost fatal attack of heart trouble frightened me and I gave up both tea and coffee, using Postum instead, and since that time I have had absolutely no heart paulitation except on one or two occasions, when I tried a small quantity of coffee, which caused severe irritation and proved to me I must let it alone.

"When we began using Postum it seemed weak. That was because we did not make it according to direction. But now we put a little bit of butter in the pot when boiling and allow the Postum to boil full fifteen minutes, which gives it the proper rich flavor and the deep brown color.

"I have advised a great many of my friends and patients to leave off coffee and drink Postum. In fact, I daily give this advice." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Many thousands of physicians use Postum in place of tea and coffee in their own homes and prescribe it to patients. "There's a reason."

A remarkable little book, "The Road to Wellville," can be found in each package.

worker with his hands in the carving industries of his village; but he retained in all his private life the air of consecration, and was regarded as set apart by virtue of his representation of the Saviour. His personal appearance was majestic; the symmetric beauty of his features, framed in long brown hair and carefully-trimmed beard contributed to keep before the people of the village the religious purpose and import of their periodical presentation of the great drama of the world.

Six years ago a treaty between Great Britain and the United States failed to be ratified by the Senate. It provided that all matters in dispute between the two countries, which could not be settled in the ordinary way, by diplomacy, should be referred to a board of arbitration. There was just enough doubt and suspicion concerning the motives of those who negotiated the treaty, and the possible results of arbitration to prevent the necessary two-thirds of the Senate voting for ratification. Probably now both nations are ready to accept any such proposition. A meeting is to be held this month in Washington to revive the treaty. When it comes up again let us push with all our might and get one more thing put to the credit side of human nature.

Great Britain's recognition of the new Republic of Panama completes the list. However her delay may be explained, the present fact is significant, inasmuch as her policy is not to recognize a new nation before being assured that there is vitality enough to support life. The reception given to our minister by the Panamanians has been excessively jubilant. Pressure from Southern commercial bodies and formal resolutions of Southern legislatures instructing Senators to vote for the new treaty with Panama seem to insure its ratification, notwithstanding Senator Gorman's efforts to make opposition to the treaty a Democratic party issue. Southern public opinion, reflected in such journals as the "Atlanta Constitution," is strongly in favor of any course necessary to get the canal built, and apparently is unconcerned about the ethical issue in dispute, as to the right or wrong of our national course.

ACCUSTOMED TO PASSES.

A well-known railroad official tells a good one on himself in the Brooklyn "Eagle." Summoned hastily to a conference, he started without his pass, and encountered a green conductor.

"I told the conductor the situation, but he said he could not carry me on my mere representation that I had a pass.

" 'Why, man,' said I, 'I am an officer of the company, going to Aurora on company business, and this is the last train that will get me there in time. You must take me.'

"He was polite, but firm. He said he was a new man on this division, and could not afford to make any mistakes.

"When I saw that he was determined I rushed off to the telegraph office, but it was too late to catch anybody authorized to issue passes, so I settled it in my mind that I must go by carriage; and the prospect of an all-night ride over bad roads through the dark was anything but

You pay five times too much for lamp-chimneys.

Buy good ones.
MACBETH.

If you use a wrong chimney, you lose a good deal of both light and comfort, and waste a dollar or two a year a lamp on chimneys.

Do you want the Index? Write me.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

inviting. Indeed, it was so forbidding that I resolved to make one more appeal to the conductor.

"You simply must take me to Aurora," I said with intense earnestness.

" 'I can't do it,' he answered. 'But I believe you are what you represent yourself to be, and I will lend you the money personally. It is only $1.12.'

"Well, sir, you could have knocked me down with the flat side of a palm-leaf fan. I had more than $2,000 in currency in my pocket, but it had never for an instant occurred to me that I could pay my fare and ride on that train. I showed the conductor a wad of money that made his eyes stick out.

" 'I thought it was funny,' said he, 'that a man in your position couldn't raise $1.12. It was that that made me believe you were playing a trick to see if I would violate the rule.'

"But the simple truth was, I had ridden everywhere on passes so many years that I did not think I could ride in any other way."—Ex. *

Thy hands are twain: by one, with pain
Seize fast some lofty crag;

By one, then clasp some brother's grasp

Who else may downward drag!

Thy hands are twain for self in vain!

Thy hands' despair shall grip but air

If both dare clutch the sky

And leave a brother die!

—Lewis M. Watterman, in "S. S. Times."

"The cost in sacrifice, and not in silver, is the measure of our gifts."

New Archdale St. James Place
ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

Entirely new. Near beach. Elevator and all modern conveniences. Thoroughly heated. Open all the year. Very desirable for Friends.

JESSE M. BUNDY, Prop.

Penn's Treaty with the Indians

on India paper; engraving 23 inches by 18 inches, on sheets 30 inches by 24 inches; from the original Boydell engraved plate made in 1775 from the original painting of Benjamin West. $3.00 by mail.

A. L. SMITH

29 E. Penn St., Germantown, Phila., Pa.

EDUCATIONAL.

GUILFORD COLLEGE

Location in the mild and healthful Piedmont Section of North Carolina.

Five Brick Buildings well equipped, supplied with abundance of pure water, and lighted with electricity.

Eleven Members of the Faculty. Good Library and Chemical and Biological Laboratories.

Next Term will begin on the 18th of January, 1904.

Catalogue Sent on Application

L. L. HOBBS, President

EARLHAM COLLEGE, RICHMOND, INDIANA

Prof. Elbert Russell offers courses regularly in Kings, New Testament Times, Life of Christ, The Apostolic Age, Church History, New Testament Literature, Romans, John, Biblical Literature, Isaiah.

Prof. Cyrus W. Hodgkin, The Protestant Reformation.

Prof. Anna M. Demaree, New Testament, Greek.

Asst. Prof. Lindley, History of the Hebrews.

Pres. Kelly, History of Philosophy, Ethics, Psychology.

The Oakwood Seminary

UNION SPRINGS, N. Y.

Founded in 1796.

A boarding school for boys and girls under the care of New York Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Academic, College Preparatory and Commercial

Winter term begins First month 5, 1904

SAMUEL H. HODGKIN, Principal. LINDLEY M. STEVENS, Superintendent.

WHITTIER COLLEGE

Classical, Scientific and Literary courses. Highest requirements. Students unable to continue their studies in more rigorous climes will find this climate the best in the world for study. Natural advantages for scientific investigation unsurpassed. Well equipped laboratory. Whittier, a Friend's community, —morally clean, —no saloons or kindred sources of corruption. For catalogue address,

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, President.

THE NEW YEAR.

Within the cavern of the waiting year,
The awful cavern of compelling fate,
For all upon this bright and azure sphere
What fortunes wait!

Though dark the cloud before the mighty place,
Yet all its presence slowly shall distil
To dewy blessing, since through heavenly grace

Naught works to ill.

For some of us kind love shall lead aside
To the completest joy of happy earth;
And some of us through the dark cloud shall bide

Into the sunshine of immortal birth.

Whatever come, alike for you, for me,
If faith's fine whisper through the pulses thrill,
Full of a deep content our way shall be,
Glad of God's will!

—Harriet Prescott Spofford, in "The C. E. World."

His thoughts are as thine own; nor are His ways
Other than thine, but by their loftier sense
Of beauty infinite and love intense.
Work on. One day, beyond all thoughts of praise,
A sunny joy will crown thee with its rays;
Nor other than thy need, thy recompense.

—George Macdonald.

The more I live the more I love this lovely world: feel more its Author in each little thing; in all that is great. But yet I feel my immortality the more. In childhood the consciousness of immortality buds forth feeble, though full of promise. In the man it unfolds its fragrant petals, his most celestial flower, to mature its seeds throughout eternity.—Theodore Parker.

Bind together your spare hours by the cord of some definite purpose, and know not how much may be accomplished.—Dr. William M. Taylor.

FRIENDS' HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

President:

THOMAS HODGKIN, D.C.L., Litt.D.

OBJECT: To encourage historical study and to publish historical matter.

Subscribers of $1.25 and upwards will receive a copy of "The Journal," as published, free, and any Supplements issued, at cost price. Rufus M. Jones will act as American Agent of the Society, and Friends who wish to become members are requested to send their subscriptions to him.

Address 718 ARCH STREET,
PHILADELPHIA

Acker has it—that delicious
Mo-Kof-Fee.

JUST ISSUED!

Devotional Songs

Edited by three famous composers and compilers.

W. H. DOANE, Mus. Doc.
Wm. J. Kirkpatrick and Hubert P. Main

It contains a larger variety of songs than any other hymn book of its kind ever published. 256 pages. Full cloth bound. 276 hymns. $25 per 100; 30c. per copy, postpaid. A returnable copy for examination will be sent on request.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York—Chicago

PITTSBURGH BANK FOR SAVINGS
ESTAB. 1862

Safe Bind Safe Find

Your money deposited with this bank is absolutely safe, does not fluctuate in value and earns Four per cent. Compound Interest.

Deposits of $1.00 up received in person or by mail. Write for explanatory Booklet AF

Assets $14,000,000.00

SMITHFIELD ST & FOURTH AV.
PITTSBURGH, PA.

HOOPING-COUGH AND CROUP.

Roche's Herbal Embrocation

The celebrated and effectual English Cure without internal medicine. Proprietors, W. EDWARDS & SON, Queen Victoria St., London, England. Wholesale of E. Fougere & Co., 80 North William Street, N. Y.

10 BEAUTIFUL PICTURES FREE

In order to introduce our QUAKER OINTMENT into every home where THE AMERICAN FRIEND is read, we have decided to make the following liberal offer. To every person sending us 25 cents for one box of QUAKER OINTMENT, and 4 cents extra to pay postage, we will send absolutely free the following 10 pictures. These pictures are gems of art. For picture study, art collections, gifts and home decoration, they are of great value. The Last Supper, Christ in Gethsemane, Christ Taken Captive, Christ Before Pilate, Christ Bearing the Cross, The Crucifixion, Entombment, In the Sepulchre, The Ascension, Transfiguration. It is costing us a great deal of money to advertise in this way, but we trust you will be pleased with our liberality, and will favor us with an order for a box of our ointment, and get these 10 beautiful pictures free. QUAKER OINTMENT is the best known remedy for catarrh, eczema, and all skin diseases. Rev. Asa Woodard, pastor Friends' Meeting at Butlerville, Ind., says: "I am using QUAKER OINTMENT, and find it an excellent remedy." Mrs. Clara Chaney, Rural Route No. 3, Warren, Ind., says: "I have never found anything as good as QUAKER OINTMENT for catarrh, sores and skin diseases." Send us your order to-day. Quaker Ointment sent to any address upon receipt of 25 cents.

DAVIS MFG. CO., Butlerville, Ind.

OSTEOPATHY

EDWARD D. BURLIGH
ALEXANDER STETSON

Osteopathic Physician, 1537 Chestnut St., Room 401.

Hours, 9 a.m. to 12.30 p.m. and 2 to 4 p.m.
Bell Telephone Consultation free.

S. F. BALDERSTON'S SON

Wall Paper and Decorations

Window Shades Made to Order
902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILA.

STENOGRAPHER

GEO. B. COCK

Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter Street.
Telephones.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND PREMIUMS

GEORGE FOX

AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY

A Story of His Life, and A Statement of His Message

By

RUFUS M. JONES

"GEORGE FOX REFUSING THE OATH at HOLKER HALL"
Detail from the Painting by J. Pettie, R. A.

THE religious message of George Fox is especially suited to the present age. It is a revelation of the inner personal spiritual life. In "Fox's Journal" this message is obscured by irrelevant detail which, in the present work, is set aside by concise explanatory notes, while the pure original message is culled out, logically arranged, and set forth in a clear and modern style. The force of the message is emphasized by the editor's introduction, which epitomizes and interprets the complicated religious situation which fostered the rise of Quakerism. The work will greatly aid in understanding the principles of Friends, and is invaluable to all classes, especially to the young and new members.

Moreover, the work is "An Autobiography," full of dramatic episodes. The narrative is fascinating and throws a flood of light upon English history during the seventeenth century, and also upon early Colonial life in America. The incidents are carefully selected and arranged with sufficient explanatory matter to enable the reader to gain a comprehensive view of the situations

There are FOUR DISTINGUISHING CHARACTERISTICS which mark the utility and beauty of the work:

FIRST—Twenty-four full-page illustrations, which include all the authentic as well as the best imaginative portraits of Fox, together with a number of familiar scenes and places.

SECOND—Two convenient double-page maps, one showing the outline of Fox's Travels in England, the other his travels in America.

THIRD—A scholarly and comprehensive introduction, and numerous explanatory notes; and FOURTH—A careful editing of the original matter from George Fox.

Two Volumes, 600 Pages, Extra Cloth, Gilt Top, Postpaid, $4.00

THIS WORK (postpaid), with ONE NEW Subscription. Both for $4.00

THIS WORK (postpaid), with a RENEWAL Subscription. Both for $4.50

A POPULAR EDITION

of

GEORGE FOX, An Autobiography

Is being prepared. It contains the text of the above described work unabridged. The whole is bound in one volume with neat cloth covers. It will be ready for delivery shortly after the first of the new year. Price, postpaid, $1.50.

THIS BOOK (postpaid), with ONE NEW Subscription. Both for $2.00

THIS BOOK (postpaid), with a RENEWAL Subscription. Both for $2.50

LANCASTER CASTLE—One of George Fox's Prisons.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND, 718 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Mortgages Net 6% in North Dakota.

I place mortgages on land covering about one-third its value. The value of this land is constantly increasing.

I know every mortgagor personally, know his land, his integrity, his habits and his ability to pay.

These combine to make me certain that these mortgages are as safe as GOVERNMENT BONDS

Investigate me. You can't make the investigation too rigid to suit me. I'll stand it. I've been in this business for 18 years, and never lost a cent for a customer, nor foreclosed a mortgage.

I collect the interest and principal without charge and remit in New York exchange. Write to me for further information.

WALTER L. WILLIAMSON

Investment Banker

Lisbon

North Dakota

There is a happiness so deep, a furnishing of the nature so profoundly with the conditions of joy, that it may bear upon its breast a hundred sorrows and yet be happy still . . . as the waves are borne upon the bosom of the tide.—Phillips Brooks.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a.

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote, 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p.m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cts. per night; $3 per week.

Two occupants, 50 cts. each, per night.

2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL
Phone Spruce 33-55. Clerk.

Our Subscribers are invited to use the column of Subscribers' Wants (See page 2). It will be found useful for many purposes—renting property, selling goods, securing help or positions, for advertising boarding-houses and hotels, and for almost everything where good results are expected at a small expenditure.

WE SHOULD LIKE to hear from any of our readers who may be considering the subject of advertising. It is not hard to demonstrate the value of space in THE AMERICAN FRIEND, and we are particularly desirous of having the advertising patronage of our own members. It is an excellent way to support the denominational paper, and we can present some facts which make it a strong business proposition. Write for rates and full information.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND,
718 Arch Street,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA. Office, 409 CHESTNUT STREET

CAPITAL, $1,000,000

Surplus and Undivided Profits, belonging to the Stockholder

Surplus, belonging to Insurance Account

ASSETS, $61,615,271.43

4,457,613.08

6,317,764.17

Incorporated Third month 22, 1865. Charter Perpetual.

INSURES LIVES, GRANTS ANNUITIES, RECEIVES MONEY ON DEPOSIT, returnable on demand for which interest is allowed.

And is empowered by law to act as EXECUTOR ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, GUARDIAN, ASSIGNEE, COMMITTEE, RECEIVER, AGENT, etc.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the assets of the Company.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.

BOXES $5 AND UPWARDS

T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-Prest.
ASA S. WING, Vice-President.
JOS. ASHBROOK, Man. Ins. Dept.
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer.

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY, President.

J. R. FOULKE, Trust Officer.

DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary.

J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Assistant Trust Officer

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary.

DIRECTORS:

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY,
T. WISTAR BROWN,
HENRY HAINES,
RICHARD WOOD,
CHAS. HARTSHORNE.

ASA S. WING,
PHILIP C. GARRETT,
JAMES V. WATSON,
WM. LONGSTRETH,
EDWARD H. OGDEN.

THOS. SCATTERGOOD,
J. PRESTON THOMAS,
ROBERT M. JANNEY,
MARRIOTT C. MORRIS,
FRANK H. TAYLOR.

"I'LL DO IT FOR LESS"

Says your bargain printer, and you think you save money. How about the poor ink, cheap paper and careless work?

THE LEEDS & BIDDLE CO., Inc.

Makers of the Better Kind of Printing
1019-21 Market St., Phila.

LIFE OF STEPHEN GRELLET

BY WILLIAM GUEST.

264 pages—bound in cloth. 2 engravings by Sartain. 50 cents, postage prepaid. (One and two-cent stamps taken.)

A. L. SMITH

29 E. Penn Street Germantown, Pa.

WILLIAM S. YARNALL

Manufacturing OPTICIAN

118 S. FIFTEENTH ST., PHILA.
4th Door Below Chestnut St.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE.

Sifts the flour and mixes 10 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CYRUS CHAMBERS, Jr.) 52d & Media Sts., Philadelphia

JOSEPH G. FOGG UNDERTAKER AND EMBALMER

S. W. Cor. Sixteenth and Race Sts.

Phone Spruce 44-38-W. PHILADELPHIA.

Suburban orders promptly attended.

6% to 7% Choice First Mortgage Loans, Seattle and vicinity. Local and N. Y. references. Established 1887. Correspondence Solicited. JAMES BOTHWELL, Seattle, Washington.

6% NET FIRST GOLD MORTGAGES

on improved RED RIVER VALLEY FARMS. Loans to actual settlers ONLY. 21 years' experience in business. Send for formal applications, list of references and map showing location of lands. Over $400,000 invested. None but SAFE, PROMPT-PAYING loans on my books.

WILLIAM T. SOUDER, Financial Agent
309, 310, 311 Century Bldg., Minneapolis, Minn.

They said he owed nothing when he died. A little inquiry showed he had not provided for his chief creditors,—his family. This debt is best discharged through a life insurance policy in the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE

921-3-5 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia

We are fronted from our birthday onward to the day we die With a maximum of questions and a minimum reply. So we make our catechism; but our work is never done— For a father's catechism never fits a father's son.

—Sam. W. Foss.

God never calls a man to do wrong in the present in order that he may do good in the future.

Barham College Library

The

American Friend

Vol. XI

FIRST MONTH 14, 1904

No. 2

	PAGE
EDITORIALS.—Are Friends Interested in Quakerism?—Church Attendance in New York City.—Portraits of George Fox.—Editorial Notes	23
The "Next Revival." Theodore L. Cuyler.	25
The Epistle of the Corinthians to Paul . . . Howard H. Brinton.	26
What the World Owes to the Quakers . . .	27
THE INTERNATIONAL LESSON Lesson for First month 24, 1904.	28
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR Topic for First month 24, 1904.	29
MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT	30
THINGS OF INTEREST AMONG OURSELVES, . .	32
BORN.—MARRIED.—DIED	32
EVENTS AND COMMENTS	33

RELIANCE.

*Not to the swift, the race :
Not to the strong, the fight :
Not to the righteous, perfect grace :
Not to the wise, the light.*

*But often faltering feet
Come surest to the goal ;
And they who walk in darkness meet
The sunrise of the soul.*

*A thousand times by night
The Syrian hosts have died ;
A thousand times the vanquished right
Hath risen, glorified.*

*The truth the wise men sought
Was spoken by a child ;
The alabaster box was brought
In trembling hands defiled.*

HENRY VAN DYKE, in "Atlantic Monthly."

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.50 A YEAR ❧ ❧ ❧ PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
AMERICAN FRIEND PUBLISHING COMPANY, 718 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA

A WELL-KNOWN MINISTER

says: "I tell my people to take out Life Insurance and stick to it. Not to get new clothes to come to church with if they haven't paid their premiums."

Good Advice.

Insure in

The PRUDENTIAL

Insurance Company of America

JOHN F. DRYDEN, President

Write for Information, Dept. 67.

HOME OFFICE, Newark, N. J.

OSTEOPATHY

EDWARD D. BURLEIGH
ALEXANDER STETSON

Osteopathic Physician, 1537 Chestnut St., Room 401.

Hours, 9 a.m. to 12.30 p.m. and 2 to 4 p.m.
Bell Telephone Consultation free.

S. F. BALDERSTON'S SON

Wall Paper and
Decorations

Window Shades Made to Order

202 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILA.

STENOGRAPHER

GEO. B. COCK

Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter Street.
Telephones.

Acker has them—those luscious Chocolate Mints.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE.

Sifts the flour and mixes 20 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for booklet. Agents wanted.

Scientific Bread Mach. Co.
(CYRUS CHAMBERS, JR.)
52d & Media Sts., Philadelphia

WILLIAM S. YARNALL
Manufacturing OPTICIAN

118 S. FIFTEENTH ST., PHILA.
4th Door Below Chestnut St.

OUR 1904 CALENDAR

Poster style—very effective—sent to anyone interested in good printing, for 4c. postage.

THE LEEDS & BIDDLE CO., Inc.

Makers of the Better Kind of Printing
1019-21 Market St., Phila.

Penn's Treaty with the Indians

on India paper; engraving 23 inches by 18 inches, on sheets 30 inches by 24 inches; from the original Boydell engraved plate made in 1775 from the original painting of Benjamin West. $5.00 by mail.

A. L. SMITH

29 E. Penn St., Germantown, Phila., Pa.

HOOPING-COUGH AND CROUP.

Roche's Herbal Embrocation

The celebrated and effectual English Cure without internal medicine. Proprietors, W. EDWARDS & SON, Queen Victoria St., London, England. Wholesale of E. Fougere & Co., 30 North William Street, N. Y.

Three Books You Should Have

We have three books written by the late DR. DOUGAN CLARK, Professor of Biblical Literature in Earlham College. Dr. Clark was recognized as one of the leading teachers on Holiness, and his books are full of spiritual food.

1. HOLY GHOST DISPENSATION.

This book sets forth with great clearness the joy and beauty of living in fellowship with the Holy Spirit. It should be read by all who are thirsty after the higher life. It contains 170 pages, finely printed, good paper, in strong cloth binding, price 50 cents. It treats of the following subjects: 1.—The Dispensation of the Holy Spirit; 2.—The Holy Spirit our Sanctifier; 3.—The Holy Spirit an object of Worship, Praise and Prayer; 4.—Intercessory Functions of the Holy Spirit; 5.—The Anointing and Sealing of the Spirit; 6.—The Holy Spirit's Guidance; 7.—The Striving of the Spirit; 8.—Sanctification not by Growth nor Death; 9.—Sanctification not Impeccability; 10.—Sanctification and Temptation; 11.—Be ye therefore Perfect; 12.—Preserved; 13.—A Plea for Orthodoxy; 14.—The Reckoning of Faith.

2. INSTRUCTIONS TO CHRISTIAN CONVERTS.

This book has passed through eight editions. It is one of the most valuable books to put into the hands of young Christians. The chapters are: 1.—Be Definite; 2.—Be Diligent; 3.—Be Faithful; 4.—Be Patient; 5.—Be Holy; 6.—Be Filled; 7.—Be Established. 133 pages; price 50 cents.

3. INNER AND OUTER LIFE OF HOLINESS.

This book was written just before Dr. Clark's death. In many respects it is his most spiritual work. The book has 100 pages well printed and bound; price, cloth 35 cents; leatherette 20 cents. The book treats first of INNER LIFE as a life of Peace, Faith, Full Assurance. Extinction of Selfishness, Communion with God, and Spiritual Growth. And of the OUTER LIFE: The Walk, Regulation, Habit, Meekness and Rule of Action.

SPECIAL OFFER.—The three books, in cloth binding, will be sent postpaid for $1.00.

ADDRESS,

PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION OF FRIENDS Plainfield, Indiana

The American Friend

*"Truth is the highest thing a man may keep."
"That they all may be one."*

VOL. XI.

PHILADELPHIA, FIRST MONTH 14, 1904.

No. 2.

ARE FRIENDS INTERESTED IN QUAKERISM ?

A CLERGYMAN in the Church of England, some years ago, made a careful study of the early Friends and the reasons for their remarkable growth and influence. He found the "secret" of their strength to have been that the Friends of the first period devoted their lives to Quakerism. It absorbed their thought and their interest. They lived for it and planned for it and prayed for it as a devoted parent does for a beloved child. While this spirit lasted of course it flourished. Anything flourishes when good men and good women put their lives into it.

That which this clergyman discovered in the first period has been true of all periods to a certain extent. Many of us can remember in our boyhoods the way in which the good old Friends bore the concerns of Zion on their hearts night and day, and how they allowed nothing—not even family affairs—to get between them and the interests of the Church (spelled with a capital), which always meant for them Quakerism. They were perhaps not always wise in their methods, not always as far-seeing as would have been well, but devoted they were, and ready to deny themselves every earthly thing if only the meeting prospered by it. Spending and being spent "for the cause" had become almost second nature to them. It is greatly to be hoped that this spirit is still alive, and in a measure it certainly is. There are some names in our Sardis as white as any ever enrolled, whose title is clear to a place with the faithful dead.

But it must be admitted that to one who watches affairs and movements very carefully it sometimes seems as though the general interest in the welfare of our Zion was somewhat slumbering. The lack of concern shows itself noticeably in these columns. A score of great questions and issues have been before us during the year. Some of them affect the very life of the body itself; all of them involve the efficiency and well-being of the denomination to which we belong. The editor has dealt with them wisely or unwisely as well as he could, and there generally the subject has dropped. Seldom any wise criticism or judicious comment, or helpful suggestion, has come. Seldom any illuminating discussion has appeared which would show how keenly alive the readers were to the issues before the members of our body. In England every important subject is discussed in the open forum of the Friend. Here dead silence is the rule. It is unmistakably an unhealthy state of things. Unity is desirable where truth has been attained, but in the multitude of practical matters which are continually before us we are not ready for sudden unity. We need wisdom from many pens. We need points of view from many thinkers who are travelling with the editor in a common effort to win the truth and find safe paths for progress. Controversy is poor stuff, and we are not encouraging that. But a genuine, sincere, serious consideration of important questions, from somewhat diverse points of view, with the sole aim of discovering what our Israel in these days ought to do—that will further, not hinder, our progress, and the marked absence of it seems to indicate that our thoughtful readers are not taking their true share of the present-day burdens of Quakerism.

CHURCH ATTENDANCE IN NEW YORK.

THE Church News Association has made a very interesting and valuable study of church attendance on the First-day of the week in New York city. An actual count was made of all persons present at religious services during the last four First-days of Eleventh month and the first one in Twelfth month. Four of these days were pleasant and one of them rainy. There are at present on the island of Manhattan, which was the part of the city counted for this study, 2,007,350 inhabitants. Many of these are of course infants, infirm persons, invalids and caretakers of those who are confined at home. Many more are occupied on the Sabbath, such as policemen, firemen, trainmen, hotel employees and a host of other laborers. All these circumstances must be taken into account in judging the percentage of attendance. There are, too, 430,000 Jews in this borough of New York, and they must not be looked for in the Christian churches. The total membership of the Protestant churches in the borough is 153,280; the Roman Catholic membership is 511,505, making a grand total of 664,885 enrolled in Christian churches. The average attendance for these five days was 138,106 for Protestants and 239,029 for Roman Catholics, a total attendance of 427,135. This would be a little over 64 per cent. of the entire membership, about 29 per cent. being men. The percentage of attendance is very much higher in the Protestant churches. It is 90 per cent., over 34 per cent. being men.

The Methodists make the most surprising showing. They have a total membership in the city of 13,450, while the actual attendance at their religious services was 17,662, which is almost 39 per cent. more than their entire membership. The proportion is even greater at the Christian Science meetings, but it must be remembered that a great many persons go to these meetings out of curiosity. The attendance at the Reformed Dutch churches surpasses the actual membership. The proportion of attendance at Congregational churches is about 90 per cent.

Friends made the poorest showing of any well-accredited denomination. There are two meeting-houses in the borough (one for each branch), with a total membership of 812. The total average attendance for these five weeks was 175. This is less than 22 per cent. It would seem that, all told, both kinds of Friends together muster only about 175 worshippers out of a city population of over two millions.

Generally speaking, the smaller churches have a greater proportion of attendance than do the larger churches. This is decidedly a fact in the Methodist and Presbyterian churches. In the Episcopal churches, where fine music is an attraction, the larger churches have a greater percentage of attendance than the smaller ones do. The most encouraging feature of this census is the discovery that such a large percentage of the entire membership is found in the Protestant churches of New York city on the day set apart for worship and service.

PORTRAITS OF GEORGE FOX.

THERE are three portraits of George Fox which have some good claim to be authentic and actual representations of the man as he was at different periods of his life. The earliest, and on the whole the most reliable, picture is the one painted by the great Dutch artist, Gerard Honthorst. It is known that Honthorst was in England about 1654, when George Fox was thirty years old. The latter was at this time, next to Cromwell, the man most talked about of anybody in England. It was natural that the celebrated portrait painter should want to put him on his canvas. His lonely walks in the fields, his "openings" during which he seemed caught out of himself, so that "his face did shine," were everywhere spoken of; and this aspect of the man would especially appeal to the artist. He has tried to paint him in this state. All who have seen either the original portrait or the beautiful copy owned by George Vaux, of Philadelphia, pronounce it a remarkable piece of work. It is a successful attempt to show a man who is in the actual presence of two worlds—this one and the one which most of us do not see. As has been well said, "the cry of a truly aspiring soul is on the lips." Such a picture is of course difficult to reproduce, and many who have seen only poor copies have been offended at it. Some have even called it a caricature. The experts, however, are practically agreed that it is a genuine effort to represent the founder of Quakerism at an age somewhat under thirty.

The portrait best known in this country, and probably best liked, is the well-known "Swarthmore" portrait, so named because it is owned by Swarthmore College. This represents George Fox with long hair, slightly curling at the end, parted in the middle. The face is mild and gentle, hardly possessed of the fire which the "Journal" would lead us to expect in it. The form is that of a "bulky person," as William Penn says he was. This portrait is believed to have been painted by Sir Peter Lely, who was a contemporary of Fox. The only difficulty about it is the lack of certain proof that it is a picture by Lely and meant for George Fox. Experts, however, believe that it is a genuine portrait by this celebrated artist. If so, it must have been painted before 1680, when Lely died, and therefore Fox must have been under 56 at the time. The third portrait, or rather set of portraits, are founded on a painting by the artist Chinn. The original painting was not from life, but from sketches apparently made of the great Quaker apostle during his visits in Holland. There is good evidence that such sketches existed. This picture, at all events, carries the characteristics of the various early Dutch prints. Engravings were made from it by different engravers during the early part of last century, and prints from these are common. They show a "bulky person," a placid, benign face, long, wavy hair, a soft, broad-brim hat, a coat buttoned tight to the throat, and a large, white cravat. All other existing pictures are either founded on these three portraits, or are purely imaginary.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

BALTIMORE YEARLY MEETING has just been called to mourn the loss of three of its deeply-concerned members—Augusta L. Watkins, of Baltimore; Zachariah McNaul, of Curwensville, Pennsylvania, and Anna Bernice Bradshaw, of Corinth, Virginia. Zach-ariah McNaul was gathered home at a ripe old age after the work of his life was well-nigh done. Anna Bernice Bradshaw was only just well beginning her life of service, which was full of promise. Augusta L. Watkins was one of the most useful women among us, and each year marked an increase in the value and extent of her service. Baltimore Friends will hardly know how to spare her from their number. We give, from the "Interchange," this interesting item:

"She recognized no distinctions of caste or place in society. Rich or poor were to her men and women with needs, and as such she longed to help where she could. It was a remarkable evidence of the true breadth of her spiritual sympathies that after her death the rector of the Roland Avenue Episcopal Church, with the ladies of her Bible class, many of whom belonged to that congregation, held a memorial service. The lighted seven-branched candlesticks, the surpliced choir, marching behind the cross, and the intoned burial service, seemed very different from the attitude held by one who was so decided and simple a Quaker as she, and yet it was a most interesting testimony to the unity of the Church in spite of denominational differences, and it was most impressive to hear the rector speak of her influence and liken her to one of the old prophetesses, saying that when one came from being with her one felt that he had heard a prophetic message and been in the divine presence."

WE are glad to discover that the losses last year were not as bad as they seemed. One whole quarterly meeting of 408 members is omitted in the Wilmington report. This accounts for their seeming loss, and gives 408 more Friends than our count showed.

THE "NEXT REVIVAL."

BY THEODORE L. CUYLER.

The spirit of prophecy seems to have descended upon certain good men on both sides of the ocean, and the subject of their confident predictions is what they call "the next revival." In our own land that stalwart patriot and philanthropist, Josiah Strong, has published a small volume, entitled, "The Next Great Awakening," in which he contends that each spiritual awakening in modern times has rested on some one great special idea, and that it was called forth by the special circumstances of the time. John Watson, of Liverpool, the brilliant author of "The Bonnie Brier Bush" and many other popular works, has recently been exercising his prophetic gifts in an address before the Baptist College of Bristol, which is attracting no small attention. The Liverpool doctor contends that such evangelistic movements as were conducted by Moody are now a "spent force, and his peculiar methods are now obsolete"! Instead of a work whose chief purpose is the conversion of sinful souls and the quickening of spiritual life of believers, John Watson emphasizes the superior claims of a great humanitarian work for feeding the hungry, improving the dwellings of the poor, insuring fair wages to the laborer, cleansing the slums in all its kindred lines of social reform.

After reading this eloquently constructed manifesto, I recalled at once a similar pronouncement made just fifty years ago by that distinguished philanthropist, Charles L. Brace, the founder of the Children's Aid Society, and the author of a notable book called "Gesta Christi." At that time the Christian people of New York were being aroused to the horrible condition of the slums and their wretched occupants; the "Five Points House of Industry" and the "Old Brewery Mission" had just been started, and Charles L. Brace had launched his admirable Children's Aid Society. "Here comes the new revival!" exclaimed my good friend Brace, with all the exultation of a spiritual Columbus who discovers a new continent opened to Christianity. What was the result? The sort of social and sanitary reforms which Charles L. Brace helped to pioneer has been going forward from that day to this, in New York, in London and many another hive of population. Charles L. Brace made his declaration in 1853. Five years afterward came the wonderful revival of 1858, which spread over New York and this whole nation, and extended to Great Britain, resulting in the conversion of multitudes of souls. In 1873 Moody began his great evangelistic campaigns, which were attended with mighty outpouring of the Holy Spirit. From that time to this upon these churches that have done the right kind of preaching, the right kind of praying and the right kind of giving and working the divine Spirit has descended in full measure. We can assure my dear Brother Watson that the Christianity of Calvary and of Pentecost is good for both the bodies and the immortal souls of men, and that the aims and the methods of such evangelistic servants of Jesus Christ as Moody and Spurgeon and McNeil, and kindred preachers, are no more a "spent and obsolete force" than sunshine and showers are obsolete. God's world and God's glorious gospel are big enough and broad enough for both kinds of revival.

1. What is the exact meaning of the word "revival"? In its true and legitimate sense it is the result of an outpouring of the Holy Spirit. It describes a state of things in a church or in the community when Christians become more spiritually-minded and active in good works, and the conversions of impenitent souls are more than ordinarily numerous. Two vitally important phenomena are essential to a genuine revival. The Holy Spirit quickens believers and the Holy Spirit regenerates sinners, and the fruit is a new kind of life to both classes. That is the essential type and characteristic of all true "awakening," from the days of Pentecost to the present hour. Good men from good motives may organize religious methods and machineries, but they end in pious clatter unless the "living Spirit is within the wheels."

2. Everyone who studies carefully both the Bible and human nature must acknowledge that however excellent may be all humanitarian philanthropies, yet the seat and fountain-head of the evils, the wrongs and the miseries is the human heart. That carnal heart is at enmity with God, and of course with godly living. The disease that lies at the root in that heart—whether in fine mansion or in hovel—is sin, sin, sin. No impure fountain can send forth sweet waters. Jesus Christ "died to save us from our sins." The Holy Spirit is sent to "convince the world of sin," and the apostles never stopped with lopping off the twigs of social evils; they struck at the roots. It is a noteworthy fact that the men who have been the means of the mightiest revivals—John Wesley, Whitefield, Jonathan Edwards and Charles G. Kinney have turned the lightning flash of divine truth on the damnable nature of sin, and made that the prime reason for fleeing to Jesus Christ. Would not more of such pungent preaching, red hot with love of souls, hasten the coveted revivals.

3. If such genuinely evangelical revivals come, one of the fruits of the Spirit will be brotherly love. The faith that furnishes no food to hungry bodies or raiment to shivering backs is denounced by the Bible as "dead." How can a man love God if he love not his brother man? It is a striking fact that so many of the foremost laborers for the conversion of souls have been the foremost in the practical philanthropies which John Watson commands. For example, on a certain Sabbath in London I joined with that glorious old reformer, Lord Shaftesbury, in a gospel service for neglected non-churchgoers, and during that week I visited the "Ragged School" which he had established among the poor outcasts of the "Smithfield" district. William E. Dodge (our American Shaftesbury) was equally ready to labor among Pennsylvania coal miners in an inquiry meeting, and with New York millionaires in sustaining scores of charitable institutions. Charles H. Spurgeon, the prince of evangelistic preachers, maintained his orphanages and mission schools, and other reformatory agencies; but his chief aim was the conversion of souls, for he felt that a clean heart was the best guarantee of a clean home, a clean deposit in a savings bank, and clean living. When Christ's servants endeavor to satisfy hungry souls by filling an empty stomach; when they are satisfied with paying the sons of toil fair wages, and do nothing to make them heirs of heaven; when they care only for sick and suffering bodies and bring no remedies for sin-sick and perishing souls, they are guilty of treason to their Master and of criminal robbery of those for whom Jesus died. May God save His church from "revivals" that take no account of Calvary's cross, or the day of judgment, or the tremendous realities of eternity!

4. The most idle waste of breath is to predict revivals. My beloved friend, Moody, was sometimes tempted to do it and suffered a sore disappointment.

God is a sovereign and takes none of us into His secret councils. His kingdom cometh not with observation, or by sounding of trumpets. During my forty-four years of pastoral experience the most copious outpourings of the Holy Spirit upon my church came when we were not expecting them. While neither pastor nor churches can predict the seasons of the Spirit's peculiar presence, it is their imperative duty to be preaching God's whole message, to be praying without ceasing, to be doing Christ's work after Christ's special fashion of personal effort, and then trust our promise-keeping God for showers of blessings as Elijah did on Mount Carmel.

All these material benefits that John Watson pleads for are eminently desirable; but they are more likely to come when Christ's Church puts spiritual things above secular things, and are baptized with the unselfish and loving spirit of our crucified Lord. Humanitarian reforms are admirable as far as they go; but verily they do not go far enough when they stop short of salvation from the curse of sin, and stop short of the cross of Jesus, and stop short of a new heart and of the life everlasting in heaven. May the "next revival" in our churches be a revival of faith in God's Word and the power of prayer, and a revival of holy and unworldly zeal in not only saving men's suffering bodies, but saving their immortal souls and their daily lives by bringing them to Jesus Christ—a revival whose glorious results shall last clear through into eternity!

Brooklyn.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

THE EPISTLE OF THE CORINTHIANS TO PAUL.

BY HOWARD H. BRINTON.

[At the request of the editor some members of one of his classes have constructed the epistle which the Corinthians wrote to Paul. (See 1 Cor. 7: 1.) This is the way one of the young men reproduced the lost letter. Our readers will find it good practice to make their attempt.—Ed.]

The disciples which are in Corinth to the beloved brother Paul: Grace and peace from God our father and the Lord Jesus Christ be with thee and with all the saints and faithful brethren which are at Ephesus. We pray to God continually on thy behalf, desiring that all may be well with thee in thy labors, for we have learned of all the sufferings and trials which thou art enduring in the service of our Lord Jesus Christ, and our hearts go out to thee in great love, for we remember how that thou, coming to us when we were in the darkness of sin and idolatry, did lead us into the light of the knowledge of the love of God and the redemption through Christ Jesus. Blessed be God who in His great mercy sent thee unto us. Though many of us have suffered for the cause of Christ, yet we also have experienced the joy which comes from a knowledge of the gospel.

Now we beseech thee that thou wouldst soon visit us again, but for the present we write, being greatly in need of thy help, for we are torn with conflicting doubts and opinions. In all things we are mindful of thee, for we have received the Holy Spirit at thy hands, and we seek guidance from thee.

In thy letter thou commandest us to have no company with fornicators and idolaters and extortioners, and behold all the Corinthians are such. Shall we then go out of the world entirely? We pray that thou wouldst tell us plainly what to do.

Concerning marriage we are much perplexed, for there are those who say that it is sinful for a man to take a wife, and that, as Christ will come soon, we should be free from family cares and serve only the Lord. We therefore ask of thee whether those that are unmarried should remain as they are, and whether those that are bound to a wife should seek to be loosed. Many who are believers are married to those who are idolaters, and this has been the cause of much dissension, for thou hast said that man and wife should not separate.

Does the idolater defile the believer or does the believer sanctify the idolater? There are many who say that they have been changed by the gospel. Those who are circumcised are trying to appear as uncircumcised, and believers who are the slaves of believers say that by Christ they are made free. Wouldst thou condemn these? We have turned from idols to serve the living God, but we disagree as to whether a believer should eat meat offered to idols. Some say that idols are nothing, and so eat in the temples and give thanks to God, while others say that we cannot serve God and also the demons which the heathen worship. Is it expedient that in this respect, too, we should avoid all idolatry?

We would not have thee ignorant that the Church has been brought into much disrepute among the heathen. They say that the women are shameless because they prophesy with uncovered heads. Now thou hast said that in Christ there is neither male nor female, but should the Church be shamed on account of this?

We would also ask thee how to celebrate the Lord's Supper, for we know that we have not done it in Christian love and temperance. It is often marked with quarreling and gluttony, and we ask thy advice, hoping for better things.

Much division has existed amongst us concerning spiritual gifts. Some say that prophesying is most important, and others speaking with tongues, and others interpreting, and others healing, so that there is much discord in the meetings, each wishing to exercise his gift.

We would also ask thee concerning the resurrection of the dead, for some say there is no resurrection. We pray thee that thou wouldst enlighten us on this matter, for we all desire eternal life at the coming of Christ Jesus.

Inform us as to the manner of making the collection for the poor saints. We pray thee that thou wouldst send Apollos to us and wouldst soon come thyself. The Church here salutes the Church at Ephesus, and all the Churches which are in Asia; salute Priscilla and Aquilla with a holy kiss. May the love of God be always with thee. Amen.

WHAT THE WORLD OWES TO THE QUAKERS.

[This interesting article is from "Pearson's Magazine." It is only a very partial list of the Friends who have contributed to the work of the world. A few of these here given can hardly be rightly claimed as Friends, though most of them were actual members.—Ed.]

How many among the tens of thousands of people who travel by rail every day know that they owe the introduction of the "iron horse" into England to a Quaker?

Not many, it is to be presumed. Yet it is an incontrovertible fact, nevertheless.

Stephenson, of course, it was who actually built the first locomotive; and he was no Quaker. But it was Friend Edward Pease, of Darlington, who found the money for the preliminary experiments, and who later on financed the first line—that between Stockton and Darlington—ever built on British soil.

Afterwards Friend Ellis, of Leicester, started the now mighty Midland system. Friend Bradshaw inaugurated a "guide," to tell the public when and where the trains started and their destination. And Friend Edmundson, foreseeing that the cumbrous method of "booking" each individual passenger, continued from coaching days, was bound to be quickly superseded by some more rational and effective system, set to work and devised the railway ticket, and invented the machine for stamping it.

When the Quakers first became a power in the land there was no such thing as total abstinence. Beer—good beer—and plenty of it, was held to be essential to the welfare of the British people. So the Quakers, with their accustomed enterprise and energy, set to work to brew good beer, and plenty of it; and the result was the growth of such world-famous malster firms as the Walkers, the Allens of Ratcliffe, the Hanburys and Buxtons of Spitalfields, and the Barclays and Perkins of Southwark.

Afterwards temperance reform was forced to the front. The Society of Friends came to believe that brewing was a morally illegal trade, and they quietly withdrew from the business. They also looked round to find some other beverage that might in time vie in popularity with beer and supplant it.

They found it, or thought they had found it, in cocoa; and Friend Cadbury, of Birmingham; Friend Fry, of Bristol, and Friend Rowntree, of York, founded the cocoa factories that still bear their names and are conducted by their descendants.

Friend Bryant stuck a bit of phosphorus on the end of a sliver of wood and showed it to Friend May. The great match-making firm of Bryant & May was the result. Friend Reckitt invented a blue for imparting a good color to white clothes after they had been washed, and laid the foundations of a large fortune.

Friend Huntley thought that an improvement might be made in the little round home-made cakes the Quaker housewives were wont to bake, and that there were elements of a commercial success to the idea. Friend Palmer thought so, too. And between them they started at Reading a tiny bakehouse that blossomed out in time into the vast business of Huntley & Palmer.

When the question of bringing Cleopatra's Needle from Alexandria and setting it up in London was first mooted, the objection was raised that no engineer could be found bold enough to tackle the task of lifting the mighty monolith. Friend Tangye undertook the job, and successfully; and afterwards Friend Dixie poised it on its pedestal by the banks of the Thames.

It was Friend Elizabeth Fry who started prison reform in England, visiting, fearless and alone, the frightful "women's ward" of Newgate, though warned beforehand that its savage inmates would likely tear her limb from limb.

Many of this noble woman's immediate descendants are occupying important positions in Britain to-day, amongst them being Sir Theodore Fry, the well-known politician, and head of the great iron manufacturing firm of Theodore Fry & Co., Limited; the Right Hon. Sir Edward Fry, the famous ex-Judge of the Appeal Court, and Mr. Lewis Fry, M. P., for the Northern Division of Bristol.

Britain's banking system was the wonder and envy of the world a century ago, and that it was so was due almost entirely to the Quakers. Overend, Gurney & Co. was a Quaker firm. So is Barclay, Bevan & Co., the founder of the firm being a direct descendant of that Robert Barclay, the "Laird of Ury," immortalized by Whittier, the "Quaker Poet."

British farmers never had an enduring plowshare until Friend Ransome, of Ipswich, made them one of "chilled" iron, thereby laying the foundation stone of yet another great Quaker business. Friend Abraham first found out the secret of casting in iron from the Dutch, and the huge foundries at Coalbrookdale, famous through three generations, were the result.

True porcelain, as the word is now understood, was not made in England until about the middle of the century before last, when Friend Cookworthy discovered the china clay deposits of Cornwall.

Friend Lister became a doctor, and was horrified at the deaths in hospitals after operations, so set to work to find a remedy. The result was that greatest discovery of the age—antiseptic surgery, and plain "Friend Lister" became first "Sir Joseph Lister," and afterward "Lord Lister."

John Bright left the world better than he found it, both morally and socially. So, too, did Dr. Birkbeck, the inventor of mechanics' institutes; Neal Dow, the temperance reformer, and William Edward Forster, of Education Acts' fame. All these were of Quaker stock.

The Italian Marquis of Mortda, the famous botanist, was once plain Thomas Hanbury, Quaker and chemist.

Sir Robert Fowler, who was twice Lord Mayor of London, came of Quaker ancestry. So, too, did Sir Walter Scott; Lord Macaulay, whose mother was a member of the sect; Sir Henry Rawlinson, the decipherer of the Egyptian cuneiform inscriptions; Sir Samuel Cunard, the founder of Atlantic steam navigation; Lord Lyndhurst, the great lawyer; Bolton, who brought the steam engine of Watt into general use; Dr. Tregelles, the Biblical scholar; Abraham Lincoln, America's martyred President; Dr. Birch, tutor to our King Edward VII., and Sir T. Fowell Buxton, the indomitable and fearless champion of the slave.

But, after all, our material debt to the Quakers, immense though it is, is insignificant when compared with our moral one. They were the first "passive resisters," and through and by passive resistance—real passive resistance—they won for us, in great part, the civil and religious liberty we now enjoy.

The sufferings of individuals were frightful. Even women were not exempt. Mary Clark, the wife of a respectable London tradesman, was publicly flogged, and that in the most savage manner conceivable. Mary Fisher underwent "many grievous scourgings and indignities." Mary Dyer was hanged. These were the "Three Marys of Quakerdom." But they are types only. There were hundreds, nay thousands, of others—martyrs every one of them.

The International Lesson.

FIRST QUARTER.

LESSON IV.

FIRST MONTH 24, 1904.

JESUS REJECTED AT NAZARETH.

Luke 4: 16-30.

GOLDEN TEXT.—He came unto his own and his own received him not.—John 1: 11.

DAILY READINGS.

Second-day, First mo. 18.—Jesus rejected at Nazareth. Luke 4: 16-30.
Third-day, First mo. 19.—Another visit. Matt. 13: 53-58.
Fourth-day, First mo. 20.—The text. Isaiah 61.
Fifth-day, First mo. 21.—Teaching refused. John 5: 36-47.
Sixth-day, First mo. 22.—The Son rejected. Luke 20: 9-18.
Seventh-day, First mo. 23.—Folly of rejecting. Prov. 1: 20-33.
First-day, First mo. 24.—"Ye would not." Luke 13: 24-35.

Time.—About eighteen months after the last lesson, A.D. 28, in the spring after the Passover, which would bring it in early April.

Place.—Nazareth, which was about ten or twelve miles southwest of the Sea of Galilee.

Time in the Life of Christ.—At the beginning of His Galilean ministry—when he was about 31.

Though from Luke's account the time of the lesson would seem to follow closely upon the temptation, it would appear that all the incidents described in John 1: 19 to 4: 45 took place between the temptation and the present lesson. We do not know how large Nazareth was; some think about 2,000 inhabitants, others 15,000 or 20,000. It was situated near one of the great routes to the East, and was well fitted for the observation of all sorts and conditions of men. Owing to contact with the outward world Galileans were much more liberal than Judeans, and they were, besides, comparatively free from the narrow teachings of the Scribes and Pharisees, who were numerous in Jerusalem.

The first year of Christ's ministry, which was in Judea, does not seem to have been very fruitful. It is noticeable that only one of his disciples was a Judean, and he was Judas Iscariot.

16. "As his custom was." It is evident that Jesus made a practice of attending the regular religious services on the Sabbath days. "Synagogue." These were primarily for instruction rather than worship pure and simple. The service was comparatively informal, it being the custom to ask strangers or visitors to speak or to expound. Compare Acts 13: 14-16. "Stood up." It was customary to stand up to read and to sit down to expound.

17. "Esaias." Isaiah. "The book (roll) of the prophet." Some think that the selection was the regular lesson for the day. It is likely that Christ read the Hebrew, which, according to custom, would be translated into Aramaic, the dialect in common use. "Where it was written." Isaiah 61: 1, 2. On comparing the quotation with the original it will be found that there is quite a difference; this is caused by the fact that the evangelist quotes from the Septuagint, and not verbally.

18. "The spirit of the Lord." This is what should be back of every message, every sermon, every service. Christ was filled with the spirit. See Luke 4: 14; John 3: 34. "Anointed." It was not the anointing that was important, but what the anointing signified—the dedication, the setting apart. "Gospel." The Glad Tidings. What are glad tidings? That God is love; that He is on the side of righteousness; that sin will be forgiven; that sin and death have been conquered. "God has proclaimed pardon. "A Saviour has overcome sin and death." The passage is to be interpreted spiritually first, but also literally. See Matt. 5: 3; Isa. 66: 6; Jno. 8: 34-36; Jno. 9: 39-41; Gal. 5: 1; Luke 2: 10, 11.

19. "To proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord." Revised Version. In Isaiah the primary reference is probably to the year of Jubilee; here it means Christ's kingdom. Note that Christ stopped before reaching the end of the sentence; He omitted "the day of vengeance of our God." His was a Gospel of love and good tidings.

20. "Closed the book." Literally, "Rolling up the roll." "Minister." Better as Revised Version, "the attendant." "Sat down." The usual position for a speaker who taught. "Fastened on him." Probably He had not spoken publicly in Nazareth before.

21. "To-day hath this scripture been fulfilled in your ears." Revised Version. The true year of Jubilee had come.

22. "Bare him witness." By their attention or words of wonder. "Words of grace." Revised Version. The meaning is, not in regard to the content of the message, but to the manner in which the message was delivered. Compare John 7: 46. "Is not this Joseph's son?" The Jews were accustomed to express their feelings aloud in the synagogues. They were greatly impressed, but their prejudices come in. "Is it possible that this can be the carpenter that we have always known?" If they accepted His message they would have to accept Him—one of the working class. It was too much to ask. Compare Matt. 13: 55, 56.

23. Christ read their thoughts, and answered them. The idea is, they said within themselves, "Perform the mighty works which we have heard you did in Capernaum." It was a repetition of the temptation of the devil. Christ constantly refused to work miracles for display, or for his personal benefit.

24. "No prophet is acceptable in his own country." Revised Version. Compare John 4: 44. This proverb is generally, though not universally, true. Compare the modern "No man is a hero to his valet."

25-27. Our Lord now by inference tells them of the fact that the Gospel is for the world, for the Gentile as well as the Jew; and this he does by referring to two well-known incidents in Jewish history, in both of which Gentiles were the beneficiaries. "Sarepta." Better "Zar-e-phath." Compare Acts 13: 46.

28, 29. "Were filled with wrath." The tense of the verb indicates a sudden outburst. "Rose up." At once, thus bringing the services to an abrupt close. "The hill." There is one which complies with the conditions.

30. Some think that Christ's escape was miraculous; but it seems more likely that the mob was awed by His appearance. Compare John 7: 30, 46; 8: 59; 10: 39, 40; 18: 6.

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

The Glad Tidings are glad because they tell of comfort; of deliverance from captivity; of light; of liberty; and of universality; and the message is for you and for you to-day.

Christian Endeavor

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Lindley D. Clark, 1429 New York Avenue, Washington, D.C.]

TOPIC FOR FIRST MONTH TWENTY-FOURTH.

WHAT IF CHRIST CAME TO OUR TOWN?

John 4: 23-30, 39-42.

Second-day, First mo. 18.—As He came to Bethlehem. Matt. 2: 1-12.

Third-day, First mo. 19.—As He came to Cana. John 2: 1-11.

Fourth-day, First mo. 20.—As He came to Jerusalem. Matt. 21: 1-11.

Fifth-day, First mo. 21.—As He came to Capernaum. Matt. 9: 1-8.

Sixth-day, First mo. 22.—As He came to Bethany. John 11: 40-44.

Seventh-day, First mo. 23.—As He came to Jericho. Luke 19: 1-10.

"When the Son of Man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth?" If He should appear among men to-day, and ask them face to face, He would certainly find much lack of faith, or there would be no occasion for the question that forms our theme for the day. But if we had faith of the quality defined in Hebrews 11: 1, as "giving substance to things hoped for" (Revised Version, margin), we should not ask, "What if Christ came?" for we should know the fulfillment of His promise, "Lo, I am with you."

Many do indeed know such fulfillment, and to them His presence is manifest daily, yet there are men and women, even in our own localities, often, who have little knowledge of His coming. Perhaps if we who have had Him so clearly and so persistently shown to us knew how little of what could be called opportunity to know Him had been afforded, we would wonder at the neglect of the Christian more than at the indifference of the Christless. If Christ should come and find within the sound of church bells those who had never been taught that they would be welcome in the sanctuary, or that there was any reason why they should care to enter, could those who are accustomed to gather there meet with untroubled hearts the question, "Where is thy brother?"

Can the open saloon and the tolerated if not legalized house of sin, the unsanitary tenement that pays high rentals at the cost of health and morals, the dividend-paying corporation that grinds the faces of the poor and dwarfs the lives of boys and girls who have never known childhood, the business greed and craft that crush or overthrow competitors, the dissipating amusement that dissuades from and disqualifies for Christian service and activity—can these things exist and flourish without the protest, and even with the sanction and patronage in some degree of professed Christians, and they yet feel that Christ's promised coming and presence are glad and welcome actualities to them? If He were to appear as in the days of the Pharisee, would the making of excuses and the pleading of extenuating circumstances be our confession of guilt, our acknowledgment that we had knowingly come short of doing the things He would like to have us do?

If the voice of the Holy Spirit were heeded Christ would receive everywhere a Bethany welcome; but there are yet many Nazarenes whom prejudice blinds and enrages, and many Gerasenes who think gain more profitable than godliness. Our lives are among and in some part for just such men as these, and no voice will reach them like our own message of brotherly kindness and good citizenship and a life strong in the strength of Him who has come, whose is the kingdom, and to whom every knee shall bow when He shall come to reign.

Missionary Department.

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Herman Newman, 718 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.]

"H" Matamoras, Mexico,
Twelfth month 24th, 1903.

The conditions in the community have been more favorable this year than for many past. The rapid development, during the last two years, of the portion of Texas lying adjacent, and the prospect of the completion during the coming summer of two railroads from Brownsville north to railroad points, also one on this side from this place to Monterey, and probably an arrangement to irrigate the section lying around this city, has brought a greater degree of animation to the better class of the people. With a more hopeful outlook for the future, there has come, not only in the cities, but among the people in many localities, a greater interest in education. This has resulted in bringing more into our mission home in order to attend our school which also brought them under the influence of the mission home, Sabbath School, Christian Endeavor and other gospel services. The interest in gospel services, however, has not been confined to the inmates of the mission home. For three or four months past there has been a larger enrollment and a better average attendance in the Sabbath School. In connection with the school a home department was organized, and soon seventeen members were enrolled. The attendance at the Christian Endeavor meetings and the Sabbath evening services has been almost twice that of last year. The membership of both the Senior and Junior Societies has been increased, and one adult has become a member of the church within the past three months.

For several months we have been expecting a visit from W. Irving Kelsey, the superintendent of missions in this State (Tamaulipas) for Indiana Yearly Meeting. Circumstances delayed his coming until the 5th inst. He was accompanied by a young Mexican Friend, a graduate of the State Normal School, and a teacher in the public schools, whose quiet Christian influence and deportment while with us was helpful. Many things seemed to indicate an opportune time. It was the most favorable season of the year. No rain interfered, and the nights were clear and cool. W. Irving Kelsey remained with us eight days. The evenings were occupied with public services, the days in counseling and advising with the workers. Several of the homes of the people were visited, and much more in this line would have been done if time had permitted. A cordial reception was ready everywhere. The attendance and attention at the evening meetings were excellent. Sin, with its corrupting influence, separating us from God; the necessity of conversion, and salvation through Christ, and a life of loyalty and devotion to Him afterward, were clearly set forth. Those who desired were invited to call and converse with the evangelist at a certain hour during the day. Several young men availed themselves of this opportunity.

On Second-day evening, after the second public service in the meeting house, W. I. Kelsey and companion, with the missionaries and the girls in the home, assembled in the parlor at Hussey Institute for the regular evening devotions. W. I. Kelsey led in prayer, during which one of the girls began weeping. As is usual in the daily evening devotions, a number of other prayers were offered. Not a word had been spoken personally so far to any one, but at this point Irving Kelsey spoke a few words to the weeping girl, and requested that we should unite in special prayer for her. One after another different ones came under the influence of the Spirit until some twelve or fourteen were weeping under a sense of sin, and the rest of us for joy at the evidence of the Lord's work among us. At the close fourteen signified their decision to accept and follow Christ. A few nights later these decisions were renewed publicly at an evening service, and at this time four young men were added to the number. Remarks made in private by the girls in the home to those who have charge of them indicate that the seed has fallen on good ground, and with careful cultivation will produce good fruit. Those who have been longest in the mission, who have become familiar with and accepted gospel teaching, according to Protestant views, were able to see the truth more clearly, and, we believe, are more firmly established in the faith. There are others who have been with us but a few months who seemed to be but little different, by the Spirit, as to the necessity of seeking reconciliation with God. The Lord's answer to prayer does not bring a time for rest from praying and working. Rather, we are impressed with the fact that it brings a crisis in the history of those to whom a new light has come in the progress of the work. FRANCIS L. HOCKETT.

THE LEBANON HOSPITAL FOR THE INSANE.

(Letter from Samuel S. Dennis.)

I had been spending two months in Egypt on my way round the world with my family. As our stay in the land of the Pharaohs was drawing to a close I received a letter from D. Stuart Dodge, of New York, asking me, if possible, to go to Syria and inspect the American College located there.

Being one of the trustees of this institution, I thought the time opportune, and we left Port Said early in March and found ourselves the next day in the harbor of Beyrout, where we were obliged to undergo a quarantine of seventy-two hours before we could land in Syria. I shall never forget those beautiful days on board ship in the harbor of Beyrout, a harbor which is often likened to that of the Bay of Naples. In full view, splendidly located on a promontory jutting out into the sea, stood the Syrian Protestant College, with its ten stone buildings, some of them very imposing and architecturally attractive. As a background to the college campus stretched the high range of Lebanon reaching its summit in Mount Sunneen, which towers 8,000 feet above the level of the sea, its summit covered with snow. Along to the south you could see in the distance the Phœnician coast line, and indistinctly one could discern the cities of Tyre and Sidon, once the centers of great commercial activity.

The veteran missionary of this region is H. H. Jessup, a man of world-wide reputation, who for more than half a century has labored successfully and earnestly for the betterment of the people of Syria. One day it was my good fortune to go with this distinguished missionary in a carriage across the plain and up the mountain side to a splendid location, where were situated the new buildings of the Lebanon Hospital for the Insane. No grander situation could have been selected for placing an institution of this kind.

The superintendent was away that day on business in connection with the institution, but I found a very pleasant guide in the person of Theophilus Waldmeier, who took us in hand and showed us over this really remarkable group of buildings.

We went into several of these buildings and all through them, seeing the patients in various stages of disease and recovery. Everything was neat, clean and well arranged.

After going through the female wards, where the inmates were cared for with firmness, and yet great kindness, and from which many emerge fully recovered, we went over to the new building—the "Ryerss" Memorial Ward, recently erected for the violent male patients. This building was modern and up-to-date in every respect, and within its walls were to be found some very wild patients in all stages of insanity. One, in particular, impressed me in the person of an enormous man, a Maronite priest of powerful build, who was in a desperate condition. He had been brought there about a week before by his friends, who asked if anything could be done for him, as he was a man of great influence in their religion. They were obliged to put him in one of the large new strong rooms. He was making a fearful commotion and yelling wildly almost continuously. They could not keep any clothes upon him. At night he slept on the floor on a little pile of straw, which was broken up by him into fine pieces. In fact, he seemed to me hopelessly insane.

I afterwards met H. H. Jessup in New York, and he told me that the man was entirely cured, and that his friends were advertising in every direction the wonderful and marvelous work done by the Lebanon Hospital for the Insane at Asfuriyeh.

When you think that the old method now in use and practised in many parts of the East is to chain a person to a rock until he dies, taking food and water to him perhaps once a day, one cannot too highly appreciate the work which the Society of Friends is doing in building and supporting this valuable and greatly-needed institution.

As I drove away, with many expressions of thanks to Theophilus Waldmeier, my thoughts went back across the sea to those kind and generous friends in England and America who are supporting this truly noble work.

When I see this world and all its sorrows there is one thought that consoles me—God is love. When its sin and iniquity are most appalling I remember that the world is not without hope, for its Redeemer is infinite. There is nothing that inspires so sweet an optimism as to remember that in the mercies and the merits of the Lord Jesus Christ there is hope for all. If there is one mystery in the world greater than the mystery of sin it is the mystery of redemption.—"The United Presbyterian."

Things of Interest Among Ourselves.

Alice Mendenhall is now located in the meeting at Bloomingdale, Ind.

Alice Woodard is located in the meeting at Moorland, Dublin Quarter, Ind.

William and Susan T. Thompson are spending the winter at North Dartmouth, Mass.

Frederick Tormohlen, of Anderson, Ind., is holding a series of meetings at Upland, Ind.

Ira Newlin is doing excellent service in the meeting at Providence, Ind., and also at Oak Grove, Ind.

The 14th of Second month has been set apart by the World's Student Christian Federation as a special day of prayer for students.

The meeting at Lawrence, Kan., is increasing in numbers and in interest. Much active work is being done in outposts in and near the city.

Robert L. Kelley preached at the First Friends' Meeting, Indianapolis, Sabbath, the 10th inst. He also addressed the Y. M. C. A. in the afternoon.

The people of Lapel, Ind., recently enjoyed a revival, the result of a series of meetings conducted in that place. A number of new members united with the meeting.

Luke Woodard has accepted an invitation to attend Spiceland Meeting, Indiana, each alternate Sabbath, that meeting being at present without a resident minister.

T. R. Woodard, a resident minister of Knightstown, Ind., preached at the Friends' Meeting in the city of Anderson, Ind., both morning and evening, Sabbath, the 27th ult.

John M. Watson writes from 107 East Clay Street, Richmond, Va., stating that he finds a very responsible work in that city. His friends are asked to note his address here given.

After spending two successful years in service in the meeting at Springdale, Ia., Amos and Naomi B. Cook have taken up work at El Modena, Cal., where their many friends can address them.

Indianapolis Meeting has a publisher of church music in its membership in the person of L. O. Brown, who has recently published a new book of revival and Bible School songs, known as "Gold Tried in the Fire."

The Christmas exercises of the West Side Chicago Meeting were held Third-day evening, the 29th ult., in the meeting-room, 774 West Van Buren Street. The attendance and interest testified to the real hold that Friends are securing in their work there.

W. H. Pilot, a junior student in Penn College, Ia., and a minister from the meeting at Marshalltown, Ia., spent his vacation giving gospel temperance sermons and lectures in Kansas and Oklahoma. He held four services at Alva, Okla., on the 27th ult., at which good work was done.

Ruth S. Murray, of New Bedford, Mass., has gone to spend the winter with her son, Professor Augustus T. Murray at Leland Stanford University, Cal. Her many friends will feel deep sympathy with her in the loss of her son, Francis K. Murray, who died recently at his home in Springfield, Mass.

Josiah Butler, yearly meeting superintendent of evangelistic work, of Kansas, and I. Emory Pearson, of Lawrence, Kan., are laboring for the organization of a Friends' meeting at Topeka, Kan. Any one knowing the names of Friends in or near Topeka will be conferring a favor by sending them to I. Emory Pearson, Lawrence, Kan., at an early date.

Elwood Monthly Meeting of Friends (Kansas Yearly Meeting) Nebraska, recently had a very pleasant and profitable visit from Griffith Wright, a minister from White Lick Monthly Meeting, Indiana. He spent one month visiting families, holding cottage prayer meetings and services in the meeting-house. The meeting was edified and strengthened, and many were encouraged to renew their diligence for service.

George E. Wright, editor of "Happy Homes," Cherokee, Okla., the territorial organ of the W. C. T. U., is now lecturing for the Woods County W. C. T. U. His talks are on the line of the gospel, and the purpose of the body as the temple of the Holy Ghost. His instruction to the young and warnings concerning hereditary tendencies are highly appreciated. Melissa S. Fellow, of Alva, Oklahoma, is assisting him in this work and in the organization of W. C. T. U.'s.

President Isaac Sharpless, of Haverford, spent the 2d, 3d and 4th instant in Minneapolis, Minn. He addressed a small and appreciative audience on the evening of the 2d at Friends' Meeting House, on the "Small College." On First-day he addressed the morning meeting, which was well attended. The privilege of his presence, his personal acquaintance and his characteristic address were highly appreciated by all.

The Friends' Sabbath School of Bolton Monthly Meeting, Massachusetts, gave a Christmas dinner on the 24th ult. in their hall. About eighty persons were present, including those of all ages. After dinner Alice M. Dow spoke about the needs of Jamaica Mission and the call for aid. A poem was recited by one of the little girls, after which a collection was taken of $10.10. The afternoon was spent socially. Several boxes of good things were sent out to shut-ins and poor people about the neighborhood.

Eight of the Chicago Haverfordians had the pleasure of spending an evening with President Sharpless Fifth-day, the 31st ult. They had dinner together at the Reynolds Club, University of Chicago, afterward adjourning to one of the other rooms of the club. Plans were discussed for extending the influence of Haverford and bringing more young men to enjoy its privileges. The evening was most pleasantly spent. Those present were President Sharpless, Fowell Buxton Hill, Robert R. Tatnall, Wilfred Walton White, Homer J. Webster, John Sharpless Fox, Frank S. Lutz, A. B. Caswell and Royal J. Davis.

A short series of meetings was held at Moreau, Glens Falls Quarterly Meeting, New York, commencing the 27th ult., attended by J. L. Spicer, superintendent of Evangelistic and Church Extension Board, and Abijah J. Weaver, from Glens Falls, was present a part of the time. Although the weather was intensely cold for the greater part of the time, the attendance was good and deep interest manifested. Some were born into the kingdom and others aroused to a new sense of their privileges in Christ Jesus. Previous to this J. L. Spicer held meetings at Hartman, formerly Hudson Hill. Good interest was manifested. There is a good meeting house there. Few Friends remain who are interested in keeping up the meeting. Some who were formerly Friends have become interested in work with other religious denominations. Money has been raised to put a new roof upon the house and to repair the sheds. The Bible School was reorganized, and workers from Glens Falls plan to go there from time to time to assist in meetings at 2 p.m. First-days. There is need of work there, for families are living near-by practically unreached by any means of grace.

BORN.

COX.—To J. Gurney and Sallie Cox, of Long Beach, Cal., Twelfth month 14th, 1903, a daughter, Esther.

HAWORTH.—To Charles C. and Orpha Ruth Haworth, at the Friends' Mission, in Holguin, Cuba, on the 13th of Twelfth month, 1903, a son, Charles Clarence.

MARRIED.

JENKINS—KENNEY.—At Clintondale, N. Y., Twelfth month 31st, 1903, Winfield T. Jenkins and Emma D. Kenney, of Glens Falls, N. Y.

DIED.

DE WEESE.—At Mooresville, Ind., Twelfth month 31st, 1903, Hannah Hartley De Weese, aged 82 years. She was a devoted member of White Lick Quarterly Meeting of Friends.

SCHOOLEY.—At his home near New Sharon, Ia., Twelfth month 13th, 1903, James Schooley, in his 87th year. He was a lifelong Friend, and was converted when 9 years of age.

SUTTON.—At Clintondale, N. Y., Twelfth month 11th, 1903, John H. Sutton, aged 35 years. His life closed victorious in the Christian faith.

THOMPSON.—At his home near Sterling, Kan., Twelfth month 22d, 1903, Joseph Thompson, in his 63d year. He was a devoted Christian, a faithful member and elder of Sterling Monthly Meeting, Kansas.

WHITE.—At her home at Fountain City, Ind., Eleventh month 24th, 1903, Angelina Hough White, wife of David F. White, aged 62 years. She graduated at Earlham College in 1869, and for many years after was prominently engaged in teaching in Indiana and Ohio. She was a very conscientious and useful member of Friends all her life.

Events and Comments.

Ruth, the eldest daughter of ex-President Cleveland, died the morning of the 7th of heart failure occasioned by a mild attack of diphtheria.

The South's prosperity on account of the price of cotton is cause for satisfaction. The fact that in the past five years the cotton crop has increased in value nearly a billion dollars means much to the Southern planter and middleman. It is to be hoped that the South's agricultural laborer shares in this burst of prosperity.

It is now wheat-harvest time in Argentina, and the indications point to a record-breaking crop. According to the London "Statist," the yield is likely to reach 17,750,000 quarters, or 142,000,000 bushels, of which 13,000,000 quarters, or 104,000,000 bushels, will be available for export. The crop of the past year, which was almost equal to the record crop of 1900, amounted to 100,000,000 bushels, of which 64,000,000 were exported. It will be seen that if present crop estimates prove sound, this South American country is about to take a much higher position in the world's grain trade for the supply of importing countries.

The past week has seen no lessening of the tension in the far East. The Cabinet Council in Japan have authorized 10,000,000 yen in debentures issued for expediting work on the Seoul-Fusan Railway; the taking of 50,000,000 yen of the

GIVES "GO."

Food That Carries One Along.

It's nice to know of food that not only tastes delicious but that puts the snap and go into one and supplies staying power for the day.

A woman says: "I have taken enough medicine in my time to furnish a drug store, but in later and wiser years I have taken none, but have depended for the health I now enjoy on suitable and sustaining food, of which I keep on hand a tested variety, plain, but nourishing.

"Of these my main dependence is Grape-Nuts, especially if I have before me a day of unusual effort either mental or physical. In this case I fortify myself the first thing in the morning with about four teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts moistened with cream, and not much else for breakfast, and the amount of work I can then carry through successfully without fatigue or exhaustion is a wonder to those about me, and even to myself.

"Grape-Nuts food is certainly a wonderful strengthener, and is not a stimulant, for there is no reaction afterwards, but it is sustaining and strengthening, as I have proved by long experience." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason. Four teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts and cream will add more strength and carry one further than a plateful of course, heavy food that is nearly all waste. Grape-Nuts food is condensed, pre-digested and delicious. It contains the parts of the Wheat and Barley grains that supply the rebuilding parts for Brain and Nerve Centers.

Look in each package for a copy of the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

Chinese indemnity hitherto set apart for educational and other purposes, to use as a war fund, and in addition the issuance of treasury notes, payable in five years, to an unlimited amount. Japanese students in Europe and America are returning home. Chinese troops officered by Japanese are moving toward the northern boundary of China. Russian transports and naval vessels are moving into the Pacific.

The correspondent of "Le Petit Bleu" at The Hague says that, although the decision of the Venezuelan Arbitration Court will not be published before Second month, it is believed in well-informed circles that the general outlines of the decision of the court have been already drawn up, and that the court will refuse the claim of the blockaders to be regarded as privileged creditors. The judgment, will, however, allow three of the blockading powers to collect the expense of the blockade, which, it will state, was undertaken in the public interest; but when the costs of the blockade are recovered, all the creditors will share alike in proportion to the amount of their claims.

All the horrors of the Chicago fire are as nothing compared with the wreck of human life upon a battlefield. All the world stands aghast at the loss of six hundred lives in a theater, while only a slight quiver of emotion is excited by the report of ten or twenty times as many strong men torn in pieces by shot and shell on some hotly-contested field. One principal reason for the difference in the intensity of the feeling in the one case and the lack of it in the other is that the general public does not see the blood-stained battlefield, with its unspeakable horrors, while those who do see these things take them for granted as the necessary consequences of war, harden themselves to the effect of them, then put them out of sight and forget them as quickly as possible. Then again the people at large are educated by many centuries of tradition to look with toleration upon war.

The "Literary Digest" sums up the editorial review of the past year as follows: "On the dark side of the account are placed the Chicago theater fire, the railroad disasters, the Missouri Valley floods, the labor troubles, the postal, land and Indian scandals, and the Wall Street depression, and consequent hesitation in the advance of prosperity. On the other side, prosperity has pervaded the West and South, our foreign commerce and immigration have beaten all previous records, the Panama Canal has been brought a step nearer, the Alaska boundary dispute has been adjusted, reciprocity has been given to Cuba, the friar lands in the Philippines have been bought, the Department of Commerce and Labor has been added to the Cabinet, and the enlargement of the Erie Canal has been authorized. Some of the foregoing, however, are not unmixed blessings. Turning to the events in the Old World, the first thing remarked by most papers is the fact that the year has not been stained by any great war. The 'palace massacre' at Belgrade, the uprisings and slaughters in the Balkans, the killing of Jews at Kishineff, and the darkening war-cloud in the far East, however, keep it from being called a year of peace. Domestic movements in European politics, such as the anti-clerical campaign in France, the progress of socialism in Germany, the tariff campaign in England, the passage of the Irish Land bill, and the Russian 'reform edict' attract considerable notice. The discovery of radium is treated as the only great event in the scientific world, and the 140-mile-an-hour trolley-car in Germany the only great triumph in the world of mechanics. Among the great dead of the year are named Pope Leo XIII., Lord Salisbury, Mommsen, Lecky, Spencer and Whistler."

THE OLD RELIABLE

Absolutely Pure
THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

Mary Mapes Dodge

Editor of St. Nicholas from the first number

No better present can be found for any boy or girl than a year's subscription to ST. NICHOLAS, and none more welcome. Parents owe it to their children to place within their reach good, wholesome reading that will amuse and educate. That ST. NICHOLAS supplies these requirements all authorities agree.

A handsome certificate will be filled out and sent on request with subscriptions,—the certificate to be given at Christmas.

Subscription price, $3.00 a year

The Century Co.
Union Square, New York

TO THEODORE L. CUYLER.

BY ADELINE L. F. DANIELS.

As when Paul near to Rome his journey pressed,
Meeting the brethren dear, who came with love
To cheer this prisoner of their Lord above,
Thanked God, and took new courage, feeling blessed,
So I, to the Eternal City bent,
When meet I one strong in the holy faith,
Who calls no miracle delusive wraith,
Whose life to Christly service has been lent,
Then I, like Paul, take courage and thank God.
One said, To be a saint is but to serve;
And well we, if this service-path we trod
For earth's reward or thanks, might, fretting, swerve;
Only to serve, up-looking to His face;
Yes, it is easy by His blood-bought grace.
First month 2d, 1904.

Keep in mind the idea that it is the work itself that is of consequence to the world and not the worker.—Selected.

MINER HIT.

A Gold Miner on the Coffee Question.

Many a rugged constitution has broken down by use of coffee.

"I and my son are miners and have been strong coffee drinkers. I will add, I followed mining for fifty years. Nearly three years ago my son had palpitation of the heart so bad that after a hard day's work he would be almost unable to get his breath when lying down, and I was a victim of constipation, headache and could not sleep soundly.

"So I pulled up stakes one day and started to see a doctor, and, curiously enough, an old acquaintance I met on the way steered me off. We stopped and talked and told each other all the news, and I told him about our troubles. He said it was coffee doing the work, and that using Postum in place of coffee cured him of almost exactly the ailments I described.

"So, instead of going to the doctor's, I sent for some Postum, although I did not have much faith in it, but to my great joy, it turned out all right, and, after we quit coffee completely, we both began to get well, kept it up, and are now both of us strong, well men, with none of the old troubles. A miner is supposed to be able to stand great hardships, but we could not stand coffee. It was killing us. Anyone following the directions on the package of Postum will have a far better drink than he can get from the best coffee.

"I think every coffee toper should know Postum will cure him of his ailments, besides, it is such a refreshing drink." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Coffee hurts nearly all who drink it, and soaks some people very hard. There is a sure way out of the trouble by quitting coffee and using Postum.

And "there's a reason."

Look in each package for a copy of the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

The Century Magazine

"The best in the world,"—a strong statement, but a true one. THE CENTURY has led American magazines for more than thirty years; it publishes articles that make people think, stories that entertain and are literature, pictures by the world's greatest illustrators. Its illustrations in color are unsurpassed. THE CENTURY is not cheap in any sense; it costs $4.00 a year, and it is worth the price. Try THE CENTURY this year, if you are not already taking it.

THE CENTURY CO.

UNION SQUARE, NEW YORK

EDMUND AUDI wishes to give private lessons in the French language. Refer to Asa S. Wing, 409 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia. Any persons desiring his services can communicate with him at 1823 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

FRIENDS' LIBRARY,

142 N. Sixteenth Street, Philadelphia.

Open on week-days, from 11.30 a.m. to 2 p.m., and from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m.; also on evenings in which Friends' Institute Lyceum meetings are held from 7 to 7.45 p.m. Among the books recently added are the following:

- Adams, O. F.—"Some Famous American Schools."
Brigham, A. P.—"Geographic Influences in American History."
Howe, M., and Hall, F. H.—"Laura Bridgman."
Dawson, T. C.—"South American Republics."
Fox, George.—Autobiography, edited by Rufus M. Jones.
Hoar, G. F.—"Autobiography of Seventy Years."
McCarthy, M. J. F.—"Five Years in Ireland, 1895-1900."
McCarthy, M. J. F.—"Five Years in Ireland."
Riis, J. A.—"Children of the Tenelements."
Trowbridge, J. T.—"My Own Story."

We say that God is good, and so we trust Him. But what do we mean by goodness except the goodness we have seen here? Infinite goodness is, to our conception, human justice, human generosity, human pity, carried upward to their perfection. If we have no faith in man, how can we have faith in God?

If God is a reality, and the soul is a reality, and you are an immortal being, what are you doing with your Bible shut?—Herrick Johnson.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

We particularly invite the attention of the readers of "The American Friend" to this column. It will be found useful for almost everyone who wishes to advertise. The cost is 5c. per line each insertion. No advertisement is accepted for less than 25c. Cash with order.

The Conard & Jones Company, Rose Growers.
West Grove, Pa. Catalog Free.

OLD-FASHIONED grandfather clocks repaired at home. If yours needs attention send me a postal or, better, call. My store is within three minutes' walk of the Market Street ferries. Repairing of clocks and watches of every kind. Prompt service and moderate prices. W. L. Berry, Watchmaker and Jeweler, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

FOR RENT.—One of the best stock and dairy farms in Nebraska. On term of years, with purchase option and on terms that, with industry and good management, the entire property can be paid for within ten years. $2000.00 required to purchase cattle, hogs, horses and machinery on the farm, 920 acres. Running water in each pasture. 300 acres in cultivation. Meadow, alfalfa land and timber. Address, Nebraska, Care of THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER.—Careful and accurate repairing, with prompt service, has brought me the custom of many Friends. Their patronage is particularly solicited. My store is nearest to the Market Street ferries, and is easy of access from every part of the city. W. L. Berry, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

WANTED.—Competent young woman as stenographer and typewriter. Address "G," office of AMERICAN FRIEND.

FREE

GREGORY'S SEED CATALOGUE FOR 1904

Safe Sowers Sure Growers

GREGORY'S SEEDS

have been successfully sown and grown for nearly 50 years. Sold under three guarantees. Send to-day for free catalogue.

J. J. H. GREGORY & SON, Marblehead, Mass.

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

Gluten Grits AND BARLEY CRYSTALS,

Perfect Breakfast and Desert Health Cereals. PANSY FLOUR for Biscuits, Cake and Pastry. Unlike all other goods. Ask Grocers. For book of samples, write FARWELL & RHINES, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

10 BEAUTIFUL PICTURES FREE

In order to introduce our QUAKER OINTMENT into every home where THE AMERICAN FRIEND is read, we have decided to make the following liberal offer. To every person sending us 25 cents for one box of QUAKER OINTMENT, and 4 cents extra to pay postage, we will send absolutely free the following 10 pictures. These pictures are gems of art. For picture study, art collections, gifts and home decoration, they are of great value. The Last Supper, Christ in Gethsemane, Christ Taken Captive, Christ Before Pilate, Christ Bearing the Cross, The Crucifixion, Entombment, In the Sepulchre, The Ascension, Transfiguration. It is costing us a great deal of money to advertise in this way, but we trust you will be pleased with our liberality, and will favor us with an order for a box of our ointment, and get these 10 beautiful pictures free. QUAKER OINTMENT is the best known remedy for catarrh, eczema, and all skin diseases. Rev. Asa Woodard, pastor Friends' Meeting at Butlerville, Ind., says: "I am using QUAKER OINTMENT, and find it an excellent remedy." Mrs. Clara Chaney, Rural Route No. 3, Warren, Ind., says: "I have never found anything as good as QUAKER OINTMENT for catarrh, sores and skin diseases." Send us your order to-day. Quaker Ointment sent to any address upon receipt of 25 cents.

DAVIS MFG. CO., Butlerville, Ind.

Mortgages Net 6% in North Dakota

THEY are the best, gilt-edged, rock-ribbed, guaranteed 6% investment in America. Safe as government bonds and pay better.

I have been selling these mortgages for 18 years, and have never had to foreclose, and never lost a cent of principal or interest for a single customer.

I personally know every farm covered by the mortgages, as well as the farmers giving them. I know them both to be right, or I have nothing to do with them. Their land is increasing in value every day, thus increasing the value of the security.

I collect both the interest and principal free, and remit in New York exchange, without the least trouble or bother of the customer.

I will be pleased to put you in the way of finding out all about me. Write me for further information.

WALTER L. WILLIAMSON

Investment Banker

LISBON, NORTH DAKOTA

6% NET FIRST GOLD MORTGAGES

on improved RED RIVER VALLEY FARMS. Loans to actual settlers ONLY. 21 years' experience in business. Send for formal applications, list of references and map showing location of lands. Over $1,000,000 invested. None but SAFE, PROMPT-PAYING loans on my books.

WILLIAM T. SOUDER, Financial Agent
309, 310, 311 Century Bldg., Minneapolis, Minn.

6% NET

Sound, conservative first mortgages on improved realty. We examine every security and know every borrower. We make our loans with our own money and turn them over complete. In 28 years we have learned how to select the best. No one now handling western mortgages has had more experience. We give you the benefit of that experience. The quality of the securities now on hand has never been surpassed. Highest references. Write for circulars and full information free.

PERKINS & COMPANY Lawrence, Kan.

FRIENDS' HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

President:

THOMAS HODGKIN, D.C.L., Litt.D.

OBJECT: To encourage historical study and to publish historical matter.

Subscribers of $1.25 and upwards will receive a copy of "The Journal," as published, free, and any Supplements issued, at cost price. Rufus M. Jones will act as American Agent of the Society, and Friends who wish to become members are requested to send their subscriptions to him.

Address 718 ARCH STREET,
PHILADELPHIA

6% to 7% Choice First Mortgage Loans, Seattle and vicinity. Local and N. Y. references. Established 1887. Correspondence Solicited.

JAMES BOTHWELL, Seattle, Washington.

Stenography, Typewriting, Mimeographing and Reporting

LYDIA ARETE CONN,

805 Provident Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

SHORTHAND TAUGHT BY MAIL

or in school. Each student receives personal attention. Moderate rates. Write for full information.

PROVIDENT SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND

805 Provident Building Philadelphia, Pa

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA. Office, 409 CHESTNUT STREET

CAPITAL, $1,000,000

ASSETS, $61,615,271.43

Surplus and Undivided Profits, belonging to the Stockholder

4,457,613.08

Surplus, belonging to Insurance Account

6,317,764.17

Incorporated Third month 22, 1865. Charter Perpetual.

INSURES LIVES, GRANTS ANNUITIES, RECEIVES MONEY ON DEPOSIT, returnable on demand for which interest is allowed.

And is empowered by law to act as EXECUTOR ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, GUARDIAN, ASSIGNEE, COMMITTEE, RECEIVER, AGENT, etc.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the assets of the Company.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.

BOXES $5 AND UPWARDS

T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-Prest.
ASA S. WING, Vice-President.
JOS. ASHEROOK, Man. Ins. Dept.
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer.

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY, President.

J. R. FOULKE, Trust Officer.

DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary.

J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Assistant Trust Officer

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary.

DIRECTORS:

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY,
T. WISTAR BROWN,
HENRY HAINES,
RICHARD WOOD,
CHAS. HARTSHORNE,

ASA S. WING,
PHILIP C. GARRETT,
JAMES V. WATSON,
WM. LONGSTRETH,
EDWARD H. OGDEN,

THOS. SCATTERGOOD,
J. PRESTON THOMAS,
ROBERT M. JANNEY,
MARRIOTT C. MORRIS,
FRANK H. TAYLOR.

EDUCATIONAL.

GUILFORD COLLEGE

Location in the mild and healthful Piedmont Section of North Carolina.

Five Brick Buildings well equipped, supplied with abundance of pure water, and lighted with electricity.

Eleven Members of the Faculty. Good Library and Chemical and Biological Laboratories.

Next Term will begin on the 18th of January, 1904.

Catalogue Sent on Application

L. L. HOBBS, President

EARLHAM COLLEGE, RICHMOND, INDIANA

Prof. Elbert Russell offers courses regularly in Kings, New Testament Times, Life of Christ, The Apostolic Age, Church History, New Testament Literature, Romans, John, Biblical Literature, Isaiah.

Prof. Cyrus W. Hodgkin, The Protestant Reformation.

Prof. Anna M. Demaree, New Testament, Greek.

Asst. Prof. Lindley, History of the Hebrews.

Pres. Kelly, History of Philosophy, Ethics, Psychology.

The Oakwood Seminary

UNION SPRINGS, N. Y.

Founded in 1796.

A boarding school for boys and girls under the care of New York Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Academic, College Preparatory and Commercial

Winter term begins First month 5, 1904

SAMUEL H. HODGIN,
Principal.

LINDLEY M. STEVENS,
Superintendent.

WHITTIER COLLEGE

Classical, Scientific and Literary courses. Highest requirements. Students unable to continue their studies in more rigorous climes will find this climate the best in the world for study. Natural advantages for scientific investigation unsurpassed. Well equipped laboratory. Whittier, a Friend's community, —morally clean, —no saloons or kindred sources of corruption. For catalogue address,

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, President.

Interesting Books for Friends

Roots of Christian Teaching

AS FOUND IN THE OLD TESTAMENT

By GEORGE AARON BARTON, A.M., Ph.D., author of
"A Sketch of Semitic Origins," etc.

"It contains fifty-eight chapters stating briefly the Old Testament situation, character or idea, and showing what Christian truth it illustrates. The book begins with a few chapters on God, His Unity and Nature; a few more about Christ, the Holy Spirit, Man's Sins and Redemption; and then follows the body of the book covered by the characters of the Old Testament. So clearly and concisely is the book written that it contains much more than would seem to be possible in its number of pages. Its lessons are not forced, but stand, as its title suggests, rooted in the text."—The Biblical World, Chicago.

"The tone of the book will prove exceedingly helpful."—The Friend, London.

"To the majority of young Christians, Dr. Barton brings timely and valuable aid."—The Christian Work and Evangelist, New York.

"The Old Testament loses none of its spiritual significance and force when treated in this manner."—The Church Standard, Philadelphia.

"The book is stimulating and helpful."—Epworth Herald.

12mo. 275 pages. Cloth, Gilt Top, Uncut Edges. Price, $1.25 postpaid.

Practical Christianity

By RUFUS M. JONES, Litt.D.

This is a selection of short, practical articles on important religious subjects. It deals with questions which every thinking man must meet in a practical way, and it contains a positive message for the times. In these fifty-three essays many of the most important phases of the spiritual life receive consideration, and the notes of hope, and victory, and faith in the overcoming life, are everywhere manifest. The book also contains a suggestive chapter on "The Message of Quakerism."

12mo. 208 pages. Oxford laid paper. Bound in silk cloth, gilt top. Price, 1.00 post-paid.

Quaker Poems

A collection of verses relating to the Society of Friends, gathered from all sources and edited with Introduction and Notes.

By CHARLES FRANCIS JENKINS.

About sixty poems on a great variety of subjects, from about fifty authors illustrative of the principles of the Society.

Nearly 300 pages, 12mo, well printed on good paper, with forty illustrations made expressly for this work. Neatly bound in cloth, gold side-lettering and design. Price, $1.50 post-paid.

The Largest and Most Complete Lines of Bibles and Testaments to select from. We also are the publishers of a large and varied line of Juvenile and Holiday Books. Send for catalogue of Bibles and books, showing styles and prices.

The John C. Winston Co., PUBLISHERS AND MANUFACTURERS 718-724 Arch St., Phila.

This love of our neighbor is the only door out of the dungeon of self.—George Maedonald.

Delavau's Remedy

A SPECIFIC FOR

Whooping Cough and Croup

Also a safe and speedy cure for Bronchitis, Bronchial Catarrh and ordinary coughs. 50 Cents a Bottle, at Druggists, or

J. W. S. DELAVAU & CO., Propr's.
N. E. Cor. 6th and Wood Sts., Phila.

They said he owed nothing when he died. A little inquiry showed he had not provided for his chief creditors,—his family. This debt is best discharged through a life insurance policy in the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE

921-3-5 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia

Christ comes only to the want of the soul. We shall know Him, love Him, feel His saving power, the glory and the blessedness of his birth in our souls, only when we heartily desire him.—Selected.

STENOGRAPHING, TYPEWRITING and MIMEOGRAPHING. Prices moderate.

MARY M. KITE

407 Lippincott Building, 12th and Filbert Sts., Phila.
Phone No. 3-33-00

A. M. ADAMS, PRINTING

230 N. Twelfth St., Philadelphia.
BELL TELEPHONE.

EMINENT PHYSICIANS
throughout the world recommend

QUINA-LAROCHE

AS A SPECIFIC IN CASES OF
ANAEMIA, COLDS, LA GRIFFE,
SLOW CONVALESCENCE,
STOMACH TROUBLES,
TYPHOID and MALARIAL
FEVERS.

E. Fougere & Co., 30 N. William St., N. Y.

No man can pass into eternity, for he is already in it. The dull brute globe moves through its ether and knows it not; even so our souls are bathed in eternity and we are never conscious of it.—F. W. Farrar.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a.

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote, 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p.m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cts. per night; $3 per week.

Two occupants, 50 cts. each, per night.
2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL
Phone Spruce 33-55. Clerk.

Our Subscribers are invited to use the column of Subscribers' Wants (See page 34). It will be found useful for many purposes—renting property, selling goods, securing help or positions, for advertising boarding-houses and hotels, and for almost everything where good results are expected at a small expenditure.

ESTERBROOK'S STEEL PENS

THE STANDARD PENS EVERYWHERE.

150 Styles Fine, Medium and Broad Points.
Sold by All Stationers.

Works, Camden, N. J. The ESTERBROOK STEEL PEN CO. 26 John St., New York.

The American Friend

EARLHAM COLLEGE
LIBRARY

Vol. XI

FIRST MONTH 21, 1904

No. 3

	PAGE
EDITORIALS.—Japan and Russia.—The Disease of Formality	39
Life and Light ; Or, What is Christianity, Delia Rees.	40
The Arbitration Conference	41
Preparation for Prayer G. Campbell Morgan.	43
THE INTERNATIONAL LESSON Lesson for First month 31, 1904.	45
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR Topic for First month 31, 1904.	46
EDUCATIONAL.—Earlham College	47
CORRESPONDENCE	47
THINGS OF INTEREST AMONG OURSELVES,	47
MARRIED.—DIED	48
EVENTS AND COMMENTS	49

A PRAYER FOR THE NEW YEAR.

Shatter my dearest idol, purge my faith,
Till truth holds sway !
Help me to sing and fight, not weep and cower,
When blows fall fast ;
Patient to bear, strong to endure—thy son,
True to the last !
Grant me a heart in tune with Nature ; eyes
To see yon stars
That dartle, read their message ; ears to hear
Old Ocean's bars
Beat out their music ; arms to hug this Earth,
Its joy and pain.
Till Life has lived its passion, loved its loves and Death
Proves itself gain !
Let me live grandly, seek the things that last,
Press toward Love's goal ;
Win—jewels? Fame? Nay, better ; when Earth's past, Stand—a Crowned Soul !
So be my helper, Father—comfort me
With staff and rod,
Till I give thee back thy year, well lived For Man and God !

—HENRY HALLAM TWEEDY, in The Congregationalist

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.50 A YEAR ❁ ❁ ❁ PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
AMERICAN FRIEND PUBLISHING COMPANY, 718 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

We particularly invite the attention of the readers of "The American Friend" to this column. It will be found useful for almost everyone who wishes to advertise. The cost is 5c. per line each insertion. No advertisement is accepted for less than 25c. Cash with order.

The Conard & Jones Company, Rose Growers.
West Grove, Pa. Catalog Free.

OLD-FASHIONED grandfather clocks repaired at home. If yours needs attention send me a postal or, better, call. My store is within three minutes' walk of the Market Street ferries. Repairing of clocks and watches of every kind. Prompt service and moderate prices. W. L. Berry, Watchmaker and Jeweler, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

EDMUND AUDI wishes to give private lessons in the French language. Refer to Asa S. Wing, 409 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia. Any persons desiring his services can communicate with him at 1823 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

BOARDING.—Persons visiting Washington can be accommodated for board and lodging in private home. Convenient, by electric cars, to all parts of the city. Rates reasonable. LAURA N. WILSON, 1456 Corcoran Street, Washington, D. C.

NEW SONG BOOK.—"Gold Tried in the Fire." One of the best song books on the market for church, Sunday school and evangelistic work. Bound in limp cloth and contains over 200 songs. Sells for $15.00 per hundred. 20 cents a copy. Published by Friends. BROWN BROS., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FOR SALE.—A few good farms; near Friends' meeting; 5 to 7 miles from town. One-half price near large cities. State Normal twelve miles. ALBERT BOND, R. R. 1, Hartford, Kansas.

FOR SALE.—A large walnut writing desk and book case formerly owned by Stephen Grellet. Correspond with S. L. Collins, 702 North 43d Street, Philadelphia.

FOR RENT.—One of the best stock and dairy farms in Nebraska. On term of years, with purchase option and on terms that, with industry and good management, the entire property can be paid for within ten years. $2000.00 required to purchase cattle, hogs, horses and machinery on the farm, 920 acres. Running water in each pasture, 900 acres in cultivation. Meadow, alfalfa land and timber. Address, Nebraska, Care of THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

If Time and Sense do not impinge
On pivot-points beyond our shore,
Then earth swings on but half a hinge,
And heaven has no open door.
—"Sunday School Times."

S. F. BALDERSTON'S SON
Wall Paper and
Decorations

Window Shades Made to Order

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILA.

A mortgage is like Deacon Smith's mule,
"Dreadful sot in its ways." It has a habit of bobbing up regularly.
While you live you can take care of it. After that—well, you'd be wise now to consult the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE

921-3-5 Chestnut Street.

If you live in a smoky city you find that the lustre of your furniture is soon lost in a smutty haze, but a thick suds of Ivory Soap in lukewarm water and a soft cloth will make it bright again with small labor. Ivory Soap is so pure that it is fitted for all such special uses requiring a soap that is known to be harmless.

A WORD OF WARNING.—There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory';" they ARE NOT, but like all imitations, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

Education is the knowledge of how to use the whole of one's self.—H. W. Beecher.

Our Subscribers are invited to use the column of Subscribers' Wants (See this page). It will be found useful for many purposes—renting property, selling goods, securing help or positions, for advertising boarding-houses and hotels, and for almost everything where good results are expected at a small expenditure.

In the highest civilization the book is still the highest delight.—Emerson.

MANY APPETIZING DISHES can be made doubly delightful and nutritious by the use of Borden's Peerless Brand Evaporated Cream, which is not only superior to raw cream but has the merit of being preserved and sterilized, thus keeping perfectly for an indefinite period. Borden's Condensed Milk Co., proprietors.

The American Friend

*"Truth is the highest thing a man may keep."
"That they all may be one."*

VOL. XI.

PHILADELPHIA, FIRST MONTH 21, 1904.

No. .3

JAPAN AND RUSSIA.

WE greatly fear that war will be the result of the high tension between Japan and Russia. At the present moment it seems inevitable. That it will be an awful contest, if the clash actually comes every thoughtful person realizes, and it is more than probable that eventually other countries will be drawn into the vortex. The situation in the Far East is extremely complicated, and any sudden move may precipitate a worldwide struggle. England is the ally of Japan, and there are enormous British interests at stake. We shall, however, continue to hope, and shall we not all continue to pray? that the threatening war storm may be averted.

It may help our readers to follow the news reports if we outline briefly the situation which has occasioned the collision of these two nations. Russia has acquired practical possession of the province of Manchuria. This is one of the most valuable sections of China, skirting southern Russia, lying along the northern edge of Korea, and opening on the sea at Port Arthur, one of the most important harbors in the East. Russia's ambition plainly aims, furthermore, at the possession of the great peninsula of Korea, which would give Russia entire control of the Pacific, on the Asia side, from Bering Strait to the Yellow Sea. The possession of the harbor of Masampho, in Southern Korea, would give Russia power to hold Japan in complete submission. It would give the Empire of Russia an opening into southern waters, and would enable it to become one of the greatest commercial nations of the world.

Since the war with China, Japan has claimed the control of Korea, and its possession seems essential to the further development and expansion of the Japanese Empire. If Russian ambition should succeed Japan would be shut up in its island, and all its dreams of greatness would fade away. Japan has therefore demanded not only that Russia shall keep away from Korea, and give up its designs on the port of Masampho, but, also that the Russians shall partially evacuate Manchuria and throw it open to the trade of the whole world.

Now in this sad contest who is right and who is wrong? Who should back down? No easy answer to such a question can be given. It is plain, however, that Japan sees its very national existence threatened by the slow, glacier-like encroachments of its mighty enemy. All it can look forward to is the privilege of being eaten last. If a resistance is ever to be made its statesmen believe that the time has come for it, and if they strike they will look upon it as a life-and-death struggle. The case is tragic, and to the inhabitants of these beautiful islands in the northwestern Pacific there seems no choice but to fight or to be pushed out by the great human glacier from the North.

On the other side is an enormous host of semi-civilized peoples, just thawing out of their long winter sleep and becoming conscious of a hunger for a wider career. All these rich, warm lands to the south are theirs for the winning. They have no scruples against taking what they can get. Their one controlling principle is might, and what they need they mean to have. Czar Nicholas, who made The Hague Tribunal possible, wants peace. He has clearly been laboring to avert a war. But one man, even though he be Czar of all the Russias is very weak indeed when all the ambitions of the Empire set toward realizing its natural career. It is pretty much to expect that Russia will back down and give up its worldwide plans because Japan demands it. We are dealing here with a civilization which has not yet learned the law of Christ and until He is master among them we must look for war when selfish interests clash. The one hope is that, even though war may come, through it the world may discover a clearer idea of the wickedness of this barbarous system of gaining rights, and may learn more fully the power of righteousness whose fruits are peace.

THE DISEASE OF FORMALITY.

ONE of the greatest and most insidious foes of true living religion always has been, and still is, formality. It comes like the invisible germs of disease, which nobody discovers until the disease itself breaks out. The very efforts to guard against it sometimes produce it. It is not quite easy to describe it, because it takes such a variety of shapes, but it is, in a general way, a well-marked tendency to crystallize into some one set system.

Wherever there is life of any sort there is spontaneity, freshness, variety. Life is always true to some type. It tends toward a definite end, but there is always chance for surprises. The unexpected happens. Life is never clamped in one rigid mould. Each living being is unique. "Like peas in a pod" is our proverbial phrase. Yes, but peas in a pod are never alike. As soon as they are examined they turn out to be very different. They are alike only in this, that they exhibit one common type. No two leaves are precisely identical. In God's entire creation no two specimens of life are ever absolutely alike. This feature continually grows more marked as we rise from the lower scale of life to the higher. Every person is unique—never a slavish copy of any other. Men are not made by the print of a die on plastic clay. Those we know best surprise us with sudden and unexpected words and deeds. None of us is prophetic enough to forecast with certainty any career—because to be a person means to have the power to act spontaneously. When we find a poor creature of habit whose life has sunk into a rut we come as near as is possible to a hopeless case. A character grows only so long as the person who possesses it resists the tendency to crystallize, i. e., to become a mere creature of habit.

Now all types of religion manifest this tendency to crystallize. There are meetings in which one can easily prophesy beforehand that not a word will be spoken. The habit of muteness has come upon them. They have "set" into this form. There are others in which everything happens with clocklike exactness. The habit of regularity has come upon them. No place is left for the free moving of the Spirit. Between the members and the Divine Spirit there has come a barrier of crystallized method.

At first it is not easy to see how serious such a condition really is. For a time things go on all right. There is no disturbance. There is beautiful peace and order. But there is peace and order wherever death is. Formality, with its "beautiful peace and order," is always the beginning of death. It is incipient death—death starting its inroads. Do we want life and power? Then we must fight formality. Do we want increase, advance, growth? Then we must resist all the temptations to get peace and order by destroying spontaneity, and by cultivating the inclination to drop into habit—which is likely to be a form of "arrested development." Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom, i. e., spontaneity. The old system, Paul says, was written on "stone tablets." It was a hard, fixed, unyielding system. The new is written on "the living tablets of human hearts," which gives scope for endless variety of manifestation of the spiritual life. Oh, Friends, let us make our meetings no formal gatherings in which machinery destroys life; may we make them places where men actually find the living God for whom all hearts are really thirsting.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

LIFE AND LIGHT; OR, WHAT IS CHRISTIANITY?

BY DELIA REES.

It is quite well settled finally, I think, that Christianity is not Methodism, nor Presbyterianism, nor Episcopalianism, nor Quakerism, nor Catholicism, nor even Protestantism. We are quite agreed that all these may be found in connection with Christianity, but we certainly cannot say of any one of these, or of any of the host of other religions that might be named, this is the sum total of Christianity, or this one is Christianity, pure and simple. These may all be more or less Christian, but there are many shades of difference in their statements of doctrine, decided differences in their forms of worship, and striking differences in their presentation of truth, and in their experimental realization and outworking of the same. Then Christianity is more than religion merely, more than any statement of beliefs, and more than any form of worship or method of work. What is that something which we call Christianity, which has lived in all these forms and worked through all, and which has never yet been adequately expressed by any of them? Some one answers, "Christianity is to be found in the Bible." And that is certainly true. But so, also, is Judaism to be found in the Bible, and Judaism is certainly very different from Christianity. And it would certainly be a wholesome thing for our Christianity if we knew our Bible well enough to discriminate between the two. Judaism was a law from beginning to end, and Christianity, if judged by its founder, was a life and a love from first to last. And it was that life and that love that threw light on the world's darkness and made possible its salvation. According to John, Christianity is a life, and this life becomes a light of men, showing them the way to God. "In Him was life, and the life was the light of men." This is not a mystical expression that baffles all understanding. It is a simple but great fact that has deepest meaning for the child as well as the man. When God was not known in His world as Father at all, but only as an angry God, who must be appeased by many gifts and sacrifices, such as that of the blood of bulls and goats; when men knew Him only to fear Him and pay some price for His favor as a God who could be bartered with, then Jesus Christ came among men and lived. He ate and drank, slept and labored; He loved and thought and entered into all the relations of life as did other men. He put Himself in close touch with men, side by side, and in no sense assumed to be above them, and yet his life was so different. They all felt the difference which it took them long to understand. Life to Him meant serving the will of a Father in heaven. He made no effort to appease the wrath of an angry God, for He knew none. As a Son, He trusted and obeyed a Father and told others of Him. By parable and by His own work He was ever setting forth the teaching that His Father freely forgave sins and loved sinners; that the Father loved righteousness, and that His children could love and live righteousness too. He lived in communion with His Father and taught that others might do the same. He lived a clean, a righteous, a noble and manly life, a life of love, and His life was the light of men. He believed that righteousness was stronger than unrighteousness and sin, and He was not afraid of association with sinners.

There is nothing, perhaps, which so shrivels up and kills all true manhood as the sheer love of money, and yet Zacheus, the shrewd and unprincipled tax collector, was completely broken down by the power of the noble presence that lived and ate in his home. Under the fine light of Christ's great and true personality Zacheus saw and felt his own meanness, made his noble confession and began his new life. And still it is the life that is the light of men. "Ye are the light of the world," said Jesus. "Let your light so shine before men that others seeing your good works may glorify your Father which is in heaven."

The vital element of Christianity cannot be over-emphasized. It is this living in the divine confidence, this vital connection with God that makes His disciples the light of the world still.

There is no such thing as Christianity in dogma or creed apart from personality. Christianity can never be propagated, but living personalities. For this reason He asks us to follow Him. And when we cease to shirk this responsibility by making some form or some doctrine the essential thing; when we really believe in the power of a righteous life; when we have more faith in the power of righteousness than we have in the power of sin; when we learn and are assured that our Father works and we work with Him we shall find that though the weapons of our warfare are not carnal they are nevertheless mighty to the pulling down of the strongholds of Satan. It requires the light of life still—the light of Christian living—to dispel the world's darkness. And this light has been and will continue to be sufficient, appalling as the darkness may be.

Find your purpose and fling your life out to it, and, the loftier your purpose is, the more sure you will be to make the world richer with every enrichment of yourself.—Phillips Brooks.

To be always intending to live a new life, but never find time to set about it,—this is as if a man should put off eating and drinking and sleeping from one day to another, until he is starved and destroyed.—Tillotson.

THE ARBITRATION CONFERENCE.

Fifty years ago the cause of arbitration could scarcely have mustered a dozen advocates outside of the Society of Friends. It is a cause for deep thankfulness that many of the most distinguished citizens of this country have recently met in Washington city with the avowed purpose of furthering the cause of universal peace. This gathering of the champions of arbitration of international differences was notable and important not only in its purpose, but also for the character and eminence of the participants. On the 12th instant a mass meeting in the interest of the cause was held in one of the large audience halls of the city. The reserved seats on the floor were for the delegates. Here sat the heads of great universities, leaders in Congress, members of the bench, distinguished Christian ministers. On the platform confronting the immense assemblage was a galaxy of the republic's most eminent citizens, whose presence and earnest appeals gave force and dignity to this remarkable occasion, and evoked a striking demonstration of enthusiasm.

It was intended by the Executive Committee that ex-President Cleveland should preside, but recent events prevented his attendance. He gave expression to his sympathy with the object of this conference by a letter addressed to the chairman of the committee. The presiding officer finally selected was John W. Foster, whose distinguished services in the highest type of diplomacy have been recognized in both hemispheres. To the right of the president sat Cardinal Gibbons, Rabbi Joseph Silverman, and J. M. Dickinson, the senior counsel before the Alaskan boundary tribunal. On the president's left sat Edward Everett Hale, Andrew Carnegie and Gen. Nelson A. Miles. These were the speakers selected to support the resolutions proposed by the Executive Committee.

These resolutions were read by the secretary, Thomas Nelson Page:

"Whereas, By a concurrent resolution of the Congress of the United States, adopted in 1890, the President was requested to invite negotiations with other governments to the end that any differences which could not be adjusted by diplomacy might be referred to arbitration and peaceably adjusted by such means; and the British House of Commons in 1893 adopted a resolution expressing cordial sympathy with this purpose as well as the hope that the British Government would lend its ready co-operation to the government of the United States to the end that the resolution of Congress might be made effective; and,

"Whereas, Since that time, as the result of an international conference, a permanent court of arbitration has been established at The Hague, to which nations may voluntarily resort for the peaceful settlement of their differences; and,

"Whereas, It is the opinion of this conference that the government of the United States, in view of its historical position and of the great results accomplished by means of arbitration, should continue to further and to support every movement by peaceful means to promote the reign of law and justice among nations;

"Resolved, That it is recommended to our government to endeavor to enter into a treaty with Great Britain to submit to arbitration by the permanent court at The Hague, or, in default of such submission, by some tribunal specially constituted for the case, all differences which they may fail to adjust by diplomatic negotiations.

"Resolved, That the two governments should agree not to resort in any case to hostile measures of any description till an effort has been made to settle any matter in dispute by submitting the same either to the permanent court at The Hague or to a commission composed of an equal number of persons from each country, of recognized competence in questions of international law.

"Be it further resolved, That our government should enter into treaties to the same effect, as soon as practicable, with other powers."

President Foster then introduced Cardinal Gibbons, referring to the immense constituency of the eminent prelate and to the fortunate circumstance that this cause had his encouragement. The Cardinal was received with applause, and spoke fluently, with clear but not strong voice. "Every American citizen who has the welfare of his country and humanity at heart should rejoice at the efforts that are made in the sacred cause of universal arbitration—an arbitration to decide disputes between strong and weak as well as powerful nations. And it is particularly desirable that the United States and Great Britain should be allied by such close ties of friendship as would preclude any fear of war between them." He based his hopes on the facts that the two countries speak the same language, have the same literature, are connected by the closest ties of commercial intercourse, and are living practically under the same form of government. He congratulated the two countries that they had so recently illustrated the value of arbitration by submitting the dispute with regard to the Alaskan boundary to a convention of British and American statesmen. Very graceful was his compliment to President Foster. Referring to his services on the Alaskan Boundary Commission, he said: "If his modesty would permit, he could apply to himself the words of Æneas, speaking of the Trojan war: 'Quorum magna pars fui.'"² The result of this successful arbitration proves "that all schemes conceived in ambition and fomented by passion are destined like the mountain torrent to carry ruin before them and leave desolation after them; while the counsels of men assembled in the name of peace and under the inspiration of heaven, like the gentle dew of heaven, silently shed their blessings around them and bring forth fruit in due season."

The next speaker to add a tribute to the effort to bring universal peace to the world was one who for forty years had been a soldier, and who for some years was the ranking officer of the United States Army. Gen. Nelson A. Miles was received with tumultuous cheers, indicating the sympathy and admiration of the great audience. He stated that he esteemed it an honor "to join this distinguished company in its consideration of a most important subject. . . . Formerly military forces were kept for national defense, but if we shall have reached the time when they are to be used to overrun foreign countries and oppress and place in subjection defenseless people, then the spirit of arbitration has not appeared too soon and cannot be too strongly advocated. Possibly we have reached a time when the great war powers have found it more agreeable and less expensive to hunt in concert than to hunt each other. If that be true, then liberty may well veil her face, and the sovereign rights of man, independence and justice, are in imminent danger." Coming from such a source, these remarks were of extreme significance. While just now the prospect for war in the East seems to be imminent, yet one of the most hopeful events of modern times occurred when the autocrat of all the Russias "called a World's Peace Congress, and advocated the reduction of the burdens of war, and the adjustment of controversies between nations in a way that would tend to promote the universal peace of the world."

The venerable Edward Everett Hale then raised his gigantic form, and spoke with his old-time vigor and pungency. He also ascribed much credit to the progress of peaceful solutions to national difficulties to the influence of the Czar of Russia. However, he claimed that arbitration was at least as old as the Confederation. Our Supreme Court had been a living example of the power of arbitration all these years. "Only once have the States been at war in all those years, and that because of a clause which they left out of their treaty of arbitration. Served 'em right, as we are apt to say in Yankeedom." A Russian who had been traveling in this country, in conversation with Dr. Hale, expressed some astonishment that he had seen no soldiers. He thought it well that the people should be in some way reminded that they have a government. "But," said the Doctor, "the letter carrier reminds me of the government." Dr. Hale once asked an eminent engineer what it would cost to build four parallel lines of railway from the Cape to Cairo, from Gibraltar to Korea, from Hudson's Bay to Magellan. The engineer replied that if he had the money spent in one year by the various nations for their armies and navies, he could construct all these lines and have enough left over to build them again.

Rabbi Joseph Silverman was next introduced. "Israel is weak, but she has always stood as an advocate of peace. There is an adage that says, 'In time of peace prepare for war.' I would change that to read, 'In time of peace prepare for peace by peaceful means.' . . . It is no great thing to achieve quiet by force, but it is a great achievement to turn an enemy into a friend by justice and sweet reasonableness. . . . Evolution henceforth is to be by spiritual lines. Nations cannot get along by brute force." Considering some recent atrocities in Russia, and remembering that the speaker was a Jew, we can readily forgive him for somewhat discounting the praise which had just been accorded to the Czar. "I beg your pardon, but right here I must impugn the motives of a man who advocates peace on the one hand, and on the other permits thousands of his subjects to be butchered." The president then introduced J. M. Dickinson as one who, although he had carried a musket in his immature youth in the Confederate army, carried with conspicuous success a much greater musket recently in London. After the speaker had eulogized President Foster for the part he had taken in the Alaskan Boundary Commission, and had alluded to the devastation of the Civil War, stating that it would be fully one hundred years before the South would recover from the destruction of manhood in that cruel war, he closed by saying that it was proper "that America should propose this arbitration to England. A strong, fearless nation will not be accused of seeking peace through cowardice."

The last speaker to support the resolutions was Andrew Carnegie. With much earnestness and vehemence he asserted that "Great Britain longs for such a treaty as we have suggested to-day. . . . She will accept. I hope that the little acorn thus planted may grow into the mighty oak with such power that men will cease in all lands brutally to kill one another in war. . . . Gentlemen, the greatest blot on civilization to-day is failure to provide the courts for the settlement of international differences. There has come to this earth in the twentieth century something it never had before, which may prove its greatest work—a permanent tribunal for the settlement of national disputes, a high court of international peace." Then, with impassioned voice, he deplored the horrors of a system which involved men in brutal struggles, "killing one another like wild beasts." The sentiment was applauded to the echo. The speaker asserted that arbitration was not the goal; we must not stop until we gain the disarmament of the nations, and so prevent the shocking waste to our industrial resources, and the deterioration of our manhood. To all friends of peace the outlook is exceedingly encouraging. The men who have participated in this conference are from every section of the Union, and represent all professions and lines of work. There is every reason for the hope that at an early date the two great English-speaking nations may ratify an arbitration treaty which will pave the way for such a measure between all the great powers. This movement so auspiciously undertaken inspires the conviction that this century will see the end of so-called civilized warfare.

ALBERT H. VOTAW.

Washington, D. C.

PREPARATION FOR PRAYER.*

BY G. CAMPBELL MORGAN.

"If ye abide in Me, and My words abide in you, ask whatsoever ye will, and it shall be done unto you." John 15: 7.

These words contain the most wonderful charter of prayer in the whole Word of God. I will only indicate their scope in order that we may consider what is the condition of prevailing prayer and what the responsibility that grows out of the possibilities of prayer.

This verse contains a condition and a promise. The condition: "If ye abide in Me and My words abide in you"; the promise: "Ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." How many Christian people believe that promise? The statement may be superlative and may need defining, but the conditions are all stated by Christ; man must not make any other. "If ye abide in Me and My words abide in you." The particular word our Lord used in His promise does not mean to beg as a favor, but to demand as that which is due, so that it may be translated, "Demand as your due what ye will—whatsoever ye desire—and it shall be done—generated—for you." A more marvelous statement never fell from the lips of Jesus. If ye abide in Me and My words abide in you, ye are lifted into the realm and province of omnipotence, and prayer is no longer a speculative attempt to persuade God, it is a scientific movement with God. Let us now consider the condition.

What is it to abide in Christ, and for His word to abide in you? All the facts that make prayer possible are of such a nature as to set up a responsibility in the case of those who share the privilege. All these facts in Jesus Christ are privileges, and create responsibility which is of a twofold nature; first, that we prepare for prayer; and, secondly, that we practice prayer.

By preparation for prayer I do not mean the preparation of studious attention and diligent search and patient waiting on God. I have no sympathy with the idea that it is necessary to be in a special frame of mind and feeling for praying and preaching. The fact that a man needs to lift himself out of one frame of mind into another proves that he does not know the preparation, which is a preparation not of frames, and feelings, and moods, and tenses, but of life and of character. If I have already dwelt much upon the doctrines, it is because I so strongly believe that no duty blossoms into beauty unless it be rooted in doctrine.

What, then is the preparation that is necessary? What is this abiding in Christ? It is the response of the soul to the facts that make prayer possible. If I am to pray so as to prevail, I must respond to the revelation of the Father, to the mediation of the Son, the inspiration of the Spirit. . . .

What responsibility is set by the revelation of the Father? Turn to the Gospel of Luke: "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." . . . I have sometimes wondered what literary critics would do with that verse, supposing that it were a part of a pamphlet issuing from the press to-day. I think they would say: "However good the meaning of this writer, his literary style halts; his metaphors are sadly mixed. Notice what he says here: 'Fear not, little flock,' and then in less than a moment he has forgotten he is talking about a flock, and he is talking about a family; he says, 'It is your Father's good pleasure,' and then suddenly he has forgotten that he has mixed up the flock with the family, and he is talking about a nation: 'to give you the kingdom.'" But the metaphors are not mixed; they are merged. It is the speech of infinite wisdom. Jesus made no mistake in His metaphors. There is the unfolding in it of the threefold fact within the Fatherhood of God that He came to make real to men. God is Shepherd, Father, King. Not three persons, not three sides to one person, but one God being at the same moment Shepherd, gathering the flock; Father, loving the children; King, governing the nation. It is the perfect figure of an old Arab tribe in which the sheik was at once the shepherd of the flock, the father of the family, the king of the nation. Jesus there, in one little sentence flashing with beauty and tenderness, says to His people: "Do not be careful about the things of time and sense; seek the kingdom of God, and these things shall be added unto you. Fear not, little flock, for the Lord is your Shepherd; it is the Father's good pleasure, for you are His children, to give you the kingdom, for He is the King. . . .

* Extracts from a Northfield Conference address.

Here is the sum of the whole thing. God has revealed Himself in Christ as King. We talk about the kingship of God as though God was playing at being a King. Is God absolute Monarch in our lives? Do we consult Him before we go on a journey, or enter upon business, or take up work in the church? Do we put God first? Have we handed over actually—not as a sentiment to be sung about, but as the underlying motive principle of life—all the keys of the citadel? If not, what is the use of praying, "Thy kingdom come"? In God's name we had better not pray. The blasphemy of the sanctuary is far more harmful to the world than the foul-mouthed blasphemy of the slum. The blasphemer in the sanctuary is the man that with unctuous expression and pious, fraudulent manner says, "Thy kingdom come," and yet shuts God out of his own heart, of his own home, of his own office, of his own business, of all his own affairs. That is the blasphemer that hinders the kingdom, paralyzes prayer, wounds afresh the Son of God. . . .

Again if prayer is to be prevailing prayer, there must be response to this great fact of Fatherhood. What does Fatherhood mean? Sonship. What does sonship mean? Likeness—likeness which is not the result of an attempt to imitate, but the result of life identical with that of the Father. Child of God, of your Father it is said, He pities, He has compassion, He is patient, He is longsuffering. Are you bearing the family likeness? Are you patient? If you are not the sunshine of your home, quit praying in prayer meeting until you are. We must catch the spirit of our Father and be sons of love as He is a Father of love, patient with His patience, longsuffering with His longsuffering, having that love which hopeth all things, endureth all things, believeth all things, the love that never faileth. Begin to love with that kind of love. You will pray a good deal better than you have recently. The revealed Father is Shepherd. Father, King. I am to pasture in His provisions; to be His child, like Him; to be His loyal subject; then I can pray. . . .

The next fact that makes prayer possible is the mediation of the Son. If you have looked at your responsibility as the result of the revelation of the Father and have said, "I can not," now look at your responsibility as the result of the mediation of the Son, and say, "I can." That is the gospel. If I am to pray, I must live in response to the threefold character of the mediatorial work of Jesus Christ. By the way of that mediation I have had pardon; I have purification; and I shall have perfection. These are the tenses of salvation; I was saved. I am being saved. . . .

But is it not possible to get beyond pardon? Yes, blessed be God in heaven. But is it possible now to get beyond the point where it is not necessary to confess sin? There is no warrant in the Bible for believing it; I have no warrant in myself for believing it; I never found any warrant among men for believing it. I am quite willing to dismiss men and myself; I stand by this; the word of God. It is true that there need be no known sin, no disobedience. But remember that sin in God's sight is missing the mark; and whether I willfully disobey or no, when at the close of the day I stand in the presence of God I always have to say, "I am unprofitable; my highest has been low; my holiest surcharged with iniquity. O Christ of the wound-prints and the blood, forgive me." . . .

The incoming of His life when you do not hinder the Spirit will be the outgoing of the evil forces that have held and dominated and mastered your life. You cannot pray if you are nursing passion, and permitting evil habits and thoughts; these things sap the power of prayer and cut the nerve of intercession. . . .

Lastly, there must be response to the work of the Holy Spirit. "The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now. And not only so, but ourselves also, who have the first fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves. . . . The Spirit Himself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered." The work of the Spirit, by which He creates prayer, is a threefold work. He is the creator of sorrow in the heart of the sinner; He is the perpetual burning of a fire in the bones and sinews of the sinner; and He is the ever-present light upon God's plan for the sinner. Sorrow, fire and light; these are the things that mark the Spirit's creation of prayer.

The Spirit of God creates sorrow—such sorrow as we never knew until He indwelt, not selfish, self-centered or petty sorrow any longer, but a broad, world-wide sorrow. Do we know anything about that? "The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain"—a great statement. Take only one aspect of it—that man in his godliness is in agony. Oh, if God would give us to hear it now, the sob and the sigh of humanity that has no language; it is not national; it is race agony! . . .

That is when men begin to pray, when they begin to feel this burden, when passion for souls is not a musical sentiment but a great heart agony. How is it that we are not praying as we ought? Because we do not feel as we ought to do, and we do not feel as we ought to do because somewhere we are grieving the Spirit and preventing Him from doing His work. When Paul had written that eighth of Romans, and had closed by saying, "Nothing can separate us," then he added, "I say the truth in Christ, I lie not, . . . that I have great heaviness and continual sorrow." Sorrow, heaviness? But just now you said you could not be separated. Exactly; that is just it: "I could wish I were accursed from Christ." But did he mean it? Yes, and he was never nearer to his Lord than then. His Lord was accursed from God for Paul, and when his Lord's life dominated him to the last fiber of his being he wanted to be accursed from Christ for some one else. That is the measure of your missionary zeal; that is the measure of your sacrificial service. Get that sense of sorrow, the race sorrow, in your soul, and your prayer will be a sob of agony that takes heaven by violence.

But the Spirit is more than a sense of sorrow. He is, growing out of that, a fire of zeal, a consuming fire, so that one cannot rest day nor night for the necessity for toil and sacrificial service. You call yourself a soldier of the cross. God pity you! You have been playing at soldiers. Where are the scars of battle? . . .

But blessed be God, though the Spirit indwelling is a Creator of sorrow, and the Creator of a fire of zeal, He is also a great light, so that the fire of zeal never consumes the vehicle; it is an energy, and the principle of Christian service in the Holy Spirit is one of unlimited force in unceasing rest. God's light is on the land and on the sea; God's light is on the peoples; let me catch the rhythm of His mighty march and walk with Him. . . .

My heart has been sad many a time with the magnificent literary productions that have done duty for prayer; I think they insult God. A man gets up in a pulpit to lead a great audience in prayer, and his prayer is most exquisitely finished; there is no agony in it, there is no heart-break in it, there is no poverty in it, and therefore there is no wealth in it. I want to be done with such praying; I want the prayer that halts, that breaks down, that sobs, that has no words, that falls back upon God; that is the prayer that prevails. Oh, may God lead us to search our hearts! Have we known anything of the power of prayer? The gate of prayer is open to you; if you have not entered it with full purpose and prayer, then for the sake of the Church, for the sake of the world, bow down and say, "O Lord, teach me to pray." That does not mean that He will give you a form of prayer, or that He will show you the laws of prayer, but He will search you by fire and try you as He alone can. Let Him do it.

Now it is the great work of nature to transmute sunlight into life. So it is the great end of Christian living to transmute the light of truth into the fruits of holy living.—A. J. Gordon.

So long as we love we serve; so long as we are loved by others I would almost say that we are indispensable; and no man is useless while he has a friend.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

The International Lesson.

FIRST QUARTER.

LESSON V.

FIRST MONTH 31, 1904.

JESUS CALLS FOUR DISCIPLES.

Luke 5: 1-11.

GOLDEN TEXT.—If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed.—John 8: 31.

DAILY READINGS.

Second-day, First mo. 25.—Jesus calls four disciples. Luke 5: 1-11.

Third-day, First mo. 26.—The first call. John 1: 35-46.

Fourth-day, First mo. 27.—Fishers of men. Matt. 4: 18-22.

Fifth-day, First mo. 28.—A general call. Isa. 55: 1-7.

Sixth-day, First mo. 29.—The world invited. Isa. 45: 20-25.

Seventh-day, First mo. 30.—Conditions of discipleship. Luke 14: 25-27.

First-day, First mo. 31.—Reward of discipleship. Matt. 19: 27-30.

Time.—Not long after the rejection at Nazareth, A.D. 28, in April or May.

Place.—On the shore of the Sea of Galilee, not far from Capernaum.

Christ left Nazareth and took up His abode, or rather made His headquarters, at Capernaum, which was near the northwest corner of the sea. He was now in the full tide of His ministry—in what Stalker calls "The Year of Public Favor." His sphere of service, geographically, was very limited, for Galilee was only about 60 miles long by 30 miles wide. The population was dense and there were many towns and villages. These facts explain how it was that knowledge of Jesus spread so rapidly.

It was natural, and in accord with custom, that Christ should choose a few to whom to give special lessons concerning His mission, and special teaching in order that they might be able to spread His doctrines after His departure.

The Sea of Galilee, or Lake of Gennesaret, or Sea of Tiberias, or Sea of Chinneroth (Josh. 12: 3), is a beautiful sheet of water; its greatest length is about 16 miles, and its greatest width about 7 miles. The water is clear and pure, and the lake contains an abundance of fish. The surface is 620 feet below the level of the Mediterranean, and on its rather steep banks the vegetation is almost tropical. In the time of Christ it was surrounded by towns and villages, and on its surface were hundreds of vessels. Now almost all the towns and villages are in ruins, and even the sight of Capernaum is not certainly known. Only a few sailboats are to be seen.

Compare the collateral accounts of the incidents as given in Matthew (4: 18-22) and Mark (1: 16-20).

1. "And it came to pass." Probably not long after Christ left Nazareth; possibly on the next day.

2. "He saw two boats." Revised Version. Fishing boats; not ships according to the modern use of the word. "Standing by the lake." Moored to the shore. "Washing their nets." This was a very necessary piece of work, as in catching the fish mud and stones would be brought up. "Cleansing" would perhaps express the fact more accurately. Compare also Mark 1: 19.

3. "Which was Simon's." This would imply that Simon was known to Christ, and doubtless was already one of His disciples. (See John 1: 40-42.) "And asked him to put out a little from the land."

American Revised Version. This would enable Him to avoid being pressed upon by the multitude, and yet be quite near enough to be heard distinctly. There are several places along the northern shore of the lake where this could easily be done. "Jesus was the farthest removed from the conventional type of religious teacher. He availed Himself of the usages of the church establishments, but He was not bound by them." Neither were His disciples, or Paul or Barnabas; neither was George Fox, who preached anywhere, or John Wesley, or George Whitefield, or D. L. Moody.

4. There is no account of what He said. "Put out into the deep." American Revised Version. Deep water, where they could let down the nets, and be likely to meet with a shoal of fish.

5. "Master, we toiled all night, and took nothing; but at Thy word I will let down the nets." American Revised Version. Night fishing was common. Peter's act was one of faith coupled with obedience. He put away discouragement; past failure he did not allow to hinder him; he did not allow his technical knowledge to stop him. His judgment said no, his faith said yes; and his faith was "triumphant over his fears."

6. "They inclosed a great multitude of fishes; and their nets were breaking." American Revised Version. The verb in the original means "were beginning to break." That this is the meaning is also shown by the next verse. This was the reward of his faith.

7. "Their partners." James and John. (Verse 10.) The helpers did not lose anything, for there were more than enough fish to fill both boats.

8. This verse rather implies that Peter's act took place after reaching shore. "Depart from me," etc. This is to be taken as an expression of Peter's humility, not as expressing the wish that Christ should actually depart. It was as if he said: "I am not worthy of so much honor; it would be more fitting that thou shouldst go to some one else." He felt the miracle because it came home to him in a way that other miracles apparently had not. "What God does to us, and for us individually, always seems more wonderful than that which He does for others." It has been pointed out that in the original the word used for "man" is not the general one for "human being," but that which is used for an individual man.

10. "Fear not." Christ always reassured those who were fearful. "Henceforth thou shalt catch men." Dost thou think this a wonderful thing? After this thou shalt take something far more valuable. The word translated "catch" means, literally, "to take alive."

11. "Brought their boats to land." Made them fast. "They left all and followed him." These were the four disciples, as shown by Matthew 4: 18, 21, 22. Whether it means that from this time they gave up all business and devoted their whole time to following Christ is not stated, but compare Luke 18: 28-30. That they returned to their business temporarily is shown by John 21: 3.

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

1. Have faith.
2. Obey promptly.
3. The reward will come.

Christian Endeavor

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Lindley D. Clark, 1429 New York Avenue, Washington, D.C.]

TOPIC FOR FIRST MONTH THIRTY-FIRST.

EVERY CHRISTIAN CALLED TO BE A MISSIONARY.

Luke 24: 44-49.

Second-day, First mo. 25.—Withholding the truth. Jonah 1: 1-3.

Third-day, First mo. 26.—Constrained by love. 2 Cor. 5: 13-21.

Fourth-day, First mo. 27.—Weakness no excuse. 1 Cor. 2: 1-5.

Fifth-day, First mo. 28.—Liberal giving. Mark 12: 41-44.

Sixth-day, First mo. 29.—Inviting others. Ps. 34: 1-8.

Seventh-day, First mo. 30.—Praying for others. Col. 4: 2-4.

Our Master is the pattern missionary, because He did always the things that were pleasing to Him who sent Him. And our sending is of the same order: "As Thou didst send Me into the world, even so sent I them into the world." He who sent is a missionary, and no Christian can live aright without being to some one an illustration and a message-bearer along the lines of righteousness and true holiness.

The wide difference between the world's motive and Christ's appears from His words: "For their sakes" (John 17: 19). When we enter into His spirit, we will "live no longer unto ourselves," but unto Him; and because our earthly service to Him is largely by way of service to His brethren, we are able to know, and the world will also know, whether we are missionaries or self-seekers. The cup of cold water to the thirsty, the feeding and clothing of the hungry and naked, are put by Christ as service to Him, and the promise of blessing is no less certain to those who minister thus than to those whose service lies in other directions.

But the great mission is a spiritual one and to us is committed this ministry of reconciliation. Men need to be led to see that their hostility to God is due first of all to a wrong understanding—perhaps willful, but none the less mistaken—of what He proposes concerning them. No method is useless or to be rejected if only it manifests Christ and opens a channel by which others may be reached for Him. Every agency that love can use or devise is good, but no stopping place must be found short of the teaching of salvation through His blood.

Some men say that their religion consists in alleviating the conditions of hardship or injustice that the weak and oppressed are suffering, but there is healing for deeper hurts than of body or of mind, and we are ambassadors in this behalf, as though God were intreating by us.

The qualifications are less of our supplying than of God's. "Words of man's wisdom" are too often a snare to those who speak as well as to those who hear, for it is not a human work, but the Spirit's. Weakness, fear and trembling are not to excuse us, nor need they be counted a real hindrance, if we may judge from Paul's experience. But these things do not justify us in neglecting any opportunity to better fit ourselves for the work we may have to do. Jesus waited until He was thirty years old, and for the troubling of the waters by the Forerunner before He began His work.

The world's need is urgent, and to meet it requires our fullest and most careful preparation, that as we are sent forth we may go as workmen that need not be ashamed.

Educational.

EARLHAM COLLEGE.

D. R. Ellabarger, principal of the Richmond High School, will have charge of the mathematics offered by the Earlham Summer School, 1904.

Prof C. K. Chase, head of the Latin Department, attended the annual meeting of the American Institute of Archæology, at Cleveland, Ohio, Twelfth month 29th to 31st, 1903.

Prof. Harlow Lindley has resumed his work at the college after a leave of absence at the University of Chicago. Two new courses are being offered by the Department of History this term.

Prof. R. L. Sackett, head of the Department of Mathematics, attended the Engineering section of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and the American Mathematical Society, at St. Louis, during the holidays.

Prof. D. W. Dennis, of the Department of Biology, and director of the Summer School of Nature Study, has been granted leave of absence for twelve weeks, and is spending the time in study in New Mexico and California. During his absence A. C. Life, of the University of Chicago, is in charge of the department.

The Earlham College Faculty was represented at the Indiana State Teachers' Association by President R. L. Kelly and Profs. Dennis, Hodgins, E. P. Trueblood, Lindley, Hole and Hadley. President Kelly was re-elected president of the County Institute Instructors' Association, and was elected president of the Association of Indiana Colleges.

Owing to throat trouble, occasioned by climatic conditions, Prof. Adolph Gerber, who has been head of the German and French Department for eighteen years, has felt compelled to resign his position at the close of this year and return to Germany. The Board of Trustees has secured as his successor Prof. Arthur M. Charles, who will become Professor of German and Acting Professor of French. Prof. Charles received the degree of B.S. from Earlham College in 1894, and the degree of Master of Arts from Haverford College in 1896. He has taught in Philadelphia, and was for a time principal of Oak Grove Seminary, Maine, which position he resigned to continue his studies in Germany, where he has been for the past two years at the Universities of Berlin and Munich. He has practically completed his work for the Doctor's degree in Germany.

The college had for its guest First month 11th and 12th, President Isaac Sharpless, of Haverford College, Pa., who has been visiting the leading universities and colleges of the Mississippi valley during the last few weeks. He addressed the faculty, students and a number of visitors Tuesday morning, taking for his theme, "The object of, and who should attend college."

Correspondence.

A few thoughts from a layman, on the history of early Friends may be of interest. They began by vigorously preaching a religion of personal revelation by God to man. It was not from his peculiar dress, or manner of holding services or speech, as I am afraid many think, that he was listened to, or shunned and finally persecuted and driven forth, and in many instances martyred, and, best of all, was acknowledged by God; but it was because he knew that there had come into his soul a new life, the divine life. This was not a new truth or experience or teaching of man, but one which had been nearly forgotten by the Church. It had become in a way accepted that God was far off, and if we wished to speak to Him we must speak very loud or else tell our needs or troubles to some one of a few who professed to be able to come in such close touch with God as to be able to speak with Him to our advantage, but the early Quakers or Friends strove to teach a God not a great way off, but close, even through and by Jesus Christ our Saviour. He is willing to dwell within us and make His life our life, and is ever ready by that invisible power to lead and teach us aright, and we may know by personal experience what it is to know God and to hear and speak to Him. Open the door and let Him in, and then we may be sure that we shall get so close to Him that we will not only hear and see Him, but will forget self and the world, and think more of others.

FRANK E. WELLING,
Millbrook, N. Y.

Things of Interest Among Ourselves.

The annual meeting of the Foreign Missionary Association of Friends of Philadelphia will be held in the committee room at Twelfth Street Meeting House on Third-day the 26th instant, at 4 p.m. The report will be given by the delegation to Japan. Edith Dillon will be present, and is expected to speak. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

JULIA COPE COLLINS, Recording Secretary.

Allen Jay and wife, accompanied by their daughter, are visiting at Guilford College, N. C.

B. F. Talbott and wife, who have been holding revival meetings at Earlham, Iowa, have gone to Nebraska to work.

Seven of the Sabbath School girls at Douglas, Alaska, professed conversion in the Sabbath evening meetings recently.

We have excellent accounts of Levi Rees, who went to California in very bad physical condition. His present home is at Whittier.

Leverett J. and Anna B. Rugg, having closed their labors with the Friends at Monkton Ridge, Vt., are now settled in the meeting at Mt. Airy, N. C.

More students enrolled at Guilford College the fall term than ever before. The winter term, which began the 17th, is expected to be still more largely attended.

William West has been laboring in the meeting at Jonesboro, Ind., for three months with good results. Some have been led to take definite steps in their religious life.

Mary Cox and her husband, Stephen Cox, recently held a very successful revival meeting with Friends at Lapel, Ind. More than fifty professed conversion or renewal.

We are informed that N. C. and Cora E. McLean have just held a successful series of meetings under the direction of the National Evangelistic Association at Conneaut, O.

Friends at Oskaloosa, Ia., are planning to hold a social meeting to which all the members and attenders of the meeting, including all the Penn College students, will be invited.

Edgar J. Sanders, of Le Grand, Iowa, has located in the meeting at West Oak, near Glenwood, Iowa. He also has charge of a new work at the Mosier Schoolhouse in the same locality.

President R. L. Kelly preached at the First Friends' Meeting, Indianapolis, Ind., on Sabbath, the 10th inst. On Sabbath afternoon he addressed the city Y. M. C. A., taking for his theme "Meeting the Ups and Downs of Life."

The next meeting of Friends' Educational Association has been postponed from the 16th inst., and will be held at No. 140 North Sixteenth Street, Philadelphia, on Seventh-day, the 23d, at 2.30 p.m. All interested are invited to attend.

Estella Hammond, a minister with proper credentials from Long Lake Monthly Meeting, Mich., has been holding meetings and visiting families within the limits of Iowa Monthly Meeting, Okla., since the middle of Tenth month. Her labors have been greatly appreciated by the Friends.

The members and attenders of Twelfth Street, Philadelphia, and Haverford Meetings are cordially invited to attend a tea meeting in the Twelfth Street Meeting House, on Second-day evening, the 25th inst. Rufus M. Jones will address the meeting on "Quaker Principles as Factors in the World's Progress."

Henry Bryan Binns, formerly co-editor of "Present Day Papers," is now engaged in historical and other English researches, the collation of texts and general literary work, at the London libraries, and will be glad to execute commissions on the usual terms. 3, Cavendish Mansions, Mill Lane, West Hampstead, N.W.

Nathan and Esther Frame held a two-weeks' series of meetings with the Friends at Boulder, Col., from the 8th to 21st ult. They both preached in the power and demonstration of the Spirit, and were very much appreciated by the people of the town. Several were blessed.

Leannah Hobson, of Richmond, Ind., and Lida Lyons, of Wichita, Kan., began a series of meetings at Shirley, Ind., the 16th ult., continuing twenty-two days—forty-two sessions in all. The results were very satisfactory to the meeting, there being some forty-five for fifty renewals and conversions. Fifteen united with Friends, and more will follow.

Francis W. Thomas, of Dunreith Meeting, very acceptably attended meeting at Greenfield, Ind., on a recent Sabbath. His subject for the morning service was the resurrection. Deep interest pervaded the audience while he spoke. In the evening service he took for his text these words, "Acquaint thyself with God and be at peace." In this he manifested a great deal of his old-time zeal and enthusiasm.

S. Rufina White, of Greenfield, Ind., held a series of meetings in Twelfth month at New Hope, and also one at Beech Grove, both of which are within the limits of Wilmington Yearly Meeting. Several were converted and renewed in each of these meetings, and much good was accomplished in strengthening the church. Some of the new converts united with Friends.

President Isaac Sharpless was at Penn College two days at the opening of the winter term. On the evening of the 5th inst. he lectured in the chapel on the subject, "The Place of the Small College." At chapel exercises the next day he addressed the college on "The Habit of Reading." Both these masterly addresses were much appreciated by the college and Friends.

Complimentary copies of the Friends' "Pocket Almanac for 1904," which is published by the Friends' Book and Tract Committee, 51 Fifth Avenue, New York, have been thankfully received at our office. This is an indispensable source of information concerning yearly meeting officers, times of holding quarterly meetings, statistics, etc., for Friends all over the world, and can be secured for 5 cents.

The Friends at Tillson, N. Y., have built an addition to their meeting house, to be used for Bible School and prayer meeting purposes. The dedication services were held the 31st ult. On the 3d inst., the Friends began special meetings, without an evangelist, the local ministers and workers of the meeting carrying on the work. Four meetings were held in the meeting house, and two meetings at the homes of Friends, with three conversions in all.

Kokomo Monthly Meeting, Indiana, recently organized under the Uniform Discipline. The Union Street congregation is prospering under the efficient leadership of Murray S. Kenworthy, and that of Courtland Avenue under Carey Taylor. The two congregations have raised and expended more than $1,000 in the various lines of church work during the past year. The week of prayer was observed in this city by a successful series of union meetings.

Elwood Scott, of Marion, Ind., has been laboring in the limits of Wilmington Yearly Meeting in evangelistic work, having held meetings at Westtown, in Fairfield Quarter; also at Ceyer's Creek, in Miami Quarterly Meeting, and is now holding a series of meetings at Harveysburg, Ohio. In all of these meetings the power of the Lord was manifested in the conversion of sinners and the building up of the Church. He expects to remain in the yearly meeting for some time yet.

Nathan T. and Esther G. Frame began meetings at the Friends' University, Wichita, Kan., early in Twelfth month. The work continued for nearly three weeks with good results. There were nearly one hundred claiming conversion, a deeper work of grace, or renewal from a back-slidden condition. The meeting was much strengthened, and the Christian Associations, under the management of the students of the University, were very much helped in their work and their membership increased. The clearness of their gospel teaching and the forceful presentation of the truth were effectual in reaching many hearts in a way never experienced before. None who listened to the unanswerable arguments and the tender and touching appeals of Esther G. Frame could hesitate to admit that God had called a woman to preach the everlasting gospel, no difference what their previous convictions might have been concerning the question of women preaching. The teaching of Nathan T. Frame was strong and logical; but perhaps his greatest strength and fitness was manifest in his ability to support his wife in her masterly efforts, to supplement her arguments with practical applications, and to carry much of the weight of the service, without which her physical strength could hardly have sustained her through the series of services. God has wonderfully equipped them for His service, and as wonderfully blesses those who come under their ministrations. In all the work this harmony of thought and helpfulness at every stage of progress added much to the power as well as the interest of the meetings. Truly a man and a woman consecrated to God and wholly given to his service are a mighty power for good, and to such he ever assures victory. These dear Friends have been many years in His service; but their strength is not abated, and with stronger growing faith and new-bought experiences, they seem better fitted with the help of each new victory to lead others to the everlasting fount of blessing.

MARRIED.

SANDERS—JONES.—At Oskaloosa, Iowa, Twelfth month 28th, 1903, Elma Jones and Edgar J. Sanders. They are now located at Glenwood, Iowa. Both are graduates of Penn College, Class of 1900.

DIED.

BIRDSALL.—At the home of her daughter, Kate Covert, Clintondale, N. Y., Twelfth month 20th, 1903, Julia A. Birdsall. Converted many years ago, she united with the Presbyterian Church. About thirty years ago she became convinced of Friends' principles and became a member with them. Her last years have been spent much in isolation from the services of the Church, but they have been marked by great peace and sweetness of spirit.

CHAPMAN.—At Bloomingdale, Ind., First month 2d, 1904, Cecil B. Chapman, daughter of Jeremiah H. and Henrietta Chapman, in her 18th year. She was a member of Bloomingdale Monthly Meeting, Parke County, Ind.

GRIFFEN.—At her home, 891 Amsterdam Avenue, New York city, First month 2d, 1904, Elizabeth Wanzer Griffen, widow of the late Joseph Griffen, in the 91st year of her age. The deceased was a member of New York Monthly Meeting.

PARKER.—At Wheeling, W. Va., Twelfth month 21st, 1903, Hannah M. Parker, wife of the late Isaac Parker, of Knightstown, Ind. She departed in peace.

Events and Comments.

When the feat of "looping the loop" on a bicycle was first performed, it was regarded as marking the limit of possibility in this direction. But it has now been excelled in Paris, where cyclists are using a "loop" whose upper part is removed, so that they must make a leap through the air while riding their wheels head downward.

A majority of the Senate Committee appointed to investigate charges against General Leonard Wood, now in the Philippines, but formerly governor-general of Cuba, has reported adversely on charges brought against him, charges involving not only military insubordination and breach of honor, but also acts as governor of Cuba which, if true, showed low ethical standards.

The most sensational gold strike in the Cripple Creek district in many years was confirmed at Colorado Springs, Col., last week. It is on Ironclad Hill. From a space no larger than a man's body ore to the value of $25,000 was shipped, some of which assays $23,000 a ton. The strike has caused great activity in the northern part of the district.

President Palma, who has never hesitated to let it be known that he opposed lotteries, and who made perpetuation of the lottery system one of his indictments against Spain's rule in Cuba, has vetoed the bill passed by the Cuban Congress establishing a lottery to raise funds with which to pay soldiers who fought for Cuba's freedom. It is doubtful whether votes sufficient to pass the bill over his veto can be secured. We hope not, not only for Cuba's sake, but for ours as well. A lottery in Havana would find

THE WAY OUT.

What to Do When Food Don't Agree.

When food don't agree sensible folks make a change.

Where all others fail Grape-Nuts, being predigested and all nourishment, succeeds, usually from the first trial.

A lady of Washington says: "My baby 19 months old had never seen a well day in her life. She had suffered from indigestion from the time of her birth, and it seemed impossible to find any food to agree with her. She could keep almost nothing on her stomach and her bowels were in such a constipated condition she suffered a great deal.

"It was then that I tried Grape-Nuts for her, steeping it thoroughly and straining it, putting a small portion in each feeding, and it worked like a charm. She began to improve immediately, and gained half a pound the first week.

"Baby got her indigestion from me, for my digestive organs have always been weak. I rely on Grape-Nuts for most of my food, for there are times when I can eat nothing else at all but Grape-Nuts. I am steadily improving, and know it will entirely cure me in time. I never have 'that tired feeling' any more. I eat Grape-Nuts, and I feel its effects in improved mental strength very forcibly." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Look in each package for a copy of the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

many purchasers of tickets in the United States. The tentacles of one of these devilish devices for impoverishing the many at the expense of the few go out to bounds not set by national lines.

A volcano on Sugar Loaf Mountain in Rowan County, Ky., is assuming alarming proportions. There are five fissures on the side of the mountain, from which smoke pours in considerable volume, accompanied by a deep, rumbling noise. All the trees in the vicinity are blasted and splintered. The people in that section are terror-stricken and are preparing to move. The volcano is about three miles from Morehead.

The Empress of China's signature to the commercial treaties with the United States and Japan recently negotiated has been affixed under stiff pressure from Washington and Tokyo, and against opposition from Russia, Count Cassini's smooth word to the contrary notwithstanding. This puts both the United States and Japan in a better legal position to speak with authority relative to China—including Manchuria—in whatever state of affairs may lie just ahead, whether war or negotiations respecting future rights of the powers in Manchuria. Conditions in Korea are troubled, and United States marines have landed and are in Seoul guarding Minister Allen and the legation. It would not be surprising if Japan's first move would be throwing an army corps or two into Korea, and letting Russia act thereafter as she thinks best.

The Chicago "Tribune's" customary compilation of the statistics of the year show that the gifts in large sums chronicled in the press during 1903 amounted to $76,934,978, about one million dollars less than 1902. Of this sum, museums and art galleries have received $2,927,500, churches and theological seminaries $3,996,913, libraries $7,583,556, hospitals and eleemosynary institutions $21,726,358, and educational institutions $40,700,693. These figures are suggestive, for several reasons. In the first place, it is the record of giving where the right hand knew what the left hand did; it makes no account of the giving by the masses in small sums, nor of the vast sum raised for these same purposes by public taxation. Note also the relative place of education, philanthropy, religion and aesthetics.

A number of noted persons have passed into the life beyond within the past few weeks. The death of Gerome, the eminent French painter and sculptor, removes one whose technical skill was marked and whose output was ample, but who had little spiritual insight or ambition to do other than depict. With the death of General J. B. Gordon so soon after the death of General Longstreet, the South is reminded anew that her great chieftains in the Civil War are becoming mournfully few. Parke Godwin, of New York city, a figure of the remote past of journalism and literature in the metropolis has passed away. Yale University and New Haven will deeply mourn the death of Francis Wayland, son of the distinguished divine and educator of the same name. Ohio has also contributed a worthy member to the list in the person of Charles Foster, ex-Secretary of the Treasury.

THE OLD RELIABLE

Absolutely Pure
THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

The best evidence of a happy heart is in turning a happy face toward God.

WASHINGTON.

Three-Day Tour via Pennsylvania Railroad.

On January 28th Pennsylvania Railroad Company will run the second Personally-Conducted Tour to Washington for the present season. This tour will cover a period of three days, affording ample time to visit all the principal points of interest at the National Capital, including the Congressional Library and the New Corcoran Art Gallery. Rate, covering railroad transportation for the round trip and hotel accommodations, $13.00 or $10.50 from Trenton, $11.50 or $9.00 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other points, according to hotel selected. Rates cover accommodations at hotel for two days. Special side trip to Mount Vernon.

All tickets good for ten days, with special hotel rates after expiration of hotel coupon.

For itineraries and full information apply to Ticket Agents, or address Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

10,000 Plants for 16c

More gardens and farms are planted to Salzer's Seeds than any other in America. There is reason for this.

We own and operate over 5000 acres for the production of our warranted seeds. In order to induce you to try them, we make you the following unprecedented offer:

For 16 Cents Postpaid

1000 Early, Medium and Late Cabbages,
2000 Delicious Carrots,
2000 Blanching Celery,
2000 Rich Nutty Lettuce,
1000 Splendid Onions,
1000 Rare Luscious Radishes,
1000 Gloriously Brilliant Flowers.

Above seven packages contain sufficient seed to grow 10,000 plants, furnishing bushels of brilliant flowers and lots and lots of choice vegetables, together with our great catalog, telling all about Flowers, Roses, Small Fruits, etc., all for 16c in stamps and this notice. Mammoth 140-page catalog alone, 4c.

JOHN A. SALZER SEED CO.,
R. La Crosse, Wis.

The postoffice department is to issue a new set of postage stamps this year, commemorating the Louisiana Purchase Exposition at St. Louis. This custom brings the government a large sum of money, because so many collectors buy the stamps, as well as people who wish to have an artistic and inexpensive souvenir of the exposition. The one-cent stamp will have the portrait of Robert R. Livingston, who conducted the negotiations for the purchase as United States Minister to France; the two will have the portrait of President Jefferson, and the three that of President Monroe, who was associated with Mr. Livingston in concluding the diplomatic matters. The five-cent stamp will bear the portrait of President McKinley, and the ten will be of historical interest, as it will have a little map of the territory bought from France in 1803.

A little girl walking in New York with her father, saw some workmen on top of a building twenty stories high, and she asked, "Papa, what are those boys doing up there?" He replied that they were not boys, but men, who looked like boys, because they were so high. The little girl meditated for a moment, then said solemnly, "They won't amount to much when they get to heaven, will they?" The question gave the father food for thought. As we rise toward heaven, self becomes smaller, until by and by, when we reach the height of heavenly character, self will not amount to much.—Ex.

The soul grows by the right use of the power of choice.—A. H. Bradford.

WORRY

A Sure Starter for Ill Health.

Useless worrying (a form of nervousness) is indirectly the result (through the nerves) of improper feeding. A furniture man of Memphis says:

"About a year ago I was afflicted with nervous spells, would worry so over trivial things.

"I went to consult one of the best physicians in Memphis, and he asked, among many questions, if I drank coffee.

"His advice was: 'Go to some provision store and get a box of Postum, drink it in place of coffee, and as you are confined to your desk to a great extent try and get out in the open air as much as possible.' I followed his instructions regarding the Postum.

"At that time my weight was 142, and I was taking all kinds of drugs and medicines to brace me up, but all failed; today I weigh 165, and all of my old troubles are gone, and all the credit is due to having followed this wise physicians' advice, and cut off the coffee and using Postum in its place.

"I now consider my health perfect. I am willing to go before a notary public and testify that it was all due to my having used Postum in place of coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason for quitting the drug-drink coffee, and there's a reason for drinking Postum. Trial 10 days proves them all.

Look in each package for a copy of the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

SHE WILL SLEEP TO-NIGHT.

Smooth the braids of her silken hair,
On her queenly brow with tender care;
Gather the robe in a final fold
Around the form that will not grow old;
Lay on her bosom, pure as snow,
The fairest, sweetest flowers that grow;
Kiss her and leave her, your heart's delight,
In dreamless peace she will sleep to-night.

A shadowy gleam of life-light lies
Around the lids of her slumbering eyes,
And her lips are closed in fond delay
Of the loving words she had to say;
But her gentle heart forgot to beat,
And from dainty hands to dainty feet
She is strangely quiet, cold and white;
The fever is gone; she will sleep to-night.

Put by her work and her empty chair;
Fold up the garments she used to wear;
Let down the curtains and close the door;

She will need the garish light no more.
For the work assigned her under the sun

Is finished now, and the guerdon won.
Fondly kiss her; put out the light,
And leave her alone—she will sleep to-night.

O, blessed sleep that will not break,
For tears, nor prayers, nor love's sweet sake;

O perfect rest! that knows no pain,
No throb nor thrill of heart, or brain;
O, life sublime beyond all reach,
That only the pure through dying reach;
God understands, and His ways are right.

Bid His beloved a long good-night.

Keep for the days that will come no more,

For the sunbeam flows from hearth to door,

For a missing step, for a nameless grace
Of a tender voice and a loving face;

But not for the soul, whose goal is won,
Whose infinite joy is just begun;
Not for the spirit enrobed in light,
And crowned where the angels are to-night.

—(Author not known.)

A REMARKABLE LARDER.

A party of men seated in a third-class English railway carriage, were inventing stories to pass away the time. They had all had a turn at it except an old sailor, who had remained silent all the time, until pressed by the others to spin them a yarn. He began:

"I was once in a dreadful storm. All the provisions were washed overboard. I was very ill afterwards, and ate nothing for four days; at the end of that time I began to feel hungry, and the steward gave me beef, chicken, port wine, and eggs."

"But you said all the provisions were washed overboard. Where did the beef come from?"

"From the bullock" (bulwarks), said the old sailor.

"And where did you get the chickens from?"

"From the hatch."

"And the port wine?"

"From the port-hole."

"And the eggs?"

Lamp-chimneys that break are not

MACBETH'S.

If you use a wrong chimney, you lose a good deal of both light and comfort, and waste a dollar or two a year a lamp on chimneys.

Do you want the Index? Write me.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

"Eggs?" said the sailor. "I didn't say eggs, did I?"

"O, yes, you did," said the others. "We have caught you now?"

The old sailor thought he was caught, and had to consider. At last he said:

"O, yes, I did have eggs. The captain ordered the ship to lay to, and he gave me one."—Exchange.

OUR 1904 CALENDAR

Poster style—very effective—sent to anyone interested in good printing, for 4c. postage.

THE LEEDS & BIDDLE CO., Inc.

Makers of the Better Kind of Printing
1019-21 Market St., Phila.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD TOUR TO CALIFORNIA AND NEW ORLEANS MARDI GRAS.

A personally-conducted tour to Southern California will leave New York, Philadelphia, Harrisburg and Pittsburg, by special train over the Pennsylvania Railroad, on February 11th. The route of the tour will be via New Orleans, stopping at that point three days to witness the Mardi Gras festivities. The special train will be continued through to Los Angeles, from which point tourists will travel independently through California and on the return trip.

The special train in which the party will travel from New York to Los Angeles will be composed of high-grade Pullman equipment, and will be in charge of a Pennsylvania Railroad Tourist Agent.

The round-trip rate, $250, covers transportation and all expenses on the special train to Los Angeles; including a seat for the Mardi Gras Carnival. From Los Angeles tickets will cover transportation only, and will be good to return at any time within nine months, via any authorized trans-continental route, except via Portland, for which an additional charge of $15.00 is made.

For complete details and further information, apply to Ticket Agents, or George W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, Pa.

GEORGE FOX: An Autobiography

A Story of His Life, and a Statement of His Message

By RUFUS M. JONES

The Popular Edition of this important work will be ready for delivery within a few days. It contains all the reading matter given in the two-volume edition. It is printed in large, clear type, making it easy reading for persons of all ages. It is conveniently bound in one volume suitable for a library. PRICE, Postpaid, $1.50.

THIS BOOK (postpaid), with ONE NEW Subscription. Both for $2.00
THIS BOOK (postpaid), with a RENEWAL Subscription. Both for $2.50

THE AMERICAN FRIEND, 718 Arch Street, Phila., Pa.

The Long-looked-for Hymn Book
Just Issued.

NORTHFIELD HYMNAL

By GEO. C. STEBBINS

For use in Evangelistic and Church Services, Conventions, Sunday-Schools and all Prayer and Social Meetings of the Church and Home.

It contains a very large number of most useful and singable sacred songs, both new and old, among which are

MANY of the favorite "Gospel Hymns" and "Sacred Songs."

MANY NEW SONGS soon to become favorites. MANY Church Hymns and Tunes, new and old, from the best American and English composers.

MANY pieces especially useful for Evangelistic and Convention Choirs, and many for Solo, Duet and Quartet purposes.

Substantially bound in cloth, $25.00 per 100.

5c. each per copy extra by mail.

Before deciding on the new hymn book for your church you had better see

NORTHFIELD HYMNAL

A returnable copy for examination sent free to any earnest inquirer on application.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York and Chicago.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a.

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote, 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p.m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cts. per night; $3 per week.

Two occupants, 50 cts. each, per night.

2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL

Phone Spruce 33-55.

Clerk.

Delavau's Remedy

A SPECIFIC FOR

Whooping Cough and Croup

Also a safe and speedy cure for Bronchitis, Bronchial Catarrh and ordinary coughs. 50 Cents a Bottle, at Druggists, or

J. W. S. DELAVAU & CO., Propr's.
N. E. Cor. 6th and Wood Sts., Phila.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE.

Sifts the flour and mixes 20 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CYRUS CHAMBERS, Jr.) 62d & Media Sts., Philadelphia

WILLIAM S. YARNALL
Manufacturing OPTICIAN

118 S. FIFTEENTH ST., PHILA.
4th Door Below Chestnut St.

Tribulation is the price we pay for the crown and the robe and the palm.—Bishop Hurst.

10 BEAUTIFUL PICTURES FREE

In order to introduce our QUAKER OINTMENT into every home where THE AMERICAN FRIEND is read, we have decided to make the following liberal offer. To every person sending us 25 cents for one box of QUAKER OINTMENT, and 4 cents extra to pay postage, we will send absolutely free the following 10 pictures. These pictures are gems of art. For picture study, art collections, gifts and home decoration, they are of great value. The Last Supper, Christ in Gethsemane, Christ Taken Captive, Christ Before Pilate, Christ Bearing the Cross, The Crucifixion, Entombment, In the Sepulchre, The Ascension, Transfiguration. It is costing us a great deal of money to advertise in this way, but we trust you will be pleased with our liberality, and will favor us with an order for a box of our ointment, and get these 10 beautiful pictures free. QUAKER OINTMENT is the best known remedy for catarrh, eczema, and all skin diseases. Rev. Asa Woodard, pastor Friends' Meeting at Butlerville, Ind., says: "I am using QUAKER OINTMENT, and find it an excellent remedy." Mrs. Clara Chaney, Rural Route No. 3, Warren, Ind., says: "I have never found anything as good as QUAKER OINTMENT for catarrh, sores and skin diseases." Send us your order to-day. Quaker Ointment sent to any address upon receipt of 25 cents.

DAVIS MFG. CO., Butlerville, Ind.

Penn's Treaty with the Indians

on India paper; engraving 23 inches by 18 inches, on sheets 30 inches by 24 inches; from the original Boydell engraved plate made in 1775 from the original painting of Benjamin West. $3.00 by mail.

A. L. SMITH

29 E. Penn St., Germantown, Phila., Pa.

HOOPING-COUGH AND CROUP.

Roche's Herbal Embrocation

The celebrated and effectual English Cure without internal medicine. Proprietors, W. EDWARDS & SON, Queen Victoria St., London, England. Wholesale of E. Fougere & Co, 80 North William Street, N. Y.

EDUCATIONAL.

GUILFORD COLLEGE

Location in the mild and healthful Piedmont Section of North Carolina

Five Brick Buildings well equipped, supplied with abundance of pure water, and lighted with electricity.

Eleven Members of the Faculty. Good Library and Chemical and Biological Laboratories.

Next Term will begin on the 18th of January, 1904.

Catalogue Sent on Application

L. L. HOBBS, President

EARLHAM COLLEGE, RICHMOND, INDIANA

Prof. Elbert Russell offers courses regularly in Kings, New Testament Times, Life of Christ, The Apostolic Age, Church History, New Testament Literature, Romans, John, Biblical Literature, Isaiah. Prof. Cyrus W. Hodgin, The Protestant Reformation.

Prof. Anna M. Demaree, New Testament, Greek. Asst. Prof. Lindley, History of the Hebrews. Pres. Kelly, History of Philosophy, Ethics, Psychology.

The Oakwood Seminary

UNION SPRINGS, N. Y.

Founded in 1796.

A boarding school for boys and girls under the care of New York Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Academic, College Preparatory and Commercial

Winter term begins First month 5, 1904

SAMUEL H. HODGIN, Principal. LINDLEY M. STEVENS, Superintendent.

WHITTIER COLLEGE

Classical, Scientific and Literary courses. Highest requirements. Students unable to continue their studies in more rigorous climes will find this climate the best in the world for study. Natural advantages for scientific investigation unsurpassed. Well equipped laboratory. Whittier, a Friend's community, —morally clean,—no saloons or kindred sources of corruption. For catalogue address,

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, President.

Stenography, Typewriting, Mimeographing and Reporting

LYDIA ARETE CONN,

805 Provident Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

SHORTHAND TAUGHT BY MAIL

or in school. Each student receives personal attention. Moderate rates. Write for full information.

PROVIDENT SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND

805 Provident Building Philadelphia, Pa

STENOGRAPHING, TYPEWRITING and MIMEOGRAPHING. Prices moderate.

MARY M. KITE

407 Lippincott Building, 12th and Filbert Sts., Phila.

Phone No. 3-33-00

A. M. ADAMS, PRINTING

230 N. Twelfth St., Philadelphia.

BELL TELEPHONE.

The New Century

TYPEWRITER

does the BEST WORK and lots of it, EASILY.

Strong, Thoroughly Built, Superior in results to any other.

Write for

"THE BOOK OF THE NEW CENTURY."

AMERICAN WRITING MACHINE COMPANY, 1033 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

OSTEOPATHY

EDWARD D. BURLEIGH
ALEXANDER STETSON

Osteopathic Physician, 1537 Chestnut St., Room 401.

Hours, 9 a.m. to 12.30 p.m. and 2 to 4 p.m.

Bell Telephone

Consultation free.

JOSEPH G. FOGG UNDERTAKER AND EMBALMER

S. W. Cor. Sixteenth and Race Sts.

Phone Spruce 44-38-W. PHILADELPHIA.

Suburban orders promptly attended.

Acker has it—that 16 ounce Dry Roast Coffee.

FINANCIAL.

6% NET FIRST GOLD MORTGAGES

on improved RED RIVER VALLEY FARMS. Loans to actual settlers ONLY. 21 years' experience in business. Send for formal applications, list of references and map showing location of lands. Over $400,000 invested. None but SAFE, PROMPT-PAYING loans on my books.

WILLIAM T. SOUDER, Financial Agent
309, 310, 311 Century Bldg., Minneapolis, Minn.

6% to 7% Choice First Mortgage Loans, Seattle and vicinity. Local and N. Y. references. Established 1887. Correspondence Solicited. JAMES BOTHWELL, Seattle, Washington.

Mortgages Net 6% in North Dakota.

I place mortgages on land covering about one-third its value. The value of this land is constantly increasing.

I know every mortgagor personally, know his land, his integrity, his habits and his ability to pay.

These combine to make me certain that these mortgages are as safe as GOVERNMENT BONDS.

Investigate me. You can't make the investigation too rigid to suit me. I'll stand it. I've been in this business for 18 years, and never lost a cent for a customer, nor foreclosed a mortgage.

I collect the interest and principal without charge and remit in New York exchange. Write to me for further information.

WALTER L. WILLIAMSON

Investment Banker

Lisbon

North Dakota

STENOGRAPHER

GEO. B. COCK

Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter Street.

Telephones.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA. Office, 409 CHESTNUT STREET

CAPITAL, $1,000,000

ASSETS, $61,615,271.43

Surplus and Undivided Profits, belonging to the Stockholder

4,457,613.08

Surplus, belonging to Insurance Account

6,317,764.17

Incorporated Third month 22, 1865. Charter Perpetual.

INSURES LIVES, GRANTS ANNUITIES, RECEIVES MONEY ON DEPOSIT, returnable on demand for which interest is allowed.

And is empowered by law to act as EXECUTOR ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, GUARDIAN, ASSIGNEE, COMMITTEE, RECEIVER, AGENT, etc.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the assets of the Company.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.

BOXES $5 AND UPWARDS

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY, President.

T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-Prest.

J. R. FOULKE, Trust Officer.

ASA S. WING, Vice-President.

DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary.

JOS. ASHBROOK, Man. Ins. Dept.

J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Assistant Trust Officer

SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer.

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary.

DIRECTORS:

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY,
T. WISTAR BROWN,
HENRY HAINES,
RICHARD WOOD,
CHAS. HARTSHORNE,

ASA S. WING,
PHILIP C. GARRETT,
JAMES V. WATSON,
WM. LONGSTRETH,
EDWARD H. OGDEN,

THOS. SCATTERGOOD,
J. PRESTON THOMAS,
ROBERT M. JANNEY,
MARRIOTT C. MORRIS,
FRANK H. TAYLOR.

The American Friend

Vol. XI

FIRST MONTH 28, 1904

No. 4

	PAGE
EDITORIALS.—The Gains and Losses of a Year.—Father and Mother Both Gone	55
Suffering and the Soul F. B. Meyer.	56
SOME VIEWS ON PRESENT TOPICS: Thoughts on Preaching J. Edwin Jay.	57
THE INTERNATIONAL LESSON Lesson for Second month 7, 1904.	58
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR Topic for Second month 7, 1904.	59
MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT	60
CORRESPONDENCE	61
THINGS OF INTEREST AMONG OURSELVES,	61
BORN.—DIED	62
EVENTS AND COMMENTS	63

THE ETERNAL-WOMANLY.

(Jonathan Edwards, about the woman who afterwards became his wife.)

"They say there is a young lady in New Haven who is beloved of that great Being who made and rules the world, and that there are certain seasons in which this great Being, in some way or other invisible, comes to her and fills her mind with exceeding sweet delight, and that she hardly cares for anything except to meditate on Him; that she expects after awhile to be received up where He is, to be raised up out of the world and caught up into heaven, being assured that He loves her too well to let her remain at a distance from Him always. There she is to dwell with Him, and to be ravished with His love and delight forever. Therefore, if you present all the world before her, with the richest of its treasures, she disregards and cares not for it, and is unmindful of any pain or affliction. She has a strange sweetness in her mind, and singular purity in her affections; is most just and conscientious in all her conduct; and you could not persuade her to do anything wrong or sinful, if you would give her all the world, lest she would offend this great Being. She is of a wonderful calmness, and universal benevolence of mind; especially after this great God has manifested Himself to her mind. She will sometimes go about from place to place singing sweetly; and seems always to be full of joy and pleasure, and no one knows for what. She loves to be alone walking in the fields and groves, and seems to have some one invisible always conversing with her."

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.50 A YEAR ❁ ❁ ❁ PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
AMERICAN FRIEND PUBLISHING COMPANY, 718 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

We particularly invite the attention of the readers of "The American Friend" to this column. It will be found useful for almost everyone who wishes to advertise. The cost is 50. per line each insertion. No advertisement is accepted for less than 25c. Cash with order.

The Conard & Jones Company, Rose Growers.
West Grove, Pa. Catalog Free.

OLD-FASHIONED grandfather clocks repaired at home. If yours needs attention send me a postal or, better, call. My store is within three minutes' walk of the Market Street ferries. Repairing of clocks and watches of every kind. Prompt service and moderate prices. W. L. Berry, Watchmaker and Jeweler, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

EDMUND AUDI wishes to give private lessons in the French language. Refer to Asa S. Wing, 409 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia. Any persons desiring his services can communicate with him at 1823 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

BOARDING.—Persons visiting Washington can be accommodated for board and lodging in private home. Convenient, by electric cars, to all parts of the city. Rates reasonable. LAURA N. WILSON, 1456 Corcoran Street, Washington, D. C.

NEW SONG BOOK.—"Gold Tried in the Fire." One of the best song books on the market for church, Sunday school and evangelistic work. Bound in limp cloth and contains over 200 songs. Sells for $15.00 per hundred. 20 cents a copy. Published by Friends. BROWN BROS., Indianapolis, Indiana.

FOR SALE.—A large walnut writing desk and book case formerly owned by Stephen Grellet. Correspond with S. L. Collins, 702 North 43d Street, Philadelphia.

WANTED.—Salesmen and Saleswomen to sell the great Indian Salve, also Mentholine. I will sell formula for Mentholine. Write me. D. A. Williams, 236 Laura Avenue, Wichita, Kansas.

EMINENT PHYSICIANS
throughout the world recommend

QUINA-LAROCHE

AS A SPECIFIC IN CASES OF
ANAEMIA, COLDS, LA GRIFFE,
SLOW CONVALESCENCE,
STOMACH TROUBLES,
TYPHOID and MALARIAL
FEVERS.

E. Fougere & Co., 30 N. William St., N. Y.

Mortgages Net 6% in North Dakota

THEY are the best, gilt-edged, rock-ribbed, guaranteed 6% investment in America. Safe as government bonds and pay better.

I have been selling these mortgages for 18 years, and have never had to foreclose, and never lost a cent of principal or interest for a single customer.

I personally know every farm covered by the mortgages, as well as the farmers giving them. I know them both to be right, or I have nothing to do with them. Their land is increasing in value every day, thus increasing the value of the security.

I collect both the interest and principal free, and remit in New York exchange, without the least trouble or bother of the customer.

I will be pleased to put you in the way of finding out all about me. Write me for further information.

WALTER L. WILLIAMSON

Investment Banker

LISBON, NORTH DAKOTA

"Character is a richer inheritance than cash."

ART IN PRINTING

A touch of art improves a piece of printing. It adds a little to the expense, but it more than pays for the difference in cost. Send us the order that you want to look different from everyone else's.

THE LEEDS & BIDDLE CO., Inc.

Makers of the Better Kind of Printing
1019-21 Market St., Phila.

Penn's Treaty with the Indians

on India paper; engraving 23 inches by 18 inches, on sheets 30 inches by 24 inches; from the original Boydell engraved plate made in 1775 from the original painting of Benjamin West. $3.00 by mail.

A. L. SMITH

29 E. Penn St., Germantown, Phila., Pa.

What you learn from bad habits and in bad society you will never forget, and it will be a lasting pang to you. I tell you in all sincerity, not as in the excitement of speech, but as I would confess and have confessed before God, I would give my right hand if I could forget that which I have learned in bad society.—John B. Gough.

HOOPING-COUGH AND CROUP.

Roche's Herbal Embrocation

The celebrated and effectual English Cure without internal medicine. Proprietors, W. EDWARDS & SON, Queen Victoria St., London, England. Wholesale of E. Fougere & Co., 30 North William Street, N. Y.

Three Books You Should Have

We have three books written by the late DR. DOUGAN CLARK, Professor of Biblical Literature in Earlham College. Dr. Clark was recognized as one of the leading teachers on Holiness, and his books are full of spiritual food.

1. HOLY GHOST DISPENSATION.

This book sets forth with great clearness the joy and beauty of living in fellowship with the Holy Spirit. It should be read by all who are thirsty after the higher life. It contains 170 pages, finely printed, good paper, in strong cloth binding, price 50 cents. It treats of the following subjects: 1.—The Dispensation of the Holy Spirit; 2.—The Holy Spirit our Sanctifier; 3.—The Holy Spirit an object of Worship, Praise and Prayer; 4.—Intercessory Functions of the Holy Spirit; 5.—The Anointing and Sealing of the Spirit; 6.—The Holy Spirit's Guidance; 7.—The Striving of the Spirit; 8.—Sanctification not by Growth nor Death; 9.—Sanctification not Impeccability; 10.—Sanctification and Temptation; 11.—Be ye therefore Perfect; 12.—Preserved; 13.—A Plea for Orthodoxy; 14.—The Reckoning of Faith.

2. INSTRUCTIONS TO CHRISTIAN CONVERTS.

This book has passed through eight editions. It is one of the most valuable books to put into the hands of young Christians. The chapters are: 1.—Be Definite; 2.—Be Diligent; 3.—Be Faithful; 4.—Be Patient; 5.—Be Holy; 6.—Be Filled; 7.—Be Established. 133 pages; price 50 cents.

3. INNER AND OUTER LIFE OF HOLINESS.

This book was written just before Dr. Clark's death. In many respects it is his most spiritual work. The book has 100 pages well printed and bound; price, cloth 35 cents; leatherette 20 cents. The book treats first of INNER LIFE as a life of Peace, Faith, Full Assurance. Extinction of Selfishness, Communion with God, and Spiritual Growth. And of the OUTER LIFE: The Walk, Regulation, Habit, Meekness and Rule of Action.

SPECIAL OFFER.—The three books, in cloth binding, will be sent postpaid for $1.00.

ADDRESS,

PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION OF FRIENDS * Plainfield, Indiana

The American Friend

"Truth is the highest thing a man may keep."
"That they all may be one."

VOL. XI.

PHILADELPHIA, FIRST MONTH 28, 1904.

No. 4.

THE GAINS AND LOSSES OF A YEAR.*

It has been our custom at the opening of each year to lay before our readers the gains and losses of the previous year. The old proverb that figures do not lie has long ago been discredited—or at least if they do not lie, they deceive. But there is no way in which the actual situation in our meetings can be so forcibly presented as by means of these more or less reliable figures. We have no details from California, North Carolina or Philadelphia. The total number of births in the other yearly meetings amounts to 861, which are offset by 765 deaths. It is at least encouraging to have the balance on the right side. Kansas, as usual, presents the best record—150 births to 79 deaths; Iowa coming next with 152 births to 86 deaths. New York's record is a disturbing one, with 14 births to 64 deaths.

The case would be discouraging, however, if we had to depend solely on increase by births. The gains by request and letter amount to 2,611, which are offset by losses through disownment, discontinuance and resignation, amounting to 2,574—a net gain of 37. This extraordinary loss by leakage is the sad part of the year's record. Only 203 persons were actually disowned. All the rest—2,371—drifted away from us. Four hundred and thirty-nine of those who left us went to other churches, which still leaves 1,932 who are just cut off and lost to the Christian Church. Death took 861; the drift toward worldliness, or the failure of the Church to shepherd the flock efficiently, cost us 1,932 members. These losses have been going on year after year, and perhaps many have grown hardened to the situation. But it is our fundamental weak spot, and it must be faced, if we intend to live as a branch of the Church. It is not enough for a mother to be able to bear children; she must also be able to nurture them and bring them to manhood or womanhood. It is not enough for a church to gather; it must also keep and edify. If it fails at this point, then it actually fails, regardless of the number of those who are brought in by the faithful efforts of its evangelists.

But finally there is a slender gleam of encouragement. Our table of figures shows that when all the losses for the year are subtracted from all the gains there is a net gain of 398. This looks very odd in the face of the loss which we reported in our editorial of First month 7th. The trouble all comes from the fact that in some of the yearly meetings the reported totals are incorrect. Our first figures were got by subtracting the totals of 1902 from those of 1903, and that gives us a loss of 699.† When, however, those who have left us are subtracted from those who came to us during the year, there is a balance of 398 on the right side. In our table these figures are put in the columns headed "apparent † One quarterly meeting of 408 members was omitted from Wilmington's report, so that the corrected loss would be 291.

* Yearly Meeting.	Totals Given in Minutes for 1902.	ADDITIONS.						LOSS.
		Error.	Birth.	Request.	Letter.	Certificate.	Total.	Error.	Death.	Disownment.	Resignation.	Discontinuance.	Letter.	Certificate.	Total.	Total for 1903.	Net Gain.	Apparent Gain.	Net Loss.	Apparent Loss.	No. Ministers.
Baltimore	1,203	3	11	15	1	10	40	4	15	4	5	25	1	11	65	1,180			23	25	27
California	1,710						275								145	1,891	181	130			44
Canada	1,075		13	58		11	82		9		5			11	25	1,080	5	57			18
Indiana	20,278	257	182	597	88	355	1,479	194	198	33	60	300	75	410	1,240	20,483	205	239			211
Iowa	11,280		152	471	45	157	825		86	97	44	179	136	167	709	11,022		116	258		193
Kansas	11,214	86	150	415	41	368	1,060		79	8	119	499	93	367	1,165	11,109			105	105	175
New England	4,462	4	35	102		31	172	11	75			86		20	192	4,462			20	111
New York	3,545		14	73		53	140		64		33	41	28	45	212	3,415			130	72	59
North Carolina	5,194			(Estimated.)			260					(Estimated.)			182	5,194		78			46
Ohio	5,809		63	229		102	394		62	23	30	126	64	92	397	5,601			208		133
Oregon	1,650		18	24		116	158		6	34	22			128	190	1,659	9		32		27
Philadelphia (Est.)	4,400														4,400						38
Western	15,196		174	355		314	843		162		268			381	811	15,230	34	32			172
Wilmington	6,273	83	49	87	10	43	272	51	49	4	11	79	42	33	269	6,272		3	1		63
Totals	93,289		861	2,426	185	1,560	6,000		765	203	597	1,335	439	1,665	5,602	92,998	434	655	725	257	1,317

gain" and "apparent loss." "Net gains" and "net losses" are found by subtracting the totals for 1902 and 1903. It is evident that some yearly meetings are carrying incorrect totals, and these should be put right, so that we may be able to count from a fixed and stable basis.

FATHER AND MOTHER BOTH GONE.

HERE is a letter which ought to give some solemn thoughts: "I inclose $1.50 for THE AMERICAN FRIEND for the past year. AS FATHER AND MOTHER ARE BOTH GONE NOW, YOU MAY STOP THE PAPER." It is not a solitary case. It is a sample of many homes. "Father" and "Mother" have through a long life been faithful to the Church. They have borne the burdens of the meeting. They have supported the work at home and abroad. They have prayed and labored to make the cause flourish. They have been pillars in their day, and have counted no sacrifice too great. But one thing they failed to do. They failed to transplant their interest in the hearts of their children. They did not discover that the greatest service they could possibly render their beloved Church would have been to train their group of children to take up the work which they must leave, for there can be no permanent succession of spiritual pillars without just this care to pass the mantle on to new shoulders.

There are many communities through the country where once the Friends' meeting was the center of a far-reaching religious influence. For miles about country homes sent in their wagonloads of worshippers. Go there now, and ask where the meeting is, and you are solemnly told that one by one the members have been laid away in the quiet yard back of the meeting house. The weighty Friend who once knew all the points of discipline, who discerned to a nicety between soundness and unsoundness, who was mighty in word and deed—he now is silent. He bears the burdens of "the Society" no more. About him are gathered those who filled the men's and women's meetings with him, and who conducted the affairs of the Church.

But why was there no continuous succession? Why did not the thinning ranks fill up with young substitutes who came up to the help of the Lord, as one by one the Old Guard vanished from their places? There were, of course, many reasons—migration, social changes in communities, etc. But after all the deepest reason was just this: When the fathers and mothers went to their long resting place, their children had not been initiated into the work.

When they dropped out their places were left vacant. "Father and mother are both gone; stop my paper!" tells the whole story. Father and mother are gone, we will not go to meeting this morning. Father and mother are gone, we will not go to monthly meeting now; and so the drift toward the graveyard means the doom of the meeting.

The few who are left may get up a revival and save it from sheer death. But no method will save a meeting long UNLESS THE CHILDREN ARE BUILT INTO THE CHURCH. A church is not an organization; it is an organism. It lives and grows by adding to itself from within. Additions from without are good, but they will not make up for the loss of those who have imbibed their Quakerism with their mother's milk. The first and plainest duty now before us is to secure for Christ and the Church the children whom God gives us. That means that they must become interested in the real work and the affairs of the Church. There must be meetings held which appeal to them and give scope for their developing powers. They must in some way be made to feel that they are an actual part of this Church which is now doing Christ's work in the world. The activities of the Church must be wide and varied enough to train up even the very young in actual service, and they must slowly become initiated into the work which the fathers and mothers must one day lay down.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

SUFFERING AND THE SOUL.

BY F. B. MEYER.

Suffering finds us out; suffering more than anything else reveals us to ourselves; suffering strips us of much which had been adventitious and circumstantial and brings us back to our own simplicity and nakedness; and it is just when the soul has been shown its own weakness, insufficiency and helplessness, that it naturally reaches out its hand for its Creator. It wants His help and strength. It longs that the pure, wise, great Spirit of God, from which it sprang, should explain it to itself, and succor it mightily.

At such a time, when the soul is being searched by fire and brought down to the very dust, it has a perfect right to address God and say: "Why hast Thou made me thus, or having made me thus, why hast Thou caused me to live only to suffer; why has my life been given me if it is so hard, so inexplicable, so bitter?" Taking its experiences of suffering in its hand, the soul may dare to climb up the high altar steps of the world, and to pass by the myriads of unfallen, unsinning, unsuffering beings, that cannot enter into its experiences, and to hold audience with the eternal God, saying: "My God, my God, who has made me, Thou art faithful, Thou canst not have made me in vain, Thou hadst a motive and a reason through it all; why this pain, this suffering, this heavy, heavy trouble?" Those who suffer according to the will of God are they who have the right to speak to Him face to face. They acquire boldness through the Blood of Redemption to approach the face of the Creator.

We have just seen the soul leaving behind its worldly companions and interests, leaving behind cherubim and seraphim, leaving behind the unfallen and unsinching spirits of other worlds, taking its suffering in its hand, and entering into the very shrine, the secret place of the Most High for an audience face to face. We have now to see that soul standing face to face with God and saying, "Why hast Thou made me thus?" To such a soul, in such a state, God never gives an audible reply, God never says, in so many words, this or that. His reply is voiceless and unsyllabled, but it steals in upon the soul insensibly; and after weeks, or months, or years have passed, the soul knows—not that it was ever told, but it knows.

It is a long process. This learning the will of the Creator takes time. In the meanwhile, what is the soul to do? Let it go on in well-doing, nothing else; always "committing the keeping of your soul to Him in well-doing." Frequently when people are suffering they become rash; they are prepared to throw their lives away. The sufferer says, "What is the good of my being good? Why should I endeavor any more to maintain a noble and sweet character? May I not lie down and die? May I not surrender my post? May I not cast myself into the battle, and take the first bayonet that comes to hand, and press the point to my heart?" No, no, keep where you are, doing well, marking time, fulfilling your life-program, allowing every one around you to be the better for your living. "In well-doing"—not only righteous living, but beneficent living; not only doing what is right for your own character and conduct, but blessing others. Go on doing well, and believe that your path, some day, will climb out of the darksome valley to where the sunlight is lying on the hills.

"The keeping of their soul." Let those that suffer according to the will of God commit to Him the keeping of their soul. What then is the soul? A garden? Probably one of those old-fashioned gardens with its high walls! "A garden enclosed in my sister, my spouse, my well-beloved." And if it be a garden enclosed, then the keeping of the walks, the tending of the flowers, and the culture of fruit trees within this mystic enclosure of our nature, should be handed over to the great Husbandman and Gardener, God. Just because He made the soul He can keep it. Just because He elected the soul, and chose its soil, and cast in the seeds, He is able best to cultivate and maintain that which He originally made.

Is the soul a fortress? Yes; it is like old Thebes with its hundred gates, and every gate gives access to the foe, and at all of them together, if the Prince of the power of the air chooses, an assault may be made. Many of us have wide gates open to sin, great tendencies and propensities towards uncleanness, passionate temper and capricious jealousy; but God knows, and when we commit the keeping of our soul to Him, we are committing it to One who best understands it, because He has made it, made it with all its possibilities, with its frailty, exposed to all the insidious recoil of heredity. He best can keep it.

Is the soul a musical instrument? Yes; it is a harp with a thousand strings; it is an organ of many pipes and stops; it is like the Æolian lyre, the chords of which respond to every passing zephyr. The soul is all that, and there is no one that understands the wonderful combinations of the stops, no one that can so delicately lay his hand upon the strings, no one that so perfectly knows the temperature needed to keep this sensitive instrument in harmony, or who can so soon restore it if lost, as the God that made it, the faithful Creator.

Is the soul a jewel? Yes, indeed, a transparent diamond, a flashing ruby, a jasper, a pearl to obtain which Christ sold all that He had, that He might purchase it to be His own. So priceless that the world would not suffice, if put in pawn for it. So inexpressibly rich that it will be worthy evermore to flash in the diadem of eternity. This soul, so fragile, so precious, which the devil is doing all that he can to steal, to purloin, to flaw, we dare not hazard to keep it by our own strength, but we will hand over the keeping of it to Him that made it, and who is a faithful Creator.

Is not this a thought to help us? God is faithful to the blood, God is faithful to the tears, God is faithful to the sacrifice of Christ; but He is also faithful to us whom He loves, as the creatures of His hand, and who stand before Him "accepted in the Beloved." Not only as chosen sons, but as forgiven and restored creatures, we may look to Him as a faithful Creator.

O brothers and sisters, God is faithful! Count on Him, reckon on Him, believe that He will not be a moment too late, nor a moment too soon. Therefore, commit, hand over to Him, the keeping of your soul from sin, from surprise, from distraction, from missing the best—commit the keeping of your soul to Him as a faithful Creator.

London, England.

Some Views on Present Topics.

THOUGHTS ON PREACHING.

BY J. EDWIN JAY.

[The following article is taken from the second number of volume one of the "Friends' Homiletic Journal," a neat little monthly recently started by the Friends of Kansas Yearly Meeting. It is edited by Professor J. Edwin Jay and I. J. Stanton, and is published at Wichita, Kan.]

"Jesus Preached." Matt. 4: 17; 11: 5. "We are in His stead." 2 Cor. 5: 20.

Preaching is the public address of a prophet. The prophet-preacher is one who takes the things of God and shows them unto others by the uses of vocal language. As every member of the body is enhanced in its usefulness by training and practice, so is the preacher's usefulness increased by proper attention to the laws of speech, and by observing the order by which rational beings naturally receive truth most convincingly. To take the things of God and show them unto others surely is of so momentous importance that every honest preacher will be prostrate in mind before the Lord constantly, and moreover will not despise nor shrink from toil in preparation of his mental and bodily powers so as to be most effectual before men.

One thing our Saviour said to His disciples let us take to heart: "Every Scribe who hath been made a disciple to the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man who is an householder, who bringeth forth out of his treasure things new and old." My friend, are you shielded under the garb and name of a "minister"? Are you a householder in the kingdom of heaven? If so, what is your treasure—simply old things, things once good, but now traditional relics like the spinning wheel, the hand sickle or the stage coach? Amid those ancient machines, a now sleeping generation, men's hearts once glowed and beat with the romantic faith of their day; but now, alas! our weakness! if we pick up the old wheel or sickle and think to perpetuate their life by their methods. The only things old in the kingdom of heaven are the eternal truths of the Spirit. The spiritual Rock, Christ Jesus, is old, in the sense of eternity and security; yet is ever like the shining sun in all generations shedding beams of light and warmth to propagate the immortal seeds of His kingdom in every age. Let me ask again, what are the old things to which you cling most—sickles, scythes, antiquated notions, or are they the principles and revelations that have been and are being made to the world through the Eternal Spirit?

Again, we are to bring forth both new and old things. To bring forth only old is to fail in the presence of an ever-challenging age. To bring forth only new is liable to lead into heresy or fanaticism.

We must shine now if we ever shine. The preacher must be inventive like the mechanic. He must be the man to take the things of God and show them to the people who live now; that is, in his generation. These are the new things. We want not a new religion, not a new Bible, not a new Christ, but as preachers we want to be renewed every day by the Holy Spirit of God to speak to the wants of sin-cursed humanity in whatever forms the epidemic appears in this new age. Doctors are sleepless to discover the most scientific way to apply the antidotes of disease. A doctor of fifty years ago who has neglected to keep abreast of his science is undesirable in the emergency of virulent disease. How much more is the preacher of God depreciated if he fail to recognize the necessity of new things to be brought forth in the kingdom of heaven!

Let every preacher answer these personal questions for himself:

What am I doing to interpret the truth of Christ to the great upheaval of the labor class so as to convince them that the Church and Christ are not antagonistic to their needs? What is my honest conviction, through the Spirit, on the question of suppressing the saloon evil, and what is God's message about it—to this generation—that I, as a messenger with tidings from God, would deliver to the people?

Am I reading sufficiently to keep acquainted with the temper, spirit, and advancement of the wide world so as to bring no reproach to the cause of Christ? Do I labor to train my mental powers and my gifts of speech with as much responsibility as I would expect a carpenter to have done with his brain and his hands before attempting to build me an expensive house?

Preaching in God's name is the most responsible thing a man can undertake in this world. Let us take it to heart. Let us not be disheartened or discouraged. Let us not succumb under a feeling of our weakness. Let us not question our calling or our worth in the kingdom. But let us be wide-awake. Let us read more. Let us feel the pulse of this vital age. Let us join our spirits with His in constant, earnest communion. Let us grasp the newest inventions of the hour, if it will garner the larger harvest. While the same sun still shines, while the same canopy of God's heaven over shields us, while the same Christ is at the right hand of the Father, while the same immutable, eternal, ever-blessed God reigns and upholds His glorious designs, let us press the tidings of the kingdom, by the effective means of the hour, by the language of the age, by the sympathy of the moment, so men will listen, believe, and come to God.

The International Lesson.

FIRST QUARTER.

LESSON VI.

SECOND MONTH 7, 1904.

A SABBATH IN CAPERNAUM.

Mark 1: 21-34.

GOLDEN TEXT.—He laid his hands on every one of them and healed them.—Luke 4: 40.

DAILY READINGS.

Second-day, Second mo. 1.—A Sabbath in Capernaum. Mark 1: 21-34.

Third-day, Second mo. 2.—Healing in the Synagogue. Luke 13: 10-17.

Fourth-day, Second, mo. 3.—The word of power. Matt. 8: 23-34.

Fifth-day, Second mo. 4.—Satan cast out. Matt. 12: 14-28.

Sixth-day, Second mo. 5.—Power of Christ's name. Acts 16: 14-18.

Seventh-day, Second mo. 6.—Promised Healer. Isa. 42: 1-9.

First-day, Second mo. 7.—A sympathetic Saviour. Heb. 4: 12-16.

Time.—Probably in the spring of A.D. 28, and following closely the events in the last lesson.

Place.—The city of Capernaum. The exact site of this city has not been determined, though what is known as Tell Hum is by the majority thought to be the place. This is on the northwest shore of the lake.

Collateral Accounts.—Matt. 8: 14-17, for verses 29-34; Luke 4: 31-41, for the whole lesson. John does not treat of the Galilean ministry. These accounts should be read and compared with the lesson.

The account is of a single day in the life of Christ, but there is no reason to think that it was an exceptional one. He must have passed many such. In the last lesson was the promise that the disciples should catch men; in the present they have an illustration of how to do it.

21. "Entered into the synagogue." These were still open to him. It was his custom. (Luke 4: 16.)

22. "Astonished." A strong word, equivalent to our colloquial "struck dumb." "Doctrine." Better as in Revised Version. "Teaching." It was rather the manner and spirit of it. "As one having authority and not as the scribes." The scribes were the recognized religious teachers of the Jews, but their teaching was largely one of precedents. They had made the commandments of little effect through their traditions (Mark 7: 13); they were pendants; they were lifeless teachers of a lifeless religion; they were vague and indirect. "Christ spoke direct from the heart to the heart, appealing for confirmation solely to truth and conscience—the inner witness of the Spirit." His words were, "I say unto you"; "Come unto me"; "I am the bread of life." He was no second-hand transmitter of other men's views, but spoke from personal knowledge and experience of the truth. (John 3: 11; 12: 49.)

23. "Unclean spirit." Exactly what was the demoniacal possession so often mentioned in the New Testament is still a matter of question. The word translated "devils" in the Authorized Version is not the word applied to Satan, but the word "demon," which has been brought bodily into the English language, and is always translated "demon." The distinction is an important one. Whether the possession was permanent or in paroxysms is not clear. What is clear is, that for the time the individual was under an evil influence from which he could not rid himself.

24. The cry was in a loud tone and during the services. So far Christ does not appear to have taken direct notice of the demoniac, but it is evident that His teaching was contrary to the nature and character of the demon.

25. "Rebuked." The same word is used later in speaking to the sea (Mark 4: 39). "Hold thy peace." Christ never seems to have allowed the demons to bear witness to Him. Verse 34, Mark 3: 12; Luke 4: 41. Compare Acts 16: 16-18. The reason probably was that testimony from such a source might give the idea of some association with demons and so would injure the cause of truth and righteousness. Indeed, afterwards the Pharisees accused Him of casting out demons by "Beelzebub, the prince of the demons." Whatever demoniac possession was it would seem to be the exact opposite of possession by the Holy Spirit.

26. Luke says, "When the demon had thrown him down in the midst, he came out of him, having done him no hurt."

27. "They were all amazed." Those in the synagogue. Their amazement was not only that the demon was expelled, but that it was done by a simple command and without the use of exorcism or ceremony. The narrative, as is common with Mark, is very vivid in the original. The Revised Version tries to bring this out. "What is this? a new teaching!" etc. He had already taught with authority. Now, with the same authority, He commands the demons, and, wonderful to relate, they obey Him.

28. "And the report of him went out straightway everywhere into all the region of Galilee round about." Revised Version. Round about Capernaum, not Galilee, as the Authorized Version seems to imply.

29. "Forthwith." "Straightway." Mark used this word very frequently, and the original word is always translated "straightway" in the Revised Version. Simon and Andrew were natives of Bethsaida (John 1: 44), but had moved to Capernaum probably because it was better suited for their business—fishing.

30. "Simon's wife's mother." This mention, as well as others in the New Testament, are not only of historic value, but show that the apostles and other prominent men in the early Church led lives like those around them so far as ordinary outward circumstances are concerned. The fact that Peter was married both when he was called and afterward (1 Cor. 9: 5), though apparently mentioned incidentally, forever does away with the argument that celibacy of the clergy is essential. "Fever." We learn from Josephus that at Capernaum fevers were not uncommon.

31. Taking her by the hand doubtless strengthened her faith. "Ministered unto them." It was a perfect cure.

32. "When the sun was set." That is, after the Sabbath had ended, for it closed at sunset.

33, 34. His compassion led him to perform many miracles.

Christian Endeavor

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Lindley D. Clark, 1429 New York Avenue, Washington, D.C.]

TOPIC FOR SECOND MONTH SEVENTH.

CHRIST FOR THE WORLD AND FOR ME.

John 3: 14-21.

Second-day, Second mo. 1.—Decision before service. Luke 9: 52-76.
Third-day, Second mo. 2.—Immediate decision. Josh. 24: 14-25.
Fourth-day, Second mo. 3.—No divided service. Matt. 6: 24.
Fifth-day, Second mo. 4.—Separation from the world. Neh. 10: 28-31.
Sixth-day, Second mo. 5.—Decision brings love. Deut. 6: 1-5.
Seventh-day, Second mo. 6.—Blessedness of decision. Josh. 1: 1-7.

Fresh from our study of Christ's conflict in the wilderness, His temptations and His victorious resolutions, we must attach an especial importance to the thought of a day of decision and of a right use of that day.

The offer of God's love is so continually before the greater part of our fellow men with whom we come in contact, that there is need of their thoughts being halted, so that they shall no longer merely drift along and defer the making of a definite choice. Those who defer, choose, and neglect through the passing years, may be as fatal a rejection as though it were a formal, positive act. By the longsuffering of God, to-day may be the beginning of eternal life; but we know not what day may be the end of opportunity—the beginning of eternal separation from God, which is death.

God calls to a life that is better than that which the "natural man" has chosen, and at the beginning of that life He has placed the new birth. Many postpone the choice or strive to move by degrees in the direction of a "right" life, because repentance and conversion and regeneration are distasteful words, and the experiences are shunned accordingly.

The mark of those who gave heed to John the Baptist's message as to the immediateness of the kingdom of heaven, was a baptism of repentance; and Christ, coming to inaugurate that kingdom and to reign in it, entered into fellowship with these expectant ones by the same gateway as the most sinful, that thus He might fulfill all righteousness. The man who would like to be saved if he could spare his pride and avoid conforming with a plan which he did not devise has need to know of his Saviour's obedience and to learn of Him.

Decision Day may have a meaning for the saved as well, and this too may be enforced by a view of the same incident in Jesus' life. As a lad, He must be about His Father's business, but the forty days were a time of deep meditation and profound struggle and momentous resolve. To each of us is offered renewed opportunity and to each comes new discipline and new experiences, and out of these may spring a larger purpose in life, a new patience under God's guidance, and a renewed loyalty to all His requirements.

If it means this to us, the day will be of fuller meaning also to the unsaved, for a testimony should relate to growth and progress no less than to the beginning of life; and it is in large measure through our testimony, lived and spoken, that God purposes to reach and save the world.

Missionary Department.

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Herman Newman, 718 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.]

WORD FROM CHINA.

Luh Hoh, Twelfth month, 1903.

When one has more calls upon his time than he can conveniently attend to, it is only natural that he should turn first to those nearest at hand. In this fight of faith in which we are engaged in China, however, we feel that we ought to pause for an hour to appeal to our friends in the homeland for more prayer, and meanwhile tell you how wonderfully God is blessing your work here.

These are such precious days of opportunity. Although we are all now in the best of health, and are looking forward toward years of blessed service in God's will, still each day as it passes is filled with such wonderful opportunities to reach immortal souls with the gospel, that our hearts yearn with burning desire for more physical strength, more spiritual power, more loving hands or else a larger force of workers.

A Christian hospital in China finds no trouble in taking the part of the "good Samaritan," but our force is too meager to look after the poor disease-stricken individual when he returns to his home. They are so ignorant of love, that often after we have saved a life with tenderest attention, they return to their homes in the deepest quandary as to why we should treat them thus. In some cases there is doubtless a suspicion that our loving sympathy is prompted by some mercenary or sinister motive. We need more reapers who shall be able to follow up these cases and cause them to know the fountain spring of love.

Many of our home friends may be interested to know that we have had a new arrival in our home of a son, a bonnie lad of nine weeks, who promises to bring a deal of sunshine into our lives, as well as to the Chinese about us. Their hearts seem often touched at the sight of the bright, sweet faces of foreign children.

The day schools in the charge of Margaret Holmes are in admirable condition, an enviable work if such an expression is permissible to a Christian. There is a deep Christian sentiment among the boys. Such lads trained by spiritually-minded, conscientious teachers all over China will have more effect upon the future outlook of this country than all the threatnings of Russia or the political manœuverings of the powers. Whoever rules China at Peking, or however the spheres of influence of the foreign nations may change, whatever China may lose in men or money by war, the Chinese still remain, 400,000,000 souls, nearly one-third of the human race. Her regeneration lies in the coming generations, and Christianity alone can vitalize.

Our hospital of twenty-six beds is quite too small and too poorly equipped to do the best work. A few days since we did our first amputation at Luh Hoh. It seems incredible to the Chinese that a man could have his leg taken off at the thigh, and not only live, but almost immediately recover. The case was a most favorable one in that he was a sincere Christian and God has graciously heard our prayer and added His blessing.

GEO. F. DE VOL, M.D.

OUR FIRST GRAVE IN CUBA.

Our little baby, Charles Clarence, fell sick about the last of the year, and in spite of all that two good doctors could do he passed away, First month 9th, at 10.45 a.m., and we had to bury him at 5 o'clock the same day.

We are resigned to the will of our Father, but a sorrow unknown before has entered our lives. Although he was with us only four weeks, yet he had created for himself a place in the heart and home which is now sadly vacant. We laid him away in the city cemetery, and we will buy the lot, as thus we will avoid his being taken up to make room for others in a few years, as is the custom here. Zenas Martin conducted the services, and Santos Trevino interpreted, as there were several, both Americans and Cubans, present. The latter seemed to be impressed with the services.

It seems that God has already used this affliction to His glory. It has given us a better knowledge and insight into the hearts of this dear people. During the ten days of sickness they were kind and thoughtful in helping about the work, and in caring for the baby, though one of us stayed by him night and day. Especially two young women, members, helped with the cooking, washed for the baby, etc., doing it all without being told and freely. The sympathy of all for us seems very sincere, and is truly helpful to us. We have become better acquainted with several families, and we pray God may use our suffering for His glory. Yours in Christian fellowship,

CHARLES AND ORPHA HAWORTH.

Holguin, Cuba.

Correspondence.

TO THE AMERICAN FRIEND:

We desire to call the attention of the meetings of Indiana Yearly Meeting to minute 55, page 105 of the minutes of our late yearly meeting, setting apart the first Sabbath in the Second month as the time to take a collection for the use of the Evangelistic and Church Extension Board of the Five Years' Meeting. We, therefore, urge all meetings to be prompt to comply with said minute, and send all money collected to John T. Headley, Pecksburg, Ind.

Joseph O. Binford, chairman; Emma Hedges, secretary, Indiana Yearly Meeting.

Things of Interest Among Ourselves.

HARRIET GREEN MEMORIAL FUND.

The following subscriptions have been received by J. Elwood Cox for the Harriet Green Memorial Fund:

A. and R. White	$2.00
Thomas Newlin, Guilford College	50.00
Moses Hammond	1.00
From Greensboro Monthly Meeting the following:
Callie S. Cude	2.00
Mary B. Yates	2.00
Walter Blair	2.00
J. Edgar Williams	2.00
Jesse Copeland	2.00
David White	4.00
J. Addison Hodgkin	4.00
R. L. Hollowell	2.00
M. C. Henley	2.00
Roe. Petty Smith	2.00
S. A. Hodgkin and wife	4.00
Charles Mendenhall	2.00
J. E. and Mary E. Cartland	4.00
J. Van Lindley and family	14.00
J. M. Pegram	2.00
	$103.00

Amounts received by THE AMERICAN FRIEND since last report:

Two Friends of Raysville, Ind.,	$10.00
A Friend, Loveland, Col.	6.00
Lydia P. Hance	2.00
Sarah Evans	2.00
On hand	86.00

$106.00

Forwarded to J. Elwood Cox

50.00

Balance on hand

$56.00

On First-day, the 17th inst., Allen Jay preached to a full house at the morning service, and again at the evening service at Guilford College.

Our friends, George and L. Ella Hartley, are booked to sail from New York on the 8th of Third month for the World's Sunday School Convention, to be held in Jerusalem.

Ellwood O. Ellis is assisting Morton C. Pearson in a series of meetings at Indianapolis. Meetings began the 17th inst. The indications point to a very precious and helpful time.

William Pilot, of Penn College, gave an able address on temperance at Cherokee, O. T., the 30th ult. In his forcible way he set before the people the principles of prohibition, closing with a short sketch of his early life.

James W. Pearce, from Dublin, Ind., conducted a revival at Pleasant View and New Driftwood, Ind., recently. There were several conversions and renewals, and believers were strengthened.

We have good reports from A. Edward Kelsey, who is in the Eli and Sibyl Jones Mission at Ramallah, Palestine. He says: "I find that distance from home increases one's appreciation for the traveling FRIEND, which comes from Philadelphia every week."

W. H. Pilot, of Marshalltown, Iowa, attended the Sabbath morning meeting at Sterling, Kansas, on the 3d inst.; also one at three in the afternoon of the same day. He had acceptable service in each of these meetings.

Susie Fox has been located in the meeting at Adrian, Mo., since Tenth month. The field was needy, but the Lord is prospering the work. A revival meeting was recently held, in which more than a score were seekers. Eighteen have united with the meeting, and a good Christian Endeavor has been organized.

Prof. Elbert Russell, of Earlham, preached in the meeting at Kokomo, Ind., on First-day, the 17th inst. The morning theme was "The Temptation of Jesus;" the evening, "Christlikeness, Childlikeness." The day previous Prof. Russell addressed a meeting of the workers of Kokomo Quarterly Meeting in semi-annual conference at Greentown.

Jesse W. Wilmore, who has been laboring in California the past year and a half, has returned to Kansas, and is making his home at 236 Fern Avenue, Wichita, Kansas. He is now in evangelistic services in Harmony Monthly Meeting, Pawnee County, O. T., and expects to spend most of the winter in this work in Stella Quarterly Meeting, Oklahoma.

President Sharpless visited Wilmington College, Ohio, the 14th inst., and gave an able address on "The Small Colleges" to an appreciative audience in the evening. Seven members of the meeting at Wilmington, Ohio, have engaged passage with the "International Sabbath School" party that leaves New York for the Holy Land early in Third month.

R. Stevenson Burnett, of the Shawnee Mission, Okla., held a series of meetings a few miles southeast of Tecumseh, Okla., where a few Friends live. Much good was done in arousing the latent spirit in those from various denominations who claim to be Christians, so that they now keep up a Sabbath School and weekly meeting for worship. R. S. Burnett now goes there once a month.

J. Edward and Laura Hartsuck, of Ohio, have settled in Tecumseh, Okla. They will have charge of the work there. They come well recommended by their friends in the East, but their own personalities commend them above the recommendations of their friends. They are young, and consequently of limited experience, except that they show themselves to be filled with the Holy Spirit.

Special meetings are in progress at Old Wabash Meeting, Ind. Tennyson Lewis conducted the meetings until the Sixth-day of the first week, when Thomas E. Williams, of Amboy, came to assist. Good results are already in evidence, and the prospects are very flattering. The gospel messages are listened to with great interest, some being converted and many turning to the Lord for a deepening in spiritual life.

The meeting at West River, a place three miles west of Economy, Ind., has been much revived through the efforts of Charles D. W. Hiatt, of Fairmount, Ind. Something over a year ago the meeting, which had been laid down, was reorganized. Last winter there were good services, and the meeting continued to grow in number and interest during the summer without a local minister. Visiting ministers often had services in the meeting. The revival effort just closed resulted in several taking definite steps in their religious life. Nine or ten will unite with Friends.

Fred. T. Coppock, of Iowa, closed a series of nine days' meetings at Sterling, Kansas, on Sixth-day evening, the 15th inst., in which the meeting was greatly helped by his earnest and practical presentation of the truth. Seven made profession during the meetings, and four united with Friends.

A series of meetings at Anderson, Ind., lasting six and a half weeks, closed recently. The results were encouraging. Twenty-seven united with the meeting. Eli Parker, of Iowa, was present about two weeks. This is a very aggressive meeting. It has a strong Christian Endeavor, and the Sabbath School averages about 90. The mission is also in a flourishing condition. The attendance at Sabbath School there is about 65.

A very interesting series of meetings closed at Walnut Grove, Thorntown Quarterly Meeting, Ind., on the 10th inst. During these meetings J. F. and Emma Randolph made an earnest effort for the salvation of souls and the building up of the Church. Deep conviction seemed to rest on the meetings from the first, and some were saved. Others may be brought into the kingdom.

The Friends of Wilmington, Ohio, had a special praise service and rededication on the 17th instant following the payment of a $3,000 debt on their meeting house. Josephus Hoskins, Yearly Meeting Superintendent of Evangelistic Work, assisted Robert E. Pretlow, the local minister, in the service. There has been an observable increase of interest in both meeting and Sabbath School recently. Forty-two persons have been received into membership within the past four months. The congregation has contributed to different lines of religious work a total of about $6,000 during the year. President Isaac Sharpless attended and had very acceptable service in the mid-week meeting on the 14th, and lectured at Wilmington College in the evening of the same day.

George N. and L. Ella Hartley are now giving a series of historical lessons to the Indian children of the Shawnee missions, illustrating them with drawings on the blackboard. It is remarkable how well they remember a sign when not a word is written, though the signs and illustrations are certainly not as intelligible as the hieroglyphics of Egypt. The lessons begin with the creation of man, and follow on down the line of the great chiefs of the antediluvian days and forward. A brief review is made each week by pointing to the various marks, and letting the children tell what they represent. They rarely make a mistake. They take great interest in it. Lessons of Christian experience, etc., are interwoven. Many of the children claim to be Christians.

The Central Committee of the Prohibition Movement of Oklahoma and Indian Territories selected the 10th of First month as Temperance Sabbath for Oklahoma, requesting the ministers and congregations to preach temperance sermons or hold appropriate exercises, and take a collection for the work. The congregation from the M. E. Church met in union services with the Friends at Cherokee, Okla., and John E. Snively, local minister for Cherokee Meeting, spoke on the needs of the movement, and very forcibly set before the congregation the responsibility of the Church in this work. The Friends' meeting at Cherokee was the first in the territory to respond to a collection for this work, and now have raised double their assessment for the work.

David Tatum, the veteran temperance lecturer, is holding meetings in the State of Texas this winter. He writes concerning the work: "There is a growing interest in the cause of temperance and prohibition, and I have had many highly favored meetings blessed of the Lord. I find that the cause has advanced very greatly since I was laboring in this State some six years ago. More than two-thirds of the counties are now free from the licensed traffic and open saloon, and a strong effort is being made in some places toward State prohibition of the liquor traffic. The money that would have been spent in the saloon for drink now goes into the store for the comforts of life; improvements are being made in many towns, as the result of an increase of sobriety and industry, and I am informed that church attendance is very much better than heretofore."

J. Robert Parker, a minister with credentials from High Point Monthly Meeting, N. C., has been used of the Lord in a tour of the meetings of Southern Quarterly Meeting, beginning at Marlboro Monthly Meeting on Seventh-day, the 2d inst. He attended all the First-day services. In like manner, by appointment, he visited ten places of worship, which is all, except one, and this by mistake was not previously announced. Two or more services were held at each place, save one. The attendance was good at all the places, and great liberty was enjoyed in preaching the gospel. Isaac H. Stanley, a member of Centre Monthly Meeting, accompanied Robert Parker in this service. J. Robert Parker expects to join Thomas E. Anderson in a series of meetings at Chatham in Western Quarterly Meeting, in the near future. He also has a minute for service in Contentnea Quarterly Meeting.

The peace, book and tract department of Indianapolis Monthly Meeting has undertaken some very practical work. They regularly supply four of the leading charitable institutions of the city with literature, including many of the standard magazines and church papers, bringing to each institution a fresh supply each month. They have also arranged for a lecture course of four numbers on the general subject of peace. The lecturers chosen are Elbert Russell, of Earlham College; Benjamin Trueblood, of Boston; Addison Harris, of Indianapolis, and Prof. Dennis, of the University of Illinois. These speakers will present various phases of this great subject. Prof. Russell will lecture First-day evening, First month 31st, on "Peace as Related to the Christian Character." Benjamin Trueblood will lecture Second-day evening, Second month 8th, and will give a review of the progress of peace and arbitration among the nations. These lectures are all free to the public, and Friends living near Indianapolis should avail themselves of this rare opportunity.

BORN.

ANDREWS.—At Cedral, S. L. P., Mexico, Twelfth month 18th, 1903, to Dr. B. F. and Bertha H. Andrews, a daughter, Frances Esther.

DIED.

ARNOLD.—At her home in Macedon Center, N. Y., Twelfth month 21st, 1903, Rachel J. Arnold, aged 70 years. She was an elder of Farmington Monthly Meeting, and much interested in missionary work, often denying herself the comforts of life to contribute to the missions.

BAKER.—At her home in Macedon, N. Y., First month 3d, 1904, Elizabeth Baker, wife of the late John Baker, aged 95 years. She was born in Castleton, England, but came to this country and settled in Macedon in the autumn of 1834. Since then she has been a consistent member of Farmington Monthly Meeting, and for many years an elder.

GRIFFIN.—Died, at her home, 891 Amsterdam Avenue, New York city, First month 2d, 1904, Elizabeth Wanzer Griffin, widow of the late Joseph Griffin, in the 91st year of her age. She was a member of New York Monthly Meeting.

HADLEY.—Died, at his home near Glen Elder, Kansas, First month 11th, 1904, Noah Hadley, aged over 70 years. He was a lifelong member of Friends, was one among the early pioneers in the Friends' settlement near Glen Elder, having moved there from Iowa in 1876, and was a charter member of Glen Elder Monthly Meeting.

HAWORTH.—At the mission residence, Holguin, Cuba, First month 9th, 1904, Clarence Charles, infant son of Charles C. and Orpha R. Haworth. His death is the first among the missionaries in Cuba.

HOCKETT.—At her home, in Randolph County, N. C., where she had spent the fifty-one years of her married life, Twelfth month 1st, 1903, Rachel, wife of H. M. Hockett, in the 74th year of her age. She was a member of Center Monthly Meeting of Friends, and filled the station of elder for many years. With great kindness of heart she was ever ready to serve for those about her. The poor, the afflicted, the homeless found in her a true friend.

VARNEY.—At her residence, 317 West One-hundred-and-fourteenth Street, New York city, Twelfth month 11th, 1903, Anna C., widow of Charles C. Varney, late of Providence, R. I.

WARING.—At her home in Erie, Kan., Eleventh month 14th, 1903, Sarah, wife of John Waring, in her 79th year. She became a Friend by conviction and lived a devoted Christian life.

WHITE.—At her home, in Fountain City, Ind., Angelina Hough White, wife of David F. White, aged 62 years. She was the daughter of Hiram and Anna Hough, and granddaughter of Jeremiah Hubbard. A lifelong member of Friends she was much interested in the work of the Church. She was actively engaged in temperance and missionary work, having filled responsible positions in both fields.

WOOD.—At her late residence, 146 East Forty-fifth Street, New York city, Louisa M. Wood, daughter of the late John and Sarah M. Wood, in the 86th year of her age.

Events and Comments.

Mexico has reformed the Vatican that diplomatic relations between the republic and the Holy See may not be re-established. President Diaz as stoutly as ever holds out against Rome's plea. Having been burned once in the fire, the republic does not care for a second experience.

Latest reports from Paris indicate that the Combes Ministry is to raise the issue of the unlimited right of the State to nominate bishops without an understanding with the Pope. If fought out to its logical finish this means a severance of the Concordat, and of the union of Church and State.

Panic is spreading through England as a result of the threatened great shortage in our cotton crop. London newspapers are vividly reminded of the collapse of Lancashire's industries when "cotton

QUIT COFFEE

Says the Great German Specialist.

It disappoints some people to be told that coffee causes the disease. But it is best to look squarely at facts, and set the face towards health, for that's more fun than anything else anyhow. A Cincinnati man consulted a Berlin physician on nervous diseases, and says:

"Four years ago I was an habitual coffee drinker, having used it for 25 years, and being naturally of a nervous temperament I became almost a nervous wreck, greatly suffering from insomnia, almost constantly constipated and weighing only 128 pounds.

"I consulted physicians and took medicine all the time, but had no relief. About three years and a half ago I went abroad, and while in Berlin heard frequently of a great physician, Prof. Mendel, an authority on nervous trouble, so I resolved to consult him.

"Prof. Mendel surprised me very much by asking at once if I was a coffee drinker, and on my telling him I used it two or three times a day, he said, 'It is poison.' After carefully examining me he told me there was nothing the matter with me whatever, but what could be entirely cured in 30 days by letting coffee and other stimulants alone and dieting.

"I had a hard time following his advice. I did not know what to do until I came home and told my wife, who got some Postum. We tried it, but at first did not like it; then we went over the directions on the package together, and found we had not boiled it long enough. That was the beginning of the end of my trouble, for the Postum was delicious after that, and I drank it regularly, and it helped from the start.

"In a very short time I began to feel much better, and in the last three years I haven't been absent from business one hour on account of ill health, for my health is fine now. I have a good appetite, sleep well, and weigh 175 pounds." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Any nervous person who drinks coffee will feel better from ten days' use of Postum in place of coffee. Trial easily proves this. There's a reason.

Look in each package for a copy of the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

was king" in the days of the American Civil War. A cotton crisis, that must ramify in all directions, is gloomily anticipated.

A new complication in the Panama Canal question arises in Chicago, where the International Brotherhood of Steam Shovel and Dredge Engineers and Crane-men of America met last week. These representatives of labor have adopted a new scale of wages for all North and Central American countries, including Panama, and the Panama Canal rate they have increased $50 a month. They also ask Congress to favor organized labor in the construction of the canal.

Under the presidency of Duke Ernst Guenther, of Schleswig-Holstein, Emperor William's brother-in-law, the Middle European Economic Society was formally founded at Berlin on the 22d instant. It aims to procure the establishment of a middle European economic bond, on the lines proclaimed by Count Goluchowski, the Austro-Hungarian Minister of Foreign Affairs. The president declared that the society was formed to defend Germany from an overflow of foreign goods, to strengthen German capacity in the markets of the world, and, above all, to meet American competition.

The latest reports to the American Board at Boston from the relief centers in Macedonia show that there are now 100,000 persons who are homeless and without means of support for the winter. Of this number between 52,000 and 53,000 are in Monastir vilayet. The Turkish Government is affording some relief and funds are coming from America and England. Nine relief centers have been opened in the vilayet, but at the present time the work is almost exclusively doling out flour in small quantities to those who are destitute. There is fear on the part of those upon the ground that unless some decisive steps are taken during the winter there will be another political outbreak in the spring.

A fabric recently invented in France is "warm" in a positive sense, since it contains, woven in with the wool or silk of which it is composed, a fine tissue of metallic threads which form a conducting electrical system, and may be kept at an equable temperature by the passage of a current. The idea of utilizing in a fabric the heat given out by conducting electric filaments is not new in itself, since we already have metallic tissues to be used as rheostats, and even asbestos cloth, for heating purposes; but these fabrics are especially for high temperatures, and have a limited use, besides which they are only slightly flexible and lack the suppleness of real cloth. The system devised by M. Canielle Herrgott is adapted especially for moderate temperatures; his electric thermophile is intended to be used in connection with fabrics of all kinds—cotton, linen, wool, or silk, and does not alter their ordinary appearance or their usual flexibility.

The Emerson Union of Boston should have widespread support in its efforts to bring about a less barbarous method of celebrating the "Fourth of July." It asks from the Legislature, in a petition, a law prohibiting the issue of special licenses for the sale of explosives; and it has prepared a form of petition to local city governments to encourage forms of celebration which would be more in har-

IT IS A MATTER OF HEALTH

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

mony with civilized society. The petition which will be circulated in Boston, addressed to the city government, says: "Instead of burning money, we would use it for music, and helpful aids to innocent enjoyment; instead of pistols, fire-crackers and torpedoes, which torture the sick, injure many and brutally torment thousands of creatures, dumb as well as human, we would have public excursions to the bay and to the country, for the children and their guardians. We would have our Symphony and Mechanics Halls, and other large auditoriums, open on that day, for three grand public organ concerts, and also have small orchestras and bands play in certain parts of the city, morning, noon and at sundown." All of which is asked "as making for peace and for a nobler civilization."

Japan again has stated her minimum of demand beyond which she cannot and will not recede, and Russia is considering, what in the nature of the case, must be a prompt and final reply. While Russians are apathetic, the temper of the Japanese is not such as to permit dallying with the matter longer, and Russia at last seems to recognize it, hence reports from St. Petersburg and Berlin indicating that Russia is prepared to recede on certain matters. This is coincident with an entire change of tone on the part of the Russian press. China's stiffening of her backbone and her granting trade concessions to the United States and Japan in Manchuria and China, and this against Russia's protest, have not been without effect at St. Petersburg. Throughout Europe and Asia this is interpreted as meaning that Russia has both the United States and Great Britain to thank for a move on the board of strategy which strengthens Japan's position much, and makes her in effect the champion of Occidental policy as over against that of Russia. If true, it is a tremendously significant fact in the history of Asia. Affairs in Korea seem to be in a perilous state, with foreigners in serious danger.

GEORGE FOX: An Autobiography

A Story of His Life, and a Statement of His Message

By RUFUS M. JONES

The Popular Edition of this important work will be ready for delivery within a few days. It contains all the reading matter given in the two-volume edition. It is printed in large, clear type, making it easy reading for persons of all ages. It is conveniently bound in one volume suitable for a library. PRICE, Postpaid, $1.50.

THIS BOOK (postpaid), with ONE NEW Subscription. Both for $2.00

THIS BOOK (postpaid), with a RENEWAL Subscription. Both for $2.50

THE AMERICAN FRIEND, 718 Arch Street, Phila., Pa.

FIFTY-SIXTH ANNUAL STATEMENT

of the
PENN MUTUAL LIFE

Insurance Company of Philadelphia.

Net Assets, Jan. 1, 1903,
at market value$52,060,247.19

RECEIPTS DURING THE YEAR.

For Premiums and Annuities$12,050,665.23
For Interest, etc. 2,790,053.27

14,840,718.50

$66,900,965.69

DISBURSEMENTS.

Claims by Death $2,768,424.00
Matured Endowments and Annuities 1,058,299.79
Surrender Values 882,464.02
*Premium Abatements ... 785,330.89

Total Paid Policy-holders $5,494,518.70

Added to Reserve $5,598,643.00

Pennsylvania, and other State taxes $351,382.87

Salaries, Medical Fees, Office and Legal Expenses . 464,433.56

Commissions to Agents and Rents 1,538,037.19

Agency and other Expenses 117,947.21

Advertising, Printing and Supplies 74,430.87

Office Furniture, Maintenance of Properties, etc. 128,838.68

$8,169,589.08

Net Assets, Jan. 1, 1904 ..$58,731,376.61

* In addition to the above abatements the Company allotted to deferred dividend policies $535,755.18, making the total apportionment of surplus during 1903 $1,321,086.07.

ASSETS.

City Loans, Railroad and other Bonds, Bank and other Stocks$20,418,955.09
Mortgages and Ground rents (1st Liens) 22,727,551.43
Premium Notes, secured by Policies, etc. 1,263,923.32
Loans on Collateral, Policy Loans, etc. 10,251,429.17
Home Office, Boston Office and other Real Estate .. 3,078,240.71
Cash in Banks, Trust Companies, and on hand 991,276.89

Net Ledger Assets$58,731,376.61

Net Deferred and Unreported Premiums 1,636,613.42

Interest Due and Accrued. 546,897.99

Market Value of Stocks and Bonds over cost 201,347.46

Gross Assets, Jan. 1, 1904.$61,116,235.48

LIABILITIES.

Death Claims reported, but awaiting proof $317,306.25

Reserve at 3, 3½, and 4 per cent. to Reinsure Risks.. 53,210,666.00

Surplus on Unreported Policies, etc. 164,795.20

Surplus Accumulated upon Special Forms of Policies 3,774,354.26

Surplus for all other Contingencies 3,649,113.77

Total Surplus $7,423,468.03

Gross Assets, as above$61,116,235.48

New Business of the Year; 29,548 Policies for$69,728,754.00

Insurance Outstanding, December 31, 1903, 129,317 Policies for$308,786,092.00

HARRY F. WEST, President.

GEORGE K. JOHNSON, Vice-President.

LINCOLN K. PASSMORE, 2d Vice-Pres.

WM. H. KINGSLEY, Sec. and Treas.

JESSE J. BARKER, Actuary.

MY LIFE'S PURPOSE.

I live for those who love me,
For those who know me true,
For the Heaven that smiles above me,
And awaits my spirit too;
For all human ties that bind me,
For the task my God assigned me,
For the hopes not left behind me,
And the good that I can do.

I live to learn their story
Who suffered for my sake;
To emulate this glory,
And follow in their wake.
Bards, martyrs, patriots, sages,
The noble of all ages,
Whose deeds crown history's pages,
And time's great volume make.

I live to hail the season,
By gifted minds foretold;
When man shall live by reason
And not alone for gold.
When man to man united,
And every wrong thing righted,
The whole world shall be lighted,
As Eden was of old.

I live for those who love me,
With all that is divine,
To feel that there is union
'Twixt Nature's heart and mine.
To profit by affliction,
Reap truth from fields of fiction,
Grow wiser from conviction,
Fulfilling God's design.

I live for those who love me,
For those who knew me true,
For the Heaven that smiles above me,
And awaits my spirit too.
For the wrongs that need resistance,
For the right that needs assistance,
For the future in the distance,
And the good that I can do.

"He only is able to climb up who has learned to lie down."

One of the most curious provisions in the late Herbert Spencer's will was that, one providing for the circulation of his pamphlet against the metric system among members of Parliament whenever that body appears in danger of passing legislation adopting the decimal scheme for weights and measures. Spencer was no more in favor of pounds, quarts, inches, shillings and pence than were the advocates of the metric system. He wanted introduced the duodecimal system, which is based on twelves rather than tens, and was so convinced that he provided for the continuation of the fight after his death.

The opinion handed down by the Superior Court, in session in Scranton, Pa., one day last week, in which it is ruled that telephone companies do not possess the right of eminent domain to erect poles and string wires along the highways of the countryside without the consent of abutting landowners, decides the point for the first time by an Appellate Court of Pennsylvania, and settles a question of much importance to the companies and the public. The court holds that the owner of a farm through which a public road has been laid out under the right of eminent domain "is as much the owner of the land occupied by the highway after it has been laid out and opened as before," and that no additional servitude, such as the planting of telephone poles, can be imposed without the consent of the owner and without just compensation.

DOCTOR FED HIMSELF.

Found the Food That Saved His Life.

A good old family physician with a life-time experience in saving people finally found himself sick unto death.

Medicines failed, and—but let him tell his own story. "For the first time in my life of 61 years I am impelled to publicly testify to the value of a largely-advertised article, and I certainly would not pen these lines except that, what seems to me a direct act of Providence, saved my life, and I am impressed that it is a bounden duty to make it known.

"For three years I kept failing with stomach and liver disorders until I was reduced 70 pounds from my normal weight. When I got too low to treat myself, three of my associate physicians advised me to put my house in order, for I would be quickly going the way of all mankind. Just about that time I was put on a diet of Grape-Nuts predigested food. Curiously enough it quickly began to build me up, appetite returned, and in 15 days I gained six pounds. That started my return to health, and really saved my life.

"A physician is naturally prejudiced against writing such a letter, but in this case I am willing to declare it from the housetops that the multiplied thousands who are now suffering as I did can find relief and health as easily and promptly by Grape-Nuts. If they only knew what to do. Sincerely and fraternally yours." Name of this prominent physician furnished by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Look in each package for a copy of the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

Pocket Almanac for 1904

CONTAINING DATES OF HOLDING

THE YEARLY MEETINGS ROUND THE WORLD.

ALSO THE

QUARTERLY MEETINGS IN THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA, STATISTICS, ETC.

Price, Five Cents.

12 Copies, Fifty Cents.

Postage Stamps Received.

FRIENDS' BOOK AND TRACT COMMITTEE, 51 Fifth Ave., NEW YORK

WHOSE PRAYERS WERE ANSWERED?

I remember once upon a time, when I was a boy in Illinois, there was a long, dry summer, when it seemed as though the world would be burned up. The Christian people assembled in their churches and prayed one whole day for rain.

Prayed for rain! One day!

For cloudless weeks the panting trees of the forest had lifted their curled and wilted leaves day after day praying for rain in the face of the blazing sun. For weeks the brown pastures, crisped to the very roots, had cried and cried for rain. For weeks the drooping corn-blades hanging about the stalks, limp and withered, had prayed for rain. The dry bed of the little brook that crossed our farm was one long prayer. The very cattle that with the dumb and touching patience of the brutes came down every day to the caked bed of the dry pond, stood where the bank used to be, and prayed for the pond.

Pray for rain one day! God's world of meadow and hill and brook and field and woods were praying all the time.

And one night it rained. Soft as a benediction the drops of blessing pattered on the corn-blades, and on the brown pastures; you could hear the rising wind sigh, as though it was the parched earth drawing a long breath of relief. All night long and all next day and the next night it rained.

Did we assemble in our churches and spend another whole day in thanksgiving?

We did not. Our pastors thanked God for the rain the following Sunday morning a few days later.

But, O, the gratitude of the cornfields and the pastures and the woods! Lifting their leaves and the long green blades to heaven! And the brook singing all day long—such an anthem of joy and gratitude—whispering a soft little solo through the weeds, and breaking out into such a jubilant chorus when a little runway of rocks gave chance for the cascade to lift up its voice. What a joyous, glad, exultant world it was! And the cattle, standing knee-deep in the pond as though they would say, "We knew it would fill up again"; drinking and bending their heads to drink again, and then once more drinking as though they would drain the pond, and then lifting their heads with such a long sigh of fulness and contentment—O, how glad, and how grateful they were!

And we men said, "Well, our prayers brought rain." Every man who had grumbled about the long drought, every man who had murmured against God and Wives sometimes object to life insurance.

Widows never do; they know its value. Get particulars free. No importunity.

PENN MUTUAL LIFE

921-3-5 Chestnut Street.

found fault with his weather for two months, and then offered one prayer in that all-day meeting, thought he had brought the rain.

Whose prayers do you suppose God answered?

"Your heavenly Father knoweth ye have need of these things."—Robert J. Burdette, in "The Baptist Commonwealth."

He who serves God at the present moment, though it be in a very small thing, such as the hewing of wood, or the drawing of water, does in reality glorify Him more than another who is prospectively athirst and anxious for things of much greater consequence, but at the same time neglects or imperfectly performs present duties.—T. C. Upham.

Somebody asked Spurgeon if a man could be a Christian and belong to a brass band. "Yes, I think he might," Spurgeon replied, "but he would make it very difficult for his next-door neighbor to be one."

FLORIDA AND THE CAROLINAS— WINTER RESORTS.

Palm Beach, Miami, Daytona, Tampa, Jacksonville, Camden, Southern Pines, Pinehurst are quickly and most conveniently reached via the Seaboard Air Line. Three daily trains in each direction, including the Seaboard Florida Limited, the handsomest and quickest train in the Florida service. Tourist tickets on sale daily, with stop-over privileges. For description, booklets and information, address W. E. Conklyn, General Agent, 1411 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

PENN MUTUAL'S STATEMENT AN INDEX OF PROSPERITY.

There have been indications from time to time that the country was on the eve of a financial panic, and there seemed to be interests endeavoring to bring about this state of affairs. One of the best correctives of the uncomfortable feeling which has undoubtedly prevailed, and without substantial reason, has been the publication recently of the annual reports of several of the large life insurance companies, all of which are apparently in a very prosperous condition.

The appearance of the fifty-sixth annual statement of The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company encouraged a reporter to interview President Harry F. West, who enjoys the reputation of being a conservative man, never given to effusiveness.

President West was found at his desk, and, being interrogated on the financial situation, said that the tone was much better than it had been and he saw no reason for any discouragement. On the contrary, he regarded conditions as hopeful and reassuring.

Asked about the growth of life insurance in 1903, President West said: "Judging from the returns so far published, 1903 eclipsed all other years in the total volume of new insurance effected and the aggregate insurance in force. It is a temperate statement when I say that probably new insurances to the amount of a billion dollars were effected. All the companies shared in this, and all classes of people availed themselves of its protection. You must understand there are many varieties of insurance, adapted to almost every condition and to supply every real need—costly plans for the wealthy, temporary and cheaper plans for those of limited means, but all scientifically based, reliable, and worth their cost."

"What progress did you make last year?"

"From the statements now before me I am enabled to say that we made gains all along the line. We increased our total premium income to $12,050,665, which is a gain of $1,122,052; our net interest and rent income increased $278,094, and the aggregate income from all sources reached $14,840,718, which is a gain of $1,400,150. We paid for death losses, endowments, and annuities, $3,826,723; we allowed in dividends to policyholders, thus reducing the cost of their insurance or adding to its amount, $1,321,086. These and other payments to policyholders were $555,497 in excess of the preceding year. Our gross assets now reach $61,116,235, against which we hold a reserve of $53,210,666. All other liabilities amount to $482,101, and the sum of these deducted from assets leaves a general surplus of $7,423,468. We began the year with $276,000,000 of insurance in force, and we finished it with 129,317 policies, insuring $308,786,092."

"How was your mortality during 1903?"

"Very favorable. With our volume of business in force the tables indicated that we should incur death losses amounting to $4,273,801. The actual death losses incurred by us were $2,792,131, or, as near as may be, sixty-five per cent. of the tabular. The average of the company for a long series of years has been only about seventy-two per cent. of those anticipated; and the insured have had the benefit of this favorable mortality by way of dividends allowed in reduction of premiums or to accumulate. Very considerable gains of surplus from this source have been made. In seven years—1896 to 1902 inclusive—we saved over $4,827,000 to our policyholders, and the saving last year was $1,481,670. A great deal of weight is attached by us to careful medical selection. That no man should be admitted to a mutual organization unless there is a strong probability that he will live out the average life of men of his years I take to be a correct principle of management. There would scarcely be any limit to the amount of life insurance which could be written if the companies were open to accept at regular rates persons who through peculiar occupation, ill health, heredity, etc., were unlikely to attain the expectation of life. Our Medical Department is to be credited largely with the favorable results shown, as also are our agents, who as intelligent and honorable men rarely recommend doubtful or undesirable risks.

"What about investments?"

"With the gradual decline in interest that has occurred within the last ten years there is an increasing difficulty in obtaining reliable securities in which to invest. One of the best tests of the value of a security is the promptness with which interest is paid. Our past due interest for the year on mortgages was less than one-fifty-fifth of 1 per cent., and our interest income as a whole was satisfactory, as we managed to earn and collect more than $415,601 in excess of the sum necessary to improve our reserve. The officers and the Finance Committee direct their attention to the obtaining only of the best grade of securities, and we buy and sell on the theory that a financial institution like ours should have only those classes of investments that are of undoubted stability. It is with some confidence that we refer to our list of investments as being the equal of any."

"Will there be any end to life insurance growth?"

"I am not a prophet. It seems to me it must last while civilization endures. It is an increasingly large factor from year to year, in that civilization. It is the only way possible under present conditions for the average man to make a suitable and timely provision for his family at his death. Its fraternal aspect is creditable to our age in that, rightly administered, it is the bearing of each others' burdens. Naturally we hope to continue to progress. There are yet many who have not accepted its benefits, and life insurance will not have answered its purpose until it is brought home in large or small amount, according to ability, to every producer in the land. We do not wish to be regarded as immodest. There are many excellent life insurance companies; but we know of none which hews closer to the line of duty and is more regardful of the interest of policy-holders than the Penn Mutual."

Let us live with God; and, whatever be your calling, pray for the gift that will perfectly qualify you in it.—Bushness.

FINANCIAL.

6% NET FIRST GOLD MORTGAGES

On improved RED RIVER VALLEY FARMS. Loans to actual settlers ONLY. 21 years' experience in business. Send for formal applications, list of references and map showing location of lands. Over $400,000 invested. None but SAFE, PROMPT-PAYING loans on my books.

WILLIAM T. SOUDER, Financial Agent
309, 310, 311 Century Bldg., Minneapolis, Minn.

6% to 7% Choice First Mortgage Loans, Seattle and vicinity. Local and N. Y. references. Established 1887. Correspondence Solicited.
JAMES BOTHWELL, Seattle, Washington.

6% NET Sound, conservative first mortgages on improved realty. We examine every security and know every borrower. We make our loans with our own money and turn them over complete. In 28 years we have learned how to select the best. No one now handling western mortgages has had more experience. We give you the benefit of that experience. The quality of the securities now on hand has never been surpassed. Highest references. Write for circulars and full information free.
PERKINS & COMPANY Lawrence, Kan.

On his first day at school Johnnie's teacher asked him, "Can you read?" "Yes, ma'am," replied Johnny, boldly. "Well, now we shall see," said the teacher, and she pointed to a sentence. As Johnny did not begin, the teacher started him, speaking slowly, and running her finger along under the words, "Did—you—ever—see—a—donkey?" And Johnnie, in the same deliberate, sing-song voice, running his finger along the page, replied, "No—ma'am—I—never—did."

"THE SOUTHERN'S PALM LIMITED."

The splendor of equipment and the punctual performance of the excellent schedule account for the superior patronage of this train.

Three-eleven p.m. every day, except Sunday, this train leaves West Philadelphia, and arrives the next afternoon at St. Augustine at 3.30 o'clock.

It is an exclusive Pullman train, with the latest examples of high art in composite cars, smoking-room and barber-shop, bath-room, buffet, etc. Then there are Pullman compartment cars, drawing-room cars, state-room cars and observation cars.

Philadelphia and the East Coast of Florida are thus quickly and comfortably united, and distribution is made along the way for other important Southern resorts, with through service between Philadelphia and Aiken, Augusta, etc.

The dining-car service on the Southern Railway is a particular feature of superiority. Every detail which experience and skill could suggest has been arranged by the management of the Southern Railway to have the service of this train meet every wish of its high-class passengers.

Unusually good reports are being received daily of the delight of the passengers, and the regularity of their arrival at their Southern destinations on time.

Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, will take pleasure in furnishing all information.

OSTEOPATHYEDWARD D. BURLIGH
ALEXANDER STETSON

Osteopathic Physician, 1537 Chestnut St., Room 401.

Hours, 9 a.m. to 12.30 p.m. and 2 to 4 p.m.
Bell Telephone Consultation free.S. F. BALDERSTON'S SONWall Paper and Decorations

Window Shades Made to Order

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILA.

STENOGRAPHER

GEO. B. COCK

Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter Street.
Telephones.Acker has them—those Dainty Candy Straws.Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a.

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hôte, 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p.m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cts. per night; $3 per week.

Two occupants, 50 cts. each, per night.
2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL

Phone Spruce 33-55. Clerk.

10 BEAUTIFUL PICTURES FREE

In order to introduce our QUAKER OINTMENT into every home where THE AMERICAN FRIEND is read, we have decided to make the following liberal offer. To every person sending us 25 cents for one box of QUAKER OINTMENT, and 4 cents extra to pay postage, we will send absolutely free the following 10 pictures. These pictures are gems of art. For picture study, art collections, gifts and home decoration, they are of great value. The Last Supper, Christ in Gethsemane, Christ Taken Captive, Christ Before Pilate, Christ Bearing the Cross, The Crucifixion, Entombment, In the Sepulchre, The Ascension, Transfiguration. It is costing us a great deal of money to advertise in this way, but we trust you will be pleased with our liberality, and will favor us with an order for a box of our ointment, and get these 10 beautiful pictures free. QUAKER OINTMENT is the best known remedy for catarrh, eczema, and all skin diseases. Rev. Asa Woodard, pastor Friends' Meeting at Butlerville, Ind., says: "I am using QUAKER OINTMENT, and find it an excellent remedy." Mrs. Clara Chaney, Rural Route No. 3, Warren, Ind., says: "I have never found anything as good as QUAKER OINTMENT for catarrh, sores and skin diseases." Send us your order to-day. Quaker Ointment sent to any address upon receipt of 25 cents.

DAVIS MFG. CO., Butlerville, Ind.

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

GLUTEN FLOUR For
SPECIAL DIABETIC FLOUR.
K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR.

Unlike all other goods. Ask Grocers.

For book or sample, write

Farwell & Rhines, Watertown, N.Y., U.S.A.

The British Friend

Published on the 15th of each month.

Being the only religious and literary review written chiefly for the general public, but from the standpoint of the Society of Friends, The British Friend offers a unique opportunity for spreading "The Truth" among thoughtful enquirers.

The January Issue contains:

"The Largeness of the Gospel;" "Herbert Spencer;" and "The York Conference on the Ministry." By the Editor.
"The Life of the Spirit," I. By Dugald Macfadyen, M.A.
"The Native Question in the Transvaal." By Alfred F. Fox.
"Are Friends Broad or Exclusive?" By M. Catharine Albright.
"Bible Notes" (The Prophetic Period.) I. By Alfred Neave Brayshaw.

A distinct feature is made of Reviews and Notices of Books, especially such as are likely to be helpful to preachers and social workers.

Subscription: 6s. 6d. ($1.58) per annum, post free

A specimen copy may be obtained by sending 14 cents in stamps to Asenath H. Reece, 122 West Miner St., West Chester, Pa.

Editor and Publisher:

EDWARD GRUBB, M.A.

Devonshire Chambers Bishopsgate, Without. Lon. E. C.

Delavau's Remedy

A SPECIFIC FOR

Whooping Cough and Croup

Also a safe and speedy cure for Bronchitis, Bronchial Catarrh and ordinary coughs. 50 Cents a Bottle, at Druggists, or

J. W. S. DELAVAU & CO., Propr's.

N. E. Cor. 6th and Wood Sts., Phila.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA. Office, 409 CHESTNUT STREET

CAPITAL, $1,000,000

ASSETS, $61,615,271.43

Surplus and Undivided Profits, belonging to the Stockholder

4,457,613.08

Surplus, belonging to Insurance Account

6,317,764.17

Incorporated Third month 22, 1865. Charter Perpetual.

INSURES LIVES, GRANTS ANNUITIES, RECEIVES MONEY ON DEPOSIT, returnable on demand for which interest is allowed.

And is empowered by law to act as EXECUTOR ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, GUARDIAN, ASSIGNEE, COMMITTEE, RECEIVER, AGENT, etc.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the assets of the Company.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.

BOXES $5 AND UPWARDS

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY, President.

T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-Prest.
ASA S. WING, Vice-President.
JOS. ASHBROOK, Man. Ins. Dept.
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treas-urer.

J. R. FOULKE, Trust Officer.

DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary.

J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Assistant Trust Officer

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary.

DIRECTORS:

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY,
T. WISTAR BROWN,
HENRY HAINES,
RICHARD WOOD,
CHAS. HARTSHORNE.

ASA S. WING,
PHILIP C. GARRETT,
JAMES V. WATSON,
WM. LONGSTRETH,
EDWARD H. OGDEN.

THOS. SCATTERGOOD,
J. PRESTON THOMAS,
ROBERT M. JANNEY,
MARRIOTT C. MORRIS,
FRANK H. TAYLOR.

REDUCED RATES TO NEW ORLEANS, LA.; MOBILE, ALA., AND PENSACOLA, FLA., ACCOUNT MARDI GRAS CARNIVALS, VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

On February 9th to 15th, inclusive, the Southern Railway will sell round-trip tickets to the above points at the following rates from Washington, D.C., to New Orleans, La., $27.25; Mobile, Ala., $25.75; Pensacola, Fla., $25.75.

Proportionate low rates from other points; final limit of tickets February 20th, 1904, except by depositing tickets with Special Agent on or before February 20th, and payment of fee of fifty cents an extension of limit may be obtained, but not later than March 5th, 1904.

Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa., will furnish all information.

FLORIDA.

Two Weeks' Tour via Pennsylvania Railroad.

The first Pennsylvania Railroad tour of the season to Jacksonville, allowing two weeks in Florida, will leave New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington by special train on February 2d.

Excursion tickets, including railway transportation, Pullman accommodations (one berth), and meals en route in both directions while traveling on the special train, will be sold at the following rates: New York, $50.00; Trenton, $49.00; Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Baltimore and Washington, $48.00; Pittsburg, $53.00, and at proportionate rates from other points.

For tickets, itineraries, and other information, apply to ticket agents, or to George W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

No man or woman of the humblest sort can really be strong, gentle, pure and good without the world being the better for it, without somebody being helped and comforted by the very existence of that goodness.—Phillips Brooks.

EDUCATIONAL.

GUILFORD COLLEGE

Location in the mild and healthful Piedmont Section of North Carolina.

Five Brick Buildings well equipped, supplied with abundance of pure water, and lighted with electricity.

Eleven Members of the Faculty. Good Library and Chemical and Biological Laboratories.

Next Term will begin on the 18th of January, 1904.

Catalogue Sent on Application

L. L. HOBBS, President

EARLHAM COLLEGE, RICHMOND, INDIANA

Prof. Elbert Russell offers courses regularly in Kings, New Testament Times, Life of Christ, The Apostolic Age, Church History, New Testament Literature, Romans, John, Biblical Literature, Isaiah.

Prof. Cyrus W. Hodgkin, The Protestant Reformation.

Prof. Anna M. Demaree, New Testament, Greek. Asst. Prof. Lindley, History of the Hebrews.

Pres. Kelly, History of Philosophy, Ethics, Psychology.

The Oakwood Seminary

UNION SPRINGS, N. Y.

Founded in 1796.

A boarding school for boys and girls under the care of New York Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Academic, College Preparatory and Commercial

Winter term begins First month 5, 1904

SAMUEL H. HODGIN, Principal. LINDLEY M. STEVENS, Superintendent.

WHITTIER COLLEGE

Classical, Scientific and Literary courses. Highest requirements. Students unable to continue their studies in more rigorous climes will find this climate the best in the world for study. Natural advantages for scientific investigation unsurpassed. Well equipped laboratory. Whittier, a Friend's community, —morally clean,—no saloons or kindred sources of corruption. For catalogue address,

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, President.

Stenography, Typewriting, Mimeographing and Reporting

LYDIA ARETE CONN,

805 Provident Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

SHORTHAND TAUGHT BY MAIL

or in school. Each student receives personal attention. Moderate rates. Write for full information.

PROVIDENT SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND

805 Provident Building Philadelphia, Pa

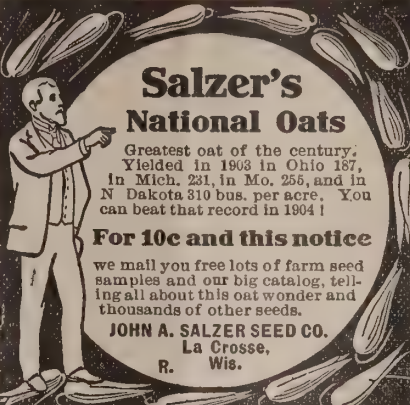

STENOGRAPHING, TYPEWRITING and MIMEOGRAPHING. Prices moderate.

MARY M. KITE

407 Lippincott Building, 12th and Filbert Sts., Phila. Phone No. 3-33-00

A. M. ADAMS, PRINTING

230 N. Twelfth St., Philadelphia. BELL TELEPHONE.

Salzer's National Oats
Greatest oat of the century. Yielded in 1903 in Ohio 187, in Mich. 231 in Mo. 255, and in N. Dakota 310 bus. per acre. You can beat that record in 1904!

For 10c and this notice
we mail you free lots of farm seed samples and our big catalog, telling all about this oat wonder and thousands of other seeds.

JOHN A. SALZER SEED CO.
La Crosse, Wis.

Be now faithful to thyself, my soul, so shalt thou leave thy retirement and enter on this day's work fortified to withstand temptation, to sustain care, to meet trials, to do thy duty to thy Maker, to thy fellow-beings, and to thyself. Take strict heed to thy ways; set a watch over thy actions, and govern the thoughts of thy heart. Let thy tongue utter the words of truth and soberness; let thy lips speak no ill of their neighbor. Be more ready to forgive injuries than to resent offences; thy own mind will reward thee, —for thou shalt greatly increase in joy and peace.—Dorothea Dix.

FREE
GREGORY'S SEED CATALOGUE FOR 1904

Safe Sowers Sure Growers

GREGORY'S SEEDS

have been successfully sown and grown for nearly 50 years. Sold under three guarantees. Send to-day for free catalogue.

J. J. H. GREGORY & SON, Marblehead, Mass.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

BREAD MACHINE

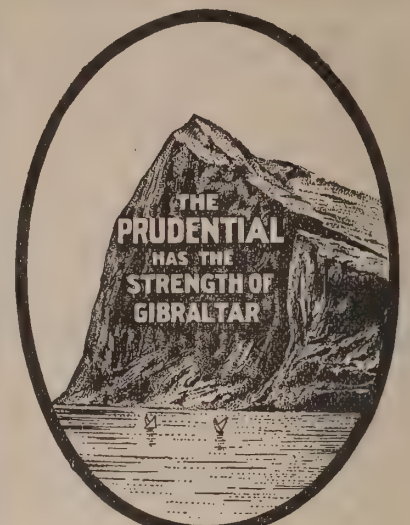

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE.

Sifts the flour and mixes 20 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CYRUS CHAMBERS, Jr.) 52d & Media Sts., Philadelphia

WILLIAM S. YARNALL Manufacturing OPTICIAN

118 S. FIFTEENTH ST., PHILA. 4th Door Below Chestnut St.

Two Purposes are Accomplished

by an Endowment Policy. It insures your having a cash sum if you live till the end of the Endowment period. It also insures your family, business or estate for full amount of policy in event of your death, before that time.

THE PRUDENTIAL INSURANCE CO. OF AMERICA.

JOHN F. DRYDEN, Prest.

Home Office: NEWARK, N. J.

Without committing myself to any action I shall be glad to receive free, particulars and rates of Endowment Policies.

Send Coupon for Information.

For Name Age
Address
Occupation Dept. 67.

It is not, "How much have you done?" but "In what spirit have you acted?" Not, "How long?" but "How well?" Let us only be genuine, honest, true, in everything, however small, and we have in that the sign and pledge of an entire consecration of heart and life to God.—James Freeman Clarke.

The American Friend

Vol. XI

SECOND MONTH 4, 1904

No. 5

	PAGE
EDITORIALS. — Say to the Mountain, "Be Removed."—Churches in the United States	71
Some Needs in Modern Evangelism . . Thomas Newlin.	72
Is the Hague Court Now Open to All the Nations of the World?	75
The Peace of God.	75
TEMPERANCE DEPARTMENT	76
THE INTERNATIONAL LESSON Lesson for Second month 14, 1904.	78
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR Topic for Second month 14, 1904.	79
MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT	79
CORRESPONDENCE	81
THINGS OF INTEREST AMONG OURSELVES, .	81
MARRIED.—DIED.	82
EVENTS AND COMMENTS	83

THE BUTTERFLY.

*I hold you at last in my hand,
Exquisite child of the air;
Can I ever understand
How you grew to be so fair?*

*You came to this linden-tree
To taste its delicious sweet,
I sitting here in the shadow and shine
Playing around its feet.*

*Now I hold you fast in my hand,
You marvelous butterfly,
Till you help me to understand
The eternal mystery.*

*From that creeping thing in the dust
To this shining bliss in the blue!
God, give me courage to trust
I can break my chrysalis too!*

—By Alice Freeman Palmer

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.50 A YEAR ❁ ❁ ❁ PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
AMERICAN FRIEND PUBLISHING COMPANY, 718 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA.

DEBTORS know how interest consumes them. Wise men know how interest works for them. One of the best illustrations of the latter is an investment policy in the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE

921-3-5 Chestnut Street.

"Hindrances become a help when the heart attacks them."

EDUCATIONAL.

EARLHAM COLLEGE, RICHMOND, INDIANA

Prof. Elbert Russell offers courses regularly in Kings, New Testament Times, Life of Christ, The Apostolic Age, Church History, New Testament Literature, Romans, John, Biblical Literature, Isaiah. Prof. Cyrus W. Hodgkin, The Protestant Reformation.

Prof. Anna M. Demaree, New Testament, Greek. Asst. Prof. Lindley, History of the Hebrews. Pres. Kelly, History of Philosophy, Ethics, Psychology.

The Oakwood Seminary

UNION SPRINGS, N. Y.

Founded in 1796.

A boarding school for boys and girls under the care of New York Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Academic, College Preparatory and Commercial

Winter term begins first month 5, 1904

SAMUEL H. HODGIN, Principal. LINDLEY M. STEVENS, Superintendent.

WHITTIER COLLEGE

Classical, Scientific and Literary courses. Highest requirements. Students unable to continue their studies in more rigorous climes will find this climate the best in the world for study. Natural advantages for scientific investigation unsurpassed. Well equipped laboratory. Whittier, a Friend's community, —morally clean,—no saloons or kindred sources of corruption. For catalogue address,

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, President.

Stenography, Typewriting, Mimeographing and Reporting

LYDIA ARETE CONN,

805 Provident Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

SHORTHAND TAUGHT BY MAIL

or in school. Each student receives personal attention. Moderate rates. Write for full information.

PROVIDENT SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND

805 Provident Building Philadelphia, Pa.

STENOGRAPHING, TYPEWRITING and MIMEOGRAPHING. Prices moderate.

MARY M. KITE

407 Lippincott Building, 12th and Filbert Sts., Phila.
Phone No. 3-33-00

A. M. ADAMS, PRINTING

230 N. Twelfth St., Philadelphia.
BELL TELEPHONE.

Clean linen, clean, pure food and personal cleanliness are important requisites in the healing of the sick. On account of its purity, Ivory Soap is the best for the ward and operating room as well as for the hospital kitchen and laundry. It has been examined for germ life by microscopists and chemists and found to be free from impurities, and is now in use in hospitals, training schools and for general medical and surgical work, where the finest soap is required.

WE FORGET SO QUICKLY

(For advertisers.)

The man who gets your catalogue to-day may forget all about you by next month.

Don't give him a chance, follow up your catalog. Send him a mail card or a folder a week or two after the catalog and then a process letter.

Keep him busy thinking about you.

THE LEEDS & BIDDLE CO., Inc.

Makers of the Better Kind of Printing
1019-21 Market St., Phila.

Providence has a thousand keys to open a thousand doors for the deliverance of His own!—Rutherford.

Penn's Treaty with the Indians

on India paper; engraving 23 inches by 18 inches, on sheets 30 inches by 24 inches; from the original Boydell engraved plate made in 1775 from the original painting of Benjamin West. $3.00 by mail.

A. L. SMITH

29 E. Penn St., Germantown, Phila., Pa.

The American Friend

*"Truth is the highest thing a man may keep."
"That they all may be one."*

VOL. XI.

PHILADELPHIA, SECOND MONTH 4, 1904.

No. 5.

SAY TO THE MOUNTAIN, "BE REMOVED."

FAITH is energy. It gets things done. It is as true to-day as when James put it in his letter from Jerusalem: "Faith without works is dead." These words simply mean that Faith which does not do anything does not count—it is dead. "I show thee my Faith by my works" is another one of these clear sentences of this same James which goes straight to the mark. Another way of saying the same thing would be, "You can find out what my faith is by seeing what it makes me do."

Now this kind of Faith is quite different from the kind the little boy in the Sunday School described in his well-known answer: "Faith is believing something which you know isn't so!" Perhaps one trouble is that too many of us have the little boy's kind of "Faith." It does not do anything. It leaves us where we were before. There is no energy in it. We carry it about with us much as the old magicians carried their amulets, or as the modern man carries a "lucky horseshoe," hoping that some time it will prove useful. That sort of Faith is always "dead," and it will not make its possessor mighty.

That other kind which we began with—James's kind, Christ's kind—that is always spiritual energy. It is believing and living by something which you know is so. It may be no larger, to start with, than a grain of mustard seed, or a yeast germ. The size is not important. But it must be vital. It must be something which sets the life into spiritual activity.

"What must I do to be saved?" cries the frightened jailer at Philippi. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ," answers the apostle whose feet had just been shaken free from the stocks. What does that mean? How is that going to save this Philippian idol-worshiper and jail-keeper? It means, first of all, that he is to believe that God loves him and wants him to go to living under the sway of Jesus Christ. Think of that! Right there in Philippi God offers Himself to this poor, needy man. It is as though a new sun rose in the sky and flooded his eyes with light. "See Me in Jesus Christ and go to living by Him!" That is what the Divine message to this man means. Is not that energy? Is not that power? Is not that something actually transforming?

The old way is the new way too. A man may have a whole trunk full of "Declarations of Faith," or "articles of belief," and yet have no real Faith. "I believe in the divinity of Jesus Christ" means much or little. With some men it is a "dead" Faith; with others it is an irresistible energy. "I believe in the rainbow," says the blind man. Yes, but he believes in it only because his neighbor tells him about it. "I believe in the rainbow," says the poet, his soul all thrilled with the revelation of beauty before his eyes.

What does your Faith in Christ make you do? is the important question. "Oh, it doesn't make me do anything. I go on just as I was before." Well, that is not a good kind of Faith. The true Faith changes the entire center of life. "I am living by the Faith of the Son of God" means death to the old, crooked, twisted, petulant self. It means that the attraction of Jesus Christ comes like the energy of gravitation from the center of the universe, and swings the life in a divine orbit. You stop saying, then, "I can't overcome. I can't get good. I can't keep from sinning. I can't do anything for God." The energy of life, mightier than that which pushes the acorn into an oak, mightier than that which changes the embryonic cell into a body, comes in. A Faith which really lays hold of God cannot be compared to any earthly energy. It puts the mountain in the sea and plucks the sycamore up by the roots.

CHURCHES IN THE UNITED STATES.*

It does us good to be reminded occasionally of the great Christian forces which are at work in our country, and it should make each humble Christian feel a little stronger to know that he is one person in a mighty host. The Churches in the United States number well over twenty-nine million members. No one can begin to conceive the spiritual power which this host would manifest if they were all of the apostolic type. The strongholds of sin would tremble and the world would soon become a different place if these twenty-nine millions were up to the standard which a few of them have reached. But even as they are—following at a distance, imperfectly obedient, and divided among themselves—they do in the aggregate make a tremendous positive power for righteousness, and society would soon "spoil" if this saving salt were removed.

* The figures in this article are based on the statistics gathered by H. K. Carroll for "The Christian Advocate."

Remarks are frequently made which indicate that the Christian Churches are making no progress, that they are decreasing or even dying out. There is no truth in such views. The facts are the other way. During the past year there has been a net gain of 482,459 members in the American churches. It has not been a year of great revivals. These additions have been made, here a little and there a little, by normal activity and largely in quiet ways. We are often told that men are not being called into the ministry as in former times. But the figures show that there are 2,340 more ministers this year than last, and 2,647 new churches. Of course, it is always easy to find weaknesses and defects in a great system like this of the organized Church. But let us thank God that such a body exists, that the Holy Spirit is using it, and that its work in the world is bearing fruit.

For example, the Methodist Churches, of which there are seventeen kinds, have added to their membership during the year 112,946, which is twenty-three per cent. of the total number in 1902. The Baptists have increased by over 61,000, the Presbyterians by over 26,000, the Disciples of Christ by 28,000, the Episcopalians by 15,000. The Unitarian bodies show no gains, while the Universalists report a loss. As we showed last week Friends made during the year an actual gain of 398, though the subtraction of totals for the two years does not indicate it. On the whole the course is onward, and, though there are whirls and eddies in the movement, it does move. The light-bearers often feel discouraged, and their hands grow tired, but they are making the darkness a little less, and they are saving many from shipwreck.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

SOME NEEDS IN MODERN EVANGELISM.

BY THOMAS NEWLIN.

The world to-day is in need of no new gospel. The simple story of Jesus Christ is just the same as of old. Every revival of true religion has placed a new emphasis upon some phase of the sacrifice of Jesus Christ. I care not whether we look to find these principles in the history of Israel or in modern times, they are identical. The law of gravitation was doing its work long ages before the law was discovered. So God was doing His work long ages before He was manifest in the flesh in the person of Jesus Christ. But Christ was a stumbling block and an innovation to the Jews. The race in its development creates new ideals. How can identity be preserved in the midst of changing and new ideals? Identity is internal, rather than external. Mature persons, on looking again at their baby pictures, can scarcely realize that the person beholding the picture and the person represented by the picture are the same identical persons, but the stream of consciousness proves the identity. The little slender sprout in the nursery, and a few years later the large tree laden with shining red apples, are they the same? Yes and No. In externals, No. In life and species and "sap's resistless flow," Yes. A political party meeting in convention, with brilliant banners, loud hurrahs, and platforms ready made, is this the party of Lincoln or Jefferson? We cannot tell by outward appearance. We must study the history, the motives, the sentiments, both of the founders and of their modern representatives. The same kind of an illustration might be made in regard to a religious denomination. What constitutes identity in Quakerism, Methodism or Presbyterianism? It is not my purpose to answer this question now, but the question is asked to set some to thinking on what constitutes identity.

Our ideals in the past are generally well known. The history of Quakerism presents a changing panorama. Why should it not? It has been the history of a growing organism. Change is always an innovation to some. Cutting off the golden curls of the rapidly-growing boy seems a desecration to the fond mother, but often quite the proper thing to the neighbors. These changes must come to supplement and complete our civilization. We need to give a free translation to the practical John's message, and then obey it: "Change your minds for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." In many places the machinery is well-nigh perfect, but it stands motionless. Now it seems to me that effective preaching must produce results in saving men and saving society.

A new Augustan Age seems to be upon the world. As at the coming of the Christ, this age seems to be a mass of contradictions. Christ came in "the fullness of time." There are many signs to the close observer that "the time is full" for a new revival, a fresh inspiration and a great awakening. Progress never was so much in evidence before. Schools and colleges, churches and philanthropy, science and art are all taking long strides in advance, judged by ordinary standards. We read of radium and wireless telegraphy, and we are ready to join in the chorus of Napoleon and declare, "Impossible is the adjective of fools." But when we look a little deeper, we discover a conglomeration of tradition and history, facts and fancies, essentials and non-essentials, all bound in one bundle and labeled "Religious Truth." Great problems face us. We need not look to the missionary treasury to do the work, for most of the churches in America to-day are not reaching their own constituency. Most of them are doing something for the foreign field, but the people are unchurched. The situation is ominous. Some thoughtful ones are asking whether the heaven has lost its power? No new plan of salvation is needed, but a new and adequate motive power is demanded. Salvation is a very general term, and involves different things in detail but not in essence in different places. Salvation in Africa, China, Bohemia or America alike will save from sins, whether they be vile and material, or spiritual and intellectual, and also saves society from injustice and crude organization. Salvation is manifested in the regenerated man first, and then he works it into the institutions of society. Holy characters will make prosperous and lively churches, Sabbath Schools, colleges, hospitals, libraries and well-governed States and cities. In the face of these contradictions many find faith very hard, yet they are not willing to doubt all, hence multitudes of church members are living a life of indifference and a negative life.

The Church waits for something which it does not now possess. A few suggestions as to the characteristics of this fulfillment of our needs have pressed themselves upon me. One great difficulty in our revival and evangelistic work has been that we have pressed and emphasized that the one thing needful is the only thing. This is partial, for it confuses foundation and superstructure. Electricity must have the copper wire and carbon points. The sap which is the life of the plant requires the woody fiber. The Holy Spirit demands a man, an intelligent, large-hearted, large-minded, all-round man.

Let us examine the present situation more closely:

1. The present demands of the age suggest that Christ be made more real. The whole duty of the Church is to get men in a disposition to do the will of God. But this will to do God's will needs a personal leadership. Such a leader is the Christ. The historic Christ is fairly well known, and very well taught in our schools and churches. But we need to know not only the Christ who lived and loved in Galilee, but the Christ who lives and loves in our lives to-day. Doing the will of God implies loyalty to Jesus Christ, and loyalty to the Church is an outgrowth of this. It is a great and vital mistake to try to invert this process. The proof of the divinity of Jesus Christ is not in some far-off mystery that we cannot understand. This proof must be historic rather than dogmatic, a matter of experience rather than of theology. It is like this: God is the embodiment of perfect love and perfect goodness. Jesus Christ is in all the range of human history the highest and only perfect example of the manifestation of this love and goodness. Christ, therefore, is the interpretation of the will of God to us, and through this medium we look and see the Father; hence Christ must be Divine, the Son of God, as well as the Son of man. If it were not for Jesus Christ we would not be so sure that God is love, always love, always good, always beneficent. This fact will touch men's hearts as no mystery ever will touch them. We must reorganize our faith on the basis of experience. We must go from the known to the related unknown, and never attempt to force people to start with the unknown.

2. But this is not the whole truth. We need also to magnify the Holy Spirit as a Real Presence, Comforter and Guide in the lives of men. Here the historic Pentecost will not suffice. By doing the will of God we become partakers of the divine nature, and the Spirit of God dwells in us. The moment one says in sincerity and humility, "Lo! I come to do thy will, my Father," that moment the "Spirit helpeth his infirmities." The Spirit of God, the Holy Spirit dwelling in human hearts, is not merely an effect of God, not merely like God, but is God in His very essence. This view removes the mystery of the doctrine of the Holy Spirit. It removes it from the region of a formula to the practical experience of life. This matter should not be pressed on any man, for to the natural man without experience in striving to do the will of God, this is perfectly unintelligible, but it soon develops itself out of such experience.

3. In evangelistic work there is needed in many places a new attitude and spirit toward the Bible and Bible study. The antidote for the extremes in modern Bible study is not to avoid modern scientific scholarship, but to arise to an increased effort and fixed determination so far as possible to know the whole truth concerning the revealed will of God. Bible study must keep pace with other studies or it will fall into disrepute in academic circles. The new scientific spirit has rightly invaded the region of Bible study. When we meet skepticism we dare not meet it with dogmatic assertion, whether in the study of science, philosophy, history or the Bible. It is our duty to find the answer to every proper inquiry. Every soul has the capacity and opportunity for salvation, but this should not encourage ignorance and indolence. We must not shun investigation, but rather invite it. The interpretation and exposition of the ignorant, though pious, will not gain the confidence of the thoughtful. The more the Bible is studied in the light of all knowledge, the surer the foundation becomes, the more the love of God and the beauty of Christ are seen. This new spirit will help much in evangelistic work, and make the Bible the Book of Life to many. Bible texts are loved and appreciated by most Christians, but the Bible as such is a closed volume to most church members. Pastors and evangelists may do much to open up whole books of the Bible to their audiences and set their people to understand what they read. This will open the way for other more personal work.

4. In recent years there has come to light a new idea of child life. The Church should utilize this knowledge. We have time here merely to touch this large subject. The child is not at first a social being. Nearly one hundred and fifty organs appear, grow, and pass into disuse and decay in the development of child life. These "men and women of to-morrow" are now "candidates for humanity." We must take account in religious education of the three stages of infancy, childhood and adolescence. Instinct rules in infancy, passing into habit in childhood, and appearing as ideals in adolescence. Conscience should be formed and cultivated in childhood, but adolescence is the time for training the will. During childhood, from six to twelve, courtesy, politeness, morality and religious observance should be made such a matter of course that they will ever after be a part of the life. This will make them natural. They can be cultivated in after years, but, like hot-house fruit, they will always seem somewhat artificial. In the warmhearted years of childhood there should be cultivated by every legitimate method the love of parents, of teachers, of playmates, of right and truth, of God and all good things. If formation were well attended to, reformation would be unnecessary. This is the age of obedience. The law should come before the gospel; hence, during childhood is the proper time to teach the Old Testament, which should always precede the teaching of the New Testament. At about the age of twelve there comes a change. It comes with a feeling of responsibility; very soon the brain ceases to grow and begins to develop. Great physical changes are taking place, the circulation increases, the temperature rises, the body grows rapidly and requires more food than ever before and more sleep than any time since babyhood. Emotion and enthusiasm come like a flood. The youth now wants to find his place in the world. Strong leaders are needed now in home, Sabbath School and Church. This is a crucial time. Now is the time for forming right ideals about religion and character, and the Church that fails to pay particular attention to the needs of these young people is failing at an important stage. Why are not the young people religious? Why are they not in the Church and Sabbath School? There is their natural place. It is because parents, teachers and preachers have not understood child life. We cannot afford to neglect this study longer. We are spending our time, money and energies on work that is much less fruitful. Literature and helps here are abundant and ignorance is growing to be criminal in these matters. It is a sad picture to see the children of pious and intelligent parents who do not enjoy the religious observances of Sabbath School, Church and prayer meeting. The blame here cannot be definitely located, for it rests not only on the parents, but upon our system and ideals. We have seemed to believe that it is natural and proper to allow the fence row to grow up in briars and bushes, and in later years hire an evangelist to come along and grub it out. I purposely have mixed my figures to reach the point quickly. A little timely attention would have rendered all this unnecessary. Here is a fruitful field for evangelistic work for the many, not merely for the few.

5. It seems strange that some of the deepest teachings of Jesus are still unfathomed, and His truth is still unapplied in many places. Theology for the most part has been fought out along lines that Jesus never mentioned or only incidentally noticed. The great and bulky creeds, as formulated, deal, for the most part, with great mysteries, and leave life untouched. Where will we get nearest to the central fact and heart of Jesus Christ? May we not expect to reach this point in what is called the Lord's Prayer, the personal talk with Nicodemus, the talk with the woman at the well, and in what is called the Sermon on the Mount? What is the theme in every one of these passages? Everywhere it is "Our Father," and every time it is with touching tenderness. I fail to find this fact noticed in the creeds. Jesus left unnoticed so far as recorded the topics of original sin and the atonement; but He did leave the historic fact of His sacrifice, and the serious contemplation of this historic fact will never fail to bring condemnation, and open up the way of escape. This is religion in which God is seen to be our Father and Jesus Christ our Saviour. Original sin and atonement are theology. Salvation of man and of society is practical religion, and there is a demand to reconstruct our evangelism and transfer the emphasis from theology to religion. Silence on these points is no longer excusable for those who see these truths.

Two eternal possessions we will carry with us into the beyond—character and capacity. Christ did not ask for power to make laws; He only asked for a few men to train, for the soil of human hearts in which to plant His truth. Should we ask for more? If we can implant ideals we then need not worry about actions and results. The day is calling loud for men and women who have been touched by the love of God, and have thought out an organic body of truth, and have the ability to communicate it to others. We have had critics and inspectors enough. What we need now is architects and builders. There is no place in the gospel ministry for the criticism of the Church, for the ridicule of science and philosophy, for arguments for or against Biblical critics or evolution or sanctification. The results of what has been thought and said about all of these questions are accessible to every person who teaches. They do not need to be rehashed before the public. We do need men and women who can take this material and think through to a conclusion a system of doctrine in the light of all the facts available. We need some Moses to lead us out of our wilderness, and then we need Aarons and Hurs to stay the hands of the day of battle.

Flowers are lovely without the aid of a microscope, and the stars are beautiful without the telescope, but what a world of loveliness and beauty these instruments have revealed to us. The day seems hopeful to me; although we are still in the valley the mountain top is light.

In conclusion, I want to say to the ministers and Christian workers: Know theology as well as possible, but preach religion; study Biblical criticism, science and philosophy, but teach the simple doctrine of Jesus Christ and His atoning love; investigate the history of the Church and Christian institutions, but teach loyalty to the Father and to the Son and to the Holy Spirit, and church loyalty as a result of such a life as this.

Gulford College, N. C.

Give a man such a heart as the Son of God describes in the Beatitudes, and a whole universe of sorrow cannot rob him of his blessedness.—C. H. Spurgeon.

IS THE HAGUE COURT NOW OPEN TO ALL THE NATIONS OF THE WORLD?

There is one fact connected with the appearance of Venezuela before the Hague Court, in the preferential treatment case, that is of the greatest significance, but has as yet received practically no attention. This fact is brought out strongly, though somewhat indirectly, in the instructive article by Wayne MacVeagh in the "North American Review" for Twelfth month, on "The Value of the Venezuela Arbitration."

It will be remembered that Venezuela is not a party to the Hague Convention, and has no representatives in the Permanent Court of Arbitration. The convention is what is ordinarily considered a closed convention, to which others may be admitted only at the will of the signatory powers. None of the South American States, though a treaty of adherence to the Hague Conventions was signed by their representatives at Mexico City, have as yet been admitted as parties to the conventions.

The appearance of Venezuela, therefore, before the court, in company with ten of the powers—five of them powers of the first rank—which are parties to the convention under which it was established, is of extraordinary interest. She had no technical right to appear at the bar of the tribunal. The signatory powers might have refused to let her come. The fact that they allowed her to do so, raising, so far as we remember, no objections whatever, is certain to have far-reaching consequences.

Wayne MacVeagh considers the value of the Venezuela arbitration to consist not chiefly in the nature of the question to be decided—though this he does not underrate—but in the fact that it will "increase the dignity and enlarge the usefulness of the great Court of Peace," that it will extend more fully the reign of law and justice in the relations of the European nations to the South American republics, prevent aggression and violence against them, and thus contribute very materially to the pacific development of Central and South America.

If this is a true interpretation, or marks out the line of a true interpretation, of the value of this arbitration, as we are inclined to think it does, then the conclusion is inevitable that the Hague Court, through the action of the ten signatory powers in appearing before its bar with an outside power on terms of equality, is now finally open to all the nations of Central and South America, and indeed of all the world. Any one of them may ask any signatory government, or any other with which it may have a controversy, to go to The Hague for settlement, with reasonable assurance that no technical advantage will be taken of the fact that it is not yet a party to the convention in order to exclude it from a hearing before this great tribunal.

It is true that the Venezuela arbitration is only a single case; but it is a case of such character, because of the number of nations taking part in it, as will go a long way to establish a precedent which it will not be easy hereafter to set aside. It will be difficult ever again to close the tribunal to any appellant whatever.

The opening of the court in this indirect way to the whole family of nations means even more than if it had occurred in a formal and technical way, as will doubtless be the case in any event before many years. This extension of the sphere of the Permanent International Court in this way without any formal action is in harmony with the manner in which law and the institutions of law have always spontaneously extended themselves so as to cover new and contiguous ground. It is, furthermore, an impressive evidence of the increasing power of the sense of justice and equity in the international sphere where heretofore brutal violence and lawlessness have held such large sway. It is at bottom this enlarged sense of justice and right which is bringing the new World Court into such rapid use, and will in a comparatively brief period extend its authority and beneficent influence not only theoretically, but also actually, over the whole sphere of international activities.—"The Advocate of Peace."

THE PEACE OF GOD.

Some centuries ago Europe was so worn out and devastated by incessant war that a truce was patched up which was called the Peace of God, and such as it was, it was hailed with delight by the suffering people as a relief from the reign of hell upon earth.

A kind Providence makes natural provision for domestic and social peace among families and friends, thus rendering society enjoyable, without which human life would be intolerable. This is somewhat of the peace of God, and it is rather surprising that it is not more recognized and made a matter of culture. Every sensible person sees the value of conventional politeness, courtesy and good manners. What is lacking is sincerity and a proper understanding of the will of God concerning us. The heathen, in the darkness of eighteen hundred years ago, arrived at some knowledge of the elements of peace on earth, as we find him quoted by one of the city papers as follows:

"The true felicity of life is to be free from perturbations; to understand our duties toward God and man. . . . He that judges aright and perseveres in it enjoys a perpetual calm; he takes a true prospect of things; he observes an order, a measure, a decorum in all his actions; he has benevolence in his nature; he squares his life according to reason; he draws to himself love and admiration."

Now, on its face, this is pure rationalism. Looking deeper, we find a spark of inspiration, for this philosopher lived to know and hear the wonderful discourse of the Apostle Paul. God is Light, God is Love, the same yesterday, to-day, and forever, whose infinite wisdom sees the end from the beginning. Therefore a mighty calm, undisturbed by any cause whatever, and a peace which gives in His presence, fullness of joy, and at His right hand pleasures for evermore.

Thus, to be at peace with God, through our Lord and Saviour, is to share in it. "My peace I give unto you, not as the world giveth." Certainly not. It is a joy unspeakable, and full of glory; the peace of God Himself. The remarkable thing is that this wonderful peace which seeks only to bless mankind is here attended with sorrow and suffering, adversity and sacrifice. The peace of God reigns within and torments rage without. Stranger still is the fact of experience that suffering, instead of being a drawback, has from the first been accepted as working out a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. The disciple is actually made more perfect through suffering. Yet no such selfish consideration ever troubles the soul which has the peace of God. He is wholly devoid of fear, let come what may, and if a time comes when he is permitted to live without trial and persecution he is by no means sure that this tolerance is as good for him, or for others, as an active antagonism.

Temperance Department.

Issued Monthly, under the care of the

TEMPERANCE ASSOCIATION OF FRIENDS, OF PHILADELPHIA
YEARLY MEETING.

All communications should be addressed to

ANNA EASTBURN WILLITS, Editor, 343 E. Main Street, Haddonfield, N. J.

The Executive Committee of the Temperance Association of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends met on the 25th ult. The meetings are well attended, with an evident awakening to the six or more different departments presented by the committees. Thus it was that Scientific Temperance Instruction, Literature, Coffee Stands, Legislative Work, the Interdenominational Conference in Baltimore in 1905, the holding of six meetings in the suburban towns around Philadelphia, to be addressed by interested and eloquent members within our own Society, together with the important subject of Finance, were all soberly and wisely discussed, evidently feeling with Carlyle when he wrote:

"Brother, thou hast possibility in thee for much, the possibility of writing on the eternal skies the record of an heroic life."

Let each individual total abstainer seek to realize the greatness and importance of temperance work, the absolute necessity of personal service, and the splendid sphere of work offered, and then, with determination and perseverance, apply himself to this work.

I am only one,
But I am one;
I cannot do everything.
But I can do something;
What I can do I ought to do,
And by the grace of God I will do.

It is worse than irony to be praying "Thy kingdom come," while in the nation we are turning out annually 37,500,000 barrels of liquors and supporting 300,000 saloons.

Some of our readers ask, "What can we do in a practical way to advance the cause?"

In a town in New York State, when the vote was announced that it had gone no-license, one gentleman said: "Now that the saloons are out, let us keep them out." "But how?" "Put a good, clean temperance paper in every home," was the reply. And we would add, distribute literature freely and wisely on topics suited to the various minds, ages and dispositions. Friends living in or near Philadelphia will always find a well-selected assortment of leaflets at Friends' Institute, 20 South Twelfth Street, for free distribution. It will be sent upon application. The first is, start the work; the second, keep everlastingly at it.

Again and again letters come to us from the East and the West, from the North and the South, asking where to secure literature adapted to meet the various phases of the temperance question, to awaken thought, and kindle thought into action; for brief, pointed articles on live topics; for mothers' meetings, for the training of children, physically, morally and spiritually? The Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, in charge of Ruby I. Gilbert, Room 915, the Silversmith Building, 131-137 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, will send a catalogue, containing a list of leaflets on all of these subjects and hundreds of others. Also ask the National Temperance Publication House, 3 East 14th Street, New York, for its catalogue of excellent leaflets, and for samples of its papers, the "National Advocate," the "Water Lily" for the little folks, and the "Temperance Banner." The W. C. T. U. women cannot work with power without their national organ, the "Union Signal," and their State temperance paper, the "New Voice," speaks particularly to the men.

The best field for temperance work is among the youth of the nation. Excessive drinkers seldom want to stop until it is too late. They go on over the danger line where even the best medical talent cannot help them. The young, however, are more impressionable.—"Boston Globe."

Vermont passed a license law in 1848 by a majority of only 13 votes in the State, but after a year of the licensed saloon voted it out by a majority of 13,000 votes. From the rapid change in public sentiment it begins to look as if history might repeat itself.—"The American Issue."

Chattanooga, Tenn.—A mass meeting of a large number of the better class of negroes was held here and an anti-whisky party was formed. The platform will contain planks urging the Legislature to pass laws against the use of whisky and cocaine, and to regulate the domestic life of the race.

The fifty-sixth annual report of the Pennsylvania commissioners on lunacy shows that the increase of insanity from intemperance is from 20.6 per cent. in 1900 to 21.1 per cent. in 1902. The ratio of intemperance to any other cause of insanity is given as five to one. Isn't drink the great befuddler?

The Bureau of Temperance Research is a new organization established in Boston. Its object, as explained by its secretary, F. W. Clark, is to furnish to all inquirers any information, especially of a statistical nature, which may be sought. It will endeavor to arrange and correlate all figures pertaining to both sides of the liquor question. The bureau will aim to keep in touch with the sales of liquor in the United States and other countries, and to keep temperance workers informed of all the movements of organization of both liquor dealers and employees.

PROHIBITION BILL HEARING.

The House Committee on Judiciary gave a hearing on the Hepburn-Dolliver bill in the interest of prohibition the twentieth of First month. The committee discovered that the interest in the bill was much more widespread than it had supposed, and so it was arranged that the hearing should be merely a preliminary one, with half an hour on a side, and that further hearings should be arranged for.

The bill limits the operation of the Interstate Commerce law by giving the States power to apply their excise laws to liquor imported from other States, whether it is in the original package or not. It is intended to overcome the United States Supreme Court decisions about original packages.

Margaret Dye Ellis, Legislative Superintendent of the National Women's Christian Temperance Union, said she represented the mothers of the country. She said that in localities where prohibition had been established it was made ineffective by the sale of liquor in original packages. She represented, she said, 300,000 women organized for temperance.

PROHIBITION RESULTS.

A few figures are instructive in this connection. When prohibition went into operation Kansas had a population of 996,616. Out of the population she had 917 convicts. After twenty-one years of prohibition the population is 1,470,495, an increase of nearly 50 per cent., but she now has only 788 prisoners; while the population has increased 50 per cent. crime has decreased in proportion to the present population 65 per cent. During the same period the criminal population of licensed Nebraska has outrun the general growth of the population 47 per cent.

Crime is the most expensive item in the State's expense.

Kansas has 105 counties. Five of these are notorious for the violation of the prohibitory law. These counties, with 17 per cent. of the State's population, furnish over 30 per cent. of the crime.

There are forty-seven counties in Kansas without a pauper; there are forty-five counties without a prisoner in their jails.

It is safe to say that partial prohibition has proven such a blessing that the people of Kansas will not rest till the law is enforced, and they have complete prohibition.—Selected.

CONGRESS.

In addition to the bills prepared by the National Temperance Society and now before Congress, viz.: the Gallinger bill, prohibiting the Federal Government issuing tax receipts for liquor selling in prohibition or no-license territory, and the bill providing for the appointment of a commission of inquiry in the alcoholic liquor traffic, there are the following other bills for which we ask the passage by Congress: The Macomber bill, forbidding liquor selling in the national soldiers' homes and all government buildings, and the Hepburn-Dolliver interstate liquor act.

The "Sun" closes its able editorial with the following significant words:

"Should Senator Gallinger's bill be enacted into law it would deprive the government of some revenue, but it would result in uniting the Federal and State authorities in an effort to prevent the sale of liquor in violation of local regulations. Thus it would prove a temperance measure of no little damage to the retail liquor trade. That trade will undoubtedly oppose the bill, and may attempt its defeat by the use of the 'defense fund.'"

THE TEMPERANCE QUESTION IN GERMANY.

An interesting communication concerning the growth of temperance sentiment in Germany from United States Consul Diedrich at Bremen to Mary H. Hunt, of Boston, has just been forwarded the latter by the State Department at Washington.

Referring to the results of her presence at the International Anti-Alcohol Congress in Bremen last Fourth month, which she attended in response to the German request to President Roosevelt that she there represent the American Scientific Temperance Instruction movement, Consul Diedrich sends her the following article from a Berlin paper, which will be of interest to readers in this country. The article, in reviewing a complete bibliography of recent German literature on the drink question, lately issued, says:

"Considering the newness of the propaganda in the Fatherland, the output is enormous.

"There is a total of 871 books printed in the German language dealing with the temperance question, written by 413 different authors, and practically all published since the year 1880, the greater portion of them since 1890.

"Besides this, there are now 37 newspapers, magazines and annuals published in Germany devoted to the temperance question.

"The temperance reformation in Germany has had such a recent beginning, and the supposed German repugnance to total abstinence is so well grounded it is really difficult to comprehend the full meaning of this vast array of literature in the German tongue.

"The evidence is clear that the people of Germany have taken up the alcohol question with an energy excelled by no other people on the face of the earth. Good Templar lodges are multiplying every year. The Blue Cross has spread all over the empire.

"The Imperial Health Office at Berlin is sending out elaborate literature against the use of alcohol as a beverage. Count Douglas, the brother-in-law of the Emperor, is one of the foremost temperance reformers in the country, and, day after day, the Journal of the Imperial Parliament has contained pages of his arguments against drink. Leading lights in German universities are also leaders in the new reform.

"Plans are even being matured for a German temperance exhibit at the coming St. Louis Exposition.

"The kindly personal interest taken in the scientific temperance propaganda of Mary H. Hunt by the German Empress shows how the anxiety about drink has reached the upper strata of German society. What nation on earth can furnish a parallel of the late Bremen Congress, when 1,500 people sat for four days to discuss the drink peril. What a deep unrest it must be that causes nearly a thousand different books to be dumped into a single language on a single topic within twenty-five years. And who can measure the effect.

"Germany has passed the first stage of the reform—that of moderation. Abstinence is now the general cry, and with a decided squint toward legislation, both remedial and preventive. At the present swift rate, the reform may have complete Prohibition for its watchword in ten more years."

The International Lesson.

FIRST QUARTER.

LESSON VII.

SECOND MONTH 14, 1904.

JESUS FORGIVES SIN.

Mark 2: 1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT.—The Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins.—Mark 2: 10.

DAILY READINGS.

Second-day, Second mo. 8.—Jesus forgives sins. Mark 2: 1-12.

Third-day, Second mo. 9.—Glad tidings. Acts 10: 34-43.

Fourth-day, Second mo. 10.—Prayer for pardon. Ps. 25: 1-18.

Fifth-day, Second mo. 11.—Forgiveness and healing. Ps. 103: 1-12.

Sixth-day, Second mo. 12.—Blotting out. Isa. 43: 18-25.

Seventh-day, Second mo. 13.—Perfect cleansing. 1 John 1.

First-day, Second mo. 14.—Strange things. Luke 5: 17-26.

Time.—Not long after the last lesson. Some time in A.D. 28.

Place.—Capernaum.

Period in the Life of Christ.—Probably about the middle of the second year of his ministry, and when He was about 31 or 32 years old. Read the verses, Mark 1: 35-45, and notice how Christ took time for prayer and meditation. Read also the parallel accounts of the incidents of the lesson (Matt. 9: 1-8; Luke 5: 17-26).

1. "Capernaum." Christ made this city his headquarters. "It was noised." "Reported." "In the house." In the Greek the expression would usually mean "at home"; possibly that referred to in Matt. 4: 13. "That there was no longer room for them." Revised Version. "Preached." "Spake." Revised Version. The word in the original is not that generally used for preaching. "The Word." The message of the kingdom. Compare Matt. 4: 17; 13; 19, 20. As is generally, if not always, the case in the Bible, the expression, "the word," where it does not clearly refer to Christ Himself (John 1: 1), means the message of God, but is not used of the Scriptures, except possibly in one or two places.

3. "Palsy." "Palsy" is a contraction of "paralysis," and the man was suffering from some form of this disease. He was probably carried on something like a modern stretcher.

4. "Uncovered the roof." The Jewish houses, particularly those of the better class, were built around a courtyard, into which the rooms opened. The roof was flat and made of branches of trees, palm leaves, etc., covered over with earth. There was often a stairway from the outside of the house to the upper chambers and the roof, so it was not hard to carry the man up to the roof, or to break up the roof so he could be let down. This would be particularly easy if the roof, which often covered part of the courtyard, was made of coarse matting or boards. "Bed." An Oriental bed was a simple affair, like a light stretcher.

5. "Their faith." It was put into practice; it was practical faith; it showed their confidence in Christ. "Their faith" includes that of the paralytic. Otherwise he would not have allowed himself to be brought. "Son." Literally, "My child." "Thy sins are forgiven thee." This implies that the sickness was the result of some sin, or that Christ saw that forgiveness for some sin was what the man really desired—more than restoration to health.

6. "Scribes." The teachers of the law. This is the first recorded encounter of Christ with these formalists.

7. "Why doth this man thus speak? He blasphemeth." Revised Version. The blaspheming in this instance was arrogating to himself (in their estimation) what belonged to God only. The statement was strictly true, but they ignored the fact that God might commission Christ to forgive; and also that He might commission men not to forgive, but to declare that God, after certain conditions had been fulfilled by men, did forgive. Such, in fact, was often done by the old prophets, and a declaration of God's forgiveness in Christ is an essential part of the gospel message.

8. "And straightway Jesus perceiving." He perceived it at once. Matthew, in his account, says: "Wherefore think ye evil in your heart." This would show that their questioning arose not from wonder, or honest doubt, but from jealousy or ill-will. "Hearts." In your minds.

9. It should be carefully noted that the distinction is not between the case of healing and the case of forgiving; but which is easier to claim, the power to heal or the power to forgive—the saying, I forgive; or saying, I heal.

10. “But that ye may know.” There could from the nature of the case be no ocular proof of forgiveness, but there could be of healing. He therefore did what to the scribes would seem to be the harder—heal—and so proved that He could do the other—forgive. “Power” in this passage means rather the “right” or “authority.” “Son of Man.” This is the title applied to Himself by Jesus. He uses the title “Son of God” of Himself in John 9: 35.

11, 12. “Arise.” This he had been unable to do, but now, through faith, he becomes a living witness to the compassion and power of Christ. No wonder “that they were all amazed” and “filled with fear” (Luke) and “glorified God.” This was one of the few public miracles which Christ performed; it was in direct answer to a public challenge of His authority.

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

1. Christ Himself forgave; the apostles declared forgiveness through Christ. (Acts 13: 38.)
2. Faith must show itself by practical fruits.

Christian Endeavor

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Lindley D. Clark, 1429 New York Avenue, Washington, D.C.]

TOPIC FOR SECOND MONTH FOURTEENTH.

WHAT WILL REAL FRIENDSHIP DO?

1 Sam. 20: 1-23

Second-day, Second mo. 8.—Faithful friends. Prov. 27: 6-10.
 Third-day, Second mo. 9.—Sympathetic friends. Job. 2: 11-13.
 Fourth-day, Second mo. 10.—How to win friends. Prov. 18: 24.
 Fifth-day, Second mo. 11.—Gain of friendship. Eccl. 4: 9-12.
 Sixth-day, Second mo. 12.—A friendship begun. 1 Sam. 19: 1-7.
 *Seventh-day, Second mo. 13.—The best of friends. John 15: 13-16.

Do we really need friends, and of what use are they? The questions may seem too commercial in their point of view, but it is true that real friendship involves large outlay, and unless the returns justify it, we may be drawn to follow the teaching of Buddha: “Let no man love anything. Those who love nothing and hate nothing have no fetters?” But we think at once of the loss we would each feel if we had no story of David and Jonathan; if Aeneas had no “fidus Achates,” and Damon and Pythias were unknown.

Isolation and insulation are almost impossible, and altogether unprofitable. “One another” is the motive of practically all of Christ’s teaching, after our own acceptance with Him. To care for and serve one another is the mode of our service and of our worship and our growth.

But the rewards of friendship are of that class of gains that cannot be had by directness. If we fix our eyes on the profit, we will certainly bungle in method and miss all. The first requisite for success in the winning of the gains that come through friendship is a goodly capital of unselfishness; for, although the “more blessed” part of the promise assuredly belongs to those who give, it must be actual giving and not a calculating barter.

The word “friend,” in its Anglo-Saxon form, means loving, and that implies acquaintanceship and a meeting of the tests that that involves. Open-heartedness, truthfulness, steadiness, loyalty—these are some of the qualities that invite friendship, and there are none more admirable. To be a Christian signifies that one possesses them, or at least that he is striving toward such an ideal; for the truest Friend of all, who is our pattern, showed them in perfection.

Endeavor constitutes a special bond, and the badge is a card of introduction which Endeavorers are generally quick to recognize, so that we feel ourselves among friends,—those who call out the best from us and who offer us their best, and in this emulation and cultivation of excellences the poor and mediocre in our nature dies from neglect and overshadowing.

In measuring up with those who aspire we find our real stature, for those who “measure themselves by themselves are not wise.” From whatever standpoint, we need friends; they are our best helpers, even though they know the imperfections and the tender spots, and can give us the sharpest hurts that come into our lives. Spite of it all,

“A friend is worth all hazards we can run.”

Missionary Department.

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Herman Newman, 718 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.]

PHILADELPHIA FRIENDS’ MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

REPORT OF THE EXECUTIVE BOARD.

At the opening of the year the Girls’ School Building in Tokyo was in ruins, and the pupils were scattered to their homes. Realizing that our dependence was upon Him who “knows the end from the beginning,” to Him we turned for wisdom and guidance in our extremity. We reverently feel that our prayers have been answered, as the work has gone forward with but slight interruption.

The problem which at that time confronted the Executive Board was a most difficult one, and yet in the providence of God it has been solved, and we trust satisfactorily to the Association.

Many letters were received in First month from the missionaries and influential educators in Tokyo urging the rebuilding of the school and assuring us of the important position it held in the community.

An appeal was made by the Board for money, which, with the insurance, would be sufficient for our needs, and a delegation of two was appointed to visit Tokyo and obtain a clear idea of the whole situation. Thanks to the generous and prompt response of Friends, in a short time a large part of the money was in hand, and the delegation, consisting of our President, Asa S. Wing, and Corresponding Secretary, Margaret W. Haines, left for the field on Second month 11th, accompanied by Mary M. Haines and Katherine Morris.

The results of this visit can never be estimated. "We went out to them," to quote from their report, submitted to the Board, "with some feeling of surrender to serve them and to minister to them. We come back with a sense that rather we have been ministered to and our own souls strengthened, but also with a deep, tender longing that our Association may unite as never before, to spread the knowledge of the gospel in Japan, so ready to receive it and so sadly needing it."

After conference with the workers, it was decided that there should be three separate buildings erected: a girls' dormitory, a home for foreign teachers and a school building, to accommodate one hundred scholars instead of sixty, with room for fifty boarders. Plans were drawn, contracts let, and at or before the specified time the buildings were entirely completed, and are now in use.

Since the return of the delegation we gratefully acknowledge the gift of a sum of money, sufficient to cover the cost of the Girls' Dormitory, a memorial to our late beloved Friend Abby A. Longstreth. In spite of the inconvenience caused by the loss of school rooms and dormitory, the work of the school has gone right on, with, at the last report, an enrollment of 76 girls. This term there have been 59 in attendance, with 27 in the dormitory. These girls come from all classes of society; one is the daughter of a carpenter, another of a steward to the Crown Prince; one is the daughter of a professor in the university, another of the president of the government Middle School. It is interesting to note that three of our native teachers are graduates of the school.

Great as has been the pressure of work upon Gilbert Bowles and all teachers as a result of the fire, drawing up of plans, overseeing, rebuilding, etc., they have continued to devote their lives to the work of leading souls to Christ with almost a super-human power.

There is a First-day morning Bible Class for young men, conducted by Gilbert Bowles, and one for young women, in charge of the foreign teachers. On First-day afternoons the older girls and teachers have four Bible Schools of children, with an enrollment of 800 in different parts of the city short distances from the Mission, and two classes are held in the meeting house conducted by young men. A mothers' meeting, under the care of Minnie P. Bowles, is held once a month at which an address is given by a physician or some other competent person on the care of children, treatment of the sick, etc., after which a Bible lesson is given. The average attendance at these meetings has been sixty-five. Once a month, also, a cooking class is held, which was so large that it has been divided, thus making two, these concluding with a Bible lesson.

Two Bible women have been employed: K. Suzuki by the British and Foreign Bible Society; the other, Shina Kaifu, supported by Indiana W. F. M. A. Thirty-five families have been visited and sixty-five people, chiefly girls and women, read to.

Edith Dillon, who for seven years has so faithfully been working at Tokyo, has this year been granted a furlough. She will return upon the opening of school in the autumn. Sara M. Longstreth offered her services for a year and was given a minute to the Japan Committee on Fourth month 17th. Her interest in the work she has undertaken seems to be great, and her services are most acceptable.

Gurney and Elizabeth Binford, supported by Canada Friends, are still earnestly carrying on their work at Mito, with M. Kato as their valuable helper. On First-day afternoons there are held in the Mission residence a class for aged women, junior classes for young men and women, and a large class for children. Two Bible readers are engaged for the work at Mito, their support coming from the British Foreign Bible Society. Classes in cooking are also held.

The last evangelistic report states that in three years of Christian work at Mito there are three times as many Christians as at first. In a letter from Margaret W. Haines from this place she spoke of attending a most interesting annual meeting at which were one hundred and seventy-eight native Christians, sixty-three of whom had accepted Christ the past year. The Japanese have already started a fund for building a meeting house of their own.

Work is also being carried on at Tsuchiura, supported by the "Earnest Workers" under the care of Benzo Kida and wife. The Japanese helper, C. Suzuki, who has been the means of bringing many souls to Christ at Ishioka, has been obliged to move to Tokyo. He is willing, however, to spend ten days each month at Ishioka until another helper can be procured.

The North School, at Ramallah, Syria, as well as one boy in the Training Home, has received support as last year from the Haverford Branch. About eighty girls have been enabled to attend school at Ras-el-Metn, Syria, and three children in the training homes.

The Haverford College Y. M. C. A. has continued its support of the day school for boys near Hoshangabad, India.

It is by the ever-increasing interest of the five branches and the six Juvenile Bands that the work of the whole Association is carried on. Their reports in detail will be printed.

The Committee on Temperance has sent the "Union Signal," "Temperance Physiology Primer," catalogues of books on temperance subjects, cards and lantern slides to the various stations. The Committee on Peace has sent to the teachers in the various fields selected scripture texts and Dymond's "Essays in Spanish" to Cuba. The Committee on Translation has collected $171.00 for the third edition of C. Foster's "Story of the Gospel," and has sent this to Daniel Oliver, with $20, for Barclay's Apology, which is being re-edited by him.

The Box Committee reports a well-filled trunk sent to Tokyo, with $274.25, contributed in money for those who lost their possessions in the fire. The regular boxes were sent to Tokyo, Japan; to Ramallah, and Brumana, Syria, and Hoshangabad, India.

We feel that the past year has been one of progress; that the interest in the work of this Association has been far-reaching, and that we desire that the blessing of God may attend our efforts in the future as in the past.

EMPTY CONSECRATIONS.

Even a slight brush with Oriental life convinces one that human nature is much the same the world over. A few days before Christmas, in closing a talk with the boys in our Training Home about how true happiness is obtained by giving rather than getting, I asked the boys what they had to give away. A small boy of 11 put up his hand immediately, and when questioned he said, with beaming countenance, "my heart to God." I was a little taken back by the answer, for I had expected an answer of a different sort, but in order to see how much the boy meant by his glib reply, I said, "Yes, that is very well, but will you give your knife to some boy who hasn't one?" His countenance dropped at once, and it was very evident that, like some others, he valued what he had in his pocket more than what he had in his breast.

The incident would be laughable were it not typical of so many consecrations the world over. When stirred in our private devotions or by some fervent appeal we say, "Master, we will follow Thee whithersoever Thou goest," but when He calls for some service which really involves sacrifice, we disavow our consecration.

God speed the day when both at home and abroad there shall be greater sincerity in our professions.

Ramallah, Palestine.

A. EDWARD KELSEY.

If we bear one another's burdens shall we not also share in each other's rewards? May we not here catch a glimpse of one of the felicities of heaven?

Correspondence.

Editor of THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

Dear Friend: I was especially impressed with the article on the subject, "Are Friends Interested in Quakerism." I am sure we are not so much in earnest for our principles as we ought to be. I find many people that, when spoken to about their souls' welfare, will say, "I have tried to live a Christian life and failed." And I am confident that many of them have never known Christ in the pardon of sin. They have just been baptized in water, and have begun to "try to live a Christian life" when they have never become Christians.

Surely the handwriting of ordinances is against us. We ought to be busy telling the world that we may know Christ in the pardon of sin; we may know that we have passed from darkness to light, and that we are "complete in Christ," and have no need of carnal ordinances to save us.

If the principles of Quakerism are worth anything to us we ought to give the world the benefit of them.

Soul purity and a life hid with Christ in God is what we should teach the world by word and deed. People will have confidence in a recommendation that is backed up by a holy life. It is necessary that we not only believe in right principles, but that we prove to the world by our lives that they are right.

SAMUEL BEESON.

Editor of THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

Dear Friend: When reference was made recently to the numerical condition of the yearly meetings, I hoped it would elicit from some one or more Friends some thoughts on the reasons for such an undesirable condition. It seems to me that as men and women interested in the prosperity of our branch of the Church, we cannot but give attention to these matters, and try and find the reasons for such a condition, and see that the causes are removed, if possible. That there has been so little gain amongst so many meetings is surely cause for deep concern.

Now to bring the subject nearer we can see that if there has been no increase in one yearly meeting there must be some meetings where there has doubtless been a loss. For it is hardly likely that there are not some prosperous meetings in any yearly meeting. And if there has been loss in any meeting there must be some cause or causes. I am going to suggest what I think is one cause, with the hope that others may suggest some other causes.

We have had a custom for many years of deciding all questions in business meetings on the unity of expression, and the expressed disapproval of one or two members has been deemed sufficient to control the action of the meeting. While this practice is beautiful in theory, it seems to me that it has bred, in not a few instances, a disposition on the part of some Friends, who are so constituted, that they enjoy being leaders, to assume almost the entire control of the working policy of the meeting in which they live.

I am confident that many who read this will quickly refer in their minds to some good Friends whom they knew who almost absolutely controlled all important action of their meetings, leaving the great body of the meeting with nothing to do but to join in, or, as has often been the case (to the disgust of the clerks), to sit still and say nothing. I can conceive of no more discouraging condition into which a meeting can be placed, or one more likely to diminish the interest than that.

I have in my mind two meetings: One in which the whole church is alive and interested, and they are constantly gaining. The other is practically in the hands of two or three members, and it is constantly diminishing, all conditions in the second, except this to which I refer, being superior, with results exactly opposite.

Now, if any who read this have fallen into this way, I am hoping that it may be the cause of their so changing their action that they may be found trying to get each and every member interested, hiding themselves behind some modest Friend who has little to say and nothing to do, and thus remove one cause of decline, and for it substitute one of encouragement and growth.

AN INTERESTED FRIEND.

Things of Interest Among Ourselves.

Nathan and Mary Brown are doing good work in the meetings at Stella Academy and Pleasant Valley, Okla.

Benjamin F. Trueblood, of Boston, Mass., is booked to lecture before the Twentieth Century Club of Chicago, the 3d and 4th instant.

Josephine Hockett preached in the meeting at Union Street, Kokomo, Ind., the 24th ult. She spoke in both the morning and evening services.

Olney T. Meader, of Boston, Mass., who has been in ill health for many weeks, is very much improved, though he is still obliged to live a quiet, shut-in life.

Isaiah Joy is in the midst of a protracted effort at Hadley, Ind. He came to the work direct from Bock Creek, where the meetings were the occasions of definite blessings for a number of honest hearts.

Hannah J. Baily, of Winthrop, Me., widely known for work toward peace and temperance, has been spending some time in and about Philadelphia. She now intends spending some weeks in Washington, D. C.

Edward Grubb, editor of the "British Friend," sailed for America on the steamship "Oceanic" First month 27th, and should by this date be in New York. He expects to spend some weeks in America.

Sand Creek Quarterly Meeting was held at the Sand Creek Meeting House, near Elizabethtown, Ind., the 22d to 24th ult. Francis W. Thomas, of Dunreith, Ind., was in attendance, and was favored in preaching.

Rosa E. Virtue is laboring in a meeting in Star, Idaho. She recently conducted a meeting in a schoolhouse near that place, in which many professed conversion or renewal.

A fire which did considerable damage broke out in the William Penn Charter School Fourth-day, the 27th ult., after the boys had gone home. It was soon under control, and the damage was rather from water than from fire.

Anna May Pemberton is in Philadelphia gathering data relative to the part Friends took in the anti-slavery efforts in this country. She has been used of the Lord in service both at Twelfth Street and Haverford Meetings.

Eliza P. Williams recently labored in a series of meetings at Sand Creek Meeting, near La Crosse, Kan. She has spent several weeks during the winter in evangelistic efforts in La Crosse Monthly Meeting with substantial results.

F. L. and Olive Ryon, who have been faithful in their service in the meeting at Clintondale, N. Y., feel that it is the call of the Lord for them to locate in the meeting at Poplar Ridge. They expect to take up their work about Fourth month 1st.

David M. Edwards, of Penn College, was in attendance at Minneapolis Quarterly Meeting on the 23d ult. He addressed the morning meeting on the 24th, and also the Y. P. S. C. E. at 6.30 p.m. His company and his messages were thankfully received.

Griffith Wright, of Plainfield, Ind., had a very profitable time with Friends in Woodard County, Okla., last month. He visited the Friends in their homes, and held meetings in different places. He stayed for a five-days' meeting near Curtis, Okla., closing the 17th ult.

Joseph G. Cannon, Speaker of the House, recently presented a leather-bound copy of the "Rules and Practices of the House of Representatives" to Friends' Bloomingdale Academy, Bloomingdale, Ind. Speaker Cannon was a pupil in this institution, and still has a high regard for the school.

A series of meetings held for three weeks at Watseka, Ill., were conducted by Zeno and Leona Doan, of Danville, assisted by the local minister, Willis Bond. The efforts resulted in the conversion and reclamation of many souls. The meeting was greatly strengthened and a goodly number was added to the membership.

A three-weeks' meeting recently closed at Mount Ayr, Kansas. The local minister, Henry Dalrymple, was assisted by R. G. Miller and R. C. Smith, of Edson, Kansas; M. F. Swoford, from Craven, Kansas, was present part of the time. Arrangements are being perfected for holding a camp meeting there in Sixth month.

A short series of meetings was held at Marion, Oregon, by Harvey F. Tyler. His teaching was on gospel lines, and his labor of love was encouraging. The afternoon meetings were devoted to Bible study. The covenants of the Old and New Testaments, culminating in Christ, a risen and conquering Saviour, were the special lines of teaching.

Ira D. Kellogg, of Oskaloosa, Iowa, Iowa Yearly Meeting's chairman of the committee for the "suppression of the liquor traffic," just closed a nine-days' gospel temperance crusade within the limits of Chapel (Mo.) Monthly Meeting of Friends. He delivered twenty-seven lectures and sermons, and obtained eight hundred total abstinence pledges. Great interest prevailed in all his meetings both at the public schools and the different churches.

Benjamin H. Hutchins, an evangelist from Indiana Yearly Meeting, held a series of meetings at Pleasant Valley Schoolhouse, seven miles west of Stella Academy, and three miles west of Ingersoll, O. T. The meetings lasted a little more than two weeks. The gospel was presented with great clearness, and though there was only one conversion and a few renewals, there was a good attendance, and much good will doubtless result from the work. The meetings closed the 20th ult. Joseph Winslow, a Christian worker of Kansas Yearly Meeting, also attended the meetings.

Pleasant Valley Monthly Meeting of Friends met at Antioch, Kan., the 23d ult. At this meeting the committee to secure Disciplines was directed to order twenty-five for the Antioch and Pleasant Valley Meetings. Almedia M. Carey requested her right of membership sent to the United Presbyterian Church at Stafford on account of her inability to attend Friends' meeting. Dora Parnham was appointed to take charge of the Home Missionary work in Pleasant Valley Monthly Meeting. Jennie C. Muns, of St. John, Kan., was received into membership. On Sabbath following monthly meeting Lindon Swafford and Charles Binford were very acceptably present at the meeting.

Josiah Morris, of Coloma, Ind., one of the vice-presidents of the Indiana Sabbath School Association, expects to attend the World's Convention in Jerusalem, Fourth month 18th to 20th. He goes as a delegate from this State. He is a most earnest Sabbath School worker, and is a highly-esteemed member of Western Yearly Meeting.

The meetings at Knightstown, Ind., in which John L. Kettrell was laboring, were suspended on the 21st ult., on account of the severe weather and the prevailing sickness of a large number of the members. During his stay he gave profitable instruction to those in attendance, and the membership was greatly benefited by his work. In spite of the hindrances some definite results were manifest. The meeting will attempt another series of meetings later in the season.

The Friends at Cherokee, Okla., have requested a monthly meeting, and the matter has been referred to Stella Quarterly Meeting, which will be held at Ringwood, Okla., first Seventh-day in Third month. The meeting at Cherokee has grown rapidly since its organization two years ago. There were fifteen families and parts of families at that time. Ten families have moved into the vicinity from Iowa and Kansas, and there have been several received by request, so that now there is a strong membership. The success of the meeting is largely due to the earnest efforts of the local minister, John Snaveley.

Willis R. Hotchkiss is now serving as a traveling secretary for the Student Volunteer Movement and expects to visit colleges and universities in the eastern part of the United States and Canada. He spent a few days last week in Philadelphia. On the 24th he delivered four addresses, in which he depicted many of his adventures in Africa, and made strong appeals for Christian young men to dedicate their lives to foreign missionary service. He spoke to large crowds of men at Baldwin Locomotive Works, and had very successful meetings with the university students and students from other institutions while in the city. The "Philadelphia Press" gives an interesting report of him and his work in the issue of the 25th.

The meeting at Friendswood, Texas, has been especially favored in the last three months by the presence of visiting ministers. In the early part of Eleventh month Josiah Butler, Superintendent of Evangelistic Work in Kansas Yearly Meeting, spent several days there, visiting among Friends and preaching. J. F. Hanson, of Iowa, while on a trip to Galveston, stopped at Friendswood over First-day. He preached in the morning and evening services, and talked to the Academy students on Second-day morning. He gave them an interesting description of his native country, Norway. At Christmas-time, Father Neal, of Wichita, Kansas, began a series of meetings. He was soon joined in the work by Rachel Middleton, of Indiana. The resident ministers also rendered valuable assistance. Several conversions and a general uplifting was the result. The meeting enjoys the presence of three resident ministers—Nathan and Mary Perry and J. V. Jewell, who are faithful workers. There seems to be a prospect for work among others than Friends. Two families, from Iowa, have recently settled within the limits of the meeting. Others may follow.

MARRIED.

JENKINS—HEATON.—At Clintondale, N. Y., First month 20th, 1904, Harold G. Jenkins, son of Charles and Jennie Jenkins, and Frances L. Heaton, daughter of Reuben and Sarah Heaton, all of Clintondale Meeting.

DIED.

BAILEY.—Near Saffordville, Kansas, First month 6th, 1904, Ann Elizabeth, wife of Albert R. Bailey, a little over 71 years of age. She was a Christian from childhood, and a member of Friends. She served in a number of important offices in the meeting. Her remains were interred in the cemetery at Toledo, Kansas.

LINDLEY.—At the home of her son, John E. Lindley, Paoli, Ind., First month 23d, 1904, Eliza Jane Lindley, wife of Samuel T. Lindley, at a ripe old age. She was a birthright Friend, and a Christian from childhood.

MAXFIELD.—At Casco, Maine, First month 15th, 1904, Saloma Cook Maxfield, aged over ninety years. She was a life-long and earnestly interested member of the little meeting at Casco, and brought up a family of six children, who are all loyal to the church of their mother. In her home there was always the heartiest kindness and hospitality.

Events and Comments.

A terrific explosion in a mine at Cheswick, Pa., caused the death of 184 miners one day last week.

Emperor Menelik, of French Somaliland, has sent two lions and other gifts to President Roosevelt as a New Year's present.

Several varieties of field and garden seeds will be in short supply the coming season. This applies particularly to vine seeds, cucumber, sweet corn and certain kinds of beans, etc.

The hospitals of New York city are all overcrowded, owing largely to the large number of cases of pneumonia, for the disease fairly amounts to an epidemic, and has for several weeks.

Raw silk and silk goods to the value of $1,932,000 are en route across the Pacific to Vancouver on board the Empress of China. In quantity and value the shipment is a record-breaking one for the coast. The shipment measures 960 tons, and it will take twenty freight cars to transport it across the continent to the silk mills at Weehawken, N. J.

An unlimited quantity of carnotite ore, in which radium is found, has been discovered in Utah. This will not make it cheap by any means, since the quantity of it in a given amount of ore is very small, and the cost of isolating it is heavy. But at least there will be enough available for the use of laboratories and private scientists, and that is the main thing.

WELL POSTED.

A California Doctor With Forty Years' Experience.

"In my forty years' experience as a teacher and practitioner along hygienic lines," says a Los Angeles physician, "I have never found a food to compare with Grape-Nuts for the benefit of the general health of all classes of people. I have recommended Grape-Nuts for a number of years to patients with the greatest success, and every year's experience makes me more enthusiastic regarding its use.

"I make it a rule to always recommend Grape-Nuts and Postum Food Coffee in place of coffee when giving my patients instructions as to diet, for I know both Grape-Nuts and Postum can be digested by anyone.

"As for myself, when engaged in much mental work my diet twice a day consists of Grape-Nuts and rich cream. I find it just the thing to build up gray matter, and keep the brain in good working order.

"In addition to its wonderful effects as a brain and nerve food Grape-Nuts always keeps the digestive organs in perfect, healthy tone. I carry it with me when I travel, otherwise I am almost certain to have trouble with my stomach." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Strong endorsements like the above from physicians all over the country have stamped Grape-Nuts the most scientific food in the world.

There's a reason.

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

In his recent Birmingham lecture Sir Oliver Lodge asserted that the spontaneous "explosion" of the atom in radium, due to the fact that the electrons of which the atoms are composed are constantly being driven out, "constitutes a novel source of energy larger than any previously known." It affects our estimate of the probable age of the sun and the past age of the earth.

Transatlantic steamship agents at New York report an unusually heavy outward movement of first-class passengers for the season, and the bookings for late winter and early spring sailings are said to be the largest ever known. Possibly the on-coming of the St. Louis Exposition affords an explanation, in inducing people accustomed to go to Europe every summer to make the journey earlier in order to get back in time to visit the Louisiana Purchase Fair, though they are not of the class that such shows appeal to; but, in any event, it is made clear that the "rich man's panic" has not cut very deeply into the rich man's means of enjoying this common luxury.

In Fifth month, unless war prevents, a train de luxe will begin running from Paris, by way of Berlin and Warsaw, to Peking. First-class round-trip tickets will be sold for $204. With one of these the traveler may make the trip both ways by rail, or one way by rail and the other by water. The tickets will be good on all regular lines of ships voyaging around Asia. The rail trip will be made in seventeen days. It was about seven months ago that the capital of China was joined by rail to Western Europe. About two months ago the "New York Sun" printed a map of the route. Freight cars have run through, and some passengers have made the journey by changing cars. A road is now being made to shorten the route by one hundred miles. This belongs to the order of world progress.

The Secretary of Agriculture has approved the plans for the cotton boll weevil investigation in the Southwest, for which a special appropriation of $250,000 has been made available. The plans approved embody the following lines of investigation: Farmers' co-operative demonstration work, which will involve the organization of farmers in Texas and adjacent States in such a way as to secure the cultivation of tracts of cotton under specific instructions from the Department of Agriculture; plant breeding and selection work, which work will have for its object the improvement of present varieties of cotton; cotton diseases; diversification of crops. Thirteen farms for the growing of cotton will be located in Texas, and the investigations conducted will have for their object the determination of numerous questions relative to combating the boll weevil which have not yet been definitely settled.

Earnest work in several Missouri River States promises to bring a betterment in the farm labor question next harvest. The Western Association of State Free Employment Bureaus, recently organized, is formulating plans for the securing of needed farm help to care for the grain harvests, beginning with Oklahoma, and moving northward through Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota and Minnesota. It is estimated that any of two or three of our big Western States could advantageously utilize 12,000 to 15,000 more men than were available in the harvest fields of last year. It is now proposed that each of the seven States named perfect a labor bureau, keeping in touch with a headquarters or central distributing point, this to act as a sort of clearing house for the requirements of the several States. It is hoped the association will handle 35,000 to 40,000 men the coming season, beginning early in Sixth month and ending in Tenth month.

IT IS A MATTER OF HEALTH

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

The Board of Managers of the American Bible Society at the close of the present fiscal year, Third month 31st, will have so far expended the funds at its disposal that, unless large contributions are received in the meanwhile, it will be imperative upon it to seriously curtail its work, and it may even be compelled in some fields to discontinue the distribution of the Bible. The benevolent receipts of the last year have fallen about $50,000 below the average for the last ten years. The falling off has been largely due to decrease in gifts from legacies. The permanent trust funds in the hands of the society, which amount to $522,121, yield an income only sufficient to carry on the present work of the society for a few weeks. The only other income-bearing property of the society is the Bible House, which was given for the especial purpose of making a home for the society's work. The rentals of the portion not used by the society are applied to the cost of administration, thereby in large measure relieving the benevolent funds of these expenses. The society also has as assets its plant and its stock of books at home and abroad, but these, of course, yield no income.

MANY BEVERAGES

are so vastly improved by the added richness imparted by the use of Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk. The Eagle Brand is prepared from the milk of herds of well-fed, housed, groomed cows of native breeds. Every can is tested and is therefore reliable.

Rosa E. Virtue is laboring in a meeting in Star, Idaho. She recently conducted a meeting in a schoolhouse near that place, in which many professed conversion or renewal.

A fire which did considerable damage broke out in the William Penn Charter School Fourth-day, the 27th ult., after the boys had gone home. It was soon under control, and the damage was rather from water than from fire.

Anna May Pemberton is in Philadelphia gathering data relative to the part Friends took in the anti-slavery efforts in this country. She has been used of the Lord in service both at Twelfth Street and Haverford Meetings.

Eliza P. Williams recently labored in a series of meetings at Sand Creek Meeting, near La Crosse, Kan. She has spent several weeks during the winter in evangelistic efforts in La Crosse Monthly Meeting with substantial results.

F. L. and Olive Ryon, who have been faithful in their service in the meeting at Clintondale, N. Y., feel that it is the call of the Lord for them to locate in the meeting at Poplar Ridge. They expect to take up their work about Fourth month 1st.

David M. Edwards, of Penn College, was in attendance at Minneapolis Quarterly Meeting on the 23d ult. He addressed the morning meeting on the 24th, and also the Y. P. S. C. E. at 6.30 p.m. His company and his messages were thankfully received.

Griffith Wright, of Plainfield, Ind., had a very profitable time with Friends in Woodard County, Okla., last month. He visited the Friends in their homes, and held meetings in different places. He stayed for a five-days' meeting near Curtis, Okla., closing the 17th ult.

Joseph G. Cannon, Speaker of the House, recently presented a leather-bound copy of the "Rules and Practices of the House of Representatives" to Friends' Bloomingdale Academy, Bloomingdale, Ind. Speaker Cannon was a pupil in this institution, and still has a high regard for the school.

A series of meetings held for three weeks at Watseka, Ill., were conducted by Zeno and Leona Doan, of Danville, assisted by the local minister, Willis Bond. The efforts resulted in the conversion and reclamation of many souls. The meeting was greatly strengthened and a goodly number was added to the membership.

A three-weeks' meeting recently closed at Mount Ayr, Kansas. The local minister, Henry Dalrymple, was assisted by R. G. Miller and R. C. Smith, of Edson, Kansas; M. F. Swoford, from Craven, Kansas, was present part of the time. Arrangements are being perfected for holding a camp meeting there in Sixth month.

A short series of meetings was held at Marion, Oregon, by Harvey F. Tyler. His teaching was on gospel lines, and his labor of love was encouraging. The afternoon meetings were devoted to Bible study. The covenants of the Old and New Testaments, culminating in Christ, a risen and conquering Saviour, were the special lines of teaching.

Ira D. Kellogg, of Oskaloosa, Iowa, Iowa Yearly Meeting's chairman of the committee for the "suppression of the liquor traffic," just closed a nine-days' gospel temperance crusade within the limits of Chapel (Mo.) Monthly Meeting of Friends. He delivered twenty-seven lectures and sermons, and obtained eight hundred total abstinence pledges. Great interest prevailed in all his meetings both at the public schools and the different churches.

Benjamin H. Hutchins, an evangelist from Indiana Yearly Meeting, held a series of meetings at Pleasant Valley Schoolhouse, seven miles west of Stella Academy, and three miles west of Ingersoll, O. T. The meetings lasted a little more than two weeks. The gospel was presented with great clearness, and though there was only one conversion and a few renewals, there was a good attendance, and much good will doubtless result from the work. The meetings closed the 20th ult. Joseph Winslow, a Christian worker of Kansas Yearly Meeting, also attended the meetings.

Pleasant Valley Monthly Meeting of Friends met at Antioch, Kan., the 23d ult. At this meeting the committee to secure Disciplines was directed to order twenty-five for the Antioch and Pleasant Valley Meetings. Almedia M. Carey requested her right of membership sent to the United Presbyterian Church at Stafford on account of her inability to attend Friends' meeting. Dora Parnham was appointed to take charge of the Home Missionary work in Pleasant Valley Monthly Meeting. Jennie C. Muns, of St. John, Kan., was received into membership. On Sabbath following monthly meeting Lindon Swafford and Charles Binford were very acceptably present at the meeting.

Josiah Morris, of Coloma, Ind., one of the vice-presidents of the Indiana Sabbath School Association, expects to attend the World's Convention in Jerusalem, Fourth month 18th to 20th. He goes as a delegate from this State. He is a most earnest Sabbath School worker, and is a highly-esteemed member of Western Yearly Meeting.

The meetings at Knightstown, Ind., in which John L. Kettrell was laboring, were suspended on the 21st ult., on account of the severe weather and the prevailing sickness of a large number of the members. During his stay he gave profitable instruction to those in attendance, and the membership was greatly benefited by his work. In spite of the hindrances some definite results were manifest. The meeting will attempt another series of meetings later in the season.

The Friends at Cherokee, Okla., have requested a monthly meeting, and the matter has been referred to Stella Quarterly Meeting, which will be held at Ringwood, Okla., first Seventh-day in Third month. The meeting at Cherokee has grown rapidly since its organization two years ago. There were fifteen families and parts of families at that time. Ten families have moved into the vicinity from Iowa and Kansas, and there have been several received by request, so that now there is a strong membership. The success of the meeting is largely due to the earnest efforts of the local minister, John Snavelly.

Willis R. Hotchkiss is now serving as a traveling secretary for the Student Volunteer Movement and expects to visit colleges and universities in the eastern part of the United States and Canada. He spent a few days last week in Philadelphia. On the 24th he delivered four addresses, in which he depicted many of his adventures in Africa, and made strong appeals for Christian young men to dedicate their lives to foreign missionary service. He spoke to large crowds of men at Baldwin Locomotive Works, and had very successful meetings with the university students and students from other institutions while in the city. The "Philadelphia Press" gives an interesting report of him and his work in the issue of the 25th.

The meeting at Friendswood, Texas, has been especially favored in the last three months by the presence of visiting ministers. In the early part of Eleventh month Josiah Butler, Superintendent of Evangelistic Work in Kansas Yearly Meeting, spent several days there, visiting among Friends and preaching. J. F. Hanson, of Iowa, while on a trip to Galveston, stopped at Friendswood over First-day. He preached in the morning and evening services, and talked to the Academy students on Second-day morning. He gave them an interesting description of his native country, Norway. At Christmas-time, Father Neal, of Wichita, Kansas, began a series of meetings. He was soon joined in the work by Rachel Middleton, of Indiana. The resident ministers also rendered valuable assistance. Several conversions and a general uplifting was the result. The meeting enjoys the presence of three resident ministers—Nathan and Mary Perry and J. V. Jewell, who are faithful workers. There seems to be a prospect for work among others than Friends. Two families, from Iowa, have recently settled within the limits of the meeting. Others may follow.

MARRIED.

JENKINS—HEATON.—At Clintondale, N. Y., First month 20th, 1904, Harold G. Jenkins, son of Charles and Jennie Jenkins, and Frances L. Heaton, daughter of Reuben and Sarah Heaton, all of Clintondale Meeting.

DIED.

BAILEY.—Near Saffordville, Kansas, First month 6th, 1904, Ann Elizabeth, wife of Albert R. Bailey, a little over 71 years of age. She was a Christian from childhood, and a member of Friends. She served in a number of important offices in the meeting. Her remains were interred in the cemetery at Toledo, Kansas.

LINDLEY.—At the home of her son, John E. Lindley, Paoli, Ind., First month 23d, 1904, Eliza Jane Lindley, wife of Samuel T. Lindley, at a ripe old age. She was a birthright Friend, and a Christian from childhood.

MAXFIELD.—At Casco, Maine, First month 15th, 1904, Saloma Cook Maxfield, aged over ninety years. She was a lifelong and earnestly interested member of the little meeting at Casco, and brought up a family of six children, who are all loyal to the church of their mother. In her home there was always the heartiest kindness and hospitality.

Events and Comments.

A terrific explosion in a mine at Cheswick, Pa., caused the death of 184 miners one day last week.

Emperor Menelik, of French Somaliland, has sent two lions and other gifts to President Roosevelt as a New Year's present.

Several varieties of field and garden seeds will be in short supply the coming season. This applies particularly to vine seeds, cucumber, sweet corn and certain kinds of beans, etc.

The hospitals of New York city are all overcrowded, owing largely to the large number of cases of pneumonia, for the disease fairly amounts to an epidemic, and has for several weeks.

Raw silk and silk goods to the value of $1,932,000 are en route across the Pacific to Vancouver on board the Empress of China. In quantity and value the shipment is a record-breaking one for the coast. The shipment measures 960 tons, and it will take twenty freight cars to transport it across the continent to the silk mills at Weehawken, N. J.

An unlimited quantity of carnotite ore, in which radium is found, has been discovered in Utah. This will not make it cheap by any means, since the quantity of it in a given amount of ore is very small, and the cost of isolating it is heavy. But at least there will be enough available for the use of laboratories and private scientists, and that is the main thing.

WELL POSTED.

A California Doctor With Forty Years' Experience.

"In my forty years' experience as a teacher and practitioner along hygienic lines," says a Los Angeles physician, "I have never found a food to compare with Grape-Nuts for the benefit of the general health of all classes of people. I have recommended Grape-Nuts for a number of years to patients with the greatest success, and every year's experience makes me more enthusiastic regarding its use.

"I make it a rule to always recommend Grape-Nuts and Postum Food Coffee in place of coffee when giving my patients instructions as to diet, for I know both Grape-Nuts and Postum can be digested by anyone.

"As for myself, when engaged in much mental work my diet twice a day consists of Grape-Nuts and rich cream. I find it just the thing to build up gray matter, and keep the brain in good working order.

"In addition to its wonderful effects as a brain and nerve food Grape-Nuts always keeps the digestive organs in perfect, healthy tone. I carry it with me when I travel, otherwise I am almost certain to have trouble with my stomach." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Strong endorsements like the above from physicians all over the country have stamped Grape-Nuts the most scientific food in the world.

There's a reason.

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

In his recent Birmingham lecture Sir Oliver Lodge asserted that the spontaneous "explosion" of the atom in radium, due to the fact that the electrons of which the atoms are composed are constantly being driven out, "constitutes a novel source of energy larger than any previously known." It affects our estimate of the probable age of the sun and the past age of the earth.

Transatlantic steamship agents at New York report an unusually heavy outward movement of first-class passengers for the season, and the bookings for late winter and early spring sailings are said to be the largest ever known. Possibly the on-coming of the St. Louis Exposition affords an explanation, in inducing people accustomed to go to Europe every summer to make the journey earlier in order to get back in time to visit the Louisiana Purchase Fair, though they are not of the class that such shows appeal to; but, in any event, it is made clear that the "rich man's panic" has not cut very deeply into the rich man's means of enjoying this common luxury.

In Fifth month, unless war prevents, a train de luxe will begin running from Paris, by way of Berlin and Warsaw, to Peking. First-class round-trip tickets will be sold for $204. With one of these the traveler may make the trip both ways by rail, or one way by rail and the other by water. The tickets will be good on all regular lines of ships voyaging around Asia. The rail trip will be made in seventeen days. It was about seven months ago that the capital of China was joined by rail to Western Europe. About two months ago the "New York Sun" printed a map of the route. Freight cars have run through, and some passengers have made the journey by changing cars. A road is now being made to shorten the route by one hundred miles. This belongs to the order of world progress.

The Secretary of Agriculture has approved the plans for the cotton boll weevil investigation in the Southwest, for which a special appropriation of $250,000 has been made available. The plans approved embody the following lines of investigation: Farmers' co-operative demonstration work, which will involve the organization of farmers in Texas and adjacent States in such a way as to secure the cultivation of tracts of cotton under specific instructions from the Department of Agriculture; plant breeding and selection work, which work will have for its object the improvement of present varieties of cotton; cotton diseases; diversification of crops. Thirteen farms for the growing of cotton will be located in Texas, and the investigations conducted will have for their object the determination of numerous questions relative to combating the boll weevil which have not yet been definitely settled.

Earnest work in several Missouri River States promises to bring a betterment in the farm labor question next harvest. The Western Association of State Free Employment Bureaus, recently organized, is formulating plans for the securing of needed farm help to care for the grain harvests, beginning with Oklahoma, and moving northward through Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota and Minnesota. It is estimated that any of two or three of our big Western States could advantageously utilize 12,000 to 15,000 more men than were available in the harvest fields of last year. It is now proposed that each of the seven States named perfect a labor bureau, keeping in touch with a headquarters or central distributing point, this to act as a sort of clearing house for the requirements of the several States. It is hoped the association will handle 35,000 to 40,000 men the coming season, beginning early in Sixth month and ending in Tenth month.

IT IS A MATTER OF HEALTH

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

The Board of Managers of the American Bible Society at the close of the present fiscal year, Third month 31st, will have so far expended the funds at its disposal that, unless large contributions are received in the meanwhile, it will be imperative upon it to seriously curtail its work, and it may even be compelled in some fields to discontinue the distribution of the Bible. The benevolent receipts of the last year have fallen about $50,000 below the average for the last ten years. The falling off has been largely due to decrease in gifts from legacies. The permanent trust funds in the hands of the society, which amount to $522,121, yield an income only sufficient to carry on the present work of the society for a few weeks. The only other income-bearing property of the society is the Bible House, which was given for the especial purpose of making a home for the society's work. The rentals of the portion not used by the society are applied to the cost of administration, thereby in large measure relieving the benevolent funds of these expenses. The society also has as assets its plant and its stock of books at home and abroad, but these, of course, yield no income.

MANY BEVERAGES

are so vastly improved by the added richness imparted by the use of Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk. The Eagle Brand is prepared from the milk of herds of well-fed, housed, groomed cows of native breeds. Every can is tested and is therefore reliable.

We are Going to Stop at the Christian Endeavor Hotel,
World's Fair, St. Louis

And so are we, Because

It will be the headquarters during the Exposition for Christian Endeavorers, Baptist Young People, Sunday Schools, Educators, etc. Adjoining the Fair Grounds, with street cars direct from Union Station to hotel. Built for perfect safety and comfort. Capacity, 3,000 daily; Auditorium 3,000. Backed by men of highest standing; endorsed by St. Louis Clergy. Charter Certificates, series A, issued on receipt of $1.00, entitle holders to reduced rate of $1.00 per day for lodging, or $2.00 per day for lodging and board. For full particulars, address at once, Christian Endeavor Hotel and Auditorium Co., CHEMICAL BUILDING, ST. LOUIS, MO.

God reads our character in our prayers. What we love best, what we covet most, that gives the key to our hearts.—Theodore L. Cuyler, D.D.

The New-Century

TYPEWRITER

does the BEST WORK and lots of it, EASILY.

Strong, Thoroughly Built,
Superior in results to any other.

Write for
"THE BOOK OF THE NEW CENTURY."

AMERICAN WRITING MACHINE COMPANY,
1033 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a.

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hôte, 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p.m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cts. per night; $3 per week.

Two occupants, 50 cts. each, per night.
2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL
Phone Spruce 33-55. Clerk.

TOLD AGE BY HIS HORNS.

John Morley, a few days after the publication of his "Life of Gladstone," told, in a speech at Sheffield, a story of Gladstone's boyhood.

"The lad," he said, "was in the country. A farmer was showing him over his estate. The farmer would pause before each field to describe it, and before every cow, horse and pig he would make a brief biographical address.

"Finally they came to a small field that contained a large black bull.

"That is a fine bull there, Master William," said the farmer, "a very fine, strong, two-year-old bull."

"Two years old?" said the boy.

"Yes, two years, sir."

"How do you tell its age?"

"Why, by its horns."

"The little boy frowned. He paused a moment. Then his countenance cleared.

"Ah," he said, "by its horns. I see—two horns, two years."—Ex.

"Promises may get friends, but it is performance that keeps them."

"THE SOUTHERN'S PALM LIMITED."

The splendor of equipment and the punctual performance of the excellent schedule account for the superior patronage of this train.

Three-eleven p.m. every day, except Sunday, this train leaves West Philadelphia, and arrives the next afternoon at St. Augustine at 3.30 o'clock.

It is an exclusive Pullman train, with the latest examples of high art in composite cars, smoking-room and barber-shop, bath-room, buffet, etc. Then there are Pullman compartment cars, drawing-room cars, state-room cars and observation cars.

Philadelphia and the East Coast of Florida are thus quickly and comfortably united, and distribution is made along the way for other important Southern resorts, with through service between Philadelphia and Aiken, Augusta, etc.

The dining-car service on the Southern Railway is a particular feature of superiority. Every detail which experience and skill could suggest has been arranged by the management of the Southern Railway to have the service of this train meet every wish of its high-class passengers.

Unusually good reports are being received daily of the delight of the passengers, and the regularity of their arrival at their Southern destinations on time.

Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, will take pleasure in furnishing all information.

FLORIDA AND THE CAROLINAS— WINTER RESORTS.

Palm Beach, Miami, Daytona, Tampa, Jacksonville, Camden, Southern Pines, Pinehurst are quickly and most conveniently reached via the Seaboard Air Line. Three daily trains in each direction, including the Seaboard Florida Limited, the handsomest and quickest train in the Florida service. Tourist tickets on sale daily, with stop-over privileges. For description, booklets and information, address W. E. Conklyn, General Agent, 1411 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Without MACBETH on it what can you expect of a lamp-chimney!

You need to know how to manage your lamps to have comfort with them at small cost.

Better read my Index; I send it free.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

C. M. Sheldon once married a young man and woman at the parsonage. After the ceremony was over the groom fumbled in his pockets and then remarked casually: "Well, dominie, I guess I ain't got a cent to pay you with; but I tell you what I'll do. I'll tell you how to fix your gas meter so it won't register a foot a month."

What do we live for if it is not to make life less difficult to each other?—George Eliot.

SEED POTATOES

500,000 BUSHELS FOR SALE CHEAP

Largest seed potato growers in the world!
Elegant stock. Tremendous yields.
From 400 to 1000 bushels per acre.

FOR 10 CENTS

and this notice we send you lots of farm seed samples and big catalogue, telling all about Teosinte, Speltz, Peasat, Aerid Land Barley, Macaroni Wheat, Bromus, Earliest Cane, etc. Send for same today.

JOHN A. SALZER.

SEED CO. LA CROSSE, WIS.

10 BEAUTIFUL PICTURES FREE

In order to introduce our QUAKER OINTMENT into every home where THE AMERICAN FRIEND is read, we have decided to make the following liberal offer. To every person sending us 25 cents for one box of QUAKER OINTMENT, and 4 cents extra to pay postage, we will send absolutely free the following 10 pictures. These pictures are gems of art. For picture study, art collections, gifts and home decoration, they are of great value. The Last Supper, Christ in Gethsemane, Christ Taken Captive, Christ Before Pilate, Christ Bearing the Cross, The Crucifixion, Entombment, In the Sepulchre, The Ascension, Transfiguration. It is costing us a great deal of money to advertise in this way, but we trust you will be pleased with our liberality, and will favor us with an order for a box of our ointment, and get these 10 beautiful pictures free. QUAKER OINTMENT is the best known remedy for catarrh, eczema, and all skin diseases. Rev. Asa Woodard, pastor Friends' Meeting at Butlerville, Ind., says: "I am using QUAKER OINTMENT, and find it an excellent remedy." Mrs. Clara Chaney, Rural Route No. 3, Warren, Ind., says: "I have never found anything as good as QUAKER OINTMENT for catarrh, sores and skin diseases." Send us your order to-day. Quaker Ointment sent to any address upon receipt of 25 cents.

DAVIS MFG. CO., Butlerville, Ind.

The American Friend Premiums

A BOY'S RELIGION, FROM MEMORY

By RUFUS M. JONES

NO subject teems with greater interest, or is fraught with greater issues than the religious development of early childhood. It is the foundation work of character, yet it is little understood by parents and less by children. Here is a most helpful work for young and old alike. It is the simple narrative of the religious awakening in a young soul which strikes a responsive chord in every heart. The work is beautifully printed on deckle-edged paper, and bound in a striking and original design. It is handsomely furnished with illustrations of places and persons mentioned in the text. Price, $0.75.

THIS BOOK (postpaid), with ONE NEW Subscription. Both for $1.50
THIS BOOK (postpaid), with a RENEWAL Subscription. Both for $2.00

Aunt Charlotte's Stories of Bible History

By CHARLOTTE M. YONGE

CONTAINS over 100 stories from the Holy Book, richly embellished with 19 full-page Color Plates and Photo-Engravings, together with nearly 100 other illustrations. Beginning with the dawn of creation, every important historical event in the Bible is brought out in the order of their happening, thus leading the little ones along the most pleasant ways from Genesis to Revelation.

This book will give the Bible a new charm for children, and they will read it with a new understanding. Price $0.75.

THIS BOOK (postpaid), with ONE NEW Subscription. Both for $1.50
THIS BOOK (postpaid), with a RENEWAL Subscription. Both for $2.00

Size $7\frac{1}{2} \times 10$ inches. Handsomely bound in cloth. Printed in gold and many colors. 250 pages. Over 100 illustrations.

The New Child's Life of Christ

By HESBA STRETTON

CONTAINS choice Biblical Pictures from the world's leading artists, thirty-two of which are full-page illustrations. The book presents the Life of Jesus as it is understood by the most devout and careful students of His Life. The graphic descriptions and the accurate and beautiful illustrations take one into the very midst of the sacred scenes and subjects. This volume throws a flood of light on the sacred pages, and leads the tender reader to the foot of the cross. Price, $0.75.

THIS BOOK (postpaid), with ONE NEW Subscription. Both for $1.50
THIS BOOK (postpaid), with a RENEWAL Subscription. Both for $2.00

Size $7\frac{1}{2} \times 9\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Rich cloth binding. Stamped in gold and colors. 250 pages. Profusely illustrated.

THE BARNARD EDITION

—OF—

The Pilgrim's Progress

By JOHN BUNYAN

PROBABLY no book, except the Bible, has been printed in such immense numbers, and has had so wide a circulation among readers of all ages. It should be in every home where children live. The Barnard Edition of "The Pilgrim's Progress" is the only edition containing nearly sixty full-page pictures and fifty portrait and character illustrations, by Barnard and others; four full-page chromo-lithographs; the beautiful poem "The Little Pilgrim"; also, 388 Bible references, making in all 327 quarto pages, 8 x 10 inches, printed on double thick, extra quality, super-calendered paper. It is tastily and elegantly bound with extra silk cloth.

It is the cheapest finely illustrated book published. Price, $1.50.

THIS BOOK with ONE NEW Subscription. Both for $1.50
THIS BOOK with a RENEWAL Subscription. Both for $2.00

(For The Pilgrim's Progress add 20 cents for postage.)

Any one of the above books sent on receipt of price.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND, 718 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Pocket Almanac for 1904

CONTAINING DATES OF HOLDING

THE YEARLY MEETINGS ROUND THE WORLD.

ALSO THE

QUARTERLY MEETINGS IN THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA, STATISTICS, ETC.

Price, Five Cents.

12 Copies, Fifty Cents.

Postage Stamps Received.

FRIENDS' BOOK AND TRACT COMMITTEE, 51 Fifth Ave., NEW YORK

If you never yielded to temptation you would be absolutely perfect. Let your failures drive you closer to Christ, in whom your hope of deliverance lies.

Our Subscribers are invited to use the column of Subscribers' Wants (See page 84). It will be found useful for many purposes—renting property, selling goods, securing help or positions, for advertising boarding-houses and hotels, and for almost everything where good results are expected at a small expenditure.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE.

Sifts the flour and mixes 10 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (Cyrus Chambers, Jr.) 524 & Media Sts., Philadelphia

WILLIAM S. YARNALL
Manufacturing OPTICIAN

118 S. FIFTEENTH ST., PHILA.
4th Door Below Chestnut St.

43 FLOWERS 30¢

Worth $1.25
SPECIAL OFFER to introduce our goods.
Money back if not pleased.

20 Pkts. Seeds

- 1 Pkt. Diamond Flower.
- 1 Sample Aster, 4 cols.
- 1 California Sweet Pea.
- 1 Pkt. Washington Weeping Palm.
- 1 Pkt. Heliotrope, mixed.
- 1 Pkt. Umbrella Plant.
- 1 Pkt. Double Chinese Pink.
- 1 Pkt. Japan Morning Glory.
- 1 New Candy Tuft Impasse.
- 1 Pkt. Pinot Drummondii.
- 1 Pkt. Bouquet Chrysanthemum.
- 1 Caradon Marzouite.
- 1 Poppy—American Flag.
- 1 Petunia Hybrid, mixed.
- 1 Forget-me-not Victoria.
- 1 Pansies, 10 colors—mixed.
- 1 Lovely Butterfly Flower.
- 1 Gold Golden Bell.
- 1 Alyssum Little Gem, mixed.
- 1 Giant Verbeena, mixed.

23 BULBS

- 1 New Begonia "Splendens."
- 1 Summer Flowering Hyacinth.
- 1 Double Pearl Tuberosa.
- 2 Butterfly and 2 Hybrid Gladioli.
- 8 Fine Mixed Oxalis.
- 2 "Fair Maid of France."
- 2 Hardy Wind Flowers.
- 2 Lovely Chimonanthus.
- 2 Splendid New China Lilies—1 crimson, 1 "Novelty."

A Return Check Good for 25¢, on first $1.00 order; also our New Floral Guide, telling all about Roses and 400 other choice flowers. All above postpaid, only 30¢.

THE CONARD & JONES CO.
"Growers of the Best Roses in America."
Box X, West Grove, Pa.

Delavau's Remedy

A SPECIFIC FOR

Whooping Cough and Croup

Also a safe and speedy cure for Bronchitis, Bronchial Catarrh and ordinary coughs. 50 Cents a Bottle, at Druggists, or

J. W. S. DELAVAU & CO., Propr's.
N. E. Cor. 6th and Wood Sts., Phila.

OSTEOPATHY

EDWARD D. BURLEIGH
ALEXANDER STETSON

Osteopathic Physician, 1537 Chestnut St., Room 401.

Hours, 9 a.m. to 12.30 p.m. and 2 to 4 p.m.
Bell Telephone Consultation free.

JOSEPH G. FOGG UNDERTAKER AND EMBALMER

S. W. Cor. Sixteenth and Race Sts.

Phone Spruce 44-38-W. PHILADELPHIA.

Suburban orders promptly attended.

Acker has them—those Bon Bon Valentines.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA. Office, 409 CHESTNUT STREET

CAPITAL, $1,000,000

ASSETS, $63,970,335.34

Surplus and Undivided Profits, belonging to Stockholders

4,026,151.15

Surplus, belonging to Insurance Account

5,635,620.25

Incorporated Third month 22, 1865. Charter Perpetual.

INSURES LIVES, GRANTS ANNUITIES, RECEIVES MONEY ON DEPOSIT, returnable on demand for which interest is allowed.

And is empowered by law to act as EXECUTOR
ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, GUARDIAN, AS-
SIGNEE, COMMITTEE, RECEIVER, AGENT, etc.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the assets of the Company.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.

BOXES $5 AND UPWARDS

T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-Prest.
ASA S. WING, Vice-President.
JOS. ASHBROOK, Man. Ins. Dept.
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer.

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY, President.

J. R. FOULKE, Trust Officer.

DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary.

J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Assistant Trust Officer

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary.

DIRECTORS:

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY,
T. WISTAR BROWN,
HENRY HAINES,
RICHARD WOOD,
CHAS. HARTSHORNE,

ASA S. WING,
PHILIP C. GARRETT,
JAMES V. WATSON,
WM. LONGSTRETH,
THOS. SCATTERGOOD,

J. PRESTON THOMAS,
ROBERT M. JANNEY,
MARRIOTT C. MORRIS,
FRANK H. TAYLOR,
JOSEPH B. TOWNSEND, JR.

FINANCIAL.

6% to 7% Choice First Mortgage Loans, Seattle and vicinity. Local and N. Y. references. Established 1887. Correspondence Solicited. JAMES BOTHWELL, Seattle, Washington.

Mortgages Net 6% in North Dakota.

I place mortgages on land covering about one-third its value. The value of this land is constantly increasing.

I know every mortgagor personally, know his land, his integrity, his habits and his ability to pay.

These combine to make me certain that these mortgages are as safe as GOVERNMENT BONDS.

Investigate me. You can't make the investigation too rigid to suit me. I'll stand it.

I've been in this business for 18 years, and never lost a cent for a customer, nor foreclosed a mortgage.

I collect the interest and principal without charge and remit in New York exchange. Write to me for further information.

WALTER L. WILLIAMSON

Investment Banker

Lisbon

North Dakota

S. F. BALDERSTON'S SON

Wall Paper and
Decorations

Window Shades Made to Order

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILA.

STENOGRAPHER

GEO. B. COCK

Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter Street.

Telephones.

The American Friend

Vol. XI

SECOND MONTH 11, 1904

No. 6

	PAGE
EDITORIALS.—The Christian Family.— An Important Temperance Bill . .	91
POEM.—Open the Door of Your Heart Edward Everett Hale.	92
Quakerism	92
Amos Sanders.
"Strangers and Pilgrims"	93
R. Ella Levering.
THE INTERNATIONAL LESSON	94
Lesson for Second month 21, 1904.
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR	95
Topic for Second month 21, 1904.
MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT: Record of Fourteen Months . . .	96
Edgar T. Hole.
CORRESPONDENCE	98
THINGS OF INTEREST AMONG OURSELVES,	99
BORN.—DIED	100
EVENTS AND COMMENTS	101

EVENSONG.

*For songs divine half heard and half withholden,
That dropped on silver pinions down the sky ;
For visions fair, half hid and half beholden,
Compelling hopes that knew not how to die ;*

*For all ungathered roses, red as fire,
That lit my way with lavish, fragrant flame ;
For all the old sweet pain of great desire,
That led me hither captive as I came ;*

*For all, on bended knees, I make thanksgiving :
The unachieved that spurred my steps along ;
The unattained that made life worth the living ;
The unfulfilled that kept my spirit strong.*

—By H. H. BASHFORD, in "London Outlook."

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.50 A YEAR ❁ ❁ ❁ PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
AMERICAN FRIEND PUBLISHING COMPANY, 718 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA

"My salary is $2,500 per year. What would become of my family should I die suddenly?"

Free Booklet. No importunity.

PENN MUTUAL LIFE

921-3-5 Chestnut Street.

"There is no sovereignty without submission."

EDUCATIONAL.

EARLHAM COLLEGE, RICHMOND, INDIANA

Prof. Elbert Russell offers courses regularly in Kings, New Testament Times, Life of Christ, The Apostolic Age, Church History, New Testament Literature, Romans, John, Biblical Literature, Isaiah.

Prof. Cyrus W. Hodgkin, The Protestant Reformation.

Prof. Anna M. Demaree, New Testament, Greek.

Asst. Prof. Lindley, History of the Hebrews.

Pres. Kelly, History of Philosophy, Ethics, Psychology.

The Oakwood Seminary

UNION SPRINGS, N. Y.

Founded in 1796.

A boarding school for boys and girls under the care of New York Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Academic, College Preparatory and Commercial

Spring term begins Fourth month 5, 1904

SAMUEL H. HODGIN, Principal. LINDLEY M. STEVENS, Superintendent.

WHITTIER COLLEGE

Classical, Scientific and Literary courses. Highest requirements. Students unable to continue their studies in more rigorous climes will find this climate the best in the world for study. Natural advantages for scientific investigation unsurpassed. Well equipped laboratory. Whittier, a Friend's community,—morally clean,—no saloons or kindred sources of corruption. For catalogue address,

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, President.

Stenography, Typewriting, Mimeographing and Reporting

LYDIA ARETE CONN,

805 Provident Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

SHORTHAND TAUGHT BY MAIL

or in school. Each student receives personal attention. Moderate rates. Write for full information.

PROVIDENT SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND

805 Provident Building Philadelphia, Pa.

STENOGRAPHING, TYPEWRITING and MIMEOGRAPHING. Prices moderate.

MARY M. KITE

407 Lippincott Building, 12th and Filbert Sts., Phila.

Phone No. 3-33-00

A. M. ADAMS, PRINTING

230 N. Twelfth St., Philadelphia.

BELL TELEPHONE.

The world delights in sunny people. The old are hungering for love more than for bread. The air of joy is very cheap; and if you can help the poor on with a garment of praise it will be better for them than blankets.—Henry Drummond.

If criticism could have corrected this world, it would never have needed Christ.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD'S WASHINGTON TOURS.

The Pennsylvania Railroad's third three-day personally-conducted tour to Washington will leave New York, Trenton and Philadelphia February 11th. Round-trip rates—only difference being in the hotel selected in Washington—are $10.50 or $13 from Trenton, $9 or $11.50 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other points. Tickets cover railroad transportation for the round trip and hotel accommodations. A special side trip to Mt. Vernon may also be taken. All tickets good for ten days, with special hotel rates at expiration of hotel coupon. For itineraries and full information apply to ticket agents, or Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, Pa.

A GREAT FINANCIAL SUCCESS.

The Twenty-eighth Annual Statement of The Prudential Insurance Company of America for 1903 shows that that company has had an extraordinary year of success and of continued prosperity.

While it is quite usual for the life insurance companies to show large increases yearly, yet such increases as The Prudential shows for last year are something novel and exceptional. For instance, we find that the amount of life insurance written and paid-for in 1903 exceeds $293,000,000; that it paid policy-holders during the year no less a sum than $11,500,000, and that its assets at the close of the year amount to over $72,000,000.

The company has now in force over five million policies, affording life insurance protection of $931,000,000 to more than one million families.

When it is remembered that The Prudential is a young company in comparison with some of the older American companies whose performance it rivals, all the more significance will be attached to these figures. It is quite clear that when a company studies the public interest and is quick to see and to provide for every new requirement, the people are not slow to appreciate such action and to reward it by their patronage. Write to the Home Office of the company, Newark, N. J., for information concerning policies, which furnish guaranteed protection to the family as well as dividends to the policy-holder.

TO PROFESSIONAL MEN

Professional men must have good stationery. It's a necessity.

We make a specialty of printing for lawyers, architects, physicians, etc.

We should be glad to send a sample bill-head, letter-head, envelope or prescription blank if asked to.

THE LEEDS & BIDDLE CO., Inc.

Makers of the Better Kind of Printing

1019-21 Market St., Phila.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a.

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote, 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p.m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cts. per night; $3 per week.

Two occupants, 50 cts. each, per night.

2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL

Phone Spruce 33-55.

Clerk.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

We particularly invite the attention of the readers of "The American Friend" to this column. It will be found useful for almost everyone who wishes to advertise. The cost is 5c. per line each insertion. No advertisement is accepted for less than 25c. Cash with order.

OLD-FASHIONED grandfather clocks repaired at home. If yours needs attention send me a postal or, better, call. My store is within three minutes' walk of the Market Street ferries. Repairing of clocks and watches of every kind. Prompt service and moderate prices. W. L. Berry, Watchmaker and Jeweler, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

WANTED.—Salesmen and Saleswomen to sell the great Indian Salve, also Mentholine. I will sell formula for Mentholine. Write me. D. A. Williams, 236 Laura Avenue, Wichita, Kansas.

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER.—Careful and accurate repairing, with prompt service, has brought me the custom of many Friends. Their patronage is particularly solicited. My store is nearest to the Market Street ferries, and is easy of access from every part of the city. W. L. Berry, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

Life without an eternity to follow it is like a half-written sentence, which has no meaning till the other half is added. All our deeds, our sufferings, our attempts at virtue, are without significance, unless there comes in the fullness of an eternal life to consummate them all in triumphant holiness.

HOOPING-COUGH AND CROUP.

Roche's Herbal Embrocation

The celebrated and effectual English Cure without internal medicine. Proprietors, W. EDWARDS & SON, Queen Victoria St., London, England. Wholesale of E. Fougere & Co., 30 North William Street, N. Y.

10 BEAUTIFUL PICTURES FREE

In order to introduce our QUAKER OINTMENT into every home where THE AMERICAN FRIEND is read, we have decided to make the following liberal offer. To every person sending us 25 cents for one box of QUAKER OINTMENT, and 4 cents extra to pay postage, we will send absolutely free the following 10 pictures. These pictures are gems of art. For picture study, art collections, gifts and home decoration, they are of great value. The Last Supper, Christ in Gethsemane, Christ Taken Captive, Christ Before Pilate, Christ Bearing the Cross, The Crucifixion, Entombment, In the Sepulchre, The Ascension, Transfiguration. It is costing us a great deal of money to advertise in this way, but we trust you will be pleased with our liberality, and will favor us with an order for a box of our ointment, and get these 10 beautiful pictures free. QUAKER OINTMENT is the best known remedy for catarrh, eczema, and all skin diseases. Rev. Asa Woodard, pastor Friends' Meeting at Butlerville, Ind., says: "I am using QUAKER OINTMENT, and find it an excellent remedy." Mrs. Clara Chaney, Rural Route No. 3, Warren, Ind., says: "I have never found anything as good as QUAKER OINTMENT for catarrh, sores and skin diseases." Send us your order to-day. Quaker Ointment sent to any address upon receipt of 25 cents.

DAVIS MFG. CO., Butlerville, Ind.

The American Friend

*"Truth is the highest thing a man may keep."
"That they all may be one."*

VOL. XI.

PHILADELPHIA, SECOND MONTH 11, 1904.

No. 6.

THE CHRISTIAN FAMILY.

As the family is regarded as the foundation of society, and the corner-stone of the highest civilization, so, too, it must be regarded as a necessary part of the Christian Church. It is a necessary part, both as a condition for religious life and as an active agency for maintaining the strength and stability of the body. Where family ties are weak we find weakness of general character, weakness of moral fiber and weakness of religious life. We are so constituted that our best physical, mental, moral and spiritual conditions are developed under the influence of the best family relations. The promises of God are rich and abundant to the family that is established and built up in Him.

While the family is founded upon the relation of husband and wife its most important work springs from the relation of parents and children. It is here that the world at large, and our social circles and the Church of Christ are chiefly influenced. It is here, we fear, there may be found the source of a weakness that undermines the Church as to membership and spiritual life and working power.

In all denominations we hear lamentations over a low spiritual life, the want of a true appreciation of individual responsibility, indifference to the attendance of public worship, and a lack of interest in the active work of the Church. We hear reasons given for all this because of our strenuous modern activities, our crowded lives and the demands thus made upon us, and because "modern religious thought" is adverse to the old notions of sanctity and the old demands for religious activities. Doubtless there are complex influences that produce the conditions we deplore, but among them we believe there is one more potent than any named above, and that is the want of true, practical Christian living in the home.

The duties of Christian parents toward their children are many and various, and call for the lively exercise of the best faculties of mind and heart. Love makes their accomplishment possible, and love always wants the best. The best, the very best, for any family is to have the love of husband and wife, of parents and children, of brothers and sisters, and the love of Christ, all, the parts of a common whole. Where this exists it produces an atmosphere that envelops each member in its living embrace, and it is quickly perceived by every visitor with spiritual discernment.

This condition in the family does not result from any exercise of parental authority, or from much religious instruction, or from being much talked about. It is rarely ever attained after long neglect. If the marriage is undertaken in the love and fear of God, if the children are dedicated to the Lord, even before they are born; if the habit of the parents' hearts and minds is that of living prayer, the budding intelligence of the child perceives it as the sunlight and sweet air, and the fragrance of flowers and the song of birds are perceived. It becomes the great reality of the home and is the keynote of Christian living. Home is no more the place where our dear ones are than it is the place where this feeling is, for the two are inseparable. Religious duties and religious privileges are viewed alike as parts of life. The times for family Bible reading and prayer are as much matters of course as are the ordinary meals. The attendance upon public worship is never a matter of convenience. It has its undisputed hours which every interest must recognize. The work of the Church is our work, and we enter into it without question, each according to his several ability. The spirit of charity is present everywhere. The home has a light that is soft and glowing and may be felt. Here it may be truly said, "The beauty of the house is order, the blessing of the house is contentment, the glory of the house is hospitality, the crown of the house is godliness."

Such Christian families are the greatest need of the Church to-day. They are born, not made—born of prayer and love and devotion. They grow out of true Christian living. "Precept and example" are very well, but they are too much like a formula. Of course there is teaching, of course there is example, just as there is breathing and eating and sleeping and waking. From such families there come no statistics of losses of membership, except of those whose membership is transferred to the Church above. Their conversions came so early and so easily that soul and spirit grew along with mind and body into a strength that is enduring. From these come the true pillars of the Church and its steadfast workers.

J. W.

AN IMPORTANT TEMPERANCE BILL.

STATE prohibition has never had a fair trial in the United States, because by the law which regulates interstate traffic the authorities of a State have no power to seize the original packages which are shipped in over the State border. This law has always enabled ingenious liquor sellers to evade the prohibitory law. They have had their liquors put up in such form that they could be sold in the original package and thus come under the protection of the Federal law. Cocoanuts have been drained and filled with liquor and shipped into Maine in great abundance, and many other similar schemes have been tried to get liquor into the State in a form which made it illegal to seize it. Under this law it is possible for private parties to receive all the liquor they desire for their own use. The State law is powerless if a rich man wishes to fill his wine cellar with liquors shipped in from another State, so that in Maine the summer visitors have been able to get all the liquors they cared to have.

It is now proposed to have a Federal law passed which shall exempt intoxicants from the provisions of this interstate commerce act. This law would empower State authorities in prohibition States to seize liquor wherever found, whether in original packages or not, whether exposed for sale or intended for some rich man's wine cellar. The bill which aims to effect this important result is now before Congress. It is called the Hepburn-Dolliver bill. It is unquestionably one of the most important temperance bills ever before Congress. The best way to judge of the importance of any bill to check the liquor traffic is to watch the efforts which liquor men make to defeat it. They are massed in solid line against this bill. They are determined to defeat it. That means that their interests are menaced, and it means also that the passage of the bill will help our cause. We saw last winter what could be accomplished by persistent effort in making our wishes known in Congress. Here is another case which calls for strenuous activity. There are only a few prohibition States at present, but the whole question of prohibition is at stake in these few States. They should have every chance to give the principle of prohibition a real test. Every person who hates intemperance ought to want to see prohibition thoroughly tried. But it cannot be thoroughly tried until the State itself has power to seize liquor wherever it is found within the State, regardless of the kind of package it happens to be in. This is a matter in which politics have no place. It is a moral question:

Shall the State have power to protect its citizens from the danger of intoxicants? We are not asked to vote upon it, but we may use our power to induce our Representatives and Senators to vote for the Hepburn-Dolliver bill.

OPEN THE DOOR OF YOUR HEART.

Open the door of your heart, my lad,
To the angels of love and truth
When the world is full of unnumbered joys,
In the beautiful dawn of youth.
Casting aside all things that mar,
Saying to wrong, "Depart!"
To the voices of hope that are calling you
Open the door of your heart.

Open the door of your heart, my lass,
To the things that shall abide;
To the holy thoughts that lift your soul
Like the stars at eventide.
All of the fadeless flowers that bloom
In the realms of song and art
Are yours, if you'll only give them room.
Open the door of your heart.

Open the door of your heart, my friend,
Heedless of class or creed,
When you hear the cry of a brother's voice,
The sob of a child in need.
To the shining heaven that o'er you bends
You need no map or chart,
But only the love the Master gave.
Open the door of your heart.

—Edward Everett Hale.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

QUAKERISM.

BY AMOS SANDERS.

Quakerism had no pattern after which to form itself. It grew around a living principle, laying hold upon material of strength wherever and whenever found. It was a vitalized body capable of throwing off without harm that which it could not assimilate. It needed no one to groom it and pat it and call the attention of an onrushing world to its fine points, for it manifested these by holding a place in the front rank. He who stops to contend for his own standing will have a busy life. He may be able to say nice things about himself, but will generally have a smaller audience than the boy who puts up a good game of ball. Not what we have been, but what we are doing interests the world.

The boy who has his pockets stuffed with nut shells of a superior kind may convince a few of his fellows that he has had a good time, but he must show uncracked nuts if he expects to draw a hearty following. It is present-day vitality, not boasting of the past, that the Church needs to exhibit. It must grapple with the questions of the hour if it would succeed. It was that which made Quakerism strong in the beginning. It must find the thing to be done and adapt itself to the doing. It cannot do twentieth century deeds well with seventeenth century machinery.

The question of the hour is to get men to forsake sin and its consequences and accept the living Christ and His benefits. Some have been taught to believe Quakerism the best means for the accomplishment of this end. Quakerism is no more nor less than "primitive Christianity revived," we are told, the principle of the cross carried forward by people who tarry until they are endued with power from on high; those who know the leadership of the Spirit so well that they are willing to follow though He leads beyond the beaten path of their ancestry; who are unwilling to profess to be His followers, and yet dictate as to when and how He shall direct; men and women who see the demands of the living Christ far transcending all notions imbibed from a former environment.

He whose message does not rise above a statement of what the Quakers have done, who feels that he must sustain their good name, point out the beauty of their theory, uphold their ancient forms or praise their lovely character has but a small contribution to his own generation. But when he exhibits in himself a man applying Quakerism with a seventeenth century zeal that through the power of Christ gathers and feeds hungry, fallen, sinful, needy men until they manifest the changed life, bringing forth the fruits of righteousness according to the ancient Quakerly spirit has a message that will draw to itself worthy commendation. It is well at proper times and in the right way to point out that which made early Quakerism "a new sharp threshing instrument having teeth," so that lessons may be gathered for present use, but the time has come when we should cease to hold these up as patterns for imitation and apply ourselves to that principle around which Fox builded, allowing, without embarrassment, the new Quakerism to be clothed with that form which the Holy Spirit may prepare for it.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

"STRANGERS AND PILGRIMS."

BY R. ELLA LEVERING.

In Heb. 11: 13, the writer, after calling attention to Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham and Sarah, who lived in faith and accomplished through faith what could be brought to pass in no other way, says of them, "These all died in faith." He further says they lived as "strangers and pilgrims on the earth," seeking a country which had been promised them, a better and heavenly country, a city which God had prepared for them. That the people of God are "strangers and pilgrims on the earth" cannot be new to any Christian people. Many passages in the Bible refer to it, and our hymn writers have woven it into our most familiar hymns.

Who that has hope in Christ does not feel his heart leap at the words,

My heavenly home is bright and fair;
No pain, nor death, can enter there!

Especially are we reminded of the pilgrim character of our lives, when death enters our households and separates our friends from us, and we follow their lifeless bodies to the grave. Then at least we remember that the present life can continue but a short time. I am persuaded that this truth of being "strangers and pilgrims on the earth" is intended by our Lord, in a very real way, to influence the whole life of every child of God; that when rightly apprehended and accepted it will enter into all his plans, determine his occupation and the use of his time, influence his choice of a home and the investment of his means.

Not only so, but that it will put a meaning and a gladness into all these things, which otherwise they will utterly lack.

Our Lord Jesus Christ set us the example of living on the earth as a stranger and pilgrim. He did not live as though the earth were His home. He said, "I came not to do mine own will, but the will of Him that sent me"; and to the fulfilling of the purpose for which He was sent He devoted all His time and all His energies. Nothing could turn Him aside from this one thing. His life justified His words; "It is my meat and my drink to do the will of Him that sent me and to finish His work." The most determined opposition, long continued and always increasing, the desertion of friends, the wrath of enemies, nothing, swerved Him for an instant; and at the end He cried as a victor, "It is finished."

"He that saith he abideth in Him ought himself also so to walk, even as He walked," not as a citizen of the earth, but as a stranger and pilgrim, with a citizenship in heaven and a mission to fulfill; for did He not say, "As thou hast sent me into the world, so have I also sent them into the world"?

Paul was a striking example of a man who lived as a stranger and a pilgrim.

He says (Phil. 3: 20): "Our conversation (citizenship) is in heaven," and (2 Cor. 5: 20) "We are ambassadors for Christ." An ambassador is one sent to a foreign country to represent his own government, and to look after the interests of citizens of his own country who may be in that country. He must not forget his business and allow himself to be absorbed with the making of a home for himself, or with the seeking of personal interests in any way. When his errand at the foreign court is finished he gladly returns to his own country, where his affections and interests remain.

Paul was glad to know himself an ambassador for Christ, and he devoted his life to representing Him and looking after the interests of His subjects in the earth, where he himself was but a pilgrim, often ill treated (see 2 Cor. 11: 24-27), but all the while cheered with the certain expectation of an eternal home in the "many mansions." So little was Paul attached to the earth that his settled feeling was, "To depart and to be with Christ is far better." Even when confined within prison walls he felt himself not less an ambassador. Writing to the Ephesian church (Eph. 6: 18-20), he exhorts to prayer for all saints, and adds, "And for me, that utterance may be given unto me, that I may open my mouth boldly, to make known the mystery of the gospel, for which I am an ambassador in bonds; that therein I may speak boldly, as I ought to speak."

If you or I were in such case, would we think ourselves excused from active service, and conclude the duties and privileges of the ambassador should now pass to others? Not so Paul. Not so George Fox, whose zeal his many imprisonments and great sufferings only served to increase, and who once wrote to Friends in captivity in Algiers, "Friends, it would be well for you if you could get the Turks' and Moors' language, that you might be the more enabled to direct them to the grace and Spirit of God." What love for God and men was this, which could see in a cruel bondage an opportunity to bring "rivers of living water" to the captors?

A familiar passage of Scripture which has a direct bearing upon this matter is Matt. 6: 19-21. All Christians in a more or less distinct way, desire to lay up treasure in heaven, where they hope their eternal home will be. Less frequently do they lay to heart the command, "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth"; and this whole passage seems in many cases to be construed thus, "Get and lay up for yourselves and your children all the money, lands, and such like, you possibly can; but try not to set your hearts upon these things." Do those who so construe quite forget the sentence just below, "Where your treasure is there will your heart be also"?

Have we considered the account of the rich young man as having any special application to ourselves? He came inquiring, "What shall I do that I may have eternal life?" and when referred to the commandments confessed his lack and received a stroke at his idolatry (covetousness) in the words, "Go and sell that thou hast and give to the poor," with which was coupled the assurance, "Thou shalt have treasure in heaven." In his case at least the turning of possessions to the service of the needy was the way opened for laying up treasure in heaven. A kindred passage is Luke 12: 33: "Sell that ye have and give alms; provide yourselves bags which wax not old, a treasure in the heavens that faileth not."

Luke 16: 1-12 is perhaps enigmatical to many. The pith of this lesson is in verse 9: "I say unto you, make to yourselves friends of" (by means of) "the mammon of unrighteousness, that when ye fail they may receive you into everlasting habitations."

Mammon of unrighteousness is a term denoting possessions of money or whatever constitutes wealth, perhaps so named because the things men possess so often get between them and God, hindering or destroying their right relations to Him, and leading to unrighteousness. Though "the love of money is a root of all kinds of evil," and men's possessions so often lead them astray, yet God does not despise the mammon of unrighteousness, but counts it of great value, so much so that, as this word tells us, He expects it to be so used as to secure friends who will receive the possessor into the everlasting habitations.

Otherwise stated, when a man, instead of laying up treasure on earth, makes investment in the work of God for the salvation of the people, God puts His blessing upon the investment, making it fruitful in turning men from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, so that they receive forgiveness of sins and inheritance among the children of God. When he who made the investment "fails," or comes to the end of this life, and is himself ushered into the prepared city, he will find those who have made their way thither through God's blessing upon his investment there to receive him.

Beloved, is it not wonderful and precious that even earthly possessions can be made to yield heavenly and eternal gain? Who that knows himself to be a pilgrim and a stranger, with a citizenship in heaven, and a commission to be an ambassador for Christ, but must rejoice in so great a privilege, and feel the force of the responsibility to enter upon it, not by any means to miss the laying up of such precious "treasure in heaven"?

Maryville, Tenn.

The International Lesson.

FIRST QUARTER.

LESSON VIII.

SECOND MONTH 21, 1904.

JESUS AND THE SABBATH.

Matt 12: 1-13.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"It is lawful to do well on the Sabbath day."—Matt. 12: 12.

DAILY READINGS.

Second-day, Second mo. 15.—Jesus and the Sabbath. Matt. 12: 18.
Third-day, Second mo. 16.—Mark's account. Mark 2: 23 to 3: 6.
Fourth-day, Second mo. 17.—Mosaic law. Ex. 31: 12-17.
Fifth-day, Second mo. 18.—Blessings promised if observed. Isa. 56: 11-14.
Sixth-day, Second mo. 19.—Hypocrisy rebuked. Luke 13: 10-17.
Seventh-day, Second mo. 20.—Mosaic Sabbath abolished. Col. 2: 13-19.
First-day, Second mo. 21.—Lord's day. Rev. 1: 9, 10; Matt. 28: 1-6.

Time.—Late spring or early summer of A.D. 26. Some weeks after the time of the last lesson during the middle of the second year of Christ's preaching.

Place.—Capernaum and its neighborhood.

Parallel Accounts.—Mark 2: 23 to 3: 5; Luke 6: 1-10. Each of these should be read carefully.

The question of the origin of the Sabbath has been extensively debated. There is good ground for believing that the early Babylonians observed such a day, and many think that it came to the Hebrews through them. But whatever was its origin there is no doubt that the Sabbath of the Hebrews was on a far higher and more spiritual plane than any other similar day of other nations. The primary meaning of the word Sabbath seems to be "cessation" from business. It was one of the most valuable institutions of the law and undoubtedly did much to help the spiritual growth of the Hebrews. After the return from the exile there grew up gradually an adherence to formalism that resulted in a set of rules which became "a bye-word for extravagance and absurdity."

1. "At that season." Revised Version. "Corn-fields." Revised Version. These were wheat or barley fields. "Corn" in the Bible always means what we call grain. "An hungered." According to the rabbis there should be no eating on the Sabbath before the time of prayer in the synagogue.

2. "That which is not lawful to do upon the Sabbath." According to the Pharisees the disciples had broken the law in three ways: (1) the legalists said plucking the ears was reaping; (2) rubbing the ears was threshing; (3) eating was unlawful on the Sabbath day at that hour. It was not unlawful to pluck the ears though belonging to some one else (see Deut. 23: 25). The question was asked from a desire to entrap Christ.

3, 4. The incident referred to is in 1 Sam. 21: 1-6, and was undoubtedly familiar to the questioners. Compare Lev. 24: 5-9. The argument is that from the example of David, who clearly did something which was unlawful, it is shown that there is a higher law than outward form, excellent though it may be.

5. "Blameless." Better, as in Revised Version, "guiltless." That is to say, the law itself makes work on the Sabbath day not simply allowable, but even a duty. Compare also John 7: 22, 23.

6. Referring to Himself. He was greater than any Temple or Temple law.

7. The quotation is from Hos. 6: 6. Compare also Micah 6: 6-8. The law and all regulations are for the benefit of men—to help those who need help, and if the law or regulation is so interpreted as to injure, then the law must give way. If this was true of the Law, how much more true is it of my service, which is one of love and mercy.

8. "For the Son of man is Lord of the Sabbath." Much light on this verse is shown by the parallel account in Mark, who inserts the "golden law of the Sabbath." "The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath." (Mark 2: 27.) "The Sabbath rests on the needs of human nature." Man needs rest—repose for the body, and repose for the soul, and repose for the latter is not listlessness, but active communion with God. We rest, not because there is a "Day of Rest"; but there is a "Day of Rest" because man needs it. It is founded on human need.

9. This implies that the conversation took place before the synagogue service.

10. "Without." Dried up. "Is it lawful," etc. Whether it was lawful to heal on the Sabbath was a debated point, but the question was asked of our Lord not for information, but to entrap Him.

11. He asks them a question which it is difficult for them to answer, except in the affirmative, and to do this would be self-conviction.

12. He draws the conclusion from their own practice, "It is lawful to do good on the Sabbath day."

13. "Then saith he." He does not answer their question regarding healing in words, but by fact, and because He uses nothing but a word in healing the man there has been no breaking of even the letter of their own law. Note the faith of the man.

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

There are certain conclusions regarding the Sabbath which may be taken as settled. (1) The Jewish Sabbath is abrogated. There is nothing in the New Testament or early Christian writings to show that there was any transference of the Jewish Sabbath to the First day of the week. The Sabbath went with the other Jewish rites and ceremonies. Paul's view of the Sabbath is instructive and interesting. Compare Col. 2: 16-23; Gal. 4: 9-11; Rom. 14: 5. The abandonment of the Sabbath by Jewish Christians was gradual. It is doubtful whether the Gentile Christians ever observed it to any extent. Compare Acts 15: 19, 20, 25, 29. "During the first 300 years the Lord's Day (First day of the week) was never confounded with the Sabbath, and it was only after the third century, and then only gradually, that the Christian and the Jewish institutions were confused."

(2) The obligation of a day of rest, giving also ample opportunity for worship and spiritual refreshment, is as needful and obligatory as ever. That the early Christians should have chosen the resurrection day of Christ as their day of rest and worship was natural and fitting.

(3) "The Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath."

What is a proper observance of the First day of the week? is a question which is impossible to answer in detail. No rule can be laid down applicable to all cases or to all persons. If the observance is too strict, there is the real danger of lapsing into formalism and reversing Christ's rule. This has undoubtedly been done by earnest Christians in the past, and a few would do it now.

On the other hand, too much laxity will result in loss of spiritual power, deadening of spiritual life, decay in spiritual zeal, beside a general lowering of the morals of the whole community. It is almost needless to point out that at present the danger lies in the second of these tendencies.

Christian Endeavor

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Lindley D. Clark, 1429 New York Avenue, Washington, D.C.]

TOPIC FOR SECOND MONTH TWENTY-FIRST.

SOME GOOD WAYS OF USING THE SABBATH.

Mark 1: 21-34.

Second-day, Second mo. 15.—Its origin. Gen. 2: 1-3.
Third-day, Second mo. 16.—Its commandment. Deut. 5: 12-15.
Fourth-day, Second mo. 17.—A covenant. Ex. 31: 13-17.
Fifth-day, Second mo. 18.—A holy rest. Lev. 23: 1-3.
Sixth-day, Second mo. 19.—Brings blessings. Isa. 56: 1-7.
Seventh-day, Second mo. 20.—Used for others. Luke 6: 6-10.

"The Sabbath was made for man," a specially chosen gift for his use; but it is also the day that God hallowed. "My Sabbaths," He calls them, and thus we find the day a mutual possession, a special bond and token of our oneness with Him.

Not to Abraham as father of the faithful, nor to Moses as Jewish lawgiver, but to Adam, the progenitor of the race, was the day given; so that while Judaism and Christianity have held the day of rest as sacred, its significance is as broad as the whole need and nature of man. Mental and physical rest is peremptorily demanded on one day in seven, and it is a poor and wasteful system of applied effort that ignores this law.

How shall we rest? Christ was marvelously refreshed at the well-side in the used opportunity of helping the needy woman of Samaria. If we find our meat and drink in doing the will of our Father, a day of busy service may be found to be the best possible rest from the routine of our daily occupation.

It is a day to be glad and rejoice in, because it is God's ever-recurring reminder of Himself. Even the seven days' toiler, of whom there is an all too great and increasing number, can hardly fail of having it in some way brought to mind. The Christian community owes such men and women a special debt, and our worship of God may be an ointment of stinking savor because of our neglect toward them. The Sabbath is the church-going day to multitudes who choose to use it so, and it should always remain the day of opportunity to as many as possible by the utmost consideration of their rights and needs. It is the one day of the week on which many families find it possible to see each other in any time of restful leisure.

It is a day when we may minister by encouraging word or helpful hand extended to many whom we ourselves can reach on no other day. Remember it is given to man—all men—and not to me in any selfish sense; and if I ask others to sacrifice their Sabbath rest for me, or if I fail to bring a recreative, restful thought and spirit to one whom I might reach, I have in so far hindered God's purpose, whereas He has called me to be a worker together with Him.

And when the Sabbath has been most happily, helpfully and sacredly observed, it is but a pattern of what is appointed to us for the full circle of the weeks and months of life:

"Day of the Lord, as all our days should be."

Missionary Department.

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Herman Newman, 718 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.]

RECORD OF FOURTEEN MONTHS.

[Extracts from the Quarterly and Second Annual Reports of the F. A. I. M.]

Kaimosi, via Kisumu,
British East Africa, Nov. 2d, 1903.

Fourteen months ago three men came to Kaimosi and pitched their tents with the intention of establishing a work for the Lord among these neglected people of Kavirondo, many of whom had never before seen a white face, much less a Christian.

Since our report twelve months ago the blessing of the Lord has been upon the work, and where once was utter neglect and disorder we now have buildings, roads, shambas, an encouraging degree of order in general, and a force of three men, two women and one child to help stem the tide of heathenism and disperse the gospel light in this land of spiritual gloom. We also have the prospect of being joined by another missionary, with his wife, from the homeland.

While we feel that in some respects the past year's progress has been slow and tedious, perhaps a few comparisons of the conditions existing one year ago with those of the present may be encouraging to all of us.

Then the natives were unaccustomed to us and we to them; they quite naturally, looking upon us with a certain degree of suspicion, knowing little about us and less about our God. Now many things indicate a much greater confidence in us, many of them manifesting a respectful reverence for the God worshipped by us. For example, about seven months ago we asked permission to attend the burial of the son of a local chief, who had been shot by a Government soldier. Although friendly with us, they were not quite ready to grant such a request as this. Less than one month ago we were welcomed to the village of the same chief to attend the burial of one of his people, being assured that they were pleased to have us with them. Last week two of us were present on a similar occasion in the village of another chief about ten miles distant, and had opportunity of speaking to several hundred willing hearers, after which Dr. Blackburn ministered to their physical ailments.

Then we had a few acres of bush cut down and about two acres under cultivation. Now we have a large clearing about the station, with about four acres under cultivation. If we had one or two good American plows we could doubtless till a much greater area at less expense. The digging of shamba by hand is a large item of time and expense.

Then there were no thoroughfares about the station except crooked native paths. Now we have laid out and graded roads sixteen feet in width, and gravel walks with white stone borders about the iron house premises.

Then we had the following thatched buildings, viz.: one storehouse, 12x22; one cow and sheep house, 15x30; one chicken house, 10x12; one house for employees, 10x12, and two sanitary buildings; all other employees were housed in small, beehive, grass huts. We have since added the following, viz.: one orphanage, 14x40; one dispensary, 12x18; three houses for employees, 10x14; and one 10x24; one house for Onduso, the boy chief, and his companions, 10x21; one oval cook-house, 7x11; one same size and shape for the cook's dwelling; one sanitary building; one thatched roof, 12x20, for carpenter work shed; one thatched roof, 14x24, to shelter tent and for school work; and one small thatched roof under which stone is dressed for building purposes. On the night of October 20th, between 8 and 9 o'clock, the orphanage caught fire, through the carelessness of a boy, and burned to the ground. Several of the occupants lost clothes, food and other minor possessions. This fire seemed very unfortunate at this particular time, when we are so short of quarters for our employees. The frame for one more house, 10x14, for employees, is finished. Some of our men are still quartered in beehive grass huts. We also have the Devonshire House, 15x30, given by the English Friends, to which we have added a thatched dining room. We are hastily erecting a thatched building, 16x50, on account of the coming of Emory J. Rees and wife. It will accommodate two families and thus relieve the crowded condition of the Devonshire House.

One year ago the natives were only beginning to learn the use and value of coin, often refusing rupees or pice as of doubtful value. Now nearly every man, woman and child in this district will gladly take coin as compensation for produce or labor.

Then the surrounding country knew no distinction between days. Now a great many, even outside our station, refrain from their ordinary work on the Lord's Day, many of them coming to our gospel service.

Then a great deal of Sabbath trading was carried on between our employees and the outside natives, together with butchering of sheep and goats by our employees, nearly always accompanied by a noisy, boisterous crowd. Daily smoking was also practiced by a few of our people. Now, by patient, persistent teaching and discipline, these objectionable practices are well in hand.

Then there was no Government outpost near us. Now two have been established—one within two hours' easy march toward Kisumu, and one about three and a half hours to the northwest of us. Each station is in charge of a Swahili native, with native soldiers under him.

Thus far wheat has done very poorly here, but we shall continue to experiment, trying various seasons. Potatoes have done quite well, and we have sold fourteen loads of sixty pounds each, but our agent in Kisumu reports having realized less than half what he told us he would realize. He kept part of them on hand a long time, and finally sold them at auction for from about 64 to 72 cents per load. At this rate it will not pay us to devote much time to potato raising.

Castor oil beans appear to grow well, and may be of value when we get a larger amount. We have a patch of about 175 small plants coming on. We are experimenting with a kind of native raspberry, which grows wild here, and think with cultivation it may be a good berry for use. Many vegetables do well, and we think, with the privilege of the shamba for our own tables, we can do nicely on the salaries decided upon at your last annual meeting.

We have more than sixty orange trees several inches high, from Zanzibar seeds which we planted, also two or three mango trees, similar size, from seeds put in ourselves.

We have lived here during every month of the year, and find it a very pleasant location, with delightful climate. The temperature varies from about 52 to 95 degrees Fahrenheit, according to the season and time of day. It is always comfortable in the shade, and, while the sun's rays are very piercing, the atmosphere is seldom oppressive. Since locating here we have never been more than about three weeks without rain. Now and then a few dry days, but ordinarily more or less rain falls every twenty-four hours. There has been no sickness worthy of note among the missionaries in the station during the past year.

We now have in all about fifty souls who make their homes and get their living with us. Out of this number there are eight who have been with us throughout the past year.

The work in the medical, industrial and trading departments is better systematized than one year ago, and we are greatly pleased that so many of the Kavirondo natives are willing to work. We are frequently obliged to refuse applicants in order not to go beyond our monthly allowance of expenditure. Some learn readily and others are dull. Several are settling down into reliable and useful men, in whom we take great satisfaction.

We are glad to note that Onduso, our chief boy, and his associates, are working a part of each day for us. When they first came they appeared to feel far above working, as they are all royal blood; but we think the constant object lesson of seeing us and our employees busily engaged day after day is having its effect upon them. They took to it entirely of their own accord. We pay them once a month in proportion to what they have done.

The mission now owns three cows, three calves, five bullocks and eight sheep. Four of the bullocks are broken to work, and with one man and a cart are doing what it would otherwise require several men to perform. Each yoke of bullocks can be worked only half a day, the other half being allowed for grazing.

A little school work has been carried on the past year with encouraging results, and is now under the direction of Adelaide W. Hole. The nineteen scholars are being thoroughly drilled, some on letters, some on syllables, some in words, and others on sentences.

We begin each day with our employees gathered together for Divine instruction and worship, except on Sabbath, when we have the service at 11 o'clock in the forenoon. This enables outside natives to attend. We also do Seventh-day itinerating among the people of the various chiefs about us.

It gives us great joy to be able to report one definite and very satisfactory conversion in the past month. Ahonya was the first Kavirondo native to enlist for work after we settled here. He came Ninth month 27th, 1902, and, as he knows Swahili, has served Arthur B. Chilson as "boy," and has acted as interpreter in the gospel services for about seven months. Previous to this he, with another Swahili-speaking Kavirondo native, aided Willis R. Hotchkiss in reducing the language. We had anticipated his coming to the Lord for some time, but hardly expected it so soon. He recently declared, however, of his own accord, that he was a child of God; said he knew his sins were forgiven, and that if he should die he would go to heaven to be with his Master. Close, searching questions could not cause him to waver. He said that God's Spirit and Word spoke the assurance to his heart, and he knew it was true. He made public confession of what the Lord had done for Him, and seems anxious to tell others of his new-found joy. Everything indicates a genuine change of heart, and you can imagine how we rejoice over this first fruit. We are asking the Lord to help him be so true and steadfast that he will be able to lead great numbers of his fellow men from heathendom to the "Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." We believe there are others with us who are not far from the kingdom.

Some day we shall want a chapel for gospel and school work, but could not well build it now if authorized to do so. It would take a tremendous building to hold some of our Sabbath audiences, but we have sometimes thought of erecting a small thatch chapel large enough to accommodate all who attend our week-day services and school, and then simply a good-sized thatch roof with open sides for Sabbath congregations. Our people are more in need of a house for the early morning services, when the air is often cool, than for the Sabbath meetings held in the heat of the day.

Our Thursday evening prayer meetings for the missionaries which have been instituted since the second party arrived, and which we lead in turn, are seasons of refreshment to all.

We thank our heavenly Father that He ever called us to this work, and praise Him for gracious leadings, and for His protecting and preserving care. May He ever predominate in the deliberations of our Board at home, and have the pre-eminence with your missionaries on the field, is our desire and earnest prayer.

Yours for the spread of the Gospel,

EDGAR T. HOLE,
On behalf of the Mission.

Correspondence.

Reading Alice Freeman Palmer's exquisite poem, "The Butterfly," in last number of THE AMERICAN FRIEND, I am reminded of Tennyson's lines, conveying the same thought:

"Flower in the crannied wall,
I pluck you out of the crannies;—
Hold you here, root and all, in my hand,
Little flower—but if I could understand
What you are, root and all, and all in all,
I should know what God and man is,"

and placing the two poems side by side, it is pleasant to feel that our New England "Laureate" does not suffer in comparison.

Amesbury, Mass.

G. W. C.

Gibara, Cuba, First month 23d, 1904.

Rufus M. Jones, Philadelphia, Pa.

My Dear Friend: Ever since THE AMERICAN FRIEND was founded I have been an interested reader of its pages, though at that time I was but a boy. Being born, nurtured and educated in the church, and now in the missionary work supported by Friends and under control of the Friends' Board, I would be unnatural were I not to feel the keenest interest in everything that pertains to the welfare of my beloved church. But, beside my natural love for Quakerism, my love for Christ and the desire for the advancement of His kingdom made me feel deeply pained when I read thy editorial in THE AMERICAN FRIEND of First month 7th on "Friends in 1903." Not but what the editorial was a true representation of the case; it is the condition that I deplore and not the editorial. Neither do I feel in my heart any desire to criticise the dear workers in the home-land, who during the past year, as in other years, have with such definite consecration upheld the banner of Christ by means of Quakerism. The joy of the Lord has been theirs. It is for another class in our church that I feel concerned. Is it not true that in our colleges, academies and churches there are hundreds, yes, thousands, of young men and women whom God has called and is calling to leave earthly pursuits in order that they may become fishers of men? And is there not also a still greater number of young people in our church whom God has called and who have consecrated themselves to honor Him in the various lines of human activity? These intelligent young people are beginning to feel the first "pressings of soul" because of the living issues before the Church of Christ. While all of these may not have been formed for martyrs, they certainly are not the kind to quail before difficulties. Out of these thousands how many are there, who, after learning our record for 1903, will not question to themselves something after this fashion, "Is the Friends' Church really dying out?" "Is Quakerism a lost cause?" "Would it not be better for me, in view of my definite call to a work in the vineyard of Christ, to unite with some body of Christians, who are a living, growing force in the world?" Be it right or wrong, a passing thought will not be enough to banish these questions from the minds of our younger Friends. Many will be the battle struggles that will take place this year on these lines. Thousands will either come through the battle victorious and gird themselves for the noble work for Christ and the Church, or will go down in defeat, losing themselves and their convictions in the current because their faith failed to grasp the vastness of the dispensations of God's providences.

Help must be given our young people in overcoming the above-suggested temptations. Ought not those whose convictions are that Quakerism is a living, potent force in the world, animate others with the same convictions? How shall this be done?

Perhaps my own youthfulness will be taken as an atonement for writing thus boldly. But I write my convictions. I offer no other apology. Let me then point to two or three things that may be worthy of further thought.

Have we not been too much given to thinking of Quakerism as something distinct from the Gospel? Do we not make this distinction, when after laboring so earnestly for the conversion of sinners to the Gospel, we so lamely present the obligation of uniting with the Friends' Church as the representative of a pure Christianity? With all Christian love for those who think differently from us, we as Friends must believe that the Friends' doctrines are the true interpretation of the Gospel, that is to say, that the Gospel is Quakerism and Quakerism is the Gospel. Some one may say that this is dogmatic and intolerant, but it is no more dogmatic and intolerant than it is to teach the doctrine of the atonement which is a Quaker doctrine, as is also the doctrine of the priesthood of believers. The doctrine of sin and redemption is a Quaker doctrine, so is the doctrine of non-resistance. We need not be afraid of teaching either the one or the other for fear of being dogmatic or intolerant. These are Quaker doctrines because they are Bible doctrines. Here in priest-ridden Cuba we do not for a moment hesitate to teach that ritualism is not only an unnecessary burden, but that it is wrong, that it dishonors God. Is not the same kind of teaching needed in the United States where priestly offices are exercised in a milder form? Perhaps we ought to cease to speak of the distinctive doctrines of Friends and call them some of the distinctive doctrines of the Gospel.

Another matter which should claim our earnest attention is the training of those whom God is calling to devote their time to the service of Christ in His Church. So far as I know we do not have a single institution of higher learning in our church which has for its primary object the training of such workers. With all due respect for those who are laboring so faithfully in the few Biblical Departments and Training Schools, we must say that they are far from meeting the need. May this year see the beginning of better things on this line.

May those whose barns are overflowing with material blessings be led to appropriate funds for this work to such an extent that every young man and woman in the Friends' Church who manifests a call to public work shall have an opportunity for a thorough training. By this I do not mean an exclusively college-educated ministry. Ministrations should come direct from the throne of God. But experience teaches us that the instruments need preparation, and all the more so now in this critical period of our church life.

Perhaps I have written much and said little, but I have tried not to do so. I shall always count it a pleasure to pray and help in every way I can, if it is possible for me to help, in thy arduous but fruitful task.

Sincerely,

SYLVESTER JONES.

DEDICATION OF FRIENDS' MEETING HOUSE AT MANTON, MICH.

Manton Meeting of Friends is a monthly meeting of Traverse City Quarterly Meeting, Indiana Yearly Meeting, and was organized as a preparative meeting about seventeen years ago by James D. Wood, who served it as its first pastor, and was succeeded by Ruth Cary, Josiah Pennington, Howard and Mary Moore, John Vintage, Leverett Rugg, and the writer, who is now serving his fourth year. When the meeting was set up the old school house was bought for a place of worship. It was a one-story building, 20x60, having two rooms, of which the front and larger was fitted for worship, while the back was partitioned off into living rooms as a home for the local minister. These were used for this purpose until four years ago this spring, when the present "minister's home" was purchased and remodeled. The house of worship was inadequate, and age was doing its sure work, which forced Friends to see the need of a new house. Accordingly last Fifth month the old one was torn down and work begun on a new one; notwithstanding all our members are poor people, and very little money was in reach, yet by persistent effort and self-sacrifice on the part of some we now have a neat and well-made building, 32x52, with a vestibule and a prayer room, 14x24 feet, with a folding partition, by means of which it may be opened into one audience room. We have it painted, papered, rostrum and center aisle carpeted, lighted with gasoline lamps and heated with a furnace, which is a necessary feature in this snowy north, and with thankful hearts, under the leadership of the Lord and His servant, Henry McKinley, of Traverse City, we opened it First month 17th, and dedicated it for the worship of God, until we succeed in paying for it, when it will be dedicated to Him.

Its total cost is $2,000, of which $600 has been paid and $700 more was pledged at the opening service. This leaves $700 yet unprovided for. Anyone desiring to help us in the struggle for the Master may remit to Solan Tyler, Manton, Mich., and it will be thankfully received.

Thine, in the love of Jesus,

WILLIS R. COOK.

Things of Interest Among Ourselves.

John and Nettie Riley have just closed a successful series of meetings in Berkeley, Cal.

More than forty members of Oskaloosa Meeting are students in Penn College this winter.

James R. Jones, of North Carolina, is laboring in evangelistic services at Kokomo, Ind.

Frank E. Jones, of South China, Maine, who has not been well of late, is now much improved.

George L. Crosman, of Saco, Maine, acceptably attended Boston Meeting on First-day, the 31st ult.

John A. Laughlin is engaged in a series of meetings at Kyle, Coffey County, Kansas. Souls are being saved.

Allen Jay has now finished his labors in the limits of North Carolina, and is staying for a time at Haverford, Pa.

Millie Lawhead labored in special meetings at New Garden, Ind., from the 17th to the 26th ult. Definite results followed.

Byron J. Rees, who has done evangelistic work in various parts of the country, is studying at Harvard University this year.

Our dear friend, John M. Watson, is still laboring in the limits of Baltimore Yearly Meeting. His last labors have been in Virginia.

J. Clarence and Anna Westenberg moved recently to San Francisco, Cal., and are regular helpers in the Friends' mission work in that city.

Prof. Charles E. Lewis, of Pacific College, Oregon, was called to Texas by the severe illness of his mother. On his arrival he found that his mother had already passed beyond.

Prof. Rosa E. Lewis, of Penn College, who expected to sail for Europe early in Second month, has been called to Texas because of the serious illness of her parents, Alistus W. Lewis and wife.

Sarah J. King, who served in the meeting at West Liberty, Ind., for three years, is now located in the meeting at Poplar Ridge, Ind., while Thomas Henderson and wife are caring for the meeting at West Liberty.

A three-weeks' revival service was recently held at Central City, Neb. More than a score took definite steps in their religious life. Many from other denominations attended the meetings, and took part in the services.

Leanah Hobson recently closed a very successful series of meetings at Traverse City, Mich., in which more than a score confessed conversion. Her postoffice address is now care Herman Hobson, 210 Pearl Street, Richmond, Ind.

Rufus M. Jones attended the meeting at Lynn, Mass., on First-day, the 31st ult. Mary Miars, who has been located at Lynn for some years, has been at her home in Ohio for a few weeks on account of the illness of her father.

Elwood Scott, of Marion, Ind., held a two-weeks' meeting at Caesar's Creek, Ohio, closing the 3d ult. Two conversions and two accessions to the meeting was a part of the results. The meeting was strengthened and built up generally.

Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting was held at the Arch Street Meeting House, the 1st inst. The usual business preparatory to the yearly meeting, which convenes in Fourth month, was transacted. An encouraging feature was the increased number of young Friends present.

Wilbur K. Thomas, who expects to graduate from the Friends' University at Wichita, Kansas, this spring, having completed the necessary college work, moved to Kansas City, First month 15th, where he is acting as local minister. His services so far have been satisfactory to the meeting.

Minnie Bassett is located in the meeting at Carmel, Ind., in Western Yearly Meeting. Her efforts are being blessed to the awakening of many members to the needs and responsibilities of the Church. She recently held meetings at Nobleville, Ind., which were a blessing to the Friends at that place.

Elwood S. Hinshaw, of Lynn, Ind., closed a ten-days' meeting at Pleasant View, in Barber's Mill Monthly Meeting, on Fifth-day evening, the 23th ult. The members were greatly helped by his earnest and practical presentation of the truth, many taking definite steps in their religious life. Five united with Friends.

A successful series of meetings closed at Buffalo, Kansas, First month 31st. J. Harry Pulland, a former cowboy, who is now a minister, was in charge. More than fifty professed conversion or renewal. Eleven united with Friends, and others will follow soon. The membership is encouraged to renewed activity.

John K. Howell, a minister from Wilmington Yearly Meeting, recently held a very successful revival meeting with Friends at Pine Woods Meeting, N. C. The work continued for two weeks with good results. More than thirty were definitely blessed, and much good was accomplished in strengthening the meeting.

John Kitterell, an evangelist from Ohio, and A. J. Hanson, the local minister, conducted a revival meeting at Lynnville, Iowa, which continued nearly two weeks. Two meetings were held each day, in which several persons professed to be specially blessed. Many persons not in the habit of attending church services came. John Kitterell went from there to Knightstown, Ind.

The annual meeting of the Board of the Friends' Africa Industrial Mission occurred in Cleveland, Ohio, First month 22d and 23d, 1904. Eight yearly meetings were represented, and letters, showing a deep interest in the work were received from absent members. The reports were encouraging, and all the business which claimed the attention of the Board was transacted in loving harmony. A report of the year's work is printed in the Missionary Department.

Indiana Friends should note that in a former notice, calling their attention to the fact that the first Sabbath in Second month was set apart as the time for taking a collection for the use of the Evangelistic and Church Extension Board of the Five Years Meeting, should send their remittances to Charles S. Carpenter, Richmond, Ind., and not to John T. Hadley, as there stated.

There is great need of some assistance to the good work which is being carried on by Friends at the Blue Ridge Mission. They need at once two dozen pair of good solid shoes for women, sizes ranging from No. 4 to No. 6, and cloth for dresses and muslin for underclothing. There is no danger that too much will be sent. Those who wish to help may send goods or money to Mahlon Lindley, Mt. Airy, N. C.

A series of meetings began the 17th, and closed the 31st ult., at Spencer, Iowa. Edwin Loft, of New Sharon, Iowa, and Thomas C. Teas, a singing evangelist of Albia, Iowa, were the principal workers. The attendance and interest was good, considering the extremely cold weather that prevailed most of the time. Fourteen were definitely blessed. The membership at large was strengthened and built up. Two united with Friends at the close of the meeting, and more will follow. Ellis A. and Clara E. Wells are ministers located in the meeting.

A very successful series of meetings closed First month 31st at Hopewell Meeting, Quaker, Ind. The meetings continued two weeks, resulting in a very decided victory for Christ. Twelve persons applied for membership with Friends. David H. Harold, of Indianapolis, assisted the local workers. A large body of young people are now organizing themselves for aggressive Christian work on several definite lines for the Church. The meeting is in a prosperous condition. About $700 has been spent recently for repairs, new seats, furnace, etc. A strong missionary society keeps that line of work in good shape.

On the evening of Twelfth month 25th, special meetings were commenced at North Branch, Kansas. Benjamin H. Hutchins, of Indiana, ably assisted during the first part of the meetings. During the latter part Fred Coppock, of Iowa, rendered excellent service, and Stanley Coppock, of Oklahoma Territory, led the singing. Edna Goodwin, a teacher in the Academy, assisted the evangelists in their work. A number of the Academy students and some others were converted or reclaimed. The presence of God was realized throughout the meetings, and the messages were plain, so that those who would might know the truth.

Wm. H. Pilot, a Penn College student, is doing successful work in the meeting at Marshalltown, Iowa. The Sabbath services, in which is manifested an encouraging degree of spiritual life, are well attended. Additions to the membership are being made monthly. At the last monthly meeting thirty-six applied for membership—a result of the work and ministry of M. Emily Ellyson, at Nevada, a neighboring town. These, however, will soon be organized into a meeting of their own at that place. The Endeavorers are becoming more aggressive. Within the last three weeks twelve souls have been definitely blessed in their evening cottage prayer meetings.

Elwood Scott held a series of meetings at Harveysburg, O., beginning First month 4th, and continuing nearly three weeks. The last week it was held as a union meeting, and the business houses of the town were closed every evening in its interest. Though many were kept away by sickness, the interest in the meeting grew. Friends and others were much drawn by the spirit of love in which the gospel message was uniformly given. At the First-day meeting after Elwood Scott left, Mattie Hadley, who has just returned for a needed rest from her long labor of love in Alaska, was present with her father. The meeting was much interested in her account of the great opening for the gospel in the far north, and nearly every member present had a testimony of praise.

The meeting at Oskaloosa, Iowa, enjoyed a social the evening of First month 26th. A committee of young Friends had made the preliminary arrangements, sending out announcements to the non-resident members so far as their addresses were known. The faculty and students of Penn College were especially invited, and the social was held in the college chapel. Owing to the effects of a recent ice storm and subsequent cold snap few of the older Friends were able to be present, but about two hundred in all responded to the invitation. Sociability was stimulated by light refreshments. A short program occupied the latter part of the evening. Ellison R. Purdy gave an account of the origin of some of the cardinal principles of Friends; I. W. Cook spoke of the beginnings of Oskaloosa Monthly Meeting; President A. Rosenberger outlined the relations of Church and College, and Josepha Hambleton gave a word of welcome to the attenders of the meeting who are not members of the meeting.

The Friends of Coloma Meeting, Parke County, Ind., have built a new modern meeting house with beautiful circular-seating, three class rooms, besides the main audience room, for the accommodation of the Bible School, and two cloak rooms. The largest of the class rooms can be thrown open with the main audience room when occasion requires. The building is heated by hot-air furnace. The total cost of the building, seating and furnishing, is about $3,050, which was all paid or provided for before the day of dedication, which occurred on the 10th inst. Thomas C. Brown, superintendent of Evangelistic and Church Extension Work of Western Yearly Meeting, led in the dedicatory services, and preached a very impressive sermon. A protracted meeting was commenced immediately after the dedication, led by Jehu Reagan, of New London, Ind., assisted by the local minister, Cyrus Jones, and quarterly meeting superintendent, S. B. Woodard, and other workers, which continued for nearly three weeks, resulting in the quickening of many, and in five applications for membership with Friends.

BORN.

HAINES.—To Jesse C. and Daisy L. Haines, Waynesville, O., Twelfth month 23d, 1904, a girl, Sarah Emily.

DIED.

BAKER.—At Westfield, Ind., First month 19th, 1904, Jemima Baker, late of Rosehill, Kansas, aged 69 years.

CAREY.—At the home of his son, Benjamin Carey, at Long Beach, Cal., Twelfth month 12th, 1903, Isaac Carey, aged 79 years. He was a member of Carmel Monthly Meeting of Friends, Hamilton County, Ind. He was a birthright Friend, was converted when young, and lived a consistent Christian life.

DARBY.—At her home, near Morrowville, Kansas, First month 9th, 1904, Clara Belle, daughter of John and Liza Harworth, and wife of Asa Darby, in her 39th year. She was an earnest Christian from her early childhood.

HADLEY.—At his home, near Earlham, Iowa, First month 30th, 1904, Jesse Hadley, in the 83d year of his age. He came to Iowa from Indiana in 1856, and with his family helped to build up Smyrna Monthly Meeting of Friends in Clarke County. At the time of his death he was a member of Bear Creek Monthly Meeting.

HOCKETT.—At Kokomo, Ind., First month 24th, 1904, Asa Hockett, an aged Friend.

LEWIS.—First month 25th, 1904, at the home of her son-in-law, Manley M. Cox, League City, Texas, Nancy J. Lewis, wife of Alistair W. Lewis. Besides her daughter, Elva L. Cox, and family, and her son, Waldo E. Lewis, residing at League City, there were with her during her last hours her oldest son, T. H. Lewis, of San Antonio, Texas, and Prof. Rosa E. Lewis, of Penn College, Iowa, while her other son, Prof. Charles E. Lewis, of Pacific College, Oregon, arrived shortly after her death. Her husband was lying very low at the time of her death, but is now slowly improving. She was a lifelong member of Friends, earnest and consistent, and her relation to the work of the church was always marked by meek humility and sincere devotion.

PYLE.—At her residence, near Ogden, Clinton County, Ohio, First month 17th, 1904, Nancy F., wife of David S. Pyle, in the 81st year of her age. She was a member of Wilmington Monthly Meeting.

SMITH.—At his home, 570 Harrison Street, San Francisco, Cal., Twelfth month 14th, 1903, Barclay J. Smith, in the 70th year of his age. The deceased was senior member of Smith's cash store and a prominent Friend in San Francisco for a number of years.

STANLEY.—At his home in Carmel, Ind., First month 4th, 1904, Elam Stanley, son of George and Jemima Stanley, in his seventieth year. He was a lifelong member of Friends, and was among the early settlers in Hamilton County, having settled here in 1855. He left his family with a clear assurance of "peace."

Events and Comments.

William C. Whitney, ex-Secretary of the Navy, died the 2d inst.

It seems to be the general impression that the Senate will reach an early vote on the canal treaty.

Heavy snows in the central part of Canada and the northern part of the United States blockaded railroad traffic for a few days last week.

It is reported that the long war between the Goulds and the Pennsylvania Railroad interests is at an end, a compromise having been effected last week.

The cotton market has taken a sudden drop, and the prevailing opinion seems to be that a more normal condition will pre-

WELL TOLD.

Doctor Explains Feeding Without Medicine.

"It is a well-substantiated fact," says a Maine physician, "that a very large per cent. of the ailments of humanity are due to errors in diet causing indigestion and the myriad affections following in its train. It was Dr. Abernathy, I believe, who said, 'One-fourth of what we eat keeps us; the other three-fourths we keep at our peril.'"

"Loss of flesh from whatever immediate cause is due primarily to nutritional disturbances involving defective assimilation. With these prefatory remarks I wish to relate briefly a case of mine (not the only one by any means), in which Grape-Nuts was the connecting link between disease and health.

"It was a case of chronic gastritis, where the patient had seen the rounds of much-stereotyped treatment and where there was much depression caused by long persistence of distress at the stomach—pain, gas and burning soon after eating.

"Though I had been regulating the diet considerably while giving medicine, it occurred to me that I would try regulating it without medicine, and in looking about among the foods I soon found Grape-Nuts was the best adapted to my purpose. Starting in with Grape-Nuts alone, I allowed my patient to take it first with hot water and a very little sugar at intervals of three hours. After a few days I instructed the patient to use it with warm milk. (It should have been served with cream on the start.)

"Improvement was marked from the first. The eructations of gas were at once greatly diminished, and the terrible burning and distress were lessened in proportion, while the spirits brightened. At the end of two weeks my patient had so far improved that she was allowed some chicken broth, which digested perfectly. It has been over two months, and she has gradually increased her diet in variety, until it now includes all that is needed to avoid monotony and maintain relish.

"Grape-Nuts, however, still holds a prominent place on her table, as it will continue to do, for she realizes that it is a sheet anchor." Name of the physician given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

vail than that which has obtained for some time past.

The report comes from the Adirondacks that many deer are dying in the big woods because the snow is so deep that they cannot get any food. But few people realize how deep snow must be to cause a deer to die of starvation.

The Maryland Senatorial deadlock has been broken by the election of Isidor Rayner United State Senator to succeed Senator McComas. Rayner received the unanimous vote of the Democrats, while the Republicans stood solid for McComas.

Immigration is finally beginning to wane. Twelfth month was the first in many months to experience a decline in the number of arrivals, which was 44,682, compared with 50,291 in the same month of 1902. Nevertheless the calendar year 1903 will prove to have been a record-breaker in the volume of immigration.

Porto Rico was pushed along another step toward Statehood in the American Union this week in the House when its delegate was put upon the same footing as delegates from the regular organized Territories and admitted to a voice in the House proceedings. The unanimity and heartiness with which this was done are of great significance.

In his summary of the year 1903 in China, the London "Times's" Pekin correspondent reported: "Electric light is coming more into use in the interior. The bicycle is now in common use among the Chinese. Here in Pekin and at Tientsin, as at Shanghai, many officials drive in foreign carriages. The Dowager-Empress recently received a consignment of motor-cars."

A combination of independent plate-glass manufacturers has been perfected. It will be known as the United Plate Glass Company, and was incorporated under the laws of Delaware. The object of the company is to market the entire product of the nine concerns that compose it through offices to be established in Pittsburg. Every company outside of the Pittsburg Plate Glass Company is a member.

The inquiry undertaken by the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections into the charges affecting the seat in the Senate of Reed Smoot, of Utah, will comprehend a much wider scope than the mere investigation of this particular case. It is the purpose to put the whole Mormon Church on trial as a dangerous political influence, and Senator Smoot's case will be but an incident of this broader, more comprehensive inquiry.

One-dollar wheat in the sample-room of the Chicago Board of Trade became an actuality one day last week. The fact that the price that has been long the dream of the farmer had again been attained gave added stimulus to the efforts of the bull leaders in the pits, and soon after the dollar mark was reached in the sample-room prices in the wheat, corn and oats pits established new records, eclipsing previous high marks for the year.

The present session of the British Parliament, which opened last week, promises to be full of interest to Americans, inasmuch as its attitude upon the fiscal issue may vitally affect our commercial relations with our best customer. John Morley will submit early in the session his amendment declaring that any return to protective duties "will be deeply injurious to the national strength, contentment and well-being." The vote on the Morley amendment will show how far Englishmen have receded from the position they assumed more than half a century ago.

IT IS A MATTER OF HEALTH

There IS NO SUBSTITUTE

The reference in the King's address to the insufficiency of the supply of raw cotton, which is seriously affecting the textile industries of Great Britain, will doubtless provoke discussion, and possibly lead to action designed to increase the area of cotton cultivation in the British colonies. The subject of Anglo-American arbitration will receive some attention. Lord Lansdowne briefly referred to this great question, and expressed the hope that the recognition of the principle of arbitration in the Alaska boundary controversy might be reduced to treaty forms for the settlement of all Anglo-American questions.

The utilization of skim milk in the production of a hard substance resembling horn or celluloid, to which the name "galalith" (milk-stone) has been given, is described in a recent report of the United States Consul-General at Coburg, Germany. Articles made of this new substance, which were shown at the hygienic milk-supply exhibition at Hamburg, included combs, seemingly made of horn; cigar-holders, with amber-colored mouthpieces; knives and forks, with handles similar in appearance to ebony; ferrules for umbrellas and sticks, and balls, rings, chess figures, dominoes, etc.: also a small table with an inlaid marble slab, and finally a number of thick slabs and staves, with every imaginable variation of marble colors, but of considerably less weight than real marble.

No kindnesses shown in act are so important and so essential a part of friendship as prayer for our friend.—J. R. Miller, D.D.

IN SPIRIT AND IN TRUTH.

BY ISABEL R. HEATH.

This is our need, that 'twixt our souls and God

Shall no illusions be: tho' in nice phrase
And with the best intent, before the world,

We state our purpose to be His alone.
We must be His if we would grow in grace.

The Spirit in our hearts, His monitor,
Approves or disapproves of all we do.
Comes Flattery often in Religion's garb,
With patting hand, commending simple deeds

(But natural actions of a child of God),
Till we with satisfaction are puffed up
And, placid, feel "'tis with the righteous well."

Then speaks our faithful monitor, "This deed,

Was't thine or His who works His will through thee,

And whose the glory?" till, recalled, we sit

Again at Jesus' feet, our hands in His, Content to feel "He leadeth us," and know

That wondrous peace the world can ne'er bestow.

Only friends can know what friendship is.—Bishop Huntington.

SURE.

The Robust Physique Can Stand More
Coffee Than a Weak One.

A young Virginian says: "Having a naturally robust constitution far above the average, and not having a nervous temperament, my system was able to resist the inroads upon it by the use of coffee for some years, but finally the strain began to tell.

"For ten years I have been employed as telegraph operator and typewriter by a railroad in this section, and until two years ago I had used coffee continually from the time I was 8 years old, nearly twenty years.

"The work of operating the telegraph key is a great strain upon the nerves, and after a day's work was over I would feel nervous, irritable, run down, and toward the last suffered greatly from insomnia and neuralgia. As I never indulged in intoxicating liquors, drugs or tobacco in any form, came to the conclusion that coffee and tea were causing the gradual break-down of my nervous system, and, having read an article in the 'Medical Magazine' on the composition of coffee and its toxic effect upon the system, I was fully convinced that coffee was the cause of my trouble.

"Seeing Postum spoken of as not having any of the deteriorating effects of coffee, I decided to give up the stimulant and give Postum a trial. The result was agreeably surprising. After a time my nerves became wonderfully strong. I can do all my work at the telegraph key and typewriter with far greater ease than ever before. My weight has increased thirty-five pounds, my general health keeping pace with it, and I am a new man and a better one." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

BOOKS.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND thankfully acknowledges the receipt of the following books:

"Princely Men in the Heavenly Kingdom," by Harlan P. Beach. Published by the United Society of Christian Endeavor, 600 Tremont Temple, Boston, Mass. Prices, cloth, 50 cents; paper, 35 cents. Contains a brief account of the Christian heroes who have contributed to the uplifting of the world's greatest empire, China.

"Into All the World," by Amos R.
Wells. Published by the United Society of Christian Endeavor, Boston. Is a most convenient little work, covering the entire mission field by giving a brief sketch of the lives of many consecrated men and women who have wrought to bring the world to its Redeemer.

"A Short History of Christianity," by John Horsch, published by the author,
107 University Street, Cleveland, O., price, $1.50, is a presentation of the principal facts in church history as they appear from an American writer's point of view.

"Behind the Bars," by Mary A. Jenks.
Published by the author, Pawtucket,
R. I. Price, $1.50. The author of this valuable work has been police matron at Pawtucket, R. I., for several years, and gives the public the benefit of her ripe experience in its pages.

"The Lincoln Legion," by Louis Albert
Banks, published by the Lincoln Legion,
110 East One-hundred-and-twenty-fifth Street, New York city, price, $1.00, is a history of the movement which began with Abraham Lincoln and a few of his companions in "South Fork School House," Sangamon County, Ill., and culminated in the Lincoln Legion, which was launched by the Anti-Saloon League in Tenth month, 1903.

"The Federation of Religions," by Hiram
Vrooman. Published by the Nunc
Licet Press, 42 West Coulter Street, Philadelphia, Pa. Price, 75 cents. This volume sets forth the scope and announces the possible achievements of "The Federation of Religions." In discovering right methods of thinking on spiritual matters the writer regards the individual as a spiritual microcosm, and incidentally proves the incarnation of the divine by scientific methods of reasoning.

"Training with the Master Teacher," by C. S. Beardslee, published by the Sunday School Times Company, price, 50 cents, is a hand-book for teachers in a study of the Master's methods.

"The Christian Science Delusion," by A. C. Dixon, William H. Smyth, publisher, 25 Stanhope Street, Boston, Mass.
Price, 10 cents.

"Gold Tried in the Fire" is the title of a new collection of songs compiled and published by Brown Brothers, a Quaker concern, of Indianapolis, Ind. The collection is a choice one, neatly bound in flexible cloth, for 20 cents per copy, or $15.00 per hundred.

"Devotional Songs," compiled by W.
H. Doane, William J. Kirkpatrick and Hubert P. Main. Published by the Biglow & Main Company, Chicago and New York. Price, $25.00 per 100. This collection of songs has been selected with a view to meet the demand for a book of praise suited to the needs of all de-

IF QUALITY COUNTS
IT'S

Stuyler's

YOU WANT.

"OUR ONLY STYLE CAN."

YOUR GROCER HAS IT.

partments of church work, where good,
enthusiastic singing is most desired.

"Northfield Hymnal," edited by Geo.
C. Stebbins, published by the Biglow &
Main Company, New York and Chicago, is a selection of the best hymns that have appeared in the "Gospel Hymns" and "Sacred Songs." Price, $25.00 per 100; 30 cents per single copy.

"The World Almanac," issued by the Press Publishing Company, New York.
Single copy, by mail, 35 cents.

"Help for the Tempted," by Amos R.
Wells, published by the United Society of Christian Endeavor, price, 75 cents, is a series of most helpful suggestions for all who fight for the "overcomer's" crown. It is also published in pamphlet form for 15 cents per copy; 10 copies for $1.00.

"Grace Before Meat," by Amos R.
Wells, published by the United Society
of Christian Endeavor, price, 25 cents, is a collection of table blessings for all occasions.

Be noble, and the nobleness that lies
In other men, sleeping, but never dead,
Will rise in majesty to meet thine own;
Then wilt thou see it gleam in many eyes,
Then wilt pure light around thy path
be shed,
And thou wilt nevermore be sad and lone.

—Lowell.

FREE

GREGORY'S
SEED CATALOGUE
FOR 1904

If you would get out of a crop all that soil and sun can do for you plant

GREGORY'S
SEEDS

Sure, safe, reliable. For nearly 50 years the standard. Sold under three warrants. Send for free catalogue.

J. J. H. GREGORY & SON,
Marblehead,
Mass.

10,000 Plants for 16c

More gardens and farms are planted to Salzer's Seeds than any other in America. There is reason for this. We own and operate over 5000 acres for the production of our warranted seeds. In order to induce you to try them, we make you the following unprecedented offer:

For 16 Cents Postpaid

1000 Early, Medium and Late Cabbages,
2000 Delicious, Carrots,
2000 Blanching Celery,
2000 Rich Natty Lettuce,
1000 Splendid Onions,
1000 Rare Luscious Radishes,
1000 Gloriously Brilliant Flowers.

Above seven packages contain sufficient seed to grow 10,000 plants, furnishing bushels of brilliant flowers and lots and lots of choice vegetables, together with our great catalog, telling all about Flowers, Roses, Small Fruits, etc., all for 16c in stamps and this notice. Mammoth 140-page catalog alone, 4c.
JOHN A. SALZER SEED CO.,
R. La Crosse, Wis.

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

Gluten X Grits AND BARLEY CRYSTALS,

Perfect Breakfast and Desert Health Cereals.
PANSY FLOUR for Biscuits, Cake and Pastry.
Unlike all other goods. Ask Grocers.
For book or sample, write
FARWELL & RHINES, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE.
Sifts the flour and mixes 10 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for booklet. Agents wanted.
Scientific Bread Mach. Co.
(CYRUS CHAMBERS, Jr.)
52d & Media Sts., Philadelphia

WILLIAM S. YARNALL
Manufacturing OPTICIAN

118 S. FIFTEENTH ST., PHILA.
4th Door Below Chestnut St.

The best prayer that friends can offer is this: "Lord, enlarge our hearts, that those who love us may have more to love."

EMINENT PHYSICIANS
throughout the world recommend

QUINA-LAROCHE

AS A SPECIFIC IN CASES OF
ANEMIA, COLDS, LA GRIFFE,
SLOW CONVALESCENCE,
STOMACH TROUBLES,
TYPHOID and MALARIAL
FEVERS.

E. Fougere & Co., 30 N. William St., N. Y.

FLORIDA AND THE CAROLINAS—WINTER RESORTS.

Palm Beach, Miami, Daytona, Tampa, Jacksonville, Camden, Southern Pines, Pinehurst are quickly and most conveniently reached via the Seaboard Air Line. Three daily trains in each direction, including the Seaboard Florida Limited, the handsomest and quickest train in the Florida service. Tourist tickets on sale daily, with stop-over privileges. For description, booklets and information, address W. E. Conklyn, General Agent, 1411 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Delavau's Remedy

A SPECIFIC FOR

Whooping Cough and Croup

Also a safe and speedy cure for Bronchitis, Bronchial Catarrh and ordinary coughs. 50 Cents a Bottle, at Druggists, or

J. W. S. DELAVAU & CO., Propr's.
N. E. Cor. 6th and Wood Sts., Phila.

OSTEOPATHY

EDWARD D. BURLEIGH
ALEXANDER STETSON

Osteopathic Physician, 1537 Chestnut St., Room 401.

Hours, 9 a.m. to 12.30 p.m. and 2 to 4 p.m.
Bell Telephone Consultation free.

S. F. BALDERSTON'S SON

Wall Paper and Decorations

Window Shades Made to Order

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILA.

Acker has it—that perfect Coffee.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA. Office, 409 CHESTNUT STREET

CAPITAL, $1,000,000

ASSETS, $63,970,335.34

Surplus and Undivided Profits, belonging to Stockholders 4,026,151.15
Surplus, belonging to Insurance Account 5,635,620.25

Incorporated Third month 22, 1865. Charter Perpetual.

INSURES LIVES, GRANTS ANNUITIES, RECEIVES MONEY ON DEPOSIT, returnable on demand for which interest is allowed.

And is empowered by law to act as EXECUTOR ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, GUARDIAN, ASSIGNEE, COMMITTEE, RECEIVER, AGENT, etc.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the assets of the Company.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.

BOXES $5 AND UPWARDS

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY, President.

T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-Prest.
ASA S. WING, Vice-President.
JOS. ASHBROOK, Man. Ins. Dept.
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer.

J. R. FOULKE, Trust Officer.

DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary.

J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Assistant Trust Officer

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary.

DIRECTORS:

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY,
T. WISTAR BROWN,
HENRY HAINES,
RICHARD WOOD,
CHAS. HARTSHORNE.

ASA S. WING,
PHILIP C. GARRETT,
JAMES V. WATSON,
WM. LONGSTRETH,
THOS. SCATTERGOOD.

J. PRESTON THOMAS,
ROBERT M. JANNEY,
MARRIOTT C. MORRIS,
FRANK H. TAYLOR,
JOSEPH B. TOWNSEND, Jr.

FINANCIAL.

6% to 7% Choice First Mortgage Loans, Seattle and vicinity. Local and N. Y. references. Established 1887. Correspondence Solicited.
JAMES BOTHWELL, Seattle, Washington.

Mortgages Net 6% in North Dakota.

I place mortgages on land covering about one-third its value. The value of this land is constantly increasing.

I know every mortgagor personally, know his land, his integrity, his habits and his ability to pay.

These combine to make me certain that these mortgages are as safe as GOVERNMENT BONDS.

Investigate me. You can't make the investigation too rigid to suit me. I'll stand it. I've been in this business for 18 years, and never lost a cent for a customer, nor foreclosed a mortgage.

I collect the interest and principal without charge and remit in New York exchange. Write to me for further information.

WALTER L. WILLIAMSON

Investment Banker

Lisbon

North Dakota

6% NET

Sound, conservative first mortgages on improved realty. We examine every security and know every borrower. We make our loans with our own money and turn them over complete. In 23 years we have learned how to select the best. No one now handling western mortgages has had more experience. We give you the benefit of that experience. The quality of the securities now on hand has never been surpassed. Highest references. Write for circulars and full information free.

PERKINS & COMPANY Lawrence, Kan.

STENOGRAPHER

GEO. B. COCK

Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter Street.

Telephones.

HOME OFFICE BUILDINGS OF THE PRUDENTIAL, AT NEWARK, NEW JERSEY.

THE BEST IN LIFE INSURANCE
AT LOW COST : POLICIES FOR BOTH SEXES : AMOUNTS TO SUIT
YOUR NEEDS UP TO $100,000

Greatest and Best Year's Record

LIFE INSURANCE ISSUED AND PAID 293 Millions
FOR during 1903, including Ordinary Insurance ($102,822,648); over -

ASSETS, end of 1903, over	- - - - -	72 Millions
INCOME during 1903, over	- - - - -	39 Millions
PAID POLICY HOLDERS during 1903, over	- - - - -	11 Millions
SURPLUS, end of 1903, over	- - - - -	10 Millions
NUMBER OF POLICIES IN FORCE, (5,447,307), over	- - - - -	5 Millions
INCREASE IN PAID FOR INSURANCE in Force, over	- - - - -	129 Millions

MAKING THE GRAND TOTAL OF

Paid For Insurance in Force, over 931 Millions

Total Payments to Policy Holders in 28 Years, over 79 Millions.

THE LIFE INSURANCE SUCCESS OF THE AGE.

THE PRUDENTIAL

INSURANCE CO. OF AMERICA.

HOME OFFICE: Newark, N. J.

Write for Information of Policies or Agencies, Dept. C.

JOHN F. DRYDEN, President.

The American Friend

Vol. XI

SECOND MONTH 18, 1904

No. 7

	PAGE
EDITORIALS.—Men of Good Will.—Women in the Ministry	107
New England Decadent?	108
Winnet R. Jones.
Pointer	111
Alfred Cook.
Indian Tribes of Northern California.	112
Hannah Bean.
THE INTERNATIONAL LESSON	112
Lesson for Second month 28, 1904.
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR	113
Topic for Second month 28, 1904.
MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT	113
EDUCATIONAL	114
CORRESPONDENCE	115
THINGS OF INTEREST AMONG OURSELVES.	115
MARRIED—DIED	116
EVENTS AND COMMENTS	117

THE TRUE IMPERIALISM

*Here, where the tide of conquest rolls
Against the distant golden shores,
The startled and stunted human souls
Are with us more and more.*

*Take to your Science, train your Art,
Your triumphs and your glories earn
To feed the hunger of their heart
And furnish of their brain.*

*Your savage deserts bordering near,
Your wastes of ignorance, evil, and shame—
Is there no room for generous here,
No field for deeds of fame?*

*Arise and conquer while ye can
The fire that in your midst resides,
And build within the mind of Man
The Empire that abides.*

—WILLIAM WATSON

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.50 A YEAR PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
AMERICAN FRIEND PUBLISHING COMPANY, 718 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA

Benjamin Franklin said:
"I was never ashamed to ask what I did not know."

Follow this rule and learn about life insurance.
Free booklet. No im-portunity.

PENN MUTUAL LIFE

921-3-5 Chestnut Street.

"One man's salvation often depends on another's service."

EDUCATIONAL.

EARLHAM COLLEGE, RICHMOND, INDIANA

Prof. Elbert Russell offers courses regularly in Kings, New Testament Times, Life of Christ, The Apostolic Age, Church History, New Testament Literature, Romans, John, Biblical Literature, Isaiah.

Prof. Cyrus W. Hodgkin, The Protestant Reformation.

Prof. Anna M. Demaree, New Testament, Greek.

Asst. Prof. Lindley, History of the Hebrews.

Pres. Kelly, History of Philosophy, Ethics, Psychology.

The Oakwood Seminary

UNION SPRINGS, N. Y.

Founded in 1796.

A boarding school for boys and girls under the care of New York Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Academic, College Preparatory and Commercial

Spring term begins Fourth month 5, 1904

SAMUEL H. HODGIN,
Principal.

LINDLEY M. STEVENS,
Superintendent.

WHITTIER COLLEGE

Classical, Scientific and Literary courses. Highest requirements. Students unable to continue their studies in more rigorous climes will find this climate the best in the world for study. Natural advantages for scientific investigation unsurpassed. Well equipped laboratory. Whittier, a Friend's community, —morally clean, —no saloons or kindred sources of corruption. For catalogue address,

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, President.

Stenography, Typewriting, Mimeographing and Reporting

LYDIA ARETE CONN,

805 Provident Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

SHORTHAND TAUGHT BY MAIL

or in school. Each student receives personal attention.
Moderate rates. Write for full information.

PROVIDENT SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND

805 Provident Building Philadelphia, Pa.

STENOGRAPHING, TYPEWRITING and MIMEOGRAPHING. Prices moderate.

MARY M. KITE

407 Lippincott Building, 12th and Filbert Sts., Phila.

Phone No. 3-33-00

A. M. ADAMS, PRINTING

230 N. Twelfth St., Philadelphia.

BELL TELEPHONE.

When an expensive and beautiful garment has become soiled and you doubt whether the color will stand washing, don't put it away without trying Ivory Soap. If water will not cause the color to run, Ivory Soap will not. Avoid extremely hot water, hot sun and a too hot iron. Give this suggestion a trial—even experienced housekeepers are surprised.

Friendship is the nearest thing we know to what religion is.—Henry Drummond.

BUSHIDO—THE SOUL OF JAPAN

An Exposition of Japanese Thought, by Inazo Nitobe, A.M., Ph.D., Professor in the Imperial College, Sapporo, Japan. Price, postpaid, white leatherette cover, 75 cents; bound in cloth, $1.00.

THE LEEDS & BIDDLE CO., Inc.

1019-21 Market St., Phila.

Acker has them—those Washington Souvenirs.

Penn's Treaty with the Indians

on India paper; engraving 23 inches by 18 inches, on sheets 30 inches by 24 inches; from the original Boydell engraved plate made in 1775 from the original painting of Benjamin West. $3.00 by mail.

A. L. SMITH

29 E. Penn St., Germantown, Phila., Pa.

The American Friend

"Truth is the highest thing a man may keep."
"That they all may be one."

VOL. XI.

PHILADELPHIA, SECOND MONTH 18, 1904.

No. 7.

MEN OF GOOD WILL.

WE naturally ask, when a great war breaks out, and when men set out to slaughter each other on a gigantic scale, how such an unholy thing can come to pass in a world which has listened nineteen hundred years to the gospel of the Prince of Peace. The answer is very plain and simple. Fighting and killing are as natural as running or breathing. It is what men have been doing ever since there were men. Primitive peoples no more thought war wrong than they thought the worship of their gods wrong. For one tribe to kill off a tribe which stood in its way was as much a matter of course as killing a rabbit for dinner, or as cutting down trees to make a path through the woods.

War was bound to go on unstopped by moral questioning until love could come to birth in the hearts of men. At first love, or fellowship, was limited to the tribe; that is to say, to the large family. The members of this tribe did not kill each other, for they had common interests, common bonds, mutual fellow-feeling. Anybody outside that group was, or might easily become, a natural enemy. Then he was to be killed, if possible. In the course of civilization the nation has taken the place of the tribe. The group is larger, fellow-feeling has greatly expanded, but still it is bounded by ranges of mountains, by rivers, by sea coasts and by imaginary boundary lines. And when the interests of one group come into collision with the interests of another group, the two groups have recourse to the primitive method of killing each other.

Now the only way to get rid of war is to get a world full of persons to whom fighting and killing are unnatural. It has always been unnatural for men to kill those whom they loved. They killed only where they hated, for that was the natural thing to do. As fast as the circle of love and fellow-feeling widened the area of peace widened. Inside this circle killing was unnatural; outside of it it was natural to kill for a sufficient cause. War vanishes before love just as snow vanishes before the sun, because as soon as the spirit of love prevails killing has become unnatural and impossible.

This is what the song of the angels means. They announced "Peace among men of good will," (for that is the way it should be translated). That is an eternal truth, there is Peace among men of good will. A world full of persons of good will would be a world of Peace. War would be unnatural to every one of them. Christ's method, then, of abolishing war is to produce men of good will. This is the reason that the process is so slow. It means the reversal of all selfish "natural" impulses. It means the creation of a society in which love and service and helpfulness to every man of every color and race are as spontaneous and natural as it used to be to kill and destroy. It has already become so to all of us within the little circle of our family. To serve wife or child gives us more joy than to serve self. A few of us carry the idea farther. Our religious denomination is a wider family circle. Any service we can render within this circle gives us joy. We count no sacrifice too hard if it yields an increase to the members of this group. Others live a still wider life. Whatever their country needs they give with joy. But Christ carries us out farther still. He reveals the preciousness of man as man. Every man is a possible son of God and so a brother of all who have become actually sons of God. He aims to produce a society of "men of good will," i. e., men who practice love to all other men simply because everyone is precious to the Heavenly Father. How different this would be from our actual society in which the union men fight the non-union men, the laborer and capitalist are at war, in which torpedo boats destroy gunboats and torpedo destroyers destroy torpedo-boats, and the ingenuity of man labors to discover some destroyer to destroy the torpedo destroyers. Let us not suppose that Hague courts or arbitration councils or conciliation boards will ever change the fact of human nature. War springs out of natural primitive impulses. The only cure is a new kind of person who has formed the good will, who practices love, who finds it natural to serve and help. No golden society can ever be made out of leaden individuals. No shuffling of bad atoms will make a good whole. Peace comes as fast as Christ comes in men's lives. There is Peace wherever there are men of good will. It is the spirit of love which makes good families; it is the spirit of love which produces a powerful Church; it will be the prevailing spirit of love which shall finally banish war.

WOMEN IN THE MINISTRY.

It will doubtless surprise many to learn that the ministry of women is by no means confined to Friends. There are fifty-three women who are ordained ministers in the Congregational churches, and there are nearly as many more who are preaching without yet having been ordained. Forty-five of the fifty-three are married. Five of them were originally Friends. Some of them studied for the ministry, while others came into it more or less unexpectedly through a desire to assist their husbands. The first woman minister was ordained by a Congregational church in 1890, so that this movement is a growth, in this denomination, of only fourteen years. The number has doubled in the past nine years. Experience has plainly shown that women possess gifts and qualifications which fit them for ministry and for the work which is generally called pastoral, i. e., home visiting and the general oversight of the wide activities which properly belong to a modern church. These Congregational women ministers are distributed over twenty States and Territories, and they are as successful in New York as they are in the far West, and as successful in the latter as in the former section.

More and more it is being realized that the work of ministry in its widest range and function calls for persons of spiritual qualities, for a sympathetic heart, for quickness of appreciation, rather than for persons of sheer intellectual ability, or for theological experts. Now women are rich in just these needed qualities. The person who can guide a tender little life toward its true destiny is just the kind of person who can feel the needs of a congregation and who can make her life go out toward such as require tender shepherding. In the early Church woman had a very large place, but as the organization crystalized into a great system of ecclesiastical rulers woman's sphere became subordinate, and Paul's famous advice to Corinth was seized upon as a handy ecclesiastical law, "women must keep silent." The Protestant churches which have kept in bondage to the letter have continued this unreasonable attitude, and so have lost half their effectiveness. Friends, acting in obedience to the Spirit, at once saw that there was no sex in spiritual matters—that God conferred divine gifts on persons, both male and female. Margaret Fell is joint founder of our Society with George Fox, and some of the greatest ministry in our history has come from women. For a long period we were not only pioneers in this good mission, but we were practically the only denomination in which the ministry of women was free and untrameled. There have been women of remarkable gifts in other denominations, but they have generally been compelled to seek other careers than the one for which they were plainly called—because there was Paul's sentence lying like an iron gate across their path. One by one, however, the churches are seeing deeper and are reaching the mind of the Spirit who has in all ages come upon women as well as men. And at present the Congregationalists are breaking down the iron gate. Let the good work go on.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

IS NEW ENGLAND DECADENT?

BY WILMOT R. JONES.

"Populations are decreasing," "immigrants are not assimilated—a subject of melancholy comment," "thrifty, successful, contented farmers have gone west or into cities," "the hill-town confronts 'an everlasting no'!" "parishes have declined in numbers, wealth and spiritual power," "rural manufacturing has declined more rapidly than has agriculture," "New England has declined in wealth and in character," "farms present only a sad economic problem to be solved by the ages,"—these are fair samples of "popular opinion" as summarized, now from one point of view, now from another—the social, the industrial, the sectarian, or religious—concerning rural New England. Here, as always, it is easier to take the point of view of public opinion than that of fact; easier to get the fact than to see its true meaning. Is not New England worthy of a treatment more judicial and philosophical than it usually gets?

It is essential to keep in mind New England's relations to England, and not to forget the social and political unity of New England for nearly three hundred years; it is just as essential to bear in mind that, with this unity within her confined territory of hardly 70,000 square miles, she has been in constant relationship with the world. Still more important is it that writers who would interpret her life adequately should know of her geographic and geologic unity. The great tap root, agriculture, involves the whole tree. The agricultural life of New England is not to develop in spite of New England, with her northern mountains and her Southern plateau. If, as the facts show, the earlier generations attempted to make farms in the Northern belt of States just as in the Southern, and on barren hilltops and hillsides as in valleys, a later generation may seem wise in abandoning such farms for better ones at home or in the West. Nature on one side and a progressive civilization on the other, hold in the long run dominant ideas in their keeping. The point of view of this paper is that, in the large, many-sided relations of our subject, the New England of her first and second century is a very simple and a very little conception compared with the New England of her third century, little in every way: little in her industries; little in her intellectual life, and narrow in the character and spiritual life of her people. It is in point to ask, whether it is at all in harmony with a philosophic treatment of the life of any people in any age to pronounce them "decadent" or "progressive" by the study of decades or even of generations, as we are too prone to do because of our convenient "census returns." Governments may change in a day, but the causes of their changing operate through centuries—so with industrial life. In the industrial life of England there was steady growth from the very simple farm life of the "home" to the more complex life of the "guild" period, to the still more complex life of the "domestic period"; till we find that, in turn, shading off into the ever-increasing complexity of the "factory period." With much overlapping of periods and at an accelerated pace, New England, barring the "guild period," has undergone essentially the same evolutionary process, doing in three hundred years very much of what it took England a thousand years to do.

II.

Having fixed upon a fairly high point of view, we may do well to see just where the line should fall between rural and urban New England, and to note that that line is not and cannot be fixed for a long period. We know that it took New England, while she was waiting for industrial hints from England and the rest of the world two centuries and more to build up one city of 20,000 people. When New England began making cities she, like England, had to make them out of her towns. For two centuries she spent pretty much all her time making towns, producing and using her products for the most part where they were made. For one century New England has been making cities, drawing men and products from her towns. Resting the case on fact, George F. Wells lets the line between rural and urban for Vermont fall at populations of 2,000. Towns, forty in all, with 2,000 people or more, are called urban; towns, 206 in all, with less than 2,000, are called rural. Vermont has but two towns with a population of more than 10,000; Maine but 7; Rhode Island, 8; Massachusetts, 47; New York, by way of comparison, but 45. Massachusetts has 52 towns with a population above 5,000. For all of Southern New England the line between rural and urban would fall somewhere between 5,000 and 10,000; for Northern somewhere between 2,000 and 5,000; and there are not far from 150 towns in New England that would be called urban, taking 6,000 as a probable average for all New England.

III.

Disregarding immigration for the time, it is true that as urban New England increases in population rural New England decreases. In the decade 1890-1900 60 per cent. of the forty urban towns in Vermont, 20 per cent. of all towns, and only 12 per cent. of the 206 rural towns increased 5 per cent. or more—and this Wells speaks of as a "positive increase"; 32 per cent. of all towns stood still, or neither increased nor decreased as much as 5 per cent.; in 60 per cent. of the strictly rural towns there has been a positive decrease of more than 10 per cent., while the population of the whole State has increased. In 1830 in Vermont there were but three urban towns. Rural towns had their maximum populations in 1850—289,000, with only 24,600 in the urban towns. In the half century since, the change has been rapid. In 1900 the rural towns had 186,900, while the urban had 156,750. This was a period all through New England of re-adjustment and adaptation to the modern industrial civilization in which, both in extractive and transforming occupations, the machine is the dominant factor. The opening up of the West, the Civil War and the scientific method and spirit applied to industrial life, are among the causes active in producing this great change in New England. The "home" and "domestic" types of agriculture and manufacture have slowly yielded their foremost place to the industrial type. It is safe to say that the population of that part of rural New England adapted to intensive farming is increasing as rapidly as that of urban sections adapted to other typical industries. In other rural towns population has changed rapidly from country to city and many farms have run down or been abandoned altogether. The point to keep in mind is this: change does not mean decadence; change and decay are the requisites of growth.

IV.

Besides the causes already referred to as producing change, others, of secondary importance, have their place in determining the present status of the New England farm: (a) Depletion of forest, (b) neglected highways, (c) excessive taxation, (d) unwise choice of land.

(a) I use Vermont as typical for the northern group; here, in lumbering, from 1860 to 1890, there was a steady increase both in the number of plants, the number of men employed, the amount of capital invested and the value of the product. Then a sudden change took place. In 1900 the plants were 100 less; there were 2,000 fewer lumbermen, $700,000 less capital invested, and a product $800,000 less valuable. Since this decade was favorable for the development of this great industry—involving 55 per cent. of the area of the State—the sudden change is accounted for only by forest depletion. C. D. Howe, of the United States Bureau of Forestry, actually finds in this one State thirty-five towns whose forests were nearly or quite exhausted. It follows for the whole of Northern New England that a town whose chief industry was lumbering is practically abandoned. "If," says Wells, "the forest wealth of a lumber town is gone, little taxable property remains. The rate of taxation at once advances on the remaining property. A high rate of taxation tends to diminish the number of inhabitants, which further raises the taxation rate, until such towns have no chance for economic betterment." Moreover, forests on foothills and hillsides keep the soil in place and tend to prevent great freshets which tear up the ~~farm~~ land, cover the low land with debris and destroy the roads with the inevitable result of still further advancing the rate of taxation and of making more sure the biennial appeal to the State Legislature to relieve the town—"to enable it to repair highways."

As may be expected, the deforestation of New Hampshire and Maine has been nearly parallel with that of Vermont. Early settlers in many places have disregarded all sense of proportion and forethought in the treatment of forests, taking the course of least resistance and using the policy that seemed to them best in the short run. The "first growth" prime forests of Maine have almost disappeared and spruce lumbering is taking the place of pine. This "short run" policy will quickly destroy any industry.

(b) The number of miles of highway in Northern New England towns ranges from 8 to 117, with an average of not far from 75 miles. The number per mile in population along these highways varies from 8 to perhaps 50 people for rural towns, with an average somewhere below 20. As a matter of fact, in the 46 urban towns of Vermont there are but 74 persons per mile of roadway, while for 114 rural towns the number is 18, and for the 86 "sub-rural," or very rural, there is an average of but 10 persons per mile. This condition prevails throughout the Northern States—greatly intensified in Maine, with her 33,000 square miles of territory. Whether this be considered a cause or an effect of decadence matters little. It certainly is within narrow limits an index of decline "positive, extensive and deplorable." Roadways are the faithful index of civilization. The isolation of the few people who still live in this "sub-rural" group of towns is almost as absolute as it would have been in the same region in the seventeenth century. I have referred already to excessive taxation, and some of its causes and results. As a result of careful study of 180 strictly rural towns of Vermont, 59, or 33 per cent., had a tax rate of $1.75 or more to every $100 of taxable property; 77, or 43 per cent., a rate between $1.25 and $1.75; and 44, or 24 per cent., with a rate of $1.25 or less.

The 59 towns having the highest rate are the most isolated, and are on the hill and mountain sides, and from those towns "that have not," taxation is taking what they seem to have! Deforestation has undone many towns and many farms, but unwise choice of land for general farming purposes, together with roadways built just where they should not have been built, have undone many more. From lack of proper tools or proper courage, or both, thousands of early settlers in New England mistook sandhills and gravel hills for farm land! Not to abandon such farms would indicate rare degeneracy! Years ago Emerson said: "The town of Concord is one of the oldest towns in this country, and yet, in this very year, a large quantity of land has been discovered and added to the town without a murmur of complaint from any quarter! By drainage we went down to a subsoil we did not know, and have found there is a Concord under old Concord which we are now getting the best crops from; a Middlesex under Middlesex; and, in fine, Massachusetts has a basement story more valuable and that promises to pay better rent than all the superstructure. These tiles are the text of better opinions and better auguries for mankind."

V.

Certain well-defined changes have taken place in New England, more especially since 1870. In that year in Vermont there were 33,522 farms, 68 per cent. of whose acreage was improved, and the valuation of total farm property was $134,804,952. In 1900 there were 33,104, 45 per cent. of whose acreage was improved, and whose total valuation was $108,451,427, a difference due, in part, to a change in classification. In this connection it is significant that the total value of farm products for 1869 was $27,717,622, while their total value in 1879 was $33,570,892. A change is clearly shown again by the fact that the wheat crop for 1849 was 535,955 bushels, while in 1899 it had shrunk to 34,650. The barley crop for 1849 was 42,150 bushels; in 1899 it had advanced to 380,940 bushels. The hay and forage crops show a striking increase from 866,153 tons in 1850 to 1,639,972 tons in 1900. In 1850 Vermont had 1,014,122 sheep; in 1900 it had 182,167 only. In 1850 it owned 146,128 cows; 270,194 in 1900. These figures show a stupendous change, "on the whole tending upwards." Though in the investigation of 1890 it was found there were in Massachusetts alone 1,461 abandoned farms whose average size was 86 acres, and whose average value was, with buildings, $894; yet it was also true, from the State census of 1895, that the value of agricultural property had increased $4,000,000 over 1885; and the value of its agricultural products from $47,756,033 in 1885 to $52,880,431 in 1895. It is reasonable to conclude that there was a corresponding change in crops and crop-values and in farms and farm-values throughout New England.

As to the soil of New England, Professor Shaler shows how the very coarseness of the soil elements insures permanence. "These minute pebbly fragments of rock will gradually disintegrate and yield, in soluble form, the elements needed by plants, and the soils may continue to have moderate fertility long after the soils of the Mississippi Valley are exhausted, or begin to require large use of fertilizers." And it is wholly to be desired, Brigham says further, that much of New England upland should relapse into forest. "Mountainous and glacial conditions have combined to fit this land for trees and nothing else." This, no doubt, is notably true of "Wildest Rhode Island," where it is said are seen all the features of New England rural decline. West of a line drawn through the center of the State north and south are some of the well-worn hills of New England, where in ten back townships live but 6 per cent. of the people of one of our most densely-populated States. In five of these towns, during the last century, there was a loss of from one-third to one-half of the inhabitants. Evidently that part of Rhode Island was never fitted for farmland, and we ought to be glad that our countrymen had the good sense to see it. A forest map of Connecticut shows more green than white, and implies that nearly one-half the State is best adapted to forestry.

VI.

Looking at industrial New England of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, one fails to see the rose color that so often appears in the "popular idea." Adverse English legislation dragged out the "domestic period" here till 1789. The enterprising New Englander had to be a farmer, or at least belong to one of the extractive occupations. There were no large markets, and the rule was "home production for home consumption." Tools were simple and rude, the art of fertilization was quite unknown; vegetable and animal life was unimproved by breeding. Over most of the territory settled, a "reckless slashing and burning" of timber had to precede agriculture, a waste that has been repeated since, till it is now "well-nigh criminal." Fishing was next to farming, the leading industry; transforming occupations were confined to the home of the farmer. Flour was ground at the gristmill for toll; there were no roads in rural New England worthy the name; except by sea, transportation for long distances there was none; motive power was furnished, of course, by winds, animals and streams. Bridges did not come till 1675; Boston had its first coach in 1669; and "in far-away districts" chaises were a curiosity in 1755. Transportation by water was cheap, but slow and unsafe. "Barter" played a very important part in both domestic and foreign trade throughout the "domestic period." "Financial chaos prevailed." Except near a few centers, land was so cheap as to admit of no valuation if there had been a standard of value!

Rural New England of the period was practically cut off from all educational forces except such as came by an occasional visit of the doctor, the preacher, or from attendance at a distant meeting-house, or the annual town-meeting.

"The size of breeding-horses, the variety of farm products and the number of animals each man could pasture upon the 'common lands'; the size and style of houses, materials and fashion of clothing, markets, prices, wages—even a man's amusements, private conduct, religious beliefs, were proper subjects for the consideration and action of town authorities."

VII.

The age of the machine, "the Factory Period," with its clear stamp of an industrial civilization, has changed all this. "Puritan New England no longer exists in its primitive asceticism," says Gilmore. "It has been modified in many of its ways and customs by contact with less severe nationalities, but it has not surrendered its intellectual and moral leadership of the country. By means of its children who have remained in the six Eastern States, and fully as much by means of the larger number whom it has sent out to people the Middle and Western States, making there a greater New England, the stock of the Puritans and the Pilgrims has exercised a controlling power in American history. Thus far it has been able to direct the forces of national development wisely and morally, not indeed in the name of Massachusetts or Connecticut, but in the name of Anglo-Saxon pluck and respect for right."

It is this pluck and sense of right and love of personal liberty, and sound conservatism, and sturdy enterprise, and fine love of competition, together with high public spirit and a profound kind of optimism, that stand New England in splendid stead in the stress and strain of changing from her agricultural civilization to her complex "industrial civilization."

Stamford, Conn.

A POINTER.

BOARDING HOUSE TALK.

Young Student.—(Reads an extract from grandmother's letter praying for his protection from evil, and that he will walk in his good father's steps.)

Friend.—That is very excellent. There are so many temptations to a young man in city life.

Y. S.—I was brought up to attend Sunday School and church regularly when at home.

Friend.—And do you not do so now?

Y. S.—No! I do not care to go where I am not wanted.

Friend.—That needs explanation. But admitting there is apathy and lack of regard for strangers in the churches, what remedy would you suggest?

Y. S.—Well, I have gone to hotels and boarding houses with my father, a merchant, and agents from the houses would hunt him out and beg for an appointment to show their employers' goods.

Friend.—Can you make your meaning plainer?

Y. S.—Certainly. If the agents of the churches cared for their Master's interests they would be round the hotels and boarding houses asking strangers to school and church.

Friend.—That is an idea I have waited for.

Y. S.—I will add this. In four years' absence from the influences of a good Christian home scores of people have asked me to play cards, go to the theater or saloon, but not one has ever said, "Come with me to church or prayer meeting."

Friend.—But you meet many Christian people?

Y. S.—Yes, and they speak of the temptations a young man meets, and it ends just there.

Friend.—Will you go with me to school next Sunday?

Y. S.—Yes.

Friend.—And to Friends' meeting for worship afterwards?

Y. S.—Yes. Last Sunday there were three of us here who would probably have gone if invited. As it was we lounged around the boarding house.

Friend.—Your idea is then that young people from the churches should systematically canvass the hotels and boarding houses of the city to invite strangers to school and church?

Y. S.—I believe great good might be done in that way.

ALFRED COOK.

Baltimore, Md.

INDIAN TRIBES OF NORTHERN CALIFORNIA.

The Indians east of the Rocky Mountains are now established either on reservations or in severalty allotments, and a statement recently made in the "Independent" suggests that the present Congress will be notified that further appropriations will not be needed by them. The situation of the tribes of Northern California is wholly different.

From a careful, painstaking investigation, the Indians' Aid Society of Northern California has ascertained that over 12,000 Indians are landless, although treaties granting both reservations and payment for their land were made by Congress a little before the Civil War, but failed to be ratified by the Senate. A few bands, after waiting a time, threatened the war-path and were granted the requirements of their treaties, but the majority, numbering many thousands waited in faith, believing the United States Government would fulfill its promises. Their lands were taken and they have never received a single dollar for their ownership of many thousand square miles of some of the most beautiful and valuable country. This should claim the attention of all sections of our country.

We, the Indian Aid Association, ask in behalf of our destitute and suffering brethren, whose condition has yearly become more terrible, that petitions be sent from all parts, asking Congress to make an appropriation, as suggested in the accompanying petition. These can be sent to the editor of this paper, or any one willing to attend to it, and promptly forwarded to the Representative or Senator of your district that it may be seen that public attention is roused and a hearing demanded. On behalf of the committee,

HANNAH BEAN.

Here is where many professed disciples of Jesus fail of being real disciples. They have regularly enlisted, have put on their uniform, and there they stand before the recruiting office, with knapsacks and blankets on their backs, with muskets at "carry,"—marking time to the martial music—although some of them don't even do that; and there they have stood since their enlistment, never marching a rod.—H. Clay Trumbull.

Look upon each new day which comes as an opening into a higher world and a better life. When an opportunity of doing good comes, think that God sends it. Be faithful in small things, because they also are divine duties.—James Freeman Clarke.

The International Lesson.

FIRST QUARTER.

LESSON IX.

SECOND MONTH 28, 1904.

HEARERS AND DOERS OF THE WORD.

Matthew 7: 21-29.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Be ye doers of the word and not hearers only. James 1: 22.

DAILY READINGS.

Second-day, Second mo. 22.—Hearers and doers. Matt. 7: 21-29.
Third-day, Second mo. 23.—Hearing and doing. Jas. 1: 22-27.
Fourth-day, Second mo. 24.—Obedience rewarded. Luke 12: 41-48.
Fifth-day, Second mo. 25.—God's requirements. Micah 6: 6-8.
Sixth-day, Second mo. 26.—Man's whole duty. Eccles. 12: 8-14.
Seventh-day, Second mo. 27.—Doing rewarded. Rev. 22: 10-15.
First-day, Second mo. 28.—The sure foundation. Isa. 28: 14-17.

Time—During the summer of A.D. 28 and the second year of Christ's ministry.

Place—On some mountain in Galilee, not far from the Sea of Galilee, supposed by some to be the mountain known as the Horns of Hattin, a double-peaked hill.

Parallel passage—Luke 6: 46-49.

The lesson is the concluding paragraphs of what is known as the Sermon on the Mount. Whether the discourse given in Matthew is the same as that given in the 6th chapter of Luke cannot be said with certainty. There are great differences, as well as great resemblances. Perhaps the prevailing view is that there was one discourse, but in Matthew and in Luke we have two reports; in each of these something is omitted that the other has, and in each something is added which the other has not. To the objection that one was on a mount and the other on a plain, it can be said that the word translated "plain" means rather a level platform or table land, which would not be inconsistent with Matthew's "mount." The whole of the discourse should be read carefully in order to see how closely connected the conclusion is with what goes before it. This conclusion relates to the practical carrying out of the teaching which precedes.

21. "Not every one that saith." The emphasis is on "saith," that is, a profession is not worth much unless it is carried out into practice. "Doeth the will." Christ declares that those who "do" enter into the closest relationship with Him. Compare Mark 3: 35.

22. "In that day." The last great day—the Day of Judgment. "Prophecy." Preach. "In thy name." Better as in R. V., "By thy name." So elsewhere in the verse; it means "as under thy authority."

23. "Profess." Declare openly. "I never knew you." Knew you as disciples. "Depart." Heaven is no place for such.

24. "Every one therefore that heareth these words of mine and doeth them shall be likened unto a wise man who built his house upon the rock." Amer. R. V. "Therefore." In view of what I have been saying. Both classes have heard; the difference is that the wise have put in practice the teaching they have heard. "Wise." Here, as so often in the Bible, "prudent," "far-sighted." "The rock." The bed rock. In the East, where the houses were built of such unsubstantial material as sun-dried brick, or mud, they are easily undermined and carried away. Then, too, the streams are often dry in summer, and if the house be built near the stream, on the plain, a sudden freshet, which is no uncommon thing in that land, will carry the house away; while if the house is on the hillside—the rock—it will stand; it cannot be undermined.

25. A graphic picture of a sudden tempest.

26. In this and the following verse is the contrast. "Doeth them not." Forgets them, or does not put them into practice. "Foolish." A strong word, the exact opposite of "wise."

27. "It fell." There was nothing to resist the shock of the storm. "And great was the fall thereof." Its destruction was complete. These similes are almost parables. The houses are men's lives, and building on the rock means building the life, the character, on Christ, the Rock of Ages. (1 Cor. 3: 11). Note that the comparison is not between the good and the bad, but between those who professed and lived out their profession and those who professed and did not live out their profession.

28, 29. "Astonished at his teaching." R. V. Not only what He said, but the spirit and manner in which it was said. His appeal was not to the traditions and precedents of the Scribes, or even to the Law, but to the moral consciousness of His hearers. It was this that so astonished them.

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

1. Intellectual apprehension of the Gospel is not enough; knowledge about Christ is not enough; the life itself must be changed.

2. "Philosophy hopes to cure the vices of human nature by working upon the head, and Christianity by educating the heart."

Christian Endeavor

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Lindley D. Clark, 1429 New York Avenue, Washington, D.C.]

TOPIC FOR SECOND MONTH TWENTY-EIGHTH.

HEROISM AND OTHER LESSONS FROM CHINA.

Acts 14: 19-23.

Second-day, Second mo. 22.—David's heroism. 1 Chron. 11: 17-19.

Third-day, Second mo. 23.—David's heroism. 1 Sam. 17: 33-51.

Fourth-day, Second mo. 24.—Jonathan's heroism. 1 Sam. 14: 1-14.

Fifth-day, Second mo. 25.—Paul's heroism. Acts 18: 5-10.

Sixth-day, Second mo. 26.—Jason's loyalty. Acts 17: 1-9.

Seventh-day, Second mo. 27.—Two sufferers. Acts 19: 23-32.

The missionary has been a hero from the very first, not sparing himself that even out of his afflictions he might be a witness of a power greater than that of any persecutor. The Chinese Christian has had examples no less conspicuous than any the world has seen, of godly men and women going into known danger, refusing to desert the post of duty which threatened and often effected the extremes of torture.

But the marvel of recent years has been the stead-fastness of the despised Mongolian in the face of persecution of the bitterest kind. Generations of tradition and training help to hold the Caucasian to the Christian faith, but the Chinaman had nothing of this to sustain him. It was with him the word of the gospel newly brought thither by the suspected foreigner, and the witness of the Spirit to its truth; but the faithfulness of God to all His words was again abundantly confirmed in those who counted not their lives dear unto themselves in the Boxer troubles and similar persecutions to which the Chinese converts have been subjected.

The old man who asked only that he be allowed to put on his best garments before going "to meet his King," and the little child who in the near approach of death saw "a tall man with a very bright face coming to take her," were each valiant witnesses to the Truth.

Stolid as the Chinaman seems to us, a worker in China tells of seeing an entire congregation of some 350 men and women fall down in contrition and confession. Another speaks of men 50, 60 and 70 years of age accepting Christ the first time He was ever offered to them. In other places the deepest hostility and suspicion have to be overcome by long patience and great wisdom; but of Pastor Meng, who, at the call of duty, went from a place of safety into the dangers of a Boxer uprising and there met his death as a martyr, it was said by the narrator of the story of his last days, "It pays for a lifetime of toil to save one such man."

Mission work has discovered and developed these jewels, and by such instances we are anew confirmed in our belief in its importance. But may we not also learn lessons of courage and steadfastness for our own place? The witness not ashamed is needed in city, town and country; and many a boy and girl—and we older ones as well—can take as patterns the unwavering witnesses for our common Master in this great hive of the East.

Missionary Department.

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Herman Newman, 718 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.]

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE PHILADELPHIA MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

The annual meeting of the Foreign Missionary Association of Friends of Philadelphia was held on the 26th of First month. The routine of business was followed with interest. Our corresponding secretary, Margaret W. Haines, gave a touching account of the wonderful leading that had been felt by the deputation of the association as they went to the mission in Japan to give advice and aid in the re-establishing of the mission after the fire. They went out earnestly craving guidance, and it never failed them. Their souls were refreshed again and again, not only when traveling, but in the homes of the Japanese and at the mission; they marveled at the ever-present sense of the following Presence of our Father, and their days and weeks and months seemed one long, gracious opportunity, crowned by His guiding Presence.

The meeting was also keenly interested to have present Edith Dillon, one of our missionaries to Japan. It is seven years since she went to her service there, and she is now at home for a well-earned and needed furlough. She told of some of the perplexities and also of some of the conquests of a missionary's life. She has realized great happiness in this life of service. It is her expectation to return to her post in Tokyo this summer.

A draft of an annual letter was drawn up and adopted by the meeting, addressed to the believers in Japan. This is to be presented to the annual gathering usually held in the spring. It conveyed to them an expression of loving concern and solicitude, and our Friends were encouraged to dwell in the peaceable spirit of Jesus.

The work in Syria is held in affectionate interest, and we value the reports coming from that part of the field.

Perhaps our greatest encouragement lies in the growing interest in the association's work which is shown by the liberal support it is receiving from a widening circle of Friends. The meeting was one that gave us cause for humble thanksgiving to Him who is the Father of all the nations of the earth and would gather all into His heavenly kingdom.

R. W. C.

(The following taken from a greeting sent by the Executive Committee of Friends in Japan to the Foreign Missionary Association of Friends of Philadelphia, suggests the practical application of the gospel and invites consideration.—Ed.)

Our work here is twofold. One is that we have to make every effort by the special guidance of our Lord, to keep all new converts in the continual love of God, constantly refreshing their faith in the Lord, and encouraging them to go through all kinds of sufferings and disappointments, by the kind help of our Lord Jesus Christ. The other is the work of evangelization, by which is meant the preaching of the gospel to the unchristian people and bringing them to Christ to be saved by His blood. These two great works for the Lord are now going on here, and in order to facilitate the work and secure more success in it several things have been suggested, for which it may be worth while for us to look forward in the future. We quote here some of the things which were spoken of as desirable to have if the Lord opens the way for them:

(1) To establish a Boys' School which shall help to bring men to Christ and train them in Christian faith as the Girls' School already established is found to be doing so well for girls and young women.

(2) To establish a Children's Primary School, where children are to be trained and educated under Christian influence.

(3) To encourage native Christians to do the Lord's work and shine for Him with more independent and self-supporting spirit, taking responsibility upon themselves before God.

In order to do this it is very desirable to have some Friends in your country who feel called to live in this country and open business houses, or start farming, or to engage in any other lines of work on their own responsibility and at the same time to do the work for the Lord, preaching the gospel to the people around, thus setting before the people the real true examples of self-supporting missionary business men or farmers, or whatever else anyone may be called to. We have pure missionaries whose lines are wholly given up to the Lord's service, and then we have teaching missionaries, who spend part of their time in teaching, and the rest is given up to the Lord's work. But it is still better, in addition to these, to have some self-supporting missionary business men or such to work among us, showing the people the practical examples of true Christian lives.

(4) We feel that one of our greatest needs is more evangelists to devote themselves to the work in the many open, unoccupied fields, and we desire that the way may be opened for the development of such gifts amongst us.

The above suggestions are mentioned just for your consideration, and it may be well for you and us to remember them at the time of prayer and wait patiently till the time when the Lord makes way for them. May the Lord bless you all and encourage and strengthen you with His Spirit to make you able to do the work for Christ continually.

GURNEY BINFORD, Chairman.

CHUZO KAIFU, Secretary.

Tokyo, Japan.

Educational.

EARLHAM COLLEGE.

On Seventh-day evening, Second month 6th, the students, faculty and friends of Earlham very appropriately celebrated three recent victories of the college. On the afternoon of the 5th the Earlham Basket Ball Team defeated Butler College at Indianapolis, and on the afternoon of the day following defeated DePauw University at Greencastle. On the evening of the 5th occurred the State oratorical contest, in which seven of the representative colleges and universities of the State were represented. Earlham College was represented by Luther M. Feeger, whose subject was "Gustavus Adolphus." The contest was recognized by all as being one of the best in the history of the organization, and Earlham's orator received first honors, and will represent the State of Indiana in the inter-State contest next May. During the past four years Earlham College has held the highest honors in oratory of any college in the State, having received two first places and two second places, while her closest competitor has received during the same time one first, two seconds and one third.

Professor Josiah Royce, of Harvard University, recently delivered two addresses at the college. On the evening of the 4th instant Dr. Royce addressed an exceptionally large audience of students and visitors on the subject, "Pragmatism and Truth," and at the chapel period on the 5th he delivered his address on "George Fox as a Mystic."

The "Earlham College Bulletin," containing announcements for the spring term and summer school, has just been issued. A school of nature study will be conducted by Professor Dennis, and Professor Irving King, of Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, will have charge of pedagogy. One of the new and strong features of the summer term will be the work offered by Professor Russell in Bible study. Four courses will be offered, and the work is intended for college or academy students who feel that an education is incomplete without some scholarly Bible study for Sabbath School teachers who feel the responsibilities of their positions and who wish to do more efficient work, and for ministers who are unable to take extended theological courses, but desire to add to their knowledge of the Bible.

Every day that dawns brings something to do, which can never be done as well again. We should, therefore, try to do it ungrudgingly and cheerfully. It is the Lord's own work, which He has given us as surely as He gives us daily bread. We should thank Him for it with all our hearts, as much as for any other gift. It was designed to be our life, our happiness. Instead of shirking it or hurrying over it, we should put our whole heart and soul into it.—James Reed.

Men are wearing out their lives in worry, not in work. We must begin to live for God more thoroughly. Whose hand is on the helm of the universe? Not ours. Many of us are trying to carry the labors of the deck hand and the responsibilities of the pilot. Drop them! God never asked us to do more than we have time and strength for.—Ozora S. Davis.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of THE AMERICAN FRIEND:

Dear Friend:—"An Interested Friend," whose letter appears in a recent number of thy paper, suggests as one reason for the lack of increase in our Society that some meetings are controlled by a few Friends. Such a condition does exist, and, in so far as it is hindering us in fulfilling our mission to the world, demands speedy remedy. "An Interested Friend" has indicated the remedial action that is the duty of those who realize that they are leaders such as he describes. But most of us are not leaders. What can we do, we, "the great body of the meeting," who are left "with nothing to do but to join in, or, as has often been the case (to the disgust of the clerks), to sit still and say nothing"?

I believe we need to realize that this condition of affairs is partly, if not largely, our own fault, and is due to our lack of that whole-hearted devotion to our Society which thee pleads for in thy late editorial, "Are Friends Interested in Quakerism?" Have not those we criticize come much nearer to thy ideal than we who say we have no influence?

Our organization and our "Discipline" recognize the equality of all members. If we have been indifferent to our rights and privileges and have not cared enough about our meeting to use our liberty to express honest opinions, but have been willing to go with the stream when we felt it was not going in the right way or have said nothing, are those Friends wholly to blame who have been willing to use their privileges and whose voice, being often the only expressed feeling of the meeting, has naturally prevailed?

I know honest opinions are sometimes expressed without apparent result at the time, but I have also seen real results follow later, and I think we should not be discouraged.

It is a growing belief of mine that if we show a singleness of purpose, sincere interest, some true understanding of the fundamental principles of Quakerism and Christianity, and a spirit of Christ-like love, we shall be met with unexpected charity from the "ruling" Friends, and that they will warmly and thankfully welcome suggestions from us, and gladly recognize and adopt whatever is good or wise. Moreover, may not our willingness and qualification to "speak to business" be in proportion to the depth of our interest?

A very practical, though not always practicable, way to strengthen our interest is to attend regularly not only our meetings for worship, but also our business meetings, from the yearly meeting down. We should also try in every other way in our power to thoroughly know our meeting and its conditions, and to study other meetings, other churches, and the present conditions and needs of the world. Such knowledge and experience can hardly fail to develop interest and wisdom.

Above all, let no one forget that the great remedy for all causes of failure in our Society is the establishment and growth in spiritual life of every individual member.

ANOTHER INTERESTED FRIEND.

Things of Interest Among Ourselves.

Walter J. Aldrich is still laboring in the meeting at Collins, N. Y.

The revival conducted by Benjamin Hutchins and Joseph Winslow at Pleasant Valley, Okla., resulted in much good.

Timothy Nicholson and wife, of Richmond, Ind., are on their way to California, where they will visit friends and relatives.

Clarence Case, of Noblesville, Ind., recently attended the meeting at Westfield. His ministry was edifying and most acceptable.

Dr. George J. Wright, who recently united with the Friends at Cherokee, Okla., is delivering temperance lectures with great success.

James Welch and wife, of Cherokee, Okla., are doing excellent work in a meeting which is held in a school house five miles east of Stella, Okla.

Henry McKinley, of Traverse City, Mich., is visiting some meetings in Indiana with an evangelistic message. He is an earnest, forceful speaker.

Elizabeth G. Underhill is holding special meetings at Clintondale, N. Y. The meetings began the 7th inst. She is also calling at the homes of Friends.

Vol. I, No. 1, of the "Friends' Messenger" has just appeared from North Carolina. It is a good local paper, and should have a real service in that yearly meeting.

About twenty accessions have recently been made to the Friends' Meeting at Westfield, Ind., and about the same number have united with the Christian Endeavor Society.

Westfield, Ind., is enjoying the blessing of a most gracious revival, carried on by a most hearty union of all the denominations in the town. More than 150 definite conversions and renewals have been professed.

A three weeks' revival meeting was held in Valley Queen Meeting, Okla., by Estella Hammond, of Neal, Mich. A number were reclaimed and converted, the church members strengthened, and six united with Friends.

The work at Stella Academy, near Cherokee, Okla., is prospering under Professors John Howard, John Casto and Gladys McClung. Fifty students are enrolled for the winter term. There are seven in the senior class and thirteen juniors.

B. H. Farquhar, who has labored for the past four years in the meeting at New River, Cal., has recently removed to Bell, a new point on the car line between Whittier and Los Angeles. There seems to be a good outlook for Friends at this point.

Ten evening services were held recently in Batavia Meeting, N. Y., in which George B. Evans was instrumental in bringing definite blessing to a number. Much more freedom and life are now manifest in prayer and testimony by the members.

J. Edward Ransome has been holding special meetings at Milton, N. Y. The meetings closed the 7th inst. There was one conversion, and several of the members testified to having been helped. He also called on nearly all the families in the meeting.

The following Friends expect to attend the World's Sunday School Convention in Jerusalem: George and L. Ella Hartley, Mead A. Kelsey, Sarah A. Lindley, Anna E. Dysart and Laura A. Winston. Do our readers know of any others who are to go on the trip?

Marion E. and Mary Reisinger commenced a series of meetings at Prairie Vale Monthly Meeting, near Coldwater, Kan., on the 29th of Twelfth month and continued nearly two weeks, holding twenty-one sessions in all. Many were definitely blessed. The meetings were a source of strength and encouragement to the believers.

Senator Proctor has introduced a bill into the United States Senate authorizing members of the Society of Friends in the District of Columbia to marry themselves according to the ancient manner of Friends. This privilege has formerly existed only by State laws, and therefore the right did not exist in the District of Columbia.

Edith Stanton, accompanied by Miriam Mendenhall, closed a very successful meeting at Bethel, a meeting seven and one-half miles from Claffin, Kan., Second month 1st. Some professed conversion or renewal. A general awakening was experienced throughout the neighborhood. Eight united with Friends and a Christian Endeavor Society was organized.

The missionaries at Holguin, Cuba, report a visit from three Friends from Philadelphia the last week in First month. A letter says: "On Thursday evening they and the McCracken family, Friends from Kansas, Luther Hill, an Iowa Friend, and we missionaries had a very pleasant and profitable parlor prayer meeting here. Our hearts were very closely knit to theirs in the short acquaintance."

Leannah Hobson, of Richmond, Ind., and Lydia Lyon, of Wichita, Kan., held a very successful two weeks' revival service at Traverse City, Mich., in First month. More than twenty souls were converted or renewed. Outsiders took an especial interest in the meetings, being present in large numbers. Further work was intended, but was prevented by illness in the evangelist's family.

A very helpful series of meetings closed the 31st ult., twenty-one sessions in all, at Farmers' Institute Monthly Meeting, Ind., where James R. and Carrie L. Jones are located and giving satisfactory service. Lydia Hoath, minister from Thorn-town, was present during the special meetings. The preaching and prayer services were especially blessed. Four gave their names for membership with Friends.

Farmington Quarterly Meeting, New York Yearly Meeting, held at Collins, N. Y., on Fourth-day, the 20th ult., was much smaller than usual, owing to stormy weather and the illness of some. The business of the meeting was transacted with much harmony. On Third-day evening George B. Evans addressed the Christian Endeavor Union on the "Christ Life," and on Fourth-day evening conducted a gospel service.

Our venerable friend, Amos Kenworthy, has just closed a series of three weeks' revival services at Whittier, Cal. The meetings were occasions of great blessing and benefit to a large number. Many were led into complete liberty and freedom in Christ, and all who attended the services were conscious of lasting benefits. His searching ministry and mental and physical vigor, combined with his personal experience and prophetic vision, make him a unique character in church work.

Levi Taylor Pennington, son of Josiah Pennington, a minister of a line of ministers, who has been engaged as city editor on a daily paper in Traverse City, Mich., accepted a call in Twelfth month to locate in the meetings at Westland and Western Grove, in Walnut Ridge Quarter, Indiana. His work so far has been marked with the seal of divine blessing. Just before his leaving his home meeting at Traverse City a First-day evening was devoted to a farewell service, and a handsome large Bible was given him by Friends.

Nathan Brown, local minister at Stella Academy, Okla., is an excellent example of Quaker thrift. He teaches a Bible class at Stella Academy every First-day morning, then attends the meeting for worship, and drives seven miles, teaches another Bible class and attends another meeting for worship. He returns in the evening in time to be present at the evening service at the Academy. On every Fourth-day he drives eight miles to attend mid-week prayer meeting. His wife, Mary Brown, accompanies him in his labors and renders valuable assistance.

Noah K. Williams, a young Friend and a graduate of Penn College, went late last fall to Cuba as a self-supporting missionary, but purposing to work in connection with Friends' missionary work there. After spending a month at Gibara to get a little start in Spanish, he struck out to try for himself. He writes that he is located on a farm thirty miles from Holguin, which is his nearest postoffice, and that there is much room for missionary work around him; that while not yet able to speak much to the people he has opportunity and does show his colors by declining invitations to participate in their unholy amusements, disregard of the Sabbath day, etc.

On First-day morning, the 7th inst., at the regular morning hour for worship, in the Friends' Meeting in Westfield, Ind., memorial services were conducted in honor of Gideon Hunt, who died at Pasadena, Cal., First month 29th, at the age of 63 years. Westfield had been his home for many years, and many were the tributes of love spoken of him as a man, a neighbor, a friend, a church member, a consecrated Christian and an earnest advocate of fundamental truths. His body was laid to rest in beautiful Mountain View Cemetery in Pasadena, where the shadow of the pepper tree falls on his grave at noon, and the carpet of grass will cover it all the year.

A young married man, an engineer from Santiago, was engaged at Gibara, Cuba, in repairing the machinery of the ice-plant. By means of the faithful labors of a member of the mission church, a young man also employed in the ice-plant, he was induced to buy and read a Bible and hymn-book and to attend the meetings for worship, Sabbath School and Christian Endeavor. Through these various influences he was soundly converted and became a staunch advocate for Christ. The following is a translation of part of the public testimony he gave in meeting: "Oh, my dear brothers and sisters, I came to see myself as a shipwrecked man, floating in the open sea, and I sought the help of a board or something that might carry me to the shore. . . . Oh mighty Lord, Thou art my Saviour! In this temple I found help for my soul, reading Thy Word and hearing the pastor pray. . . . Lord Jesus, I worship Thee. . . . Thou Keeper of the souls of men, forgive my offenses; give me light; guide my steps that I may be useful to Thy holy cause, to society and to my country."

MARRIED.

FREDERICK—LATHROP.—At Bethel Meeting House, Barton County, Kan., Second month 1st, 1904, Joseph Frederick and Sadie Lathrop, both members of Bethel Meeting.

DIED.

CRUMLEY.—At Grand Junction, Col., First month 23d, 1904, Isaac Newton Crumley, son of I. H. and Rachel Crumley, in his 31st year. He was a member of the meeting at Pleasant Plain, Ia., and an active Christian worker.

DEAN.—In Annapolis, Parke Co., Ind., on Second month 4th, 1904, Phebe Dean, wife of Stephen Dean, past 84 years of age. She was a member of Bloomingdale Monthly Meeting of Friends.

HOBSON.—At Central City, Neb., First month 1st, 1904, Oscar Hobson, nearly 41 years old. The deceased was a member of Friends. He was a song writer, and very successful as a public singer. He was laboring in a revival service when stricken with his last illness.

MILES.—Near West Branch, Ia., Second month 1st, 1904, Elizabeth H., wife of William Miles, daughter of Jesse and Rebecca Hoover, aged 76 years. She lived a lifelong member of Friends.

PERKINS.—At her home, Pikeville, N. C., Twelfth month 1st, 1903, Patience A., wife of B. E. Perkins, aged nearly 60 years. The deceased was converted when young and traveled extensively with her husband in the ministry, helping and strengthening him with her sympathy and wise counsel. She was a member of Contentnea Quarterly Meeting, and for many years served as an elder.

Publisher's Department.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND is published weekly by the American Friend Publishing Company,
718 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

RUFUS M. JONES, EDITOR.

The Directors of the Company are
JAMES WOOD, President.
DAVID SCULL, ALLEN JAY, JOHN B. GARRETT,
PETER W. RAIDABAUGH, ISAAC SHARPLESS,
RUFUS M. JONES.

Subscription Price.

Payable in advance.....$1.50 per annum.
Single copies.....Five Cents each.

Checks, Money Orders and Postal Notes should be drawn to the order of THE AMERICAN FRIEND.
Advertising rates will be sent on request.
Headley Bros., 14 Bishopgate Street, Without,
London, Agents for Great Britain and Ireland.

Events and Comments.

The mortality from pneumonia in New York city this winter decreases very little, and is the most serious record this disease has made, although its inroads have increased for some years, while death from tuberculosis has decreased nearly 50 per cent. There were 9,714 deaths from this disease in New York in 1903, 9,360 the year preceding, and 9,168 the year before that. These are figures of mortality—the increase of cases under treatment in the hospitals has been far larger. The assistant superintendent of Bellevue observes that when he came to the hospital in 1871 there were 5,000 cases a year, and now there are 26,000 cases a year.

A recent writer in the "Examiner" has investigated the Young Peoples' Societies in a number of Baptist congregations and secured the testimony of a number of pastors as to its helpfulness, its failures and special methods used. The results are interesting and might be suggestive. Nearly every pastor reply-

FOUND AT 70.

The Power of Food.

An Illinois lady who never knew what health was until she reached her 70th year, presents an unusually convincing case of the power of proper food. She says:

"I am 74 years old this fall, and I never had good health that I can remember since I was a child until I commenced to use Grape-Nuts four years ago.

"From the very first I could feel a vast improvement, and now in four years I have gained so that I do all my own work, and I feel I cannot say too much in favor of Grape-Nuts and what this grand food has done for me, as old as I am.

"I have recommended Grape-Nuts to several, and they all have been benefited by it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The power of proper food (which means food that the stomach will digest and at the same time yields the all-necessary nutriment) is almost unlimited, and that's the reason ten days' trial of Grape-Nuts often works a wonder.

Look for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville," in each package.

ing appreciated the value of the Young People's Organization within the church, testifying that it brought in a helpful joyousness and enthusiasm in Christian experience and rebuked the formalism, doctrinal rigor and aloofness from humanity which too far had gained a foothold in the church. In cases where failures are apparent the fault was not in the nature of the organization, but in the lack of able leaders. The best results have been obtained where the Young People's Society has kept in close touch with the local church organization.

Not since the Chicago fire in 1871 has an American city been compelled to undergo such a destruction of property as Baltimore did on the 7th and 8th inst. The fire began in the wholesale business districts, and spread to the retail business and shipping sections, and did not cease until an area of 150 acres had succumbed and property loss to the amount of $100,000,000 or $150,000,000 was entailed. Coming on a Sabbath, as it did, in the business rather than in the residential districts, together with the careful and skillful methods used in controlling crowds, reduced the loss of life to an exceptionally small number. Cities as remote as New York and Altoona aided in fighting the fire by loaning apparatus and men. The insurance companies will lose considerable. A vastly-improved new city will be built with comparatively little assistance from outside sources. The citizens are to be commended for the heroism and efficiency with which they sustain their great loss.

Not long ago King Menes, of the first Egyptian dynasty, was believed by many scholars to have been mythical. New discoveries concerning him are coming to be so numerous that his biography may yet be written. Quite recently a stele removed from Egypt at a very early date, now in the museum at Palermo, has been deciphered. Its inscription relates to kings who preceded the time of Menes and who also survived him. It appears that in his days there were different centers of government in Egypt, with kings contemporaneous with Menes. The inscription also shows that the chronological bases of the records have to do with cycles of religious ceremonies and that these cycles overlap the cycle of kingly dynasties. The religious and the secular periods of time were independent of each other. The "period of the followers of Horus" did not terminate with the accession of Menes, the beginning of the first dynasty, but at the time of the removal of the royal capital to Memphis. This makes clear a problem which Egyptologists have studied for a long time. Another important discovery is the name of Jehovah in Hebrew, without the vowels. The date of the papyrus in which it was found is quite modern, but this is the first time the sacred name has been found in Egyptian historical records.

The long-looked-for hostilities between Russia and Japan in the Far East have begun with encouraging results for the latter. The naval engagements so far reported are decidedly one-sided. Several of the Russian vessels have been captured or sunk, while Japan's losses have been slight. Japanese troops are landing at Chemulpo on the western coast of Korea and from this point as a southern basis of operation are invading the country. They are also attacking Port Arthur. On the other hand, Russia is preparing for a desperate struggle. The troops in the disputed territory, Manchuria and Korea, are being reinforced by the Asiatic reserve, and the Baltic fleet has been dispatched to Eastern waters. The Czar has ordered all troops, as well as the army and navy reserves, to arms. The United States has asked the European nations to concur in sending notes to the belligerents similar to the following: "To Russia and Japan the Washington government suggests the propriety of limiting hostilities within as small an area as possible, and of respecting the neutrality and administrative entity of China, that China may be free from disturbances and foreign interests there from menace." A number of the powers have acted favorably on the proposition, but many fear grave possibilities since they argue that the Western powers would be bound by it to participate in the struggle if there should be a Boxer uprising.

IT IS A MATTER OF HEALTH

There is no substitute

FLORIDA.

Two Weeks' Tour via Pennsylvania Railroad.

The second Pennsylvania Railroad tour of the season to Jacksonville, allowing two weeks in Florida, will leave New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington by special train on February 16th.

Excursion tickets, including railway transportation, Pullman accommodations (one berth), and meals en route in both directions while traveling on the special train, will be sold at the following rates: New York, $50.00; Trenton, $49.00; Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Baltimore and Washington, $48.00; Pittsburg, $53.00, and at proportionate rates from other points.

For tickets, itineraries and other information, apply to ticket agents, or to George W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

DO WE FORGET?

Do we forget, because, with mute lips pressed,
To fading pictures, all our love, unguessed,
Lies locked secure within our patient breast—

Do we forget?

Because, across the widening gulf of years,
There comes no loving word to quell our fears
No watchful hand to brush away our tears—

Do we forget?

Do we forget? Nay, in each heart there lies
A secret place, where, hid from mortal
eyes,
Dwells, strong and true, a love that never dies.

Nor can forget!

—O. H., in "Presbyterian Banner."

THE OLD PLEA.

He "Didn't Know It was Loaded."

The coffee drinker seldom realizes that coffee contains the drug Caffeine, a serious poison to the heart and nerves, thereby causing many other forms of disease, noticeably dyspepsia.

"I was a lover of coffee and used it for many years, and did not realize the bad effects I was suffering from its use.

"At first I was troubled with indigestion, but did not attribute the trouble to the use of coffee, but thought it arose from other causes. With these attacks
I had a sick headache, nausea and vomiting. Finally my stomach was in such a condition I could scarcely retain any food.

"I consulted a physician; was told all my troubles came from indigestion, but was not informed what caused the indigestion; so I kept on with the coffee and kept on with the troubles, too, and my case continued to grow worse from year to year until it developed into chronic diarrhoea, nausea and severe attacks of vomiting, so I could keep nothing on my stomach and became a mere shadow reduced from 159 to 128 pounds.

"A specialist informed me I had a very severe case of catarrh of the stomach, which had got so bad he could do nothing for me, and I became convinced my days were numbered.

"Then I chanced to see an article setting forth the good qualities of Postum and explaining how coffee injures people, so I concluded to give Postum a trial. I soon saw the good effects; my headaches were less frequent, nausea and vomiting only came on at long intervals, and I was soon a changed man, feeling much better.

"Then I thought I could stand coffee again, but as soon as I tried it my old troubles returned, and I again turned to Postum. Would you believe it, I did this three times before I had sense enough to quit coffee for good and keep on with the Postum; the result is, I am now a well man, with no more headaches, sick stomach or vomiting, and have already gained back to 147 pounds." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

SAVED TO SAVE.

Saved but to save! Such is the motto given
To all who would be citizens of heaven;
The lamp of life the Christian's hand should hold
To lead some wanderers back into the fold.

The heart that beats responsive to the love
Of Him who calls us to the home above,
Will long that others, too, this bliss may share
That countless souls the crown of life may wear.

Saved but to save, for who would wish to be
A soul self-centered on life's rugged sea?
Nor reach a hand across the stormy wave
Some fellow-voyager from wreck to save!

Where darkness reigns, how good to shed a ray
Of light, reflected from the orb of day!
Where sorrow dwells, as oft it will do here,
How good some fellow pilgrim's heart to cheer!

Thus did the Saviour's heart with gladness fill,
His meat and drink to do His Father's will.

And following in His footsteps, thus should we Delight His messengers of peace to be!

Saved but to save! How doth the heart rejoice

When sinners, turning, make the Lord
their choice;

When each to each a brother's hand extends,

Enjoying converse sweet as Christian friends.

Saved but to save! May heavenly grace be mine,

Just as a sunbeam for my Lord to shine,
And in His service humble be, yet brave, Remembering the motto, "Saved to save!"

WM. KITCHING.

Clevedon, England.

London bridge, which has for two years been closed for repairs, will be opened in Fourth month, so remodeled as to be practically a new structure. The bridge has been widened from 53 feet 9 inches to 65 feet, at a cost of $500,000, or about $3,500 an inch, most of the space being given to the footways, which have been broadened from 9 feet 5 inches to 15 feet. The bridge would have been further widened if the approaches also could have been enlarged. One of the chief minor improvements was the substitution of an open-work balustrade for the solid parapet which formerly prevented the escape of dust. An effort was made by some persons to secure a higher railing in order to prevent suicide, but the architects held that any one bent on self-destruction would find the means anyway, and that the effect would be marred by too high a balustrade. During the work of reconstruction the public has been accommodated by temporary covered bridges built at either side, which also served as a staging from which the masonry could be done.

LAMP-FITS.

How do you know what chimney fits your lamp?

Your grocer tells you.

How does he know?

He don't.

Do you then?

That's about how lamps are fitted with chimneys by people who don't use my Index; and they complain of bad chimneys! Lamp-Fits indeed! Do you want the Index? Free.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

Never depend upon your genius; if you have talent, industry will improve it; if you have none, industry will supply the deficiency.—John Ruskin.

IF YOU ARE LOOKING for a perfect condensed milk preserved without sugar, buy Borden's Peerless Brand Evaporated Cream. It is not only a perfect food for infants, but its delicious flavor and richness makes it superior to raw cream for cereals, coffee, tea, chocolate and general household cooking. Prepared by Borden's Condensed Milk Co.

FLORIDA AND THE CAROLINAS—
WINTER RESORTS.

Palm Beach, Miami, Daytona, Tampa,
Jacksonville, Camden, Southern Pines,
Pinehurst are quickly and most conveniently reached via the Seaboard Air Line. Three daily trains in each direction, including the Seaboard Florida Limited, the handsomest and quickest train in the Florida service. Tourist tickets on sale daily, with stop-over privileges. For description, booklets and information, address W. E. Conklyn,
General Agent, 1411 Chestnut Street,
Philadelphia, Pa.

43 FLOWERS 30¢
Worth $1.25
A SPECIAL OFFER made to introduce our goods. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

20 Pkts. Seeds

1 Pkt. Pansies, 10 colors, mixed.	1 Pkt. Diamond Flower.
" New Candytuft "Empress."	" California Sweet Peas.
" Washington Weeping Palm.	" Double Chinese Pink.
" Mary Semple Aster, 4 colors.	" Carnation Marguerite.
" Alyssum, Little Gem, mixed.	" Heliotrope, mixed.
" Bouquet Chrysanthemum.	" Poppy-American Flag.
" Forget-me-not "Victoria."	" Umbrella Plant.
" California Golden Bells.	" Giant Verbena, mixed.
" Lovely Butterfly Flower.	" Japan Morning Glory.
" Phlox Drummondii.	" Petunia Hybrid, mixed.

23 BULBS

1 New Begonia, "Splendens," 1 Summer Flowering Hyacinth, 1 Double Pearl Tuberosa, 2 Butterfly and 2 Hybrid Gladioli, 2 Fine Mixed Oxalis, 2 Fair Maids of France, 2 Hardy Wind Flowers, 2 Lovely Cinnamon Vines, 2 Splendid New Cana Lilies—1 Crimson, 1 "Novelty."

A Return Check Good for 25 Cents on first $1.00 order; also our New Floral Guide, telling all about Roses and 400 other choice flowers. All postpaid, only 30c.

THE CONARD & JONES CO.
"Growers of the Best Roses in America."
Box X WEST GROVE, Pa.

We are Going to the Christian Endeavor Hotel,
World's Fair, St. Louis

Because it will be the headquarters during the Exposition for Christian Endeavorers, Baptist Young People, Sunday Schools, Educators, etc. Adjoining the Fair Grounds, with street cars direct from Union Station to hotel. Built for perfect safety and comfort. Capacity, 3,000 daily; Auditorium 3,000. Backed by men of highest standing; endorsed by St. Louis Clergy. Charter Certificates, series A, issued on receipt of $1.00, entitle holders to reduced rate of $1.00 per day for lodging, or $2.00 per day for lodging and board. For full particulars, address at once, Christian Endeavor Hotel and Auditorium Co., CHEMICAL BUILDING, ST. LOUIS, MO.

"What happens when a man's temperature goes down as far as it can go?"

Smart scholar: "He has cold feet, ma'am."—Sydney Town and Country Journal."

REDUCED RATES TO ATLANTA.

Via Pennsylvania Railroad, Account Meeting Department of Superintendence, National Educational Association.

On account of the meeting of the Department of Superintendence, National Educational Association, to be held at Atlanta, Ga., February 23d to 25th, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell round-trip tickets to Atlanta February 20th to 22d, inclusive, good to return to reach original starting point not later than February 27th, from all stations on its lines, at reduced rates. For full information apply to ticket agents.

GREGORY'S

GREGORY'S SEED CATALOGUE
FOR 1904

SEEDS

have the quality that give both quantity and quality to the crop.
They never disappoint. Famous for nearly 50 years. Sold under three guarantees. Write for free catalogue.

J. J. H. GREGORY & SON,
Marblehead, Mass.

10 BEAUTIFUL PICTURES FREE

In order to introduce our QUAKER OINTMENT into every home where THE AMERICAN FRIEND is read, we have decided to make the following liberal offer.
To every person sending us 25 cents for one box of QUAKER OINTMENT, and 4 cents extra to pay postage, we will send absolutely free the following 10 pictures. These pictures are gems of art. For picture study, art collections, gifts and home decoration, they are of great value. The Last Supper,
Christ in Gethsemane, Christ Taken Captive, Christ
Before Pilate, Christ Bearing the Cross, The Crucifixion, Entombment, In the Sepulchre, The Ascension, Transfiguration. It is costing us a great deal of money to advertise in this way, but we trust you will be pleased with our liberality, and will favor us with an order for a box of our ointment, and get these 10 beautiful pictures free. QUAKER OINT-MENT is the best known remedy for catarrh, eczema, and all skin diseases. Rev. Asa Woodard, pastor Friends' Meeting at Butlerville, Ind., says:
"I am using QUAKER OINTMENT, and find it an excellent remedy." Mrs. Clara Chaney, Rural Route No. 3, Warren, Ind., says: "I have never found anything as good as QUAKER OINTMENT for catarrh, sores and skin diseases." Send us your order to-day. Quaker Ointment sent to any address upon receipt of 25 cents.

DAVIS MFG. CO., Butlerville, Ind.

FRIENDS' LIBRARY.

142 North Sixteenth Street, Philadelphia.

Open on week-days from 11.30 a.m. to 2 p.m., and from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m.; also on evenings in which Friends' Institute
Lyceum meetings are held, from 7 to 7.45 p.m.

The following are new books in the library:

Acton, Lord and others (eds.)—"The Reformation."
Booth, M. B.—"After Prison—What?"
Conn, H. W.—"Story of Germ Life."
Engelmann, R.—"Pompeii."
Higginson, T. W., and Bownton, H. W.— "Reader's History of American Literature."
Johnson, E. R.—"American Railway Transportation."
Palmer, F. H. E.—"Austro-Hungarian
Life in Town and Country."
Rhoads, S. N.—"Mammals of Pennsylvania and New Jersey."
Stoddard, R. H.—"Recollections."
Woodberry, G. E.—"America in Literature."

God never called a man to commit sin for the sake of preventing sin, nor to tell a lie for the sake of spreading the truth.

The
New Century
TYPEWRITER
does the BEST WORK and lots of it, EASILY.

Strong, Thoroughly Built,
Superior in results to any other.

Write for
"THE BOOK OF THE NEW CENTURY."

AMERICAN WRITING MACHINE COMPANY,
1033 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Y. F. A. Building,
140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a.
FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote, 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p.m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cts. per night; $3 per week.

Two occupants, 50 cts. each, per night.
2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL
Phone Spruce 33-55. Clerk.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

We particularly invite the attention of the readers of "The American Friend" to this column. It will be found useful for almost everyone who wishes to advertise. The cost is 5c. per line each insertion. No advertisement is accepted for less than 25c. Cash with order.

OLD-FASHIONED grandfather clocks repaired at home. If yours needs attention send me a postal or, better, call. My store is within three minutes' walk of the Market Street ferries. Repairing of clocks and watches of every kind.
Prompt service and moderate prices. W. L. Berry,
Watchmaker and Jeweler, 22 South Second Street,
Philadelphia.

WANTED.—Salesmen and Saleswomen to sell the great Indian Salve, also Mentholine. I will sell formula for Mentholine. Write me. D. A.
Williams, 236 Laura Avenue, Wichita, Kansas.

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER.—Careful and accurate repairing, with prompt service, has brought me the custom of many Friends.
Their patronage is particularly solicited. My store is nearest to the Market Street ferries, and is easy of access from every part of the city. W. L. Berry, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

NEW SONG BOOK.—"Gold Tried in the Fire."
One of the best song books on the market for church, Sunday school and evangelistic work.
Bound in limp cloth and contains over 200 songs.
Sells for $15.00 per hundred. 20 cents a copy. Published by Friends. Brown Bros., Indianapolis, Indiana.

WANTED.—A young woman Friend, graduated kindergarten, wishes a position as teacher in a school or home, or would consider a position as Mother's Helper. Kindergarten, care of John Sherman, Portsmouth, R. I.

Thy cloud that meets me in the day
Is but the shadow of Thy wing,
Concealing from my sight the way
That faith alone may homeward bring.

Thy fire that meets me in the night,
Is the full brightness of Thy face,
Revealing through my tears a light
That leads me to Thy dwelling-place.
—George Matheson.

What do we live for if it is not to make life less difficult to each other?—
George Eliot.

S. F. BALDERSTON'S SON

Wall Paper and Decorations

Window Shades Made to Order

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILA.

STENOGRAPHER

GEO. B. COCK

Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter Street.

Telephones.

Salzer's National Oats

Greatest oat of the century.
Yielded in 1903 in Ohio 187, in Mich. 231, in Mo. 255, and in N Dakota 310 bus. per acre. You can beat that record in 1904!

For 10c and this notice
we mail you free lots of farm seed samples and our big catalog, telling all about this oat wonder and thousands of other seeds.

JOHN A. SALZER SEED CO.
La Crosse,
R. Wis.

Three Books You Should Have

We have three books written by the late DR. DOUGAN CLARK, Professor of Biblical Literature in Earlham College. Dr. Clark was recognized as one of the leading teachers on Holiness, and his books are full of spiritual food.

1. HOLY GHOST DISPENSATION.

This book sets forth with great clearness the joy and beauty of living in fellowship with the Holy Spirit. It should be read by all who are thirsty after the higher life. It contains 170 pages, finely printed, good paper, in strong cloth binding, price 50 cents. It treats of the following subjects: 1.—The Dispensation of the Holy Spirit; 2.—The Holy Spirit our Sanctifier; 3.—The Holy Spirit an object of Worship, Praise and Prayer; 4.—Intercessory Functions of the Holy Spirit; 5.—The Anointing and Sealing of the Spirit; 6.—The Holy Spirit's Guidance; 7.—The Striving of the Spirit; 8.—Sanctification not by Growth nor Death; 9.—Sanctification not Impeccability; 10.—Sanctification and Temptation; 11.—Be ye therefore Perfect; 12.—Preserved; 13.—A Plea for Orthodoxy; 14.—The Reckoning of Faith.

2. INSTRUCTIONS TO CHRISTIAN CONVERTS.

This book has passed through eight editions. It is one of the most valuable books to put into the hands of young Christians. The chapters are: 1.—Be Definite; 2.—Be Diligent; 3.—Be Faithful; 4.—Be Patient; 5.—Be Holy; 6.—Be Filled; 7.—Be Established. 133 pages; price 50 cents.

3. INNER AND OUTER LIFE OF HOLINESS.

This book was written just before Dr. Clark's death. In many respects it is his most spiritual work. The book has 100 pages well printed and bound; price, cloth 35 cents; leatherette 20 cents. The book treats first of INNER LIFE as a life of Peace, Faith, Full Assurance. Extinction of Selfishness, Communion with God, and Spiritual Growth. And of the OUTER LIFE: The Walk, Regulation, Habit, Meekness and Rule of Action.

SPECIAL OFFER.—The three books, in cloth binding, will be sent postpaid for $1.00.

ADDRESS,

PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION OF FRIENDS Plainfield, Indiana

FINANCIAL.

6% to 7% Choice First Mortgage Loans, Seattle and vicinity. Local and N. Y. references. Established 1887. Correspondence Solicited. JAMES BOTHWELL, Seattle, Washington.

Mortgages Net 6% in North Dakota.

I place mortgages on land covering about one-third its value. The value of this land is constantly increasing.

I know every mortgagor personally, know his land, his integrity, his habits and his ability to pay.

These combine to make me certain that these mortgages are as safe as GOVERNMENT BONDS.

Investigate me. You can't make the investigation too rigid to suit me. I'll stand it. I've been in this business for 18 years, and never lost a cent for a customer, nor foreclosed a mortgage.

I collect the interest and principal without charge and remit in New York exchange. Write to me for further information.

WALTER L. WILLIAMSON

Investment Banker

Lisbon North Dakota

Delavau's Remedy

A SPECIFIC FOR
Whooping Cough and Croup

Also a safe and speedy cure for Bronchitis, Bronchial Catarrh and ordinary coughs. 50 Cents a Bottle, at Druggists, or

J. W. S. DELAVAU & CO., Propr's.
N. E. Cor. 6th and Wood Sts., Phila.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE.

Sifts the flour and mixes 20 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CYRUS CHAMBERS, Jr.) 524 & Media Sts., Philadelphia

WILLIAM S. YARNALL
Manufacturing OPTICIAN

118 S. FIFTEENTH ST., PHILA.
4th Door Below Chestnut St.

HOOPING-COUGH AND CROUP.

Roche's Herbal Embrocation

The celebrated and effectual English Cure without internal medicine. Proprietors, W. EDWARDS & SON, Queen Victoria St., London, England. Wholesale of E. Fougere & Co., 50 North William Street, N. Y.

OSTEOPATHY

EDWARD D. BURLEIGH
ALEXANDER STETSON

Osteopathic Physician, 1537 Chestnut St., Room 401.

Hours, 9 a.m. to 12.30 p.m. and 2 to 4 p.m.
Bell Telephone Consultation free.

JOSEPH G. FOGG UNDERTAKER AND EMBALMER

S. W. Cor. Sixteenth and Race Sts.
Phone Spruce 44-38-W. PHILADELPHIA.
Suburban orders promptly attended.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA. Office, 409 CHESTNUT STREET

CAPITAL, $1,000,000

ASSETS, $63,970,335.34

Surplus and Undivided Profits, belonging to Stockholders

4,026,151.15

Surplus, belonging to Insurance Account

5,635,620.25

Incorporated Third month 22, 1865. Charter Perpetual.

INSURES LIVES, GRANTS ANNUITIES, RECEIVES MONEY ON DEPOSIT, returnable on demand for which interest is allowed.

And is empowered by law to act as EXECUTOR ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, GUARDIAN, ASSIGNEE, COMMITTEE, RECEIVER, AGENT, etc.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the assets of the Company.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.

BOXES $5 AND UPWARDS

T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-President.
ASA S. WING, Vice-President.
JOS. ASHBROOK, Man. Ins. Dept.
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer.

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY, President.

J. R. FOULKE, Trust Officer.
DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary.
J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Assistant Trust Officer
C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary.

DIRECTORS:

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY,
T. WISTAR BROWN,
HENRY HAINES,
RICHARD WOOD,
CHAS. HARTSHORNE,

ASA S. WING,
PHILIP C. GARRETT,
JAMES V. WATSON,
WM. LONGSTRETH,
THOS. SCATTERGOOD,

J. PRESTON THOMAS,
ROBERT M. JANNEY,
MARRIOTT C. MORRIS,
FRANK H. TAYLOR,
JOSEPH B. TOWNSEND, JR.

American Friend

Vol. XI

SECOND MONTH 25, 1904

No. 8

POEM	PAGE 123
E. R. Sill.
EDITORIALS.—The Needs of the Ministry.—The Battle at Home.—The Harriet Green Memorial Fund, 123-125
The Effectual Prayer	125
Theodore L. Cuyler.
Battle Cry of To-day	126
Mary Sibbitt.
Lord, Teach us to Pray	127
G. Campbell Morgan.
THE INTERNATIONAL LESSON	128
Lesson for Third month 6, 1904.
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR	129
Topic for Third month 6, 1904.
EDUCATIONAL	129
THINGS OF INTEREST AMONG OURSELVES,	131
BORN.—DIED	132
EVENTS AND COMMENTS	133

BE A FRIEND TO MAN.

*There are hermit souls that live withdrawn,
In the place of their self-content;
There are souls like stars, that dwell apart,
In a fellowless firmament;
There are pioneer souls that blaze their paths
Where highways never ran—
But let me live by the side of the road
And be a friend to man.*

*Let me live in a house by the side of the road
Where the race of men go by—
The men who are good and the men who are bad,
As good and as bad as I.
I would not sit in the scorner's seat,
Or hurl the cynic's ban—
Let me live in a house by the side of the road
And be a friend to man.*

*I see from my house by the side of the road,
By the side of the highway of life,
The men who press with the ardor of hope,
The men who are faint with the strife,
But I turn not away from their smiles nor their tears,
Both parts of an infinite plan—
Let me live in my house by the side of the road
And be a friend to man.*

—SAM WALTER FOSS.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.50 A YEAR ❁ ❁ ❁ PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
AMERICAN FRIEND PUBLISHING COMPANY, 718 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA

The opinions pronounced upon the new "George Fox" have been uniformly favorable, and even warm in praise. The main fact, which seems to strike everyone, is that now for the first time this monumental work is made readable—indeed fascinating.

Almost every Friend has promised himself that some day he would read George Fox's Journal, but has postponed the task from year to year because he found it difficult reading. These may now gratify their long-cherished desire with pleasure at every page.

Yet here is the real book, not a faint dilution of it. All the episodes that have caused discussion are here, all the passages that relate acts of importance or interest. The reader of this book has mastered the most important document of Quakerism, with the aid of the best critical comment and suggestion that modern consecrated scholarship can supply.

GEORGE FOX: an Autobiography. Being the Story of his Life as told in Selected Passages from his Journal. Edited, with Notes and an Introduction, by RUFUS M. JONES, M.A., Professor of Philosophy in Haverford College. Two volumes, 12mo, cloth, gilt top, with maps and many illustrations, $4.00. (Students' edition, one volume, no illustrations, $1.50.)

FERRIS & LEACH, PUBLISHERS, 29-31 N. Seventh St., PHILADELPHIA

The American Friend

*"Truth is the highest thing a man may keep."
"That they all may be one."*

VOL. XI.

PHILADELPHIA, SECOND MONTH 25, 1904.

No. 8.

Forenoon and afternoon and night,
Forenoon and afternoon and night,
Forenoon and—what!
The empty song repeats itself. No more?
Yea, that is life; make this forenoon sublime,
This afternoon a psalm, this night a prayer,
And time is conquered, and thy crown is won.

—E. R. SILL.

THE NEEDS OF THE MINISTRY.

THE most important and critical question now before the Society of Friends, in England at least, is that of the right development of an effective ministry. On our side of the Atlantic there is a general agreement that, if we are to be faithful to the message that has been committed to us for the world, this must be done on free and voluntary lines. We feel that we should be forfeiting our birthright if we let go the silence of our meetings for worship, in which there is "liberty of prophesying" for all who feel called to take part in it for the true help of the congregation.

But this freedom, under the stress and strain of modern life, it is not easy to maintain. Specialization is the order of the day, and it seems often difficult to exclude the spiritual realm from the prevailing "division of labor." Happily, there are signs among us that the problem is not an insoluble one. There are meetings that are growing and prospering, keeping their own young people and drawing in thoughtful persons from outside. In these there is at least some living and heart-reaching ministry, and this from men and women who are not at leisure, but are very busy.

What is there to be learned from such meetings that may serve to guide us? We may learn, I think, that while our Church can do but little to produce the ministry it needs, it can do much indirectly to bring about the right conditions, and to help and foster the ministry when it comes.

The true ministry, we believe, must be such as springs up spontaneously under the prompting of the Spirit, like flowers in the rain and sun. But we are learning that it will not arise, or, if it arises, that it will not develop, unless the conditions are favorable, and these the Church can in some degree control. The Church can strive to lead its members into such a region of spiritual experience as is likely to give them a message for others; it can see that the tender plant of ministry, when it springs up, is not blighted by the cold blast of indifference or criticism; it can provide the conditions under which those called to take part in ministry can grow strong in understanding, and broaden their spiritual horizon with a growing knowledge of the truth.

In England there are three main elements or tendencies in the Society of Friends, as in most of the sister Churches, which may be designated as the conservative, the evangelical, and the intellectual. It will be found that while no one of these, alone, is yielding the ministry that is needed, the most hopeful congregations are those in which all three elements have free play, and where a true balance is kept between them.

1. The essential thought of old-fashioned Quakerism is that true ministry is the outcome of a personal relation with the Spirit of God, such that in some measure His mind and will is revealed, His guidance known. The root of ministry is personal communion with God, and some degree of personal illumination springing from it. We believe that this principle, the principle of "prophecy" in the early Church, must be preserved if the Society of Friends is to have any reason for continued existence. Illumination and guidance are real, and are to be known by those whose wills are surrendered, whose hearts are baptized, whose daily walk is with God.

While we need not frighten timid souls by dwelling too much on the awfulness of the impulse that must be felt before any can dare to rise and speak, we must learn and teach that true ministry is not an easy thing—a pursuit that we can take up or drop at pleasure, like golf or tennis—a line of work to which we can at any time invite good-natured, easy-going persons who are without spiritual preparation for it. Rather, it is the highest, deepest, most exacting of all services, requiring deep baptisms from God, much travail of soul for ourselves and others—it may be heavy suffering and struggle—that we may be qualified to render it. The power to draw water for others out of the wells of salvation will only be ours as we are led into deep places, where the poverty of a superficial existence is taken from us, and replaced by the riches of an inward experience. "Only he who has can give," it has been said, "he on whom the soul descends alone can speak."

2. But the qualification for ministry involves not alone the losing of self, but the finding of Christ; not merely the stripping off of the outward, but the receiving of that which makes all things new. It is when I have a gospel myself that I can speak of it to others. We need a strong sense of the blackness and moral deformity of sin, in ourselves and others; we need equally a clear vision of Christ as the Saviour from it. And where else can we look for either than to His cross? It is here that, as with Christian in the story, our burden, of whatever kind, rolls away, and in the freshness of a new experience we can "say with a merry heart, 'He has given me rest by His sorrow, and life by His death.'" It is then we can speak at once with modesty and with assurance; and, without exalting self, can say with authority, "Come taste and see that the Lord is good."

A little of this wooing note in our ministry will go further than much scolding. Evangelical preaching, like other good things, has its special dangers; and among these is the tendency to mistake a scheme of doctrine for the gospel, to condemn every one who does not see it exactly as we do, to attempt to force all the varied souls of men into our own particular mould of experience. Paul uses the cross not as a dogma, but rather as the great moral lever by which men may be raised to a place where the duties of life can be well done.

3. The intellectual conditions of ministry are no less important. It is at our peril that we ignore or despise the intellect, which has been given us, a fragment of the Universal Mind, as our chief instrument for learning the truth. Personal illumination, unchecked by reason, is apt to degenerate into infallibility; personal experience of salvation, unhelped by a real knowledge of men and things, easily becomes emotionalism or dogmatism or both together. We need the steadiness, the stability, the unity, that come with knowledge of what is really true—true not for ourselves only, but for all. We want truth to the facts of life, truth to the real and not the fancied teachings of Scripture. We need a sound historical sense, a true view of the history of religion, of the growth of moral ideas, of the gradual stages by which God has illumined the souls of men. All this gives a strength and stability to preaching which can in no way be spared. The souls of men cannot be permanently fed with that which does not widen their mental horizon and inform their understanding.

The Church must see to it that these intellectual conditions are met; that the religious instruction of all its members is vigorously carried on; that facilities are provided, in the shape of good books on the Bible and on religious history, for the help and strengthening of those who are called to the ministry.

And, lastly, the Church can keep steadily before its younger members the thought that ministry is the highest of all callings—that the worthiest of all ambitions is to be used by God for the spiritual help of others, and permitted to share in the glorious work of saving and restoring the wandering sons of men. It can so present Jesus Christ to their consciousness that for His sake, and for those whom He loved and died to save, they shall be willing to surrender earthly ambitions, even at the cost of appearing to narrow their lives. There is no narrowness in Him with whom is fullness of life, and whose service is perfect joy.

EDWARD GRUBB.

THE BATTLE AT HOME.

IN the Far East a desperate war is being waged. Every issue of the daily press tells us with large headlines what ships have been sunk, how many Russians and how many sons of Japan have had the life blown out of them, and we hear in full detail of the rugged fight over each strategic position. We shall soon begin to hear how much it costs each of the two countries every day to carry on the gigantic work of destruction.

We, too, have a colossal system of destruction going on here at home. It is more quiet, less spectacular, much less talked about, but no less deadly, and hardly less costly. Many readers, perhaps, will lose interest in this editorial when they discover that we are talking about such an uninteresting subject as the drink-habit. The ordinary person shies from this subject somewhat as he avoids thinking about the day of his own death. He does not want to hear about it. It does not appeal to him. But verily he shall hear about it and he must listen. He may dodge every other topic, but this one must have attention.

A recent census in Paddington, a district of London, revealed the awful fact that while the entire church attendance was 31,331, no less than 122,175 persons visited the saloons. It has a population of 142,690, with fifty-nine churches and two hundred and forty-nine saloons! This is not an American city, and conditions are not as bad as that in any reputable part of our country. But there are plenty of sections in this goodly land where two go to the saloon for every one who goes to worship God. There are places enough where the opportunities for becoming a drunkard are more than double those for becoming a Christian citizen. It is much easier to slide down the slope to evil than it is to make goodness prevail, and just for that reason we ought to help every poor fellow in his personal struggle as far as ever we can. Are we doing so? Quite the contrary. We give him every possible opportunity to go wrong. At all the sightly street corners there are swinging doors behind which are all the appliances for the undoing of his manhood. Broad is the way, and the friction is as little as possible.

Drunkenness, incapacity, poverty, insanity, idiocy, crime, are the natural fruit of the saloon. These things have been proved as conclusively as the law of gravitation has been proved. But nevertheless the forces of this foe to our American civilization are marshaled in almost every city and in almost every township. It is a great, silent, stealthy enemy who uses no cannon, no battleships, but who hits all the same and maims and kills his victims.

It is alas! an uneven warfare. The enemy is almost unopposed. We do use now and then our "squirt gun on the burning pit." We throw a pebble at the giant. We strike a blow at the ravenous beast. But we never fight to kill. We never rise in righteous wrath to crush the enemy. Shall we ever realize the wickedness and stupidity of it all? We use many millions to educate the boys whom the saloon will at once go to work to destroy. We pay an enormous price to gather up the wreckage which the saloon makes. Why not attack in some deadly fashion the power that incessantly makes the wreckage? Will that point ever reach the minds and consciences of the American people?

THE HARRIET GREEN MEMORIAL FUND.

The subscriptions to establish a course in Bible study at Guilford College in memory of Harriet Green now amount to $6,795.90. The last subscription, $25.00, was received on the 12th instant. The following sentences are extracted from the letter of the subscriber:

If I were to express in any adequate manner the help and inspiration I drew from her life during the six years since I first met her, I should have to try other means than those at my command. I do most heartily wish that the memory of her brave, cheerful, victorious life may be kept green amongst us; and I rejoice at the project for increasing the facilities for effective Bible study at Guilford College.

All American members of Friends should rally to its support. Harriet Green's ability in expounding the Scriptures, which was a God-given power of remarkable discernment and vigor, makes the present effort a peculiarly fitting memorial.

We hope that many American Friends who entertain the same sentiments expressed in this letter about Harriet Green and her work in America will respond to the appeal to bring this fund up to a sum that will adequately endow a department in Bible study in Guilford College. By sending contributions to THE AMERICAN FRIEND the subject may be afresh brought to the minds of its readers; and on this anniversary of her work in North Carolina it is fitting to be reminded of this tribute of love to her memory.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

THE EFFECTUAL PRAYER.

BY THEODORE L. CUYLER.

Does every prayer have power with God? By no means; for we are told that we shall receive nothing if we ask amiss. But there is an "effectual prayer that availeth much." In the Revised Version the passage rendered "the supplication of a righteous man availeth much in its working." True prayer is an infinitely deeper and stronger thing than the mere repetition of devout words; it is a believing soul's direct converse with God. Phillips Brooks condensed it into four words, "a true wish sent Godward." By it adoration, thanksgiving, confession of sin, and petition for mercies and favors ascend to the throne, and by means of it precious blessings are brought down from heaven. The pull of our prayers may not move the everlasting throne, but—like the pull on a line from the bow of a boat—it may draw us into closer fellowship with God, and into fuller harmony with His holy will.

(1) This is the first characteristic of successful prayer. "Delight thyself in the Lord, and He shall give thee the desires of thy heart." Too many prayers are born of selfishness and are too much like dictation or command. The indispensable quality of all right asking is a right spirit towards our Heavenly Father. When a soul feels such an entire submissiveness towards God that it delights in seeing Him reign, and His glory advanced, it may confidently pour out its desire; for then the desires of God and the desires of that humble and submissive soul will agree. God loves to give to them who love to let Him have His way. They find their happiness in the chime of their own desires with the will of God.

Two of Christ's disciples, James and John, once came to Him and made the astonishing request that He would place one of them on His right hand and the other on His left hand when He set up His royal government at Jerusalem! As long as these self-seeking disciples sought only their own glory Christ could not give them the askings of their ambitious hearts. Afterwards when their hearts had been baptized by the Holy Spirit, and they had become so consecrated to Christ that they were in complete chime with Him, they were not afraid to pour out their deepest desires. James was the man to tell us that "the effectual prayer of a righteous man availeth much," and John declared that "whatsoever we ask, we receive of Him because we keep His commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in His sight." As soon as those two Christians found their supreme joy in serving Christ they received the desires of their hearts. If a minister prays for a revival in order that he may glorify himself by counting converts, the Lord does not commonly give him many converts to count.

(2) The second trait of effectual prayer is that it aims at a mark, and knows what it is after. When we enter a store or shop we ask the salesman to hand us the particular article we want. There is an immense amount of pointless praying done in our devotional meetings; it begins with nothing, and ends nowhere. The model prayers mentioned in the Bible were short and right to the mark. "God be merciful to me a sinner." "Lord, save me!" cries sinking Peter. "Come down ere my child die," exclaims the heart-stricken nobleman. Those men knew what they wanted. Old Rowland Hill used to say, "I like short, ejaculatory prayer; it reaches heaven before the devil can get a shot at it."

(3) In the next place, the prayer that has influence with God must be a prepaid prayer. If we expect a letter to reach its destination we put a stamp on it; otherwise it goes to the dead-letter office. There is what may be called a Dead-Prayer Office, and thousands of well-worded petitions get buried up there. All of God's promises have their conditions; we must comply with these conditions, or we cannot expect the blessings coupled with the promises. We must be sure that we are doing our part if we expect God to do His part. There is a legitimate sense in which every Christian should do his utmost for the answering of his own prayers. When a certain venerable minister was called on to pray at a missionary convention he first fumbled in his pocket, and when he had tossed a banknote into the plate he said, "I cannot pray until I have given something." He prepaid his own prayer.

When I hear requests for prayer for the conversion of a son or a daughter, I say to myself—how much is that parent doing to win that child to Christ? The godly wife who makes her daily life attractive to a husband has a right to ask God for the conversion of that husband. She is co-operating with the Holy Spirit and prepaying her heart's request. God never defaults; but He requires that we prove our faith by our works, and that we never ask for a blessing that we are not willing to labor for, and to make any sacrifice to secure that longed-for blessing.

(4) Another essential of prevailing prayer is that it be the prayer of faith, and be offered in the name of Jesus Christ. "Whatsoever ye shall ask in My name that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son." The chief "wrestling" that we have to do is not with any reluctance on God's part, but with the obstacles which sin and unbelief put in our pathway. What Providence orders we must submit to uncomplainingly; but we must never submit to what God can better. Never submit to be blocked in any pious purpose or benevolent undertaking if with the divine help you can roll the blocks out of your path. The faith that works while it prays commonly conquers; for such faith creates such a condition of things that our Heavenly Father can wisely hear us and help us.

The firmament of Bible history blazes with answers to effectual prayer, from the days when Elijah unlocked the heavens on to the days when petitions in the house of John Mark unlocked the dungeon and brought the liberated Peter into their presence! The early Church was born in a prayer meeting held in that "upper room" at Jerusalem. During my own pastoral experience the most powerful revivals in my church showed the first indications of the Holy Spirit's presence when we were "gathered with one accord" in our devotional meeting. The prayer-room is the place to hang the church thermometer. That thermometer "below zero" indicates both the cause and the effect of a terrible spiritual declension. When a pastor and even a few dead-earnest members of his church begin to feel a tremendous responsibility for souls and an insatiate hunger for a descent of the Spirit, then there will be effectual praying, and the church will be under the baptism of fire from on high.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

BATTLE CRY OF TO-DAY.

BY MARY SIBBITT.

All the world knows that intemperance produces poverty, insanity, immorality and crime. All the world knows that the liquor business is the most stupendous machinery under the protection of our national government for the destruction of the home, the Church and all higher forms of social life. All the world knows that the saloon is a stench in the nostrils of every decent citizen; that it is an insult to womanhood, and is a foul vulture that feeds upon the lives of little children. It is the gateway to the house of shame and the door of anarchy. It is utterly at variance with every principle of civilization. The world knows it is all this and much more that is unutterable.

Then it is the duty of the world, or that part of it, at least, that believes in right, and especially the principles of our stars and stripes, to rise in the wrath of outraged justice and drive to death this horrible slaveholder of the land. As a patriotic citizen of this great republic, I should realize that my efforts should always be given to constructive enginery and not to destructive denunciation and unavailing sentiment. What shall be done? is the question to be answered. Never in human history was the need of loyal patriotism written so plainly as now.

Our forefathers gave the best of their lives to establish the principles of liberty (but this does not mean license); then in the 60's again our own fought bravely for the physical liberty of a race, but we, their children, in whose veins flows their blood, whose hearts throb with pride as we recount their noble deeds and sacrifices, what shall we do?

Webster tells us patriotism is love of country, but let us ask, What is our country? Is it merely the mountains which raise their rosy cheeks to be kissed by the rays of the morning sun, or the fertile plains where waves the abundant harvest, bowing to welcome the gentle zephyrs of the wind, and where roam the lowing herds? Is it the gurgling rivulet that pushes its way out from the great rock-bound hills of nature, falling in cascades, dashing around the boulders, gurgling, singing, foaming, sparkling, so glad to be free? Or, is it the great Mississippi, as, with its mighty onward sweep, it rolls into the bosom of Mother Ocean?

It is far more than all these combined. It is the moving mass of humanity who dwell in the beautiful plains, sit at the mountain's foot, behold their lofty peaks, catch their rainbow hues of life, quaff from the rivulets, health-giving streams, navigate the mighty rivers and sail on upon the ocean's stormy billows. Yes, humanity, our brothers who love this country, are willing to fight for her, even dare to die for her; these make our country. Then, what is true patriotism? Is it the principle embodied in the commandment, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself"? True patriotism teaches us the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. To do our duty by our fellowmen is a fundamental principle of civilization. What is our duty now? What will show the real true patriotic principles of our forefathers to-day? Rise in our noble, heroic manhood and destroy the enemy of our homes and nation—Rum.

The world is asking the question how to check the tide of intemperance that is pouring in from the fathomless depths of iniquity—how to put an end to this curse. For enfranchised citizens, it is found at the ballot-box. Nothing clinches like Law. Back of that stands the statute-maker, back of them the people.

The elective franchise is the most potential exponent of citizenship that is known to civilization. All words and deeds and hopes and plans are fruitless unless they are backed by a ballot, which stands for the home on election day. Our fathers in '59 thus concentrated their aims and elected the president who stood for the Union.

The Church of God is the mightiest citadel that remains yet to be captured before right triumphs over the legalized saloon.

Its present attitude of neglecting to take advantage of the God-given privilege to annihilate the liquor traffic causes it to be the object of ridicule. May God help us in the great issue of the Twentieth century, not to compromise, but stand like true patriots for our fellowmen, regardless of everything else, declare war for the extermination of Rum. Victory is on our side. The day is dawning; awake, and be ready to shout.

Hutchinson, Kan.

LORD, TEACH US TO PRAY.

BY G. CAMPBELL MORGAN.

There is nothing the Church of Jesus Christ needs at present more than that she should gather around her Lord and breathe again in His hearing the prayer which the first disciples prayed, "Lord, teach us to pray," not "how to pray," but something far larger and greater, "Teach us to pray."

It is a very significant fact that these men never asked Christ to teach them to preach, and we never find that He taught them to preach. They never asked Him to teach them to organize, and we never read that He taught them to organize. They asked Him to teach them to pray, and in this chapter we have His immediate answer to that petition. Not merely in this immediate answer, but in all His life and work He answered that prayer.

One always feels when speaking of the things of God that the subject dealt with is the supreme and vital and final subject, and so, without doing violence to any other aspect of our Master's work, we say that the one thing He came to do was to make prayer possible for men.

I want to speak now of the facts within the coming and the mission of Christ that make prayer possible to us. I am convinced that we need nothing more to-day than a new and intelligent comprehension of what prayer is, of the laws upon which it proceeds, of the marvelous provision for prayer which God has made for us in Christ. In the last conversation I had with my beloved and glorified friend, George Macgregor, we had been talking of the condition of the church, of the condition of the world, of the need there was of some new power with which to deal with men, and suddenly rising from the chair in which he had been sitting, and pacing the room with that earnestness that characterized him, he said, "Morgan, I would rather train ten men to pray than a hundred men to preach." At the moment, perhaps, I thought the expression superlative; I have become convinced that he was right. He did not minimize the value of preaching, but he had come to understand that the supreme need is that Christian people shall know how to pray and shall be able to pray intelligently and prevailingly; and when there is so much prayer that never seems to reach beyond the roof that confines its sound, it is time to go back and study foundations.

The first fact is the revelation of the Father; the second is the mediation of the Son; and the third fact is the inspiration of the Spirit. Apart from these there can be no prevailing prayer; no one alone is sufficient; no two will be enough; the three things must be if prayer is to prevail. In Christ Jesus the full provision is made so that every member of Christ has been brought into a place where prevailing prayer is not only possible, but a privilege; not only a privilege, but a great responsibility.

The International Lesson.

FIRST QUARTER.

LESSON X.

THIRD MONTH 6, 1904.

JESUS CALMS THE STORM.

Mark 4: 35-41.

GOLDEN TEXT. — He maketh the storm, so that the waves thereof are still. — Ps. 107: 29.

DAILY READINGS.

Second-day, Second mo. 29. — Jesus calms the storm. Mark 4: 35-41.

Third-day, Third mo. 1. — Matthew's account. Matt. 8: 23-27.

Fourth-day, Third mo. 2. — Wonders in the deep. Ps. 107: 23-31.

Fifth-day, Third mo. 3. — Christ's power. Mark 6: 45-51.

Sixth-day, Third mo. 4. — God's care. Ps. 23.

Seventh-day, Third mo. 5. — Christ the Creator. John 1: 1-14.

First-day, Third mo. 6. — Our duty to fear God. Ps. 33: 6-19.

Time. — Probably a few weeks after the time of the last lesson in the autumn of A.D. 28. Towards the close of the second year of the ministry of Christ.

Place. — The Sea of Galilee.

Parallel Accounts. — Matthew 8: 18, 23-27; Luke 8: 22-25. Compare also Matthew 14: 24-33; Mark 6: 47-52; John 6: 16-21.

After the Sermon on the Mount Christ went back to Capernaum and soon afterwards began a second visit through Galilee. During this tour he performed some notable miracles, and taught by parables by the seaside. At the close of this day of teaching the lesson begins.

35. "When even was come." The Jews had two evenings; one which began when the sun began to decline, and which answered to our afternoon, and the other, which began at sunset and was what we should call evening proper. The former is the one meant here, as is implied in what follows (Mark 5: 1, 2).

36. "And leaving the multitude." Revised Version. The object was that Christ might have some rest. "Ship." Better, "boat." It was doubtless a row-boat. "Even as he was." There was no preparation made for a journey. It was immediately after He had ceased speaking. "Other boats." Revised Version. This seems to imply that there were some who would insist upon following Him.

37. "There ariseth a great storm of wind." A squall. Owing to the physical conditions of the Sea of Galilee these are common. The lake is sunk below the level of the surrounding country; there are many gorges leading from the hills to the shores; the temperature of the valley is warm, and so the wind often rushes down the gorges and causes tempests upon the water. "Was now filling." Revised Version. There was imminent danger of the swamping of the boat. That the storm was unusually severe is shown by the fear of the disciples who were experienced sailors and familiar with the lake.

38. "And he himself was in the stern asleep on the cushion." Revised Version. From very weariness of body He had fallen into a deep sleep. "The weariness showed His human nature, His treatment of the storm, His divine." "They awoke him." Their faith was strong enough to believe that he could help them, but not strong enough to believe that He would take care of them without an appeal.

"Carest thou not that we perish?" Compare the accounts in Matthew and in Luke. "We perish." Means to include Jesus also.

39. "And he awoke." Revised Version. "Rebuked." The word conveys the idea of chiding, as one might speak to a child or to a subordinate. It carries with it the idea of authority. "Be still." Be stilled and stay so. Note how the sea and the wind are separately spoken to, and the result is stated in each case. The wind ceased and the sea became calm. "A great calm." The wind might cease suddenly; but the sea will for some time continue to be rough; but in this instance, to use Mark's favorite word, straightway it became calm. This was the most striking part of the miracle. Compare Ps. 79: 8, 9. According to Matthew, Jesus first rebuked the disciples and then the sea. Mark and Luke make Him speak first to the sea and then to the disciples. Probably the blame was given both before and after the allaying of the storm. "He spoke first to them quieting with a word the tempest in their bosoms, and then, having allayed the tumult of the outward elements, he again turned to them, and more leisurely blamed them for their lack of faith in him."

40. "Why are ye fearful? Have you not yet faith." Matthew says, "O ye of little faith!" Luke, "Where is your faith?" Taken together Christ does not say they have not faith, as Mark by itself might imply, but reproaches them because they did not use the faith they had. "They had faith as the weapon which a soldier has, but cannot lay hold of at the moment when he needs it most. Their sin lay, not in seeking help of him; for this indeed became them well, but in the excess of their terror."

41. "And they feared exceedingly." Matthew says, "The men feared," but the disciples are probably meant in each case. His disciples appear to have feared often. Matt. 16: 6, 7; Mark 6: 52; John 6: 5-9; 20: 25. "Even the wind and the sea obey him." Not only had demons been cast out, and diseases healed, but now, even the elements were obedient to His will.

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

1. The presence of Christ in the heart does not exempt from danger, or trouble, or sorrow, or pain, but it should give confidence of being upheld.
2. "A ship in the sea is safe so long as the sea is not in the ship."

What a priceless privilege, in a life of unceasing change, to look beyond manifest good and seeming evil to the throne of love, and to feel assured that in a world not man's, but God's, our lot is ordered and our path directed by One who loves us better than we can love ourselves! — Peabody.

Nothing is lost by patience. See how long it takes the good Lord to make a fair flower out of a little seed; and He does all quietly, without bluster. Wait on him a little in peacefulness and prayer, and see what He will do for thee. — H. B. Stowe.

Christian Endeavor

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Lindley D. Clark, 1429 New York Avenue, Washington, D.C.]

TOPIC FOR THIRD MONTH SIXTH.

HOW CHRIST STILLS THE STORMS OF LIFE.

Ps. 107: 23-31.

Second-day, Second mo. 29.—Trials the lot of all. Job 3: 25, 26.

Third-day, Third mo. 1.—From our adversary. Job 6: 22-24.

Fourth-day, Third mo. 2.—When God seems afar. Ps. 22: 1, 2.

Fifth-day, Third mo. 3.—Angels afterwards. Matt. 4: 1-11.

Sixth-day, Third mo. 4.—Our Deliverer. Heb. 2: 14-18.

Seventh-day, Third mo. 5.—Paul's Deliverer. Acts 23: 10, 11.

The test of ship and crew is not in the day of calm, but when winds blow and waves buffet, so that but for utmost staunchness and skill all would go down together. A man may devise a theory of living that answers very well so long as days are fair and friends seem near and strong; but the shadowed valleys and the stripping adversities that come sometime to most if not all of us, shatter our schemes and philosophies until we know that our own wisdom is useless just at the time of greatest need.

"Carest Thou not that we perish?" was not a question of one who fully understood how He careth for us, but there was in it an appeal that the Master would not slight, and the waves were stilled.

The deliverances by which we are taught to endure and triumph are, not less but greater than the deliverances of escape. In the midst of our trials our help is at hand. "To him who wears shoes the whole earth is covered with leather." If we go with our feet shod with the preparation of the Gospel of Peace the storm will become a calm, not by escape, but by conquest.

Our storms may be largely a matter of view-point. One standing on the lower deck of a boat and looking out on the waves will be much more impressed with their height than if he were on the deck above with eyes fixed upon the beacon by which the boat is steered. Calm may be ours by looking not on the difficulty, but on the Deliverer.

How many of our storms are we responsible for? Æolus controlled the winds so long as he kept them within their cave with doors securely shut; and if, instead of giving way and indulging the storm-breeders, we control and extinguish them, as we may by Christ's help, here, too, is positive stilling of the storm.

"With tribulations." Though Christ was aboard the boat the storm beat upon it and the waves dashed into it; but a lesson of the power and love of their Lord was the memory that remained with the terrified and wondering disciples.

To be an overcomer signifies victory, but it just as surely signifies conflict. The battle is to be neither sought nor shunned; only let our fighting be where the Leader sets us.

Many indeed think of being happy with God in heaven; but the being happy with God on earth never enters into their thought.—John Wesley.

Educational.

CHRISTIANSBURG INDUSTRIAL INSTITUTION.

[The Christiansburg Industrial Institution for the training of colored youth is under the auspices of the Friends' Freedmen's Association of Philadelphia, and is of general interest since it is a successful undertaking, doing much toward the betterment of the American negro. We publish a few instructive paragraphs from the last annual report of its Board of Managers.—Ed.]

During the past few years our school has been transforming itself from a day school, which taught academic branches only, into a school which devotes itself to industrial work, and in which it is the intention to have all the students, above the primary and intermediate grades eventually boarders at the school. Your board now feels that the lines on which the school should develop itself are fairly well marked. It should teach primarily agriculture and the simple industries which find place in an agricultural community, such as carpentry, wheelwrighting, blacksmithing, printing, etc., and for girls cooking, laundry work, sewing, etc., and in addition to this the elements of a common English education. The educational system of Virginia recognizes three grades of teachers for its common schools. To pass the examination for the second and third grades a knowledge of only the common English branches, such as are taught at our school, is required. The course of study has been planned to fit students to pass these examinations, and to that extent we have a normal course. In preparing teachers for the public schools we believe we may fulfill a useful function to the community and extend the influence of our school beyond those with whom it comes immediately in contact.

In making agriculture and the simple industries associated with it the primary object of our educational efforts we believe we are working in harmony with the best ideas for the advancement of the negro race. Booker Washington remarked, after a recent visit to Europe, that the negro race in the South was the only present class to whom the owning of land is a possibility, and his observation has convinced him that agriculture offers by far the best opportunities to the Southern negro. This view is, we believe, generally shared by students of the problem. In order to make our work of lasting benefit all of our teaching must be thoroughly done, and our teachers must be men and women of character. Our teaching force should be stronger numerically than the teaching force for a white school of a similar grade. As Hugh M. Browne pointed out in a recent address, the white boy is helped in his school work by a large fund of information which he has acquired by his associations, and these associations are not open to the colored boy. The latter, consequently, has more to learn in his school course in order to fit him equally for the battle of life. In addition to this he inherits less ability to learn, and consequently, in order to produce anything like equal results, there is much more teaching to be done, and a larger teaching force is required in a colored school than in a white school.

In looking toward our immediate future needs we believe that it is most important that we should increase and strengthen our faculty, and we hope very much that the liberality of friends will make it possible for us to move in this direction by employing, during the next year, a thoroughly trained teacher of agriculture. This will add considerably to our current expenses.

It would be most desirable if the Institution had an endowment fund which would partially support it. Three friends have kindly contributed $1,000 each for this purpose. It is the hope of the board that the next year will see a substantial increase in this.

Since our last report an industrial building has been completed, a cottage has been made for the principal, and an excellent and substantial dormitory building has been built. The industrial building, which was started before our last annual meeting, was completed in the early summer. It cost $846.50, and is a frame one-story building, about 80 feet long and 20 feet wide. It is divided into three parts to accommodate the trades of blacksmithing, wheelwrighting, carpentry and printing. The principal's cottage is a one-story building, having four rooms, a hall, bath room and a front porch. The dormitory is a two-and-one-half-story building, with a basement. The basement contains a laundry, dining room and kitchen. The first story, which is entered from one end of the building, and is occupied by the boys, contains a living room, 20 by 20 feet, nine bed rooms, two bath rooms and a lavatory. The second story, which is occupied by the girls, is entered from the side of the building, and there is no inside communication between the two stories. It is divided up in exactly the same way as the first story. The bed rooms are large enough to accommodate three persons. The building is heated throughout by hot water.

Our present building program being complete, our equipment consists of the substantial brick building on the hill near Christiansburg, and, on the farm, of the dormitory, the mansion house, now refitted and used as an industrial school building, the new barn, the industrial and normal school building, the principal's cottage, and several minor buildings, including two substantial slave cabins, which being well sealed inside will be found useful. Including the farm, the school property has a value of $25,000, which is entirely free from debt.

In the internal administration of the school the establishment of a boarding department on a substantial basis is the most marked advancement of the year. In this connection our principal makes the following statement in his annual report: "The average cost of maintaining each student is a little less than 13 cents per day. The difference between the day students and the students who live at the school presents a striking contrast. The students who live at the school are more easily managed and show more earnestness and willingness to possess themselves of what the school has to impart than do those students who live in the village. This fact alone will commend the steps of converting the Institution into a boarding school." The enrollment in all departments reached 240, with an average daily attendance of 155.

The farm, which is naturally of good soil, had been allowed to run down very much before it came into our possession. Our policy is to restore its fertility by growing nitrogenous crops and by liberal and wise expenditure for fertilizers, and not to expect very much from it for a year or two. Very satisfactory results, however, are beginning to show.

THE BIBLICAL DEPARTMENT OF PENN COLLEGE.

The 263 students who have taken more or less work, some as much as one-and-a-half to two full years, in the Biblical department, represent sixteen Christian denominations. About one-fourth are ministers of the gospel, and one-third of these are non-Friends. Many are teachers, a number are pastors and others are home and foreign missionaries, not only preaching the gospel, but establishing the schools, benevolent institutions and useful industries so essential to Christian civilization, making known to sinful, suffering pagans the most effective and helpful agencies of Christianity. One is at the head of Friends' Tokyo Mission, and four are fortifying a stronghold at Gibara, Cuba, and will occupy a field for Friends, including several towns and cities. One is a missionary in Alaska, and one in Argentine Republic. Six others have gone to the foreign field, while others are preparing to respond to the call to other fields. Two are college presidents, and in all twelve have been or are professors, and eight others instructors. Two have attained distinction in the Young Women's Christian Association; one is a Young Men's Christian Association intercollegiate secretary in Des Moines; one is evangelistic superintendent of a yearly meeting; one is evangelistic superintendent of a large quarterly meeting; one fills an important position in the Associated Charities in Chicago; one is social secretary for some 2,000 girls in a large English manufacturing establishment; one is traveling secretary of the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association, organizing the work among colleges and universities east and west; two are editors; several are physicians; two are trained nurses. Nearly all have been graduated within a few years. One is a superior student in Semitic languages at Harvard and secretary of the Harvard Semitic Club.

So much about the results hitherto. There are twenty-five students this year. Of these thirteen are in the regular Classical-Biblical course, that is, taking a full classical course in which about one-third of the work consists of Biblical history, Biblical languages and literature, Biblical exegesis, Biblical theology and Church history. The other twelve elect portions of the work open to English students who are not prepared for the more thorough Scripture exposition. One class is doing a grade of work, now in the Epistle to the Romans, and soon to take up Colossians, such as probably has rarely been done in Friends' colleges, and from a genuine Christian and spiritual point of view seldom found in non-Friendly schools. Probably half of the number will be recorded ministers in due time, and nearly all the twenty-five are active, useful Christian workers. In almost any other body of Christians such a department would soon be developed, without additional students and with few additional studies, into a theological seminary, with three to ten regular professors. With Friends it should be continued under the modest name of Biblical department, or the Biblical Institute, with a grade and thoroughness to meet the demands of the churches, true to the basic principles of the Society of Friends, leaving no reason for any to go to non-Friendly institutions for a Biblical and theological instruction.

It should be noted that all the students of Penn College, these twenty-five included, have a recitation each week in Scripture, and that a large number are in the Bible classes of the Christian Associations and in Christian workers' classes.

Things of Interest Among Ourselves.

Prof. Elbert Russell, of Earlham College, was called recently to speak before the Y. M. C. A. of Purdue University.

Sterling Quarterly Meeting will be held at Sterling, Kansas, the 26th to 28th inst. Friends are cordially invited to attend.

Catharine J. Knowles, on account of ill-health, has had to leave her work at Unadilla, N. Y. Her address at present is Smyrna, N. Y.

Daniel Drew, formerly a resident minister of Portland Monthly Meeting, Oregon, is now located in the meeting at Chehalem Center, Oregon.

Allen Jay is still in Philadelphia engaged in raising funds for Guilford College. He finds many openings for religious service, and his visit is proving a blessing.

J. J. Danks, of Hoisington Monthly Meeting, is doing the revival work in that field. He has been very successful in the work, both in winning souls to Christ and the upbuilding of the members.

On account of the declining health of his wife, Wm. Marshall, of Le Grand, Iowa, has decided to give up his trip to the World's Sabbath School Convention at Jerusalem, and has moved to Bangor, Iowa.

Augusta Mary Tallack, wife of our friend, William Tallack, passed away on the 25th of last month, leaving this venerable Friend in great loneliness. He has the deep sympathy of a large circle of friends.

Malinda Newby, missionary to Kaak Island, Alaska, has returned to her home at Springbrook, Oregon. That climate was menacing to her health, though the work was very dear to her. It is hoped her place will soon be supplied by another.

J. C. Williamson, a minister from St. Clairsville, Ohio, has been very acceptably with Friends at Grant City Meeting, Ind., holding evangelistic services. A goodly number of souls were definitely blessed, and the meeting was edified and strengthened.

A very pleasant surprise was given to Constance Day, the local minister in La Crosse Monthly Meeting, on the 9th inst. Over forty guests gathered at her home, representing the congregation at Hillsdale, and each brought a substantial offering. A very enjoyable evening was spent, and a good testimony of the appreciation of her gospel ministry was apparent.

We have received a beautiful and comforting letter from our dear aged friend, J. Bevan Braithwaite. This sentence should be passed on for everybody to read: "My heart overflows with the precious promise of the Almightiness of the love of our God."

F. H. Tormohlen, formerly of Anderson, Ind., is now residing at Upland, Ind. He is located in the meeting at Upland, in which he has labored for more than two years. The meeting is now making arrangements to build a new meeting house.

At the last monthly meeting at Newberg, Oregon, a letter of introduction for Annie Newell from Darlington Monthly Meeting, England, was read, and she was gladly welcomed. After spending some time with two brothers in California she with two minor children will reside in Oregon.

J. Edward Ransome, who is located in Fillsom Meeting, spent nearly two weeks in special work at Milton Meeting, New York. He visited nearly every member, held cottage meetings, and evening services at the meeting house, all of which were blessed of God to the edifying of the members.

The meetings at Bethel and Mt. Zion, Barlow County, Kan., are much revived since the meeting recently held there by Edith Stanton. They greatly feel the need of a local minister. Any who may feel drawn to the field should correspond with Walter A. McNutt, Clafin, Kansas, or D. Gidley, Hargrave, Kansas.

Herbert and Sarah B. Cash, who have been located in California for the past two or three years, returned to Oregon the first of the year. Herbert Cash's health forbids him continuing active work in the ministry, and they will reside on a farm in the neighborhood of Springbrook Monthly Meeting, Oregon.

F. S. Blair attended Archdale, N. C., Bible School and Meeting on the 14th, and in the afternoon delivered a lecture on "What Can High School and College Faculties and Students Do to Forward Peace and Arbitration" in the chapel of Trinity High School. In the evening he gave the same lecture at Archdale.

A stated meeting of the Pennsylvania Auxiliary of the International Medical Missionary Society will be held Sixth-day, the 26th instant, at 3 o'clock p.m., at the residence of Lydia E. S. Richards, Merion, Pa. An address will be given by Anna Dean Wilbur, on "Medical Missions in Alaska." Friends are cordially invited to this meeting.

The day school at Friends' Mission, Va., will close the 16th of next month. The enrollment has reached 120, and while the winter has been exceptionally cold, the average attendance will be the greatest in the school's history. The meetings and Sabbath School are well attended. Traveling ministers are cordially invited to visit the mission.

Our friend, Edward Grubb, who has written for us the leading editorial this week, has been spending nearly a week in and about Philadelphia. He has delivered some valuable addresses, and has given some powerful and living messages in meetings for worship. He is now in the Southern States engaged in work as secretary of the Howard Association.

Albian and Mattie Gibson, of New Vienna, Ohio, assisted the first week by Mattie E. Hadley, a returned missionary from Kotzebue Sound, North Alaska, held an excellent series of meetings at Springfield, Clinton County, Ohio, beginning on First-day morning, First month 24th, and closing First-day evening, the 7th inst., in all twenty-six sessions. Definite work was accomplished.

President Robert L. Kelly, of Earlham College, has been invited to speak on "Moral and Religious Education in the Secondary Schools" before the High School Section of the Northern Indiana Teachers' Association, to be held in Fourth month at the Winona Chautauqua. He has also accepted an invitation to speak during the summer at the Island Park Chautauqua, Rome City, Ind.

Ferdinand Edward Ruch, whose obituary appears in this issue, was a native of Germany. He came to America with his family in 1864, and made his home for a time in Bloomington, Ill. In 1878 he emigrated to Kansas, and settled on the land which was his home until death. He was converted in his youth, and for a number of years was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He and his family became convinced of the doctrines of Friends, and united with them in 1895. He was always devout and sincere, and possessed a strength of intellect and character that made him a power in the community in which he lived, and a valuable member of the meeting to which he belonged.

Five persons made application for membership with Friends at the last meeting of Springfield Monthly Meeting, N. C. These were some of the fruits of a revival recently conducted by John K. Howell, of Wilmington Yearly Meeting, Ohio. J. R. Bulla, who had been granted the privilege of a letter to New Garden Monthly Meeting twenty-one years ago, but had never taken it out, was declared a member. F. S. Blair and his sister, Marian C. Parker, were in attendance at the meeting.

Eliza P. Williams is now engaged in revival services in Alexander, Rush County, Kansas, with marked success. The people of the town made special request for her to come, and many have already been converted. Eliza P. Williams has spent over three months in the limits of La Crosse Monthly Meeting. There has been for a number of years a very urgent demand, both by Friends and others, for her to come to that field, and Friends feel that surely the hand of the Lord has directed her that way.

Bear Creek Quarterly Meeting was held at Earlham, Ia., the 12th to 14th instant. The only minister present from outside the quarterly meeting was Susan B. Sisson, of Paton, Ia. Ira D. Kellogg, of Oskaloosa, Ia., chairman of the Committee on the Suppression of the Liquor Traffic for Iowa Yearly Meeting, was also present and addressed the meeting on Sixth-day evening. He also spoke at Bear Creek and Wiscotta on First-day. A subscription of $37 was taken to assist Ida Grove Friends in redeeming their meeting house; also a committee was appointed to propose to next meeting a plan for raising a permanent church extension fund for the use of the quarterly meeting.

On First-day evening, First month 31st, Prof. Elbert Russell opened the Indianapolis Meeting's lecture course on Peace, with a masterful address on "Peace as Related to the Christian Character." On Third-day evening, the 9th inst., Benjamin Trueblood, gave the second address on "The Development of Peace and Arbitration Among the Nations." Such a review of the movement and such a glowing prospect for the future had never been heard by an Indianapolis audience. These lectures have been very much appreciated by the Indianapolis Friends and others who heard them. The third address will be given on First-day evening, the 28th inst., by Addison Harris, of Indianapolis. These addresses are free to all, and a cordial invitation is extended to Friends, especially those near Indianapolis.

Walnut Creek Quarterly Meeting of Friends was held at North Branch, Kansas, the 12th and 13th inst. On Sixth-day afternoon a doctrinal convention was held, at which the subject, "Revelation as Taught by Scripture," was considered. The evening meeting, conducted by J. Perry Hadley, president of the Yearly Meeting's Christian Endeavor Union, was held in interest of the Endeavor work. The meeting on Seventh-day was addressed by Josiah Butler, Yearly Meeting Superintendent of Evangelistic Work, and others. In the evening the subject "Giving" was discussed, and a collection taken for foreign mission work. Large congregations were present on First-day, and the earnest appeals of several ministers were appreciated by the listeners. The afternoon service was a conference of Sabbath School workers. Each session of the meeting was a source of blessing and good seed was sown, which will doubtless bring forth fruit to the glory of God. In response to an appeal for aid in the Friends' North End Mission, Wichita, Kansas, a subscription of about $12.00 was taken.

Spring River Quarterly Meeting of Friends, held at Timber Hills, Kan., the 12th to 14th instant, was a time of blessing to all who attended. At the meeting of ministry and oversight a spirit of unity and renewed consecration to the work of the church was manifested by those present. The Missionary and Temperance Conference was well attended, and, after reports of work done and recitations by the children, L. W. McFarland, of Lowell, gave an able address on the "Relation of the Church to the Suppression of the Liquor Traffic." Representatives from all the meetings composing the quarter except one were present. Several Friends from other meetings were in attendance, one of whom, Jeremiah Hubbard, gave a message which was well adapted to the needs of the present time. At the business session Parker Moon returned the minute granted him Eighth month last to visit in the limits of Western and Indiana and Wilmington Yearly Meetings. All hearts were warmed as he told of his work within the limits of the yearly meetings named. Seventh-day evening Charles A. Mitchel, superintendent of the Purity Industrial Home for Boys at Marionville, Mo., addressed the young people. At the Bible School Conference several questions relating to that work were discussed. The one, "What is a miracle?" bringing out many different thoughts. The subject of the "Baptism of the Holy Spirit" was the burden of the morning meeting on First-day. The subject was presented in a forcible manner by C. A. Mitchel, followed by testimonies from several to the power of the Holy Spirit to comfort, guide and equip for service.

The membership of the Friends' Meeting at Greenfield, Ind., have formed an organization known as "Greenfield Friends' Sociable," the object being to gain an understanding of, and love for, the usages and practices of Friends, and to discuss their principles and current events in their social life. The young people will take up a study of the early history of Friends and their doctrines. So far the outlook in this undertaking is encouraging. This meeting, although not large as to numbers, is growing in spiritual strength. Daisy Barr, who has ministered to the meeting for the past two years, seems thoroughly imbued with the spirit of the Master, and is doing good work in the community. She recently closed a successful series of meetings at Maxwell, having twenty conversions and several accessions to the meeting. She expects to conduct a series of meetings in Greenfield Meeting soon. The different departments of work in the meeting are in a flourishing condition. The Bible School, under the efficient superintendency of O. R. Bruner, is one of the best in the city. The Home Class numbers ninety-five, and is managed throughout by Martha J. Elliott, a woman whose whole soul is in the work. The Young People's Christian Endeavor Societies, although small in numbers, have only active members on their rolls. The missionary society is in a prosperous condition, with a membership of thirty. Lucy H. Binford is president, and her zeal and enthusiasm in the work is an inspiration to those belonging to the society. At a recent meeting the society had the pleasure of having the company of Phariba Stevens, of Richmond, Indiana, Secretary of the Mission Board. She spoke of the work in Mexico.

Chicago Quarterly Meeting was held at Chicago, Ill., the 6th inst. The Meeting on Ministry and Oversight was held at 3.30 p.m., on Sixth-day. At this meeting Lewis E. Stout, of Plainfield, Ind., preached from the text, "Thou art near, O Lord," and that thought pervaded the succeeding meetings. A Christian Endeavor Convention was held that evening, which was addressed by George H. Moore, our yearly meeting's Christian Endeavor superintendent, especially regarding the work in our own yearly meeting. The Women's Foreign Missionary Society met at 10 a.m., Seventh-day, and Dr. Lucy A. Gaynor, who has spent some years as a medical missionary in China, addressed them. Benjamin F. Trueblood, secretary of the American Peace Society, was present at the regular meeting for worship of the quarterly meeting at 11 a.m. His sermon was considered a very strong one on "Peace with God and Among Men," and in exaltation of Christ as the author of all our benefits. Between the meetings for worship and business, lunch was served for all present. At 8 p.m. the Quarterly Bible School Conference was held. The secretary of the Cook County Sabbath School Association addressed the meeting very earnestly on "Teacher Training and Teachers' Meetings," and illustrated the need of both consecrated and well-prepared teachers. First-day opened with Bible School at 9.45 a.m. In the meeting for worship at 11 a.m. Lewis E. Stout preached from the promises of God to Abram, dwelling especially on "Thou shalt be a blessing." After the regular Christian Endeavor meeting in the evening, Willis H. Bond, of Watseka, Ill., held a meeting for the young people. He took for his text, "Is the young man Absalom safe?" and preached a timely sermon on the need of an active, honest and pure life.

BORN.

TAYLOR.—To Thomas B. Taylor and wife, of Worcester, Mass., Fourth month 29th, 1903, a daughter, Lena Marion Taylor.

TOWLE.—To Frank B. and Caroline Gifford Towle, of Worcester, Mass., First month 21st, 1904, a son, Berton Gifford Towle.

WHEELER.—To Fred and Lillian Wheeler, of Worcester, Mass., Eleventh month 2d, 1903, a son, Francis Jewett Wheeler.

DIED.

RUCH.—At his home, northeast of Hoisington, Kansas, Second month 3d, 1904, Ferdinand Edward Ruch, aged 68 years. The deceased was an influential member, and an elder of Hoisington Monthly Meeting at the time of his death.

Events and Comments.

Radium in quantities has been discovered among the mica deposits of the eastern and western provinces of Canada.

Both Russia and Japan are marshaling their land forces for a desperate struggle in the Far East, but the position has not relatively changed since last week.

Nine States—New York, Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Minnesota, North Dakota, Washington and Wyoming—observed Lincoln's birthday as a legal holiday. The number is not increasing rapidly, and the general observance of the day does not seem to spread noticeably.

The Denver ballot-box frauds, which have led to Congressman Shafroth's retirement, seem to have been participated in by women, as well as men—women in Colorado having full right of suffrage. Women shared in the work of doctoring or pre-marking the ballots, and women helped in the repeating. All this is not the sort of comment on the claim that woman suffrage will tend to purify politics which we should like to hear.

The agricultural appropriation bill which passed the House recently very properly contained a clause providing for unrestricted distribution of black leg vaccine by the Agricultural Department. Secretary Wilson urged in committee that ample provision be made. "We make it here for probably one-tenth of a cent a dozen, and distribute a million and a half doses a year free to the people, and the result is that wherever we send it black leg is disappearing."

The ten monster engines of the world are now being built at the Baldwin

TIMELY CALLING.

How the Pastor Saved a Life.

A man near Fort Gay, W. Va., made an entire failure in getting strength from the kind of food he ate, and not knowing that the trouble was with the food kept on losing health until the doctors gave him up to die.

It was supposed to be consumption, because he was wasting away steadily and slowly dying. His minister called from time to time, and one day brought along a package of Grape-Nuts, thinking from what he knew of the famous food that perhaps it might help them. The sick man took to it at once, and from that day began to get well. In writing he says:

"I walked to town to-day three miles. Have gained over 40 pounds in about two months, and my neighbors don't know what to say. I frequently am told it was as if I am raised from the dead. Everybody here knows of my case, you can tell people to write to the Postmaster or Rev. L. B. Bryan. I will make a sworn statement that Grape-Nuts saved my life." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

This is another illustration that where all other food fails one can be brought back to health and strength on Grape-Nuts. "There's a reason."

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

Works in Philadelphia, and each will be capable of pulling a greater weight than was ever before accomplished by a single locomotive. They are ordered by the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé Railroad on the theory that one gigantic locomotive, having the power of two of the present average type, can be operated more cheaply than two small ones. Each engine will weigh about 280,000 pounds, and the tender about 200,000 pounds. Although of the same width as the smaller engines and adapted to the same tracks, the new type is much longer and higher than the others, and when placed beside one of the old-style locomotives the latter appears a pigmy.

The estimated loss from the fire in Baltimore is considerably less than was at first supposed. It is now reported that the insurance loss will be less than $50,000,000, and the total losses will be about $100,000,000. Severe as the calamity is, a few years and it will be said in Baltimore as it is now said of Chicago, that the great fire was the greatest blessing that ever befell that city. Inspection of large and expensive buildings, modern in construction and using the steel skeleton, with brick and masonry sheathing, shows that a great fire and terrible heat do not affect the framework seriously; and that the old skeleton can be used at once for rebuilding. For architects, builders and owners of property this aspect of the disaster is educating in its revelations.

After a brave struggle with typhoid fever, Senator Hanna, of Ohio, passed away Second month 15th, aged 66 years. Of Irish Quaker stock, he long since identified himself with the Protestant Episcopal Church. Comparatively unknown in the country at large until the presidential campaign of 1896, his masterly management of the Republican party's interests at that time gave him a national reputation. His ability to administer affairs on a large scale, to speak cogently and with breadth of view on party policy and national problems, his sympathy for and defense of the laboring man, while at the same time he was vigilant in guarding the interests of capital, his ardent affection for men and his capacity for winning it from others—all these made him influential.

A somewhat unexpected development has occurred in the Tibetan affair. The Tibetans, probably hoping for Russian protection from a distance, have refused to pay even their usual nominal respect to Chinese advice. They have marked their disregard openly by refusing transport to the Chinese resident, and recently so irritated the Viceroy of Szechuen that he requested permission from the Throne to send an army to Lhasa and reduce the great Lamas to reason. The authorities at Peking accordingly welcome the British advance. They are aware that the government of India neither seeks nor desires the annexation of Tibet, and hope that if Colonel Young-husband can humble the Lamas their own suzerainty will be made effective. The Chinese resident will therefore visit Colonel Young-husband, and advance with him should he be compelled by Tibetan obstinacy or hostility to dictate terms in Lhasa. At present he awaits the action of the Lamas, who refuse all reply to his letters, collect troops at a place called

IT IS A MATTER OF HEALTH

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

Guru, and savagely punish any Tibetans who hold communication with the barbarians. Nothing is said of reinforcements for the British; but the commissioner is diligently making roads which will render their arrival much easier. Meantime Russia has her hands full in her war with Japan, so that no interference may be anticipated from that quarter.

WOMEN'S COATS and JACKETS

The winter and spring styles are both here now—elbow to elbow. The winter Coats with their warmth and comfort, the spring novelties with their chic and freshness. Merely a few suggestions:

- At $5.00—WOMEN'S JACKETS—of covert cloth, in the popular tan shade, and of fine chevots; lined with satin.
- At $6.50—WOMEN'S JACKETS—of fine broadcloth, lined with satin; finished with strapped seams on shoulders.
- At $7.50—WOMEN'S COATS—of kersey, lined with satin; 27 inches long. A graceful and perfect-fitting model.
- At $10.00—WOMEN'S COATS—of fine montagnac; lined with satin; turnover cuffs; 26 inches long—very stylish.
- At $12.00—WOMEN'S COATS—of chevot, lined with fine taffeta silk; silk facings and revers; 24 inches long.

West Centre Store, Second Floor, Market Street.

STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER

PHILADELPHIA

"MARY ELIZABETH'S CANDY."

There is a pointed moral in the story of the daughter of fortune who had the knack of making excellent candy. Family fortunes were reversed, and then was hatched the scheme of which the Brooklyn "Eagle" tells.

"A new sort of candy-stand was set up in the railroad station at Syracuse, N. Y., the family's home city. "Mary Elizabeth's Candy," as attractive placards described it, was packed in pretty boxes of different sizes each marked with its price, and all temptingly exhibited for sale, yet no salesman was there. By means of other placards people were invited to help themselves to the boxes, leave their money on the stand, and make their own change from a pile of small coins lying there in open sight.

"They always keep $5 worth of small change there, but they have never yet lost more than $10 a year as a result of letting the public help itself; and much of this loss may reasonably be charged to error in making change rather than to dishonesty.

"Whether the public was at first attracted more by this beautiful trust in its honesty than by the excellence of the candies I will not attempt to say, but the business of that little stand grew very rapidly to wonderful proportions, and the fame of Mary Elizabeth's candy spread so far that now some of the large dealers in New York city make a special advertised feature of it. Yes, and there is a plenty of reason to predict that this child will yet become the successful rival of the greatest candy manufacturers in the country."—Exchange.

DOCTOR EXPLAINS

His Article in the Medical Magazine About Coffee.

One of the most famous medical publications in the United States is the "Alkaloidal Clinic," in a recent number of which an entertaining article on coffee by a progressive physician and surgeon is published. In explaining his position in the matter this physician recently said:

"In the article in question I really touched but lightly upon the merits of Postum Food Coffee. I have had several cases of heart trouble, indigestion and nervousness where a permanent cure was effected by merely using Postum in place of coffee without any other treatment.

"In my own family I have used Postum for three years, and my children actually cry for it and will not be satisfied with any other beverage. Indeed, they refuse to eat until they have had the customary cup of Postum, and as it is a rebuilders and does nothing but good, I am only too glad to let them have it.

"To get the best results we boil the Postum at least 20 minutes, and it is then settled by adding a little cold water, then the addition of fresh cream makes a beverage I now prefer to the very best coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Authorities are agreed that Postum is a wonderfully quick and sure builder. Ten days' trial in place of coffee proves it.

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

10 BEAUTIFUL PICTURES FREE

In order to introduce our QUAKER OINTMENT into every home where THE AMERICAN FRIEND is read, we have decided to make the following liberal offer. To every person sending us 25 cents for one box of QUAKER OINTMENT, and 4 cents extra to pay postage, we will send absolutely free the following 10 pictures. These pictures are gems of art. For picture study, art collections, gifts and home decoration, they are of great value. The Last Supper, Christ in Gethsemane, Christ Taken Captive, Christ Before Pilate, Christ Bearing the Cross, The Crucifixion, Entombment, In the Sepulchre, The Ascension, Transfiguration. It is costing us a great deal of money to advertise in this way, but we trust you will be pleased with our liberality, and will favor us with an order for a box of our ointment, and get these 10 beautiful pictures free. QUAKER OINTMENT is the best known remedy for catarrh, eczema, and all skin diseases. Rev. Asa Woodard, pastor Friends' Meeting at Butlerville, Ind., says: "I am using QUAKER OINTMENT, and find it an excellent remedy." Mrs. Clara Chaney, Rural Route No. 3, Warren, Ind., says: "I have never found anything as good as QUAKER OINTMENT for catarrh, sores and skin diseases." Send us your order to-day. Quaker Ointment sent to any address upon receipt of 25 cents.

DAVIS MFG. CO., Butlerville, Ind.

BUSHIDO AND JAPAN

An Exposition of Japanese Thought, by Inazo Nitobe, A.M., Ph.D., Professor in the Imperial College, Sapporo, Japan. Price, postpaid, white leatherette cover, 75 cents; bound in cloth, $1.00.

THE LEEDS & BIDDLE CO., Inc.

1019-21 Market St., Phila.

WANTED.—Young Friend, over 18, to assist in office of weekly newspaper near Philadelphia. Chance for rapid promotion. Energy and good character prime requisites. "B," THE AMERICAN FRIEND, 718 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Russia's extremity on the borders of the Pacific is the opportunity of Turkey. She already has repudiated one, if not more, of the conditions respecting Macedonia which she recently tardily and sullenly accepted under pressure from Russia and Austria, the mandates of the powers. The springtime approaches, when Macedonian revolutionists may operate freely again, and Bulgaria tugs at the leash eager to have a grapple with Turkey and insistent on freeing Macedonia from Turkish rule.

CONUNDRUMS.

What is larger for being cut at both ends? A ditch.

When is butter like Irish children? When it is in little pats.

What was the longest day of Adam's life? When there was no Eve.

Why are tears like potatoes? Because they spring from the eyes.

Which was the largest island before Australia was discovered? Australia.

What time is it when the clock strikes thirteen? Time the clock was fixed.

Why is Westminster Abbey like a fireplace? It contains the ashes of the grate (great).

What is the difference between a bankrupt and a feather-bed? One is hard up and the other is soft down.

If a farmer can raise 250 bushels of corn in dry weather, what can he raise in wet weather? An umbrella.

If the man on the front of an ice-cart weighs 130 pounds, what does the man on the back weigh? The ice.

If the alphabet were invited out to supper, which of the letters would get there late? All those letters which come after "t."

Why is an old man's house more easily entered than a young man's? Because his gait is broken and his locks are few.

THE NEW HYMN BOOK!

BY THREE FAMOUS COMPOSERS
DOANE, KIRKPATRICK AND MAIN
256 pages. 276 hymns with music.

One-half new songs that will never grow old.
One-half old songs that will always be new.

If you need a new hymn book you had better see

DEVOTIONAL SONGS

before making your choice.

Substantially bound in cloth, $25 per 100.

THE BOOK ITSELF IS ITS BEST ADVERTISEMENT.

Returnable copies for examination mailed on request.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York—Chicago

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a.

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote, 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p.m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cts. per night; $3 per week.

Two occupants, 50 cts. each, per night.

2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL

Phone Spruce 33-55.

Clerk.

SEED POTATOES 500,000 BUSHELS FOR SALE CHEAP

Largest seed potato growers in the world!
Elegant stock. Tremendous yields.
From 400 to 1000 bushels per acre.

FOR 10 CENTS

and this notice we send you lots of farm seed samples and big catalogue, telling all about Teosinte, Speltz, Peasat, Aerid Land Barley, Macaroni Wheat, Bromus, Earliest Cane, etc. Send for same today.

JOHN A. SALZER.
SEED CO. LA CROSSE, WIS.

THE best easy chairs for old age are bought early. They are called endowments.

Get particulars free.

No importunity.

PENN MUTUAL LIFE

921-3-5 Chestnut Street.

EDUCATIONAL.

EARLHAM COLLEGE,

RICHMOND,
INDIANA

Prof. Elbert Russell offers courses regularly in Kings, New Testament Times, Life of Christ, The Apostolic Age, Church History, New Testament Literature, Romans, John, Biblical Literature, Isaiah. Prof. Cyrus W. Hodgkin, The Protestant Reformation.

Prof. Anna M. Demaree, New Testament, Greek. Asst. Prof. Lindley, History of the Hebrews. Pres. Kelly, History of Philosophy, Ethics, Psychology.

The Oakwood Seminary

UNION SPRINGS, N. Y.

Founded in 1796.

A boarding school for boys and girls under the care of New York Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Academic, College Preparatory and Commercial

Spring term begins Fourth month 5, 1904

SAMUEL H. HODGIN,
Principal.LINDLEY M. STEVENS,
Superintendent.

WHITTIER COLLEGE

Classical, Scientific and Literary courses. Highest requirements. Students unable to continue their studies in more rigorous climes will find this climate the best in the world for study. Natural advantages for scientific investigation unsurpassed. Well equipped laboratory. Whittier, a Friend's community, —morally clean,—no saloons or kindred sources of corruption. For catalogue address,

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, President.

Stenography, Typewriting,
Mimeographing and Reporting

LYDIA ARETE CONN,

805 Provident Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

SHORTHAND TAUGHT BY MAIL

or in school. Each student receives personal attention. Moderate rates. Write for full information.

PROVIDENT SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND

805 Provident Building Philadelphia, Pa.

STENOGRAPHING, TYPEWRITING and
MIMEOGRAPHING. Prices moderate.

MARY M. KITE

407 Lippincott Building, 12th and Filbert Sts., Phila.

Phone No. 3-33-00

"The less religion one has himself the more he misses it in other people."

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA. Office, 409 CHESTNUT STREET

CAPITAL, $1,000,000

ASSETS, $63,970,335.34

Surplus and Undivided Profits, belonging to Stockholders 4,026,151.15

Surplus, belonging to Insurance Account 5,635,620.25

Incorporated Third month 22, 1865. Charter Perpetual.

INSURES LIVES, GRANTS ANNUITIES, RECEIVES MONEY ON DEPOSIT, returnable on demand for which interest is allowed.

And is empowered by law to act as EXECUTOR ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, GUARDIAN, ASSIGNEE, COMMITTEE, RECEIVER, AGENT, etc.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the assets of the Company.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.

BOXES $5 AND UPWARDS

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY, President.

T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-Prest.

ASA S. WING, Vice-President.

JOS. ASHBROOK, Man. Ins. Dept.

SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer.

J. R. FOULKE, Trust Officer.

DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary.

J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Assistant Trust Officer

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary.

DIRECTORS:

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY,
T. WISTAR BROWN,
HENRY HAINES,
RICHARD WOOD,
CHAS. HARTSHORNE,

ASA S. WING,
PHILIP C. GARRETT,
JAMES V. WATSON,
WM. LONGSTRETH,
THOS. SCATTERGOOD,

J. PRESTON THOMAS,
ROBERT M. JANNEY,
MARRIOTT C. MORRIS,
FRANK H. TAYLOR,
JOSEPH B. TOWNSEND, JR.

FLORIDA AND THE CAROLINAS—
WINTER RESORTS.

Palm Beach, Miami, Daytona, Tampa, Jacksonville, Camden, Southern Pines, Pinehurst are quickly and most conveniently reached via the Seaboard Air Line. Three daily trains in each direction, including the Seaboard Florida Limited, the handsomest and quickest train in the Florida service. Tourist tickets on sale daily, with stop-over privileges. For description, booklets and information, address W. E. Conklyn, General Agent, 1411 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Delavau's Remedy

A SPECIFIC FOR

Whooping Cough and Croup

Also a safe and speedy cure for Bronchitis, Bronchial Catarrh and ordinary coughs. 50 Cents a Bottle, at Druggists, or

J. W. S. DELAVAU & CO., Propr's.
N. E. Cor. 6th and Wood Sts., Phila.

OSTEOPATHY

EDWARD D. BURLEIGH
ALEXANDER STETSON

Osteopathic Physician, 1537 Chestnut St., Room 401.

Hours, 9 a.m. to 12.30 p.m. and 2 to 4 p.m.

Bell Telephone

Consultation free.

S. F. BALDERSTON'S SON

Wall Paper and
Decorations

Window Shades Made to Order

302 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILA.

Acker has it—that French
Breakfast Coffee.

GREGORY

Good seed assure good gardens. Gregory's seeds have been the favorites of gardeners and florists for 40 years.

Always successful.

Send for our free catalogue, telling about our three warrants on seeds.

J. J. H.
Gregory & Son,
Marblehead, Mass.

Gardens

Friendship is the nearest thing we know to what religion is.—Henry Drummond.

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

GLUTEN FLOUR For DYSPEPSIA.

SPECIAL DIABETIC FLOUR.

K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR.

Unlike all other foods. Ask Grocers.

For book or sample write

Farwell & Rhines, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

BREAD MACHINE

For Household Use.

Sifts the flour and mixes
20 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for booklet. Agents wanted.
Scientific Bread Mach. Co.
(CYRUS CHAMBERS, JR.)
52d & Media Sts., Philadelphia

WILLIAM S. YARNALL
Manufacturing OPTICIAN118 S. FIFTEENTH ST., PHILA.
4th Door Below Chestnut St.

A. M. ADAMS, PRINTING

230 N. Twelfth St., Philadelphia.

BELL TELEPHONE.

EMINENT PHYSICIANS
throughout the world recommendQUINA-
LAROCHÉ

AS A SPECIFIC IN CASES OF ANÆMIA, GOLDS, LA GRIPE,
SLOW CONVALESCENCE,
STOMACH TROUBLES,
TYPHOID and MALARIAL
FEVERS.

E. Fougera & Co., 30 N. William St., N. Y.

SUBSCRIBE!

OLD-FASHIONED grandfather clocks repaired at home. If yours needs attention send me a postal or, better, call. My store is within three minutes' walk of the Market Street ferries. Repairing of clocks and watches of every kind. Prompt service and moderate prices. W. L. Berry, Watchmaker and Jeweler, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

NEW SONG BOOK.—"Gold Tried in the Fire." One of the best song books on the market for church, Sunday school and evangelistic work. Bound in limp cloth and contains over 200 songs. Sells for $15.00 per hundred. 20 cents a copy. Published by Friends. BROWN BROS., Indianapolis, Indiana.

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER.—Careful and accurate repairing, with prompt service, has brought me the custom of many Friends. Their patronage is particularly solicited. My store is nearest to the Market Street ferries, and is easy of access from every part of the city. W. L. Berry, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

WANTED.—A thousand families of "Friends" and others to come west and buy land in Woods county, Oklahoma, while you can get good farms at half their value. Rich valley land near Friends' meeting, Stella Academy, railroad and good market. In the great wheat and alfalfa belt, and fruit in abundance, the best part of Oklahoma. Warm, healthy climate, with splendid society. Write us for circulars and price lists. References, Pastor "Friends" Church, First National Bank of Cherokee. Very truly, VOTAW and SETZER, "Friends."

STENOGRAPHER

GEO. B. COCK

Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter Street.

Telephones.

FINANCIAL.

6% to 7% Choice First Mortgage Loans, Seattle and vicinity. Local and N. Y. references. Established 1887. Correspondence Solicited. JAMES BOTHWELL, Seattle, Washington.

6% NET Sound, conservative first mortgages on improved realty. We examine every security and know every borrower. We make our loans with our own money and turn them over complete. In 28 years we have learned how to select the best. No one now handling western mortgages has had more experience. We give you the benefit of that experience. The quality of the securities now on hand has never been surpassed. Highest references. Write for circulars and full information free. PERKINS & COMPANY Lawrence, Kan.

FREE-MILLING GOLD MINES

Having large ore bodies accessible for cheap mining, where the simplest and cheapest process will turn the ore into gold bars at the mines, are always winners, and head the list for large and regular dividend-payers. The reason is that mining under such conditions resolves itself into a stable manufacturing business, Free-milling GOLD Ore, the raw material, and GOLD BARS, the finished product. With the element of uncertainty connected with the treatment of refractory ores eliminated, the results can be as accurately computed as in the manufacture of coke and sugar, and only requires judicious management to make it absolutely A Safe and Profitable Investment. An opportunity for such an investment is now offered by

THE PAN-TONOPAH MINING & EXPLORATION COMPANY

who have enormous, well-developed bodies of absolutely free-milling GOLD Ore at their Silver Star Mines, near Sodaville, Nevada. Mill run values $5.00 to $80.00 per ton. Estimated $3,000,000 of ore in sight. United States Mint returns show $300,000 from present mill on property, by former owners. A limited amount of stock is offered at 25 cents per share to increase capacity of mill to 100 tons. Write for Prospectus and Letters of Endorsement from eminent mining experts, bankers and editors. Address the Company, at 5-7 E. 42d Street, New York City

ELIAS G. MINERD, Secretary. ARLEND MARINE, Treasurer.

Mortgages Net 6% in North Dakota

THEY are the best, gilt-edged, rock-ribbed, guaranteed 6% investment in America. Safe as government bonds and pay better.

I have been selling these mortgages for 18 years, and have never had to foreclose, and never lost a cent of principal or interest for a single customer.

I personally know every farm covered by the mortgages, as well as the farmers giving them. I know them both to be right, or I have nothing to do with them. Their land is increasing in value every day, thus increasing the value of the security.

I collect both the interest and principal free, and remit in New York exchange, without the least trouble or bother of the customer.

I will be pleased to put you in the way of finding out all about me. Write me for further information.

WALTER L. WILLIAMSON

Investment Banker

LISBON, NORTH DAKOTA

Your Fortune Told

not by aid of magic, nor occult science, but the principles of thrift and foresight induced through Life Insurance. The man who secures an Endowment Policy now lays the foundation of future competence.

THE PRUDENTIAL

INSURANCE CO. OF AMERICA.

JOHN F. DRYDEN,
Pres.Home Office
NEWARK,
N. J.

Send Coupon for Information.

Without committing myself to any action I shall be glad to receive free, particulars and rates of Endowment Policies.

For.....

Name..... Age.....

Address.....

Occupation..... Dept. 67.

HOOPING-COUGH AND CROUP.

Roche's Herbal Embrocation
The celebrated and effectual English Cure without internal medicine. Proprietors, W. EDWARDS & SON, Queen Victoria St., London, England. Wholesale of E. Fougere & Co., 30 North William Street, N. Y.

The American Friend

Vol. XI

THIRD MONTH 3, 1904

No. 9

EARLHAM COLLEGE
LIBRARY.

	PAGE
EDITORIALS.—“Soul Food.” — Talking About “Quakerism.” — Editorial Notes	139-140
The Problem of World-Wide Evangel- ization	140
Thomas Newlin.
“That They All May Be One”	142
E. M. B.
The Faith That Saves	143
Theodore L. Cuyler.
SOME VIEWS ON PRESENT TOPICS:
The Church at Play	144
Samuel Dwiggins Coffin	145
TEMPERANCE DEPARTMENT	146
THE INTERNATIONAL LESSON	148
Lesson for Third month 13, 1904.
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR	149
Topic for Third month 13, 1904.
MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT	150
THINGS OF INTEREST AMONG OURSELVES, .	150
MARRIED.—DIED	152
EVENTS AND COMMENTS	153

“WHEN THOU PRAYEST.”

*Be still and listen,—plain not of thy griefs,
Nor yet with blessing-greedy mouth implore;
Think calmly what thou wilt, and God above
Wills to accomplish through thee even more.*

*What wilt thou for the poor that go unfed,
Or for the staying up of fainting hands?
What for the wronged, the lonely, or the blind,
And for thy neighbor in benighted lands?*

*Remember thine own need of charity,
Of patience, and of aim; resolve the way
To win thy best desire for those beloved,—
Then ope thy casement to the East, and pray:*

*“Help me to help thee, Lord, by answering
My prayers myself at every time and place,—
Accept my heart, not as a beggar born,
But as thy soldier at the gates of Grace!”*

—By MARTHA GILBERT DICKINSON BIANCHI, in Sunday School Times.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.50 A YEAR ❁ ❁ ❁ PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
AMERICAN FRIEND PUBLISHING COMPANY, 718 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA

EDUCATIONAL.

EARLHAM COLLEGE,RICHMOND,
INDIANA

Prof. Elbert Russell offers courses regularly in Kings, New Testament Times, Life of Christ, The Apostolic Age, Church History, New Testament Literature, Romans, John, Biblical Literature, Isaiah.

Prof. Cyrus W. Hodgkin, The Protestant Reformation.

Prof. Anna M. Demaree, New Testament, Greek.

Asst. Prof. Lindley, History of the Hebrews.

Pres. Kelly, History of Philosophy, Ethics, Psychology.

The Oakwood Seminary

UNION SPRINGS, N. Y.

Founded in 1796.

A boarding school for boys and girls under the care of New York Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Academic, College Preparatory and Commercial

Spring term begins Fourth month 5, 1904

SAMUEL H. HODGIN,
Principal.LINDLEY M. STEVENS,
Superintendent.Stenography, Typewriting,
Mimeographing and Reporting

LYDIA ARETE CONN,

805 Provident Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

SHORTHAND TAUGHT BY MAIL

or in school. Each student receives personal attention. Moderate rates. Write for full information.

PROVIDENT SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND

805 Provident Building Philadelphia, Pa.

STENOGRAPHING, TYPEWRITING and
MIMEOGRAPHING. Prices moderate.

MARY M. KITE

407 Lippincott Building, 12th and Filbert Sts., Phila.

Phone No. 3-33-00

"In hot weather even a straw hat is felt."

The

New Century

TYPEWRITER

does the BEST WORK and lots of it, EASILY.

Strong, Thoroughly Built,
Superior in results to any other.

Write for

"THE BOOK OF THE NEW CENTURY."

AMERICAN WRITING MACHINE COMPANY,
1033 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

A. M. ADAMS, PRINTING

230 N. Twelfth St., Philadelphia.

BELL TELEPHONE.

BUSHIDO
The Soul of JAPAN

An Exposition of Japanese Thought, by Inazo Nitobe, A.M., Ph.D., Professor in the Imperial College, Sapporo, Japan. Price, postpaid, white leatherette cover, 75 cents; bound in cloth, $1.00.

THE LEEDS & BIDDLE CO., Inc.

1019-21 Market St., Phila.

The ordinary yellow laundry soap may do well enough for scrubbing and for the coarser work in the laundry, but to get a clear snow white in the linens and muslins, to save the costly embroideries and the sheer and delicate fabrics, to avoid the unpleasant odor that is often so perceptible in the towels and bed linen, use Ivory Soap, a pure soap, made of only the cleanest, best materials.

Ivory Soap—99 $\frac{4}{100}$ Per Cent. Pure.

Acker has them—those 80c.
Bon Bons at 39c.

Penn's Treaty with the Indians

on India paper; engraving 23 inches by 18 inches, on sheets 30 inches by 24 inches; from the original Boydell engraved plate made in 1775 from the original painting of Benjamin West. $3.00 by mail.

A. L. SMITH

29 E. Penn St., Germantown, Phila., Pa.

The American Friend

*"Truth is the highest thing a man may keep."
"That they all may be one."*

VOL. XI.

PHILADELPHIA, THIRD MONTH 3, 1904.

No. 9.

"SOUL FOOD."

WE occasionally receive letters requesting us to give more "soul food" and less discussion of problems. We always feel a good degree of sympathy with persons who make such requests, for they earnestly want their souls enlarged. They want it done, however, in the easiest possible way. They desire something which will give a satisfying, emotional state, and to which the inner man can quietly say, "Yes, that is what I want." It would be a pleasant task to write articles which would give our readers a happy tone of mind, and which would make them say, "How true, how satisfying!" If one really made this his aim it would not be a very difficult task. Writings which usually receive the name of "soul food" are not hard to produce.

Then why not produce them? Why not fill these columns with such "soul food"? Simply because that is not the way to make souls grow and expand. The Psalmist prays to be led by "level brooks" and in "green pastures," where the food is thick and no climbing is necessary. But before he can say, "Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life," he has climbed mountains and walked deep valleys; he has had his table set in the presence of enemies; he has found his cup full and running over even when he faced the arduous difficulties of actual life. There is no easy, comfortable way of feeding souls. Nice little articles which say pretty things and which demand no mental effort will not do it. On the contrary, in time, they will well nigh unfit them for any true expansion. It is too much like bringing up children on predigested food so that the digestive organs shall have no strain. It is such easy food to assimilate. Yes, but by it the digestive apparatus will be destroyed by lack of opportunity to function.

Souls grow and enlarge by grappling with the actual situations of life in honest, earnest, manly fashion. Spirituality is not something which can be supplied from the outside. It is not something apart from life—something to be picked up and laid down. It is the soul's inward fiber. It is the quality and stuff of the life itself. How to get it is the question. It can be got only by going to work in Christ's name and in the power of His Spirit to help bring the Kingdom of God. But the moment you undertake to do this you find yourself in a world full of problems. Is it better to do this, or to do that? That is a problem. Any person who wants to help a man become spiritual in the true sense must go to work to help him see his problems, make him see how much deeper and richer and more complex life is than he dreamed. Set him to work to straighten out some little tangle in the great web of life. Get him actually hold of life as it is with all its snarl and confusion and make him realize that he is to become spiritual by bringing order and harmony into it—by making Christ prevail in a spot where He did not prevail before.

We have no right to sit at a desk and write off reams of "soul food." It is not our call or commission. Our task is to help human beings realize their lives, to deal with these same complicated problems of the world, to take our share of the struggle and toil, and to indicate some of the ways by which we can help make Christ prevail. One of Christ's great temptations was to feed Himself by easy ways. He refused it—"Man does not live by bread alone." A disciple interrupted Him when He was doing His Father's business and offered Him food. At once the answer came, "My meat is to do the will of Him that sent me." There is no other answer for any of us. The soul is fed as it co-operates with God in the tasks which are set for it to do. If we want soul food we must learn to prize the situations which He calls upon us to conquer, the hard problems which we are here to solve, the battles which will be won as we quit ourselves like men, or lost as we lie sleeping at our posts, expecting Him to win them without us.

TALKING ABOUT "QUAKERISM."

ANOTHER gentle criticism sometimes comes to our notice—namely, that too much is said about "Quakerism." Why not talk rather of the salvation of men, of the spread of the gospel, or of the great work of reform which so urgently needs the thought of all earnest men? From one point of view this feeling is both natural and right. It is a mistake for us always to be talking about our own selves, feeling our own pulse and studying our own symptoms. We have, as a denomination, been too much concerned with our own affairs, our own standing, our peculiarities. We have held the mirror up to our own faces too much.

Then, too, it is well to realize that a religious denomination is not an end in itself—it is only a means to a larger end. It is wrong, always wrong, to make so much of one particular fold that we forget the other sheep of the Divine Shepherd, or, worse still, that we forget the great mass of men who have not yet been brought into any fold. But, on the other hand, it must be remembered that the work of the world—even God's work—must be done through some kind of organization. No satisfactory substitute has yet been discovered for the organized church. Remove that or let it fall to pieces, and at once one of the mightiest means of spiritualizing the world would vanish. Individual faithfulness is good as far as it goes, but it will not take the place of the organized spiritual group. Now these spiritual groups must be organized on some fundamental principles. It is as impossible to get a powerful church body without structural principles as it is to get an active physical body without a skeleton. There must be something there that builds the body into one, something which unifies it and gives it solidity.

That means that somebody must care very much indeed for these things. They must be talked about, examined, proclaimed, explained and magnified. Quakerism is for us Christianity. It is not a sect or party or creed, which exists alongside of Christianity. It is Christianity, as we believe it ought to be interpreted in this year of grace, 1904. If we did not believe that we should have no right to exist apart. We ought, then, to unite with a larger body which is interpreting the true Christian message better. At present we fail to discover any organization which we feel ought to supplant our own. Therefore we continue our individual existence. So long as we exist as an organization for carrying on Christ's work we are bound to become as efficient as possible and to make our work as effective as possible. Nations that expect to go to war do not talk about remote and abstract things. They talk about improving the navy, about the kind of rifle which will do the deadliest work. They count these things patriotism, and they are often on the lips of those who claim to be patriots.

Our work is salvation. Our supreme business is to spiritualize the world. But we cannot do much by talking of these things in the abstract. It is to be done through organized groups—called by us Friends' meetings. We are bound to consider how these meetings can be made effective—as our dear fathers would say how the "state of society" can be improved. We must look upon our church as a means to a great divine end. We must believe in it, work for it, plan for it, love it and sacrifice for it, if we expect to enlarge the fold of the one Shepherd.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE news of the death of Professor Charles E. Michner, of Penn College, has just reached us. He was stricken down with pneumonia and taken from his important field of service with startling suddenness. The loss to Penn College and to Iowa Yearly Meeting is very great, and everybody who has come under his influence will share in the loss. He was one of that faithful band who, through storm and sun, have stood by Penn College. The love and devotion which these pillar Friends have manifested to the cause of education in Iowa would touch any sensitive heart. It is in these days of commercialism inspiring and encouraging. Nothing but death could have freed him from his service and consecration to his college, and all who know will say, "He fought a good fight."

THE "Philadelphia Ledger" has announced the death of William B. Morgan, for many years professor in Earlham College. His home was at Lowell, Kansas. He was a graduate of Haverford College, and for half a century has taken a leading part in the educational work of Friends in the Middle West. We shall give a fuller account of his valuable life later.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

THE PROBLEM OF WORLD-WIDE EVANGELIZATION.

BY THOMAS NEWLIN.

Christianity is essentially a missionary religion. The sole object is to spread the kingdom. The problem, however, is much larger than personal salvation. The heaven must permeate and change society in all its parts. "Religion's all or nothing." Missionary work to some minds means Africa or India. The present thought is world-wide—our own neighborhood, Africa and India, and all between and beyond. When the spirit of Andrew, who immediately sought for and found his brother, and the motto of Paul, who said, "I press toward the goal,"—when this spirit possesses Christians, the problem will soon melt away and the solution will be at hand. When the great Duke was asked whether it was worth while to preach the gospel in India, his reply was: "What are your marching orders?" Wellington knew how to obey, even if it led him to death. There is no reason to believe that the plan of the ages has been changed. "Go ye" was sounded in the ears of the first disciples, and the echo has not yet died away. Indifference, disobedience and cowardice alone can defeat any local church, any missionary society or the Church at large. The timid and fearful and selfish are asking, "Must I do this?" "Must I go there?" The answer comes with tenderness and sadness, "No, not must, you may." There is no personal compulsion, but we are met with a positive alternative, for if we do not occupy our proper field and do our duty, the candlestick will be removed and we will be left in darkness.

We need to take a wide survey of the field. First when we look backward to see how things used to be in the early Church, or in the history of our local meeting, or in our own experience, we will find times when we felt willing to build tabernacles, and we will see how great a work consecrated Christian service has done. Is it not now time that some of us were doing our first work?

Then we should look around us and see that every successful work, whether in commerce or politics or religion, is carried on by enthusiasm and personal supervision. Christ dealt with concrete cases and personal contact, as with Peter, Andrew, Nicodemus, the woman at the well. The world is full of opportunities for this hand-to-hand work. Nothing else succeeds when men are to be won. The politician solicits votes, the school advertises and invites pupils to attend, the commercial agent seeks his merchandise, but too often the Church puts its lamp under a bushel instead of on the lamp stand.

But we must look up also. So many Christians fail to see the stars of hope. When we look up we will see Christ to be the same sympathetic helper that history shows Him to have been when He was among men. We forget our source of strength, and, like the prophet, we fancy we alone are true, and then we go and get under a juniper tree and the work languishes. Look up; never forget that God is good and powerful, and that He comes to the rescue of every intelligent, honest effort.

We need, also, to take a forward look to see what can be done for our constituency, whether that constituency be a local church, a Sabbath School or a missionary field. The disposition to let things work themselves out, to allow circumstances to suggest methods has been the death of many a movement.

Christian work must be organized and carefully looked after, just as much as a commercial enterprise. In many places we are too afraid of organizing and equipping our work and workers. I do not fear creaturely activity nearly so much as creaturely indifference and indolence. The spirit that said "Set Barnabas and Saul apart for me for the work to which I have called them," will still through the agency of the Church, separate men and women for the work which needs to be done. In too many places those who are called and qualified for service still have to serve tables, and through necessity God's message is neglected. A division of sympathy and responsibility is splendid and apostolic, but a division of work generally results in neglected service. The corn field must belong to some person; the factory must be superintended; the flock must have a shepherd. The division of labor in the material world has forced upon us a new system in church work. The Church is too apt to fall back on a doctrine or a testimony and ignore the facts of society around them. Our forefathers did not use electricity nor commercial fertilizer, but modern society has found a large place for these. Shall we ignore these and plead a conscience against their use? It would seem as reasonable to do so as to reject some modern methods of reaching those who take no interest in religious matters. The question should be met and answered, "What do these people need?" "What are the demands of the day?"

The field is much more comprehensive than many have yet conceived. The fundamental institutions of society are divine. The home, the State, the Church, the school and industrial life each and all present a proper sphere for Christian activity. Christian loyalty in each of these would regenerate society. It is very important to believe, in the first place, that the world is the subject of redemption. The Church is much more than a place to hear sermons, to pray, to sing and get ready to go to heaven. It is the leaven for the whole of society. Why did Christ come to earth? "That the world through Him might be saved." We must get back to the ideal of Christ and attack the problem in this faith and spirit. More must be claimed for Christ. The kingdom has come and is coming to a greater degree than has been generally recognized. If we go back to the fall of the Roman Empire, history will show us that there was then no sense of right, no idea of charity. But the Spirit who was sent to convict the world of righteousness, has been doing His work all through the ages. Homer shows Achilles to be a hero, but he would not be so considered now. Humane Titus, who is called a good ruler, crucified thousands of Jews. A good ruler would not do so now. Marcus Aurelius delighted in the arena where men and beasts fought to a finish. The second city in America stops its festivities in the holiday season; all political and commercial enterprises stop to listen to the iron tone of the funeral bells that marked the sorrow on the accidental death of a few hundred; but since the dawn of the Christian era the Roman Emperor Claudius, who personally knew of the origin of Christianity, sacrificed the lives of 19,000 innocent persons by purposefully sinking the vessels in a naval battle to gratify the brutal instinct at a holiday feast. We mourn because things are not better to-day. We surely can make no boasts of progress of righteousness, but we can rejoice that the Spirit of Jesus Christ has so permeated human society as to change the whole face of civilization.

Progress has been so slow because of the wrong conceptions of life and duty. I am glad to send this word of hope to Christian workers everywhere. I am aware of sin; I know that wickedness is rampant and bold, but I believe in God, and the purpose of Jesus Christ, and I have faith in men. Nothing less should satisfy us than satisfied Jesus Christ, "that they all may be one." We need larger ideals; we need to get visions of what can be done. We need to face the situation in our own homes, in our own communities, organize the work, separate and equip the workers. Christian ability always accompanies religious duty. Meetings in some places are dead or dying, but God is not dead. The work of vitalizing every community where there is a nucleus of a church, with Christian activity I believe is practicable. The wonders of this marvelous age ought to inspire us with enthusiasm for the work. In many places the work of socializing will come first. Christianity cannot be organized except through social units. This will take careful and intelligent leadership. This will take the best thought of Christians. It will also take their money, their sympathy and their prayers. World-wide evangelization begins at home, but does not end there. God always helps the weak. There is danger of expecting too much victory. Life is not a victory, but a battle; and victories only come after hard fighting. We need to hurl our shields into the ranks of our enemies, and, like the ancient heroes, fight our way to them. It is not on account of our intelligence or our goodness that God is on our side, but on account of our needs. We may shirk duty and evade responsibility, but we cannot get away from God's love.

Guilford College, N. C.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

"THAT THEY ALL MAY BE ONE."

BY E. M. B.

Readers of THE AMERICAN FRIEND will remember, or can refer to, the editorial in issue of First month 14th, asking the question, "Are Friends Interested in Quakerism?"

While this is a direct question, it hardly admits of a direct answer. We may reply, "Yes, with some exceptions," or, "Not as much as would be best." To go back to the earlier Friends in this country, it now seems, in the light of present-day toleration, that some were open to the charge of preaching Quakerism as Christianity itself, instead of as an exponent of Christianity. How often do we hear it said, as we compare the present with the past, "I used to think it was wrong to go to any other meeting but Friends." An elder among Friends said to me the other day that he never went to any other meeting till he was thirteen years old, and then, without permission, he went to a Methodist meeting; not that he cared for that or any other preaching, but because he liked to hear the singing, having none at his own meeting. He added that he "felt mean" all the time, believing the restriction to be a proper one, and that he was a truant; like a boy who runs away from school to go to a circus, he experienced a guilty pleasure.

We have grown out of all that, and in the right direction, it would seem; for what else did Christ mean when He said, "Other sheep have I which are not of this fold," and prayed that they all might be one. He taught that there were under shepherds, and He the head—all were one in Him, as He in the Father.

We of to-day understand (at least Christians of good manners do) that we are not to go to other folds and take out sheep to add to ours; but we are to go out into the wilderness and up the steep mountain sides and gather in the stray sheep. Each sheep knows the voice of his own shepherd.

Friends have been careful about proselyting, which is an unworthy form of church extension. But let them not go to the other extreme—sitting at ease and complacently ignoring all outside the charmed circle.

Loyalty to our own denomination is one thing; it is an imperative duty; yet the great Christian Endeavor movement has taught us that this loyalty is consistent with the widest fellowship and closest unity with our Christian brethren.

To the thoughtful observer, it appears, however, in many instances, that the escape from narrowness is into dangerous license. "Latitudinarianism" is a long word, but it is short in comparison with the duration of some evils, which, like the poor, we have always with us.

The interests of Zion are of the first importance. Let worldliness come in to cloud the vision and bias the judgment, and all our time-honored traditions are set at naught. Hear the voice that says, "Bring me no more vain oblations." True, it is easier to point out the evil than to provide the remedy.

One writer says that "some vices are virtues gone to seed." The vice of parsimony is economy gone to seed. May it not also be true that the habit of thinking, each for himself, which is so commendable, may tend to diversity of action, where unity is most essential? Does not the spirit of conformity to the world (a spirit so insidious in its approach) often come in the guise of concessions for the sake of keeping, as we say, our young people from straying away, defeat its own ends in countless ways? We know that in our towns and cities, where this conformity is the most prevalent, the proportion of young people to others, in attendance is less than in rural communities.

Much has been said, in our select and open meetings, urging that young people should attend the business meetings of the church. To ensure this the habit must be formed in childhood. They cannot, later, be coerced into it; they must grow into it, and learn, as they do at school, to be interested in church affairs as they are in school affairs.

My object is not to write an exhaustive article; the field of discussion is too wide for one pair of eyes. We are divinely counseled to "contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints." Is Quakerism that faith? Then all other sects ought to give up their peculiar tenets in order to be defenders of Quakerism. The true and living faith in "God the Father, God the Son,

In God the Spirit; Three in One,"

is the theme of the eleventh chapter of Hebrews, that inspired and inspiring record of victorious faith.

Do we believe that there are only two classes of persons in the world—the saved and the unsaved? Shall we answer to earthly names in the heavenly world? No, for each will be given a new name. "And we will walk in the name of the Lord our God, forever and ever." (Micah 4: 5.)

The churches in Ephesus, in Smyrna, in Pergamos, in Sardis, each received a little praise, each an admonition. But to the one in Philadelphia was given this tribute: "Thou hast kept my word and hast not denied my name." There have been towering names in the past even since apostolic days. Like mountain peaks stand aloft the names of George Fox, John Wesley, Martin Luther. Many are their adherents, and rightly so. But "at the name of Jesus every knee shall bow." And "there is no other name given under heaven among men, whereby we must be saved."

"In the cross of Christ I glory,
Towering o'er the wrecks of time;
All the light of human story
Gathers 'round His head sublime."

Westfield, Ind.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

THE FAITH THAT SAVES.

BY THEODORE L. CUYLER.

"When I was in college," said Dr. B——, "one of my professors tried hard to explain faith to me. But it was a muddle until I came and trusted my soul to Jesus Christ. When I did it I understood it." It is the simplicity of faith that often puzzles people. They are discussing a doctrine, when they ought to be doing an act. They worry their brains when they ought to be yielding their hearts.

Faith is sometimes defined as an assent to the truth of the gospel which God has given us. But this is an intellectual act that is not sufficient to save a soul. Intellectual belief in the gospel is entertained by millions without the slightest penitence for sin or the least step towards following Christ. There are plenty of intellectual believers in that world of woe where "the devils also believe—and tremble!" Faith has also been defined as "taking God at His word." A very important mental act is this, too; but does any "word" of our Heavenly Father save our souls? Did the apostles ever preach "believe the word and be saved?"

Paul and Silas were confronted by the mightiest question that ever agitates a human soul, when that poor jailer of Philippi lay trembling before them. They did not stop to expound a doctrine; they enforced a deed; they did not point to a system of truth, but to a personal Saviour. To an almighty Person, a loving, compassionate Person, to a Divine Person whose atoning blood cleanseth from sin. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." Not in Christianity, but on Jesus Christ. That is what they told the jailer.

Mark that little and yet supremely great word on. It is not enough to believe in Christ. Millions of unconverted people believe in Jesus, just as they believe in Howard as a noble philanthropist, and in Washington as a pure patriot, and in Newton as a profound philosopher. But they do not trust their souls to Jesus. They do not rest on Him for salvation; they do not build their characters on Him as the only foundation.

One of the survivors from the terrible burning of a great hotel tells us that when he was driven back by the flames in the hall, he seized the escape-rope in his bedroom, and from an upper story he lowered himself through the smoke down to the sidewalk. He had seen that rope before, but had felt no need of it. He had a good opinion of the strength of the rope, but it was only an opinion; he put it to the test when he swung out of the window and trusted his life to it. Now that was a saving faith; he let go of everything else and committed his whole weight to those well-braided strands of hemp. And when a human soul lets go of every other reliance in the wide universe and lays hold of the sin-atoning Redeemer for salvation, that soul "believes on Christ." He entrusts himself to Jesus for pardon, for acceptance with God, for grace, for strength, for guidance, and for a full salvation.

Some anxious inquirer who reads this article may say that if Paul told the jailer to believe on Jesus Christ, the Apostle Peter had previously told a company of sinners who were "pricked in their hearts" that their first duty was to "repent." Very true; and, my friend, it is your duty also if you would have a new life here and an eternal life hereafter. But just what is genuine and Scriptural and effectual repentance? Is it sorrow for sin? Yes; but it is a vast deal more than that. It is the act of a soul that with not only a sorrow for sin, but hatred of sin, turns from it to God with an earnest endeavor to obey and follow Jesus Christ. Evangelical repentance and faith go together. They are inseparable. They are the two halves of one globe. Sorrow, shame, self-reproach will all end in nothing unless you lay hold of Him who alone can give you the new life, the new character and the new conduct. Is the Holy Spirit working upon your heart? Yes; and you must move whither He points; He is pressing you right towards Christ.

Repentance is more than a mere feeling; it is an act. Saving faith is more than an opinion, or a good resolution, or a devout purpose. It is the act of yielding your heart up to the sin-atoning and loving Saviour, and joining your soul to Him as your Redeemer and Lord. When Jesus Christ called Peter and James and John, He said to them, "Follow Me!" They did not sit down and cry; they did not consult anybody; they did not promise the Christ that they would at some future day obey Him. Straightway they left their nets and followed Him. There, my friend, is the example for you. Begin to do the first thing that the Spirit working on your conscience bids you do. When you honestly take any steps either in abandoning a sin, or in doing a duty, and do this simply to please Jesus Christ, then conversion has begun. You have changed masters. To be willing to trust on Christ, and to go with Christ even for a single important step is the beginning of a genuine Christian life.

Have you a little faith? Use what you have and pray for more. Christ will help you when you begin to follow Him, as a child that is learning how to walk. Don't be satisfied with half-way work; no number of half-Christians can make a whole one. Make a clean break with your old sins and old self, and lay firm hold on the almighty Saviour. There was a good deal of pith in the answer of an humble servant-maid, who, when applying for admission to the church, was asked by her pastor what evidence she had of her conversion? Her reply was, "Well, for one thing, I sweep now under the rugs and the door-mats." The fatal mischief with some professors of religion is that they have left a sad amount of sin and selfishness under the door-mats. "Faith without works is dead." The only proof you can give that you are trusting on Christ and following Christ is that you begin to keep Christ's commandments.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

Some Views on Present Topics.

THE CHURCH AT PLAY.

BY MEAD A. KELSEY.

"The people sat down to eat and to drink and rose up to play." Ex. 32: 6.

An observer of the times has said that "The evil which now imperils the Church is the substitution of social forces for spiritual ones," which so accords with my own view of the present situation that I have felt prompted to speak upon this subject. What I have to say falls naturally into two parts: The Church at play for fun, and the Church at play for money.

THE CHURCH AT PLAY FOR FUN.

And now, lest my position should be misunderstood, let me say at the outset that I believe there is a social life which rightly belongs to Christian fellowship. The need was recognized under the Mosaic order in the provision for religious feasts, and in the early Church it found its satisfaction in the agape, or love feast, and kindred occasions. And in our day I not only see no harm, but positive good, in Christians meeting socially and eating together, providing, of course, that the conversation, the program, if there is one, and the conduct are becoming those professing godliness. And as regards our young people, I have always felt that good, wholesome recreation was essential to their well-being, and being aware that the devil always stands ready to snare them with an unlawful gratification of a natural desire, I hold that the Church may safely encourage wisely-conceived and wisely-directed plans for their social intermingling. But after all is said, the social adjunct needs the very best spiritual management afforded by the Church, or else we will find it running away with the very interests it was meant to conserve.

That this is true is witnessed by the condition of many churches to which we can point to-day. Beginning with simple social gatherings, harmless and even healthful in themselves, they have crossed the almost indefinable line between the lawful and the unlawful, and have dashed away into the arena of worldly amusements, becoming actual rivals of the world in pursuit of fun and frolic. Things religious are excluded. They are out of harmony with the occasion, and not to the taste of the unconverted. If an occasional innovation is made it is frowned upon. What the world and worldly church members want is a jolly time, and the employments of heaven and of the redeemed are out of place.

But some one lays a hand upon me and says: "Friend, you forget that we are doing this simply to hold the unconverted, hoping that eventually we will be able to save them and bring them into the Church." I admit the possible purity of the motive, but it reminds me of a preacher in a Western city, who went to one of the leading hotels Seventh-day night and played billiards with a traveling man till a late hour. Then, turning to the man, he said: "I have played billiards with you to-night, now you come out and hear me preach to-morrow." How did the traveling man take it? Only as a huge joke to be repeated over and over again with the preacher who tried to catch him over the billiard table. Old birds are not caught with chaff, and sinners are not taken for God with the allurements of sensuous amusements. And yet by the way the churches are going into these things one would think that they must be a grand success in helping to "disciple all nations."

Take some of the churches we all know. The most that I have been able to learn about them in more than a year and a half's residence is their suppers, bazars, fairs, big clam-bakes, etc. The news columns of the papers team with items about them; large posters on bill boards and on the front and rear of the electric cars advertise them in their season. The air is full of it. Mark you, I do not charge that any of these things are sinful in themselves, but what I do charge is that the churches generally have gone into the entertainment business till it has become, to the casual observer, the most distinguishing part of their trade. And what are the results? A weak spiritual life, and little or no spiritual increase. The pastor of one of these churches told me—and he is a man I love—that there had not been a conversion in their church for seven years! In a neighboring village there are three Protestant churches, and the leading member of one of the churches told me with tears in his eyes that he did not know when there had been a conversion in their village! It was once said as descriptive of Israel's weak condition that "the children are come to the birth and there is not strength to bring forth," but it seems to be even worse than that with many, for with them there is not strength even to conceive, let alone bringing children to the birth.

Oh, I tell you, if the Church of early days had gone about the great work of evangelizing the world by the methods in use by many churches of to-day, we that are here would be sunken in heathen darkness and superstition, if indeed we had ever been born. Look, if you will, at the church to which we owe more perhaps than to any other individual body of Christians—the church at Antioch, in Syria. What were they doing when the Holy Spirit said, “Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them”? Were they feasting and playing? Were they baiting the world with bean suppers and pink teas? I trow not. What then? They were fasting and praying. And to that single act of fasting and prayer in just one church the world owes more to-day than to all the entertainments and social fetes of all churches in all time a million times over.

“Oh for a faith,” cried A. J. Gordon, “to abandon utterly these devices of naturalism and to throw the Church without reserve upon the power of the supernatural!” And Arthur T. Pierson has said upon the same subject, that “Zion’s attractions are unique; like her Lord, they are not of the world—they belong to another order of beauty, ‘the beauty of holiness.’ When the Church robes herself in the charms of worldly attire and adornment, she not only fails to draw the world to herself and to Christ, but she actually takes the infection of the ‘spirits of the age,’ which, however disguised, is hostile to God. It is time all such measures were abandoned as helps to the work of evangelization. They are rather hindrances, for they destroy the peculiar character of God’s people as a separate people; they divert attention from eternal things, and they grieve the Spirit of God, on whose presence all power depends.”

Shall we not then heed the warning and avoid the pit into which so many have fallen?

(Concluded next week.)

SAMUEL DWIGGINS COFFIN.

Died, at Whittier, Cal., December 25th, 1903, Dr. Samuel Dwiggins Coffin, aged 78 years, 1 month and 13 days.

Dr. Coffin was born in New Garden, N. C., and was descended from one of several noted families who had previously settled the island of Nantucket. He was educated at New Garden Boarding School, which has since become Guilford College, and at a later period was principal of the same. He attended medical lectures at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, and afterward graduated from the Miami Medical College at Cincinnati. He began medical practice in his early manhood, and followed it continuously for over forty years.

Dr. Coffin and his father, Elihu Coffin, were active members in the heroic band of North Carolina Quakers who, amid the adverse surroundings of slavery, were true to the instincts and claims of liberty, and whose homes were stations on the underground railway for helping fugitive bondmen to make their escape in the years preceding the war, their operations extending systematically as far as Cincinnati, where Levi Coffin held the terminal station, and they often incurred serious danger in their operations.

At the breaking out of the Civil War Dr. Coffin removed with his family to Bloomington, Ind., and ten years later removed to Kansas, residing in succession at Fairmount and Lawrence.

The last thirteen years he was a resident of Whittier, Cal., being identified with the establishment of California Yearly Meeting and with every movement for the progress and up-building of the Church and community.

Dr. Coffin was a steadfast and consistent Christian and a man of strong moral and religious convictions, with courage to maintain them. He was at one time assistant clerk of Western Yearly Meeting, and for fourteen years was at the clerk's table of Kansas Yearly Meeting with Dr. William H. Nicholson.

SAMUEL DWIGGINS COFFIN.

Temperance Department.

Issued Monthly, under the care of the

TEMPERANCE ASSOCIATION OF FRIENDS, OF PHILADELPHIA
YEARLY MEETING.

All communications should be addressed to

ANNA EASTBURN WILLITS, Editor, 343 E. Main Street, Haddonfield, N. J.

Sweet wayside flowers their perfume shed,
Spring wakes the slumbering earth;
Thus Temperance comes where hope is dead,
And gives new pleasures birth.

—Dr. Burns.

Temperance meetings will be held in the suburban towns around Philadelphia, addressed by prominent members in our own Society. Edwin P. Sellew will speak before the Penn Literary Society, at Haddonfield, N. J. This society has met at the homes of Friends for more than a quarter of a century, and during the winter all phases of literary and philanthropic work are presented.

Heads of universities declared that moral uncleanness and intemperance were the worst pitfalls for the college boy.

Alys Pearsall Russell, sister-in-law of Earl Russell, a native of Philadelphia and graduate of Bryn Mawr College, says that what the American factory girl spends on dress the English factory girl spends on drink.

How diversified, how widespread is our work, how many different lives we touch; work reaching out to the ends of the earth and leaning forward, far into the eternities; surely we may say with grateful hearts as we lay our weary heads upon our pillow, "Lord, if we may, we'll serve another day."

The question has been raised in England whether the holders of liquor licenses who have not violated the law shall receive compensation when deprived of their licenses by magistrates. Arthur Chamberlain, in a speech at Glasgow, took the ground that licensees have no moral or legal right to compensation except so far as they may compensate themselves by mutual insurance.

The moment the wretched scheme of beer-charity was flung aside "the civilian enemies of the canteen" began to plan for the soldiers' welfare by hundreds of thousands of dollars.

This first $500,000 was available for use for the fiscal year 1902-3, and a second $500,000 was later appropriated, available for the fiscal year 1903-4, making in all one million dollars to give "the young soldier separated from home associations" something better than an army beer-saloon. Congress was willing to appropriate the money, and the people are willing to pay it for the real benefit of our soldier lads.

Temperance men are now demanded by railroad companies in Germany. M. de Tera, general superintendent of the roads, has issued orders that all employees who are not total abstainers will be discharged at the earliest possible moment. Moderate drinkers even cannot hold their places. Men with clear brains and steady hands are the only ones who need apply for positions. Drinking men are having an increasingly hard time in life.

An American firm making electrical appliances in Berlin kept records of the work done by its men before and after the prohibition of beer in working hours. The result was an increased product of ten per cent. The result has started a movement among German manufacturers to withhold beer from their employees, many of whom drink ten pints in the shops. The emperor has given much attention to the matter, and is convinced that beer during working hours reduces productiveness.

"The sphere of total abstinence work is one in which women can achieve particular and pronounced success. Drinking in society is an evil and woman is a power for good society. Women engaged in total abstinence work can break down the customs of society—something that now, in intemperance, at least, is working for evil in a deplorable degree.

"Drinking among women in 'high society,' so-called, is growing apace. It is doing harm and eventually is bound to do great harm if unchecked. The greatest resultant danger is that the humbler grades of society are apt to imitate the fashionable class. Unfortunately, whatever wears the stamp of fashion is a false stamp of excellence."

A TEMPERANCE SERMON.

It was on the old text in Exodus, Jehovah's call to Pharaoh, "Let my people go, that they may serve me." The preacher, Dr. Green, of the Calvary Baptist Church, Washington, D. C., spiritualized the text, and applied it to all the powers that bind the soul in slavery. He pictured graphically Gough the slave to drink, and Gough the freeman in Christ. Then he summed up in one sweeping, earnest sentence, "Through all the marts of business, through the engagements and diversions of social life, and along all the track of the accursed saloon, I hear the call, 'Let my people go, that they may serve me!'"

A depot agent, a stranger, said to me a short time ago: "What a tremendous amount of work you women put in. I am sometimes staggered when I realize its extent; and your accomplishments are comparatively so meager, are they not?" I replied, "Are you sure of that? Who of humankind ever measured a moral force? With what do you gauge results and accomplishments?" The returns are not yet. Only the coming years will reveal them in their entirety. Our returns are like the louis given in Airy Scheffer's studio to a supposed beggar, which ten years later brought an order for 10,000 francs and this letter: "You one day gave a louis to Baron Rothschild in the studio of Airy Scheffer. He has employed it and to-day sends you the little capital with which you entrusted him, together with its interest. A good action always brings a good future. Baron James de Rothschild." For our labors there is a future return which the Lord of the investors shall present in the coming days. Till then we labor and wait. —W. C. T. U. State Secretary.

AVOIDANCE.

And hating the saloon we must avoid it, keep away from it, shun it as a pestilence, a shame, a dishonor amongst men. It is sometimes difficult to persuade even good men of the importance of thus shunning the thing we hate, and the problem is rendered more difficult by the methods and plans by which the evil obtrudes itself. We ride in a vestibule limited train, and it faces us in the buffet. We go to a good hotel, and it meets us in the hotel bar and lunch counter. We take a steamer to cross the ocean, and lo! it is there also. And we hardly know how to discriminate when we are thus beset behind and before. In all these things, I think, each man must judge for himself, being careful at the same time not to judge his brother. But the saloon proper, that is, the building or store given up to the sale of intoxicants, we must as men, refuse to enter, unless it be to persuade men, to preach (as we used to have to do in the far West on the frontier), or to save some wanderer.—Floyd W. Tomkins.

THE CANTEEN.

Permit me to quote the published words of Dr. John W. Ross, Medical Director United States Navy:

"As the same reasons and influences which led Congress to abolish the canteen are at least as strong to-day as when the abolition took place, and as it is vastly easier to defeat than to pass a bill in Congress, it would be utterly useless to attempt to induce Congress to restore the canteen, which it has so recently abolished. Representative Littlefield, of Maine, is a strong opponent of the restoration of the army canteen. By canteen is meant the alcoholic feature of the army post exchange; no one opposes the post exchange minus the alcoholic drinks."

It seems to me that any one possessed of a judicial mind who will study the present attempt to get Congress to restore the canteen in our army, and who will regard it from a strictly impartial standpoint, must inevitably arrive at two conclusions:

First. That the attempt is hopeless.

Second. That it is unnecessary.

In his address before the American Public Health Association Dr. Ross showed how the authorities had suppressed various low grogeries and dives that have sprung up around army or navy posts, particularly at Bremerton, Washington and the New York Navy Yard, and his able argument convinces that if the navy reached a high stage of efficiency without the beer that was once allowed, the army can be, and is, benefited by the abolition of the canteen. The trouble, as everybody knows, is not because the army canteen has been abolished, but because, on the outside of the posts, abominable nuisances have been planted that ought to be, but are not, suppressed by the authorities. There is no reason why the War Department cannot do with these things just what the Navy Department did with similar nuisances surrounding certain navy yards. Unfortunately for the sake of morality, Secretary Root has never tried to do anything in these matters except to link himself with the liquor lobby, whose avowed purpose is to restore the army canteen. It is probable that one source of the War Secretary's opposition to General Miles was General Miles's open antagonism to the canteen.—R. B. McDanel, in "Public Ledger."

TEMPERANCE EDUCATION IN THE SCHOOLS THE NATION'S BULWARK AGAINST ALCOHOL.

The Committee of Fifty recently published the report of their Physiological Sub-Committee in which the latter attacks the present system of scientific temperance instruction now universally required in the public schools of this country.

The National Woman's Christian Temperance Union at its last convention adopted a reply to the above report, submitted by its Bureau of Scientific Temperance Investigation and the presidents of eleven of the largest States, and ordered for circulation a first edition of 50,000 copies.

This reply, a twenty-six-page pamphlet, shows that the grounds on which the Sub-Committee base their proposal to overthrow this system of instruction are fallacious.

First. In attempting to secure foreign opinions on this subject, the Sub-Committee misrepresented the amount of time required as 250 hours for the study of alcohol. In fact, only 330 lessons (the equivalent of about 140 hours) distributed through nine years, is the maximum requirement for the whole subject of physiology and hygiene, not more than one-fourth (and usually not more than one-fifth) of which is ever required to be given to alcoholic drinks and other narcotics.

Second. The Sub-Committee's chief criticisms upon the school literature on this subject are that it teaches total abstinence and that alcohol is not a food but a poison.

The reply shows that the Sub-Committee presents no evidence proving alcohol a food in the sense in which this word is commonly understood, that is, a substance whose nature it is when absorbed into the blood to nourish the body without injuring it. The conclusion of the Sub-Committee that alcohol is a food because it is oxidized in the body and can furnish energy, is contradicted by many authorities who agree with Professor von Voit, of Munich, quoted in the Report of the Sub-Committee, that

"A substance may be consumed by the body and liberate energy, and yet be harmful."

Other poisons are oxidized in the body, yet are never called foods.

After briefly reviewing the other papers in the Sub-Committee's Report the reply concludes:

"The experimental and other investigations concerning the physiological action of alcohol in the Report of the Committee of Fifty do not prove the present system of temperance instruction 'unscientific' or 'undesirable,' and the opinion of the Sub-Committee that it is undesirable reveals a deplorable insensibility to the grave moral perils of that moderate drinking which the instruction the Sub-Committee recommend would encourage. The discussion which has preceded and accompanied the legislation requiring this instruction during the past twenty years has been a continuous appeal to reason which has met with as continuous a response. The American public is too intelligent, too patriotic and too conscientious to have adopted this movement hastily or to retire from it in the face of the good it is doing."

The International Lesson.

FIRST QUARTER.

LESSON XI.

THIRD MONTH 13, 1904.

DEATH OF JOHN THE BAPTIST.

Matt 14: 1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life. Rev. 2: 10.

DAILY READINGS.

Second-day, Third mo. 7.—Death of John the Baptist. Matt. 14: 1-12.

Third-day, Third mo. 8.—Reproof of Sin. Luke 3: 15-20.

Fourth-day, Third mo. 9.—The martyr roll. Heb. 11: 32-40.

Fifth-day, Third mo. 10.—The crown of life. Rev. 2: 7-11.

Sixth-day, Third mo. 11.—Belshazzar's feast. Dan. 5: 1-7; 25-31.

Seventh-day, Third mo. 12.—Sinful feasting. Isa. 5: 8-13.

First-day, Third mo. 13.—Wise walking. Eph. 5: 6-21.

Time.—John was probably imprisoned early in the spring of A.D. 28. He was beheaded about a year later, A.D. 29.

Place.—John was confined in the castle or fortress of Macherus, east of the Dead Sea, and about 10 miles from its northern end. Jesus was in Galilee, about 90 or 100 miles from Macherus.

Place in the Life of Christ.—Not far from the beginning of the third year of his ministry.

Parallel Accounts.—Mark 6: 14-29; Luke 9: 7-9.

It is hard to keep the Herods mentioned in the New Testament distinct. The Herod of the present lesson was Herod Antipas, a son of Herod the Great (Matt. 2: 1) and a Samaritan woman. He was educated in Rome in company with his half-brother Archelaus (Matt. 2: 22). He married a daughter of Aretas, King of Petra, but seeing Herodias, the wife of his half-brother Philip, he became infatuated with her, divorced his own wife, and married Herodias, who abandoned her husband. Herodias was a granddaughter of Herod the Great. Aretas, angry at the treatment of his daughter, made war upon Herod Antipas. John the Baptist reprov'd Herod for his conduct, and he thereupon shut up John in prison. Later Herod went to Rome to try to secure the title of King, but the Emperor banished him to Gaul. He died in exile in Spain. The only good thing known of Herodias is that she shared the exile of Herod. See Luke 3: 19; 13: 31, 32; 23: 6-11; Mark 6: 14-29.

1. "At that season." Revised Version. During the third preaching tour of Galilee. "Tetrarch." Literally, the ruler, of a fourth part, but also used for the title of a petty sovereign. "Heard the report concerning Jesus." Revised Version.

2. "He" is emphatic. "Therefore." Because he has risen from the dead. No man could do the miracles, Herod argued. John was the greatest man he had known. He believed him to have been a prophet, therefore he must have risen with greater power than before (John 10: 41). Compare also Matt. 16: 14; Mark 8: 28; Luke 9: 7-9.

3. "Prison." We learn from Josephus that this was Macherus.

4. "It is not lawful for thee to have her." Herodias was (1) his half-brother's wife; (2) she was his half-niece; (3) he had put away his own wife to marry her; (4) she had abandoned her husband to marry him. These acts were against the Levitical law (Lev. 18), in which Herod professed to believe.

5. "Feared." Killing a prophet would surely anger the people. He feared John also (Mark 6: 20). For by his influence and power he might start an insurrection. It is clear Herod Antipas had a conscience, but it was not strong enough to make him resist Herodias.

6. "Herod's birthday." Mark tells us that a great feast was given to the nobility and prominent men. "The daughter of Herodias." The daughter of Herodias and Philip. "Danced before them." In those days such feasts were exclusively for men, and no women but those of ill reputation were admitted. The dancers at these feasts were often grossly immoral in their dress and behaviour. From the whole account it would be inferred that the host and his guests were half-intoxicated.

7. Mark adds, "Unto the half of my kingdom." Compare Esther 5: 3, 6; 7: 2.

8. "And she, being put forward by her mother, saith, Give me here on a platter the head of John the Baptist." American Revised Version. This shows that Salome, the daughter, was an instrument in her mother's hands.

9. "And the king was grieved; but for the sake of his oaths, and of them which sat at meat with him," etc. Revised Version. He was doubtless sorry, and he respected John, and he feared the people; but he feared the ridicule of his companions, and the anger of Herodias more. His oaths, probably, he would not have hesitated to break if he had wished.

10, 11. The rapidity with which the act was done implies that the feast was at Macherus. She asked that it should be given straightway. (Mark 6: 25.)

12. "And his disciples," etc. This shows some good feeling on the part of Herod. He did not persecute John's disciples as he might have done. "Went and told Jesus." This would imply that they believed that Jesus was the Christ. It is not recorded what Jesus said to them. Herodias did not gain her ends by the murder of John, for John the Baptist dead was no less a reprover of her crimes than John the Baptist alive.

John was about 34 when thus cut off. He is one of the most striking characters in the Bible. Destined from before his birth to be a prophet, his life was worthy of his high office. Pure, unsullied, earnest, fearless, humble, he much resembled his great predecessor Elijah. Like him he was an ascetic, and like him he had his times of depression, as when he sent to Christ to ask, "Art thou he who should come or shall we look for another?" Like Elijah, also, he had his times of fearless outspokening and of reproof of kings and hypocrites. Though the Herald of the Gospel he was not himself a member of the new dispensation. (Matt. 11: 11.) He was a great reformer; he called to repentance and confession; he was "a burning and a shining light," but he was not a citizen of the new kingdom.

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

1. Herod was probably half-drunk when he ordered John to be beheaded. Many a man has done that when under the influence of liquor, for which he bitterly repents when sober.

2. No promise or agreement to commit sin or do a wrong is ever binding; it would be a greater sin to keep the promise than it would be to break it, for no one has the right to promise to commit sin.

Christian Endeavor

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Lindley D. Clark, 1429 New York Avenue, Washington, D.C.]

TOPIC FOR THIRD MONTH THIRTEENTH.

APPETITES THAT UNMAKE MEN.

Dan. 5: 1-5, 25-28.

Second-day, Third mo. 7.—Esau's appetite. Gen. 25: 29-34.

Third-day, Third mo. 8.—Ben-hadad's appetite. 1 Kings 20: 12-20.

Fourth-day, Third mo. 9.—Israel's appetite. Ex. 16: 2-5.

Fifth-day, Third mo. 10.—Leanness of soul. Ps. 106: 13-15.

Sixth-day, Third mo. 11.—The drunken servant. Matt. 24: 48-51.

Seventh-day, Third mo. 12.—Deforming appetites. Rom. 1: 18-25.

The battle against intoxicants is one that is being fought in so many fields and that requires such constant watchfulness along the skirmish lines that we are under deep obligations to those whose abilities and opportunities have enabled them to give special attention to the subject and bring to us the results of their labors.

Ten years ago a committee of fifty citizens of some of our Northeastern States undertook an investigation of the liquor problem, the energies of a sub-committee being directed toward a study of its physiological aspects. Some valuable results have accrued, but to most of us the work is discredited in a degree by some of its features that affect the whole. The present system of temperance instruction prescribed by statute in every State of the Union is mentioned in the report as an "educational excrescence," which it is desirable to remove. From this report itself and from other sources, a committee of the National Women's Christian Temperance Union has prepared a "reply" * that effectively sums up the positions of the advocates and the defenders of temperance instruction.

As Endeavorers, many of whom are teachers in Sabbath and day schools, while practically all others are pupils in one or other of these schools, we cannot afford to be misinformed or uninformed on a phase of the question that is vital; for though the most solemn word that has ever been written as to the drunkard is that he shall not inherit the kingdom of God, the redemption of the body is a work that is closely related to the redemption of the spirit.

In this modest pamphlet of the temperance women may be found feathers for many arrows. We may note one point. The sub-committee above named objects to the teaching of total abstinence, maintaining that it is not true that drinking of one or two glasses of beer or wine by adults is "very dangerous." As to this class of "moderate" drinkers, Dr. Forel, eminent as an insanity expert, is quoted in the "reply" as saying, "As long as one drinks even just one glass a month one feels the irresistible need of excusing and defending that glass and unconsciously one becomes an advocate of the alcohol habit." And Dr. Bunge, of Basle, who urges the importance of overcoming "prevailing prejudices before it is too late, that is, before the young people have become slaves to alcohol," says farther that "It is a fatal mistake to suppose that slaves to alcohol are only those who lie in gutters. There are numberless men who always drink one moderate glass. To this moderate glass, however, they cling quite as inveterately as the morphinist to his syringe." A recent case has been reported of a "moderate drinker" who had, so far as known, never been intoxicated in his life, but who died of alcoholism.

Our country has suffered much, but a check hitherto has been a practically abstinent motherhood. A paragraph in a daily paper issued the day of this writing repeats what we hear all too frequently: The drink habit among women is growing; to be seen drinking in public places no longer excites the same feeling of condemnation as formerly.

I hesitate to think that a single Endeavorer needs to have these things called to mind as guards for personal conduct. This we all know, that every weapon and power that can be arrayed against the enemy ought to be so arrayed, and that we shall have to give account for the part we bore in our generation in the struggle between purity and impurity, light and darkness, good and evil.

* The "Reply" may be procured by addressing Rest Cottage, Evanston, Ill. The cost is 5 cents per copy, or $2.00 per hundred.

Missionary Department.

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Herman Newman, 718 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.]

A VISIT TO THE LEPER HOME, SPANISH TOWN, JAMAICA.

"And there cometh to him a leper, beseeching him, and kneeling down to him, and saying unto him, If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean. And being moved with compassion he stretched forth his hand and touched him, and said unto him, I will; be thou made clean. And straightway the leprosy departed from him, and he was made clean." Mark 1: 40-42.

It was about 9 o'clock on a bright, cool New Year's morning that we passed through the gate and drove past the gatekeeper's house, men's wards, hospital and women's wards, to the matron's house, situated at some little distance from the wards and surrounded by a bright little garden of its own. We went in to arrange for distributing the little treat of "Glasgow Rock" (Scotch stick candy) that my guide had brought out to the lepers as a New Year's gift. There was, of course, no fear of contagion there, as everything is strictly antiseptic; but as we stepped inside the first ward, my friend turned to me, saying, "Now be careful not to touch a thing." It was a long building with two rows of iron cot-beds, each neatly spread with red flannel blankets. On a bed at our right as we entered lay an old woman, who lifted herself on her elbows and reached up two handless wrists to receive the candy. I listened as she answered my voice for the treat, but did not feel like looking at her more.

Many of the lepers were out at their various employments, and it was only here and there we met with the bad cases in the wards. As we passed along placing a stick of candy on each cot, our care was that not so much as the tip of our finger should come in contact with the bed, the matron even asking me to keep my skirts from touching the floor. How I felt my limitations, especially when we went into the hospital, where the worst cases were, and saw the acute suffering on the faces there. Three of the women there are blind, and as we spoke a few words and saw the tears flowing from those leprosy-blinded eyes, how we longed to soothe them by a touch, and how passionately glad we were to pour out our hearts in supplication to Him who put forth His hand and touched them. And again, when all the women were called together in the workroom, and a little leprous girl was delegated to stand a foot or two to my left and front to hold her Sankey for me to sing from so I might not so much as touch it or her!

Then the song those poor women chose, "Thy will be done"—their favorite song! As I sang with them,

"Let but my fainting heart be blessed
With thy sweet Spirit for its guest,
My God to Thee, I leave the rest;
Renew my will from day to day,
Blend it with thine and take away
All that now makes it hard to say,
Thy will be done."

I felt surely theirs was a wise choice, and that is a wise and happy woman whose prayer is, "Thy will, not mine, be done."

I realized from their joyous faces that many of them have the same priceless treasure, the same sweet Guest that makes each of our lives whose guest He is a "Glad, sweet song," and my heart said, All praise to Him who teaches us to say, "Thy will be done."

The favorite song in the men's ward is "Blessed Assurance, Jesus is Mine." Leprosy has separated them from home, friends, all that this world has to offer them, but what a strength to them and to us to hear Paul say, "Nothing shall separate me from the love of God."

In one of the wards we found a young woman sewing. I noticed her hands all bent and with some of the joints gone; but she had succeeded without the help of a thimble in sewing up several long seams. She said she could not sew on stiff cloth.

There were a few East Indians, doubly isolated from disease and language, but most were Creoles.

Johnny, a little boy nine or ten years old, who was in the hospital then, is nearly white. Such a sad, pain-marked face as he had cannot soon be forgotten. A lady from New York had, a short time before, sent him a large picture and story book, with which he was so pleased. He said the schoolmaster was reading it to him. The schoolmaster seems very intelligent and leads in the singing and in prayer.

The East Indian Maraj has leprosy in his feet, so he had to creep to the place where we were having the little service.

One man's face is a mass of leprous sores, but I refrain from telling more of their sad condition.

The nurse is a brown woman, whose unselfish life and service there attest to a beautiful and wonderful consecration. Surely her's and the matron's service is very like their Master's.

Coming away from them I felt so impressed with the comparison of sin to leprosy.

Stricken are we all with this incurable, loathsome disease. Just as one tiny leprous spot on the little finger makes one a leper, so the tiniest sin brands us as sinners, and there is only One who can say, "Be thou clean." "There is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved."

"Thanks be to God for His unspeakable gift."

SADA F. STANLEY,

Missionary of the Friends' Foreign Mission Board of Iowa Yearly Meeting.

Things of Interest Among Ourselves.

HARRIET GREEN MEMORIAL FUND.

Amounts received by THE AMERICAN FRIEND since last report:

Elizabeth C. F. Stevens	$5.00
Edna B. Newlin	2.00
On hand	56.00
Total	$63.00

The following are subscriptions received by J. Elwood Cox for Harriet Green Memorial Fund since our last report:

Margaret A. Evans, Indianapolis, Ind.	$100.00
Carrie L. Jones	5.00
Martilia Cox, Indianapolis, Ind.	2.00
Amount subscriptions by L. L. Hobbs	100.00
Eula Dixon, Snow Camp, N. C.	2.00
Rhoda Worth	2.00
A. R. Hadley, by L. L. Hobbs	25.00
A. G. Kirby, by L. L. Hobbs	10.00
C. C. McCullough, by L. L. Hobbs	10.00
	<hr/>
	$256.00

Henry M. Vore is located in the meeting at Springdale, Ia.

Josiah Hackett, of Michigan, has accepted a call to locate in the meeting at Albion, Ia.

John H. Douglas was present at the morning meeting in Los Angeles on First-day, the 14th ult.

Charles and May Replogle have returned to the United States. Their address for the present is Cowan, Ind.

Timothy Nicholson and his wife have arrived in California, and they expect to remain at Whittier until Fifth month.

A recent series of meeting held at Linden, Ia., resulted in the conversion of a large number and a real uplift to the meeting.

John C. Heaton, the local minister in Elk Monthly Meeting, West Elkton, Ohio, is now engaged in a series of protracted meetings.

The annual report of the New York Colored Mission has come to us, and is, as usual, an interesting report of splendid work done.

B. J. Talbott and wife, of Iowa, held a series of meetings at Pleasant Hill Meeting, Nebraska, in which forty-four souls claimed definite blessing.

Eusebia S. Couch, who has been located in the meeting at Prairie Centre, Kansas, for some time, has moved into the limits of Sterling Monthly Meeting, Kansas.

Bayless E. Fisher, of Russiaville, Ind., a consecrated young worker, has located at Lick Creek, Paoli, Ind., and his labors are blessed of the Lord to the good of the meeting.

Eliza P. Williams has just closed a series of meetings at Alexandria, Kan. Over four score were religiously blessed. She goes to McCracken, Kan., next, to hold a series of meetings.

James R. Jones concluded a series of evangelistic services of sixteen days' duration First month at Kokomo, Indiana. The gospel was preached in all its fulness, and more than a dozen souls were definitely blessed.

Since the holidays Morton Brattain has held series of meetings at Newberry and Hill's Chapel, near Paoli, Ind. As a result many have been definitely blessed, and about twenty have applied for membership with Friends.

A new meeting has been organized at Commerce, Ia., as a result of a series of meetings held by Edwin Loft and Thomas Teas. A new house is being built. The Lord is wonderfully owning the work of these brothers this winter.

Marshalltown Meeting, Iowa, manifests a good degree of spiritual life. The members are aggressive and evince a "mind to work." Evidently Ellison R. Purdy's two years of much-appreciated work among the Friends there is yet bearing fruit.

Turner L. Abel, of Kemma Meeting, Nebraska, after closing a helpful meeting at his home meeting, was invited to the meeting at Highland in the same quarterly meeting, where he is now engaged, and where souls are surrendering to God daily.

Bloomingsdale Quarterly Meeting, Ind., was held the 20th and 21st ult. Thomas C. Brown, of Carmel, Ind., was present and preached both days. The business was transacted in harmony. The membership of the quarterly meeting is about 1,200.

The meeting at Ames, Ia., was much blessed recently under the very helpful ministry of Ellison R. Purdy in a series of meetings held there. The local minister, Minnie M. Pearson, planned and carried out a very beneficial farewell service for Mary Ellis, who goes as missionary to Cuba, Ames being her home meeting.

The following names should be added to the list of those who are going to Jerusalem to attend the World's Sabbath School Convention: Robert and A. Jennie Ridgway, of Amboy, Ind., and Josiah Morris, of Western Yearly Meeting.

Yearly meeting clerks and correspondents sending epistles or other documents to Wilmington Yearly Meeting are asked to address them to Benjamin Farquhar, yearly meeting correspondent, as the clerk of the yearly meeting has removed from its limits.

A series of meetings is now in progress at Fairfield Meeting House, near Leesburg, Ohio, conducted by the local minister, Fremont B. Milner, and Elwood Scott, of Marion, Ind. Several families have been converted and renewed, and the good work is just beginning among the young people.

Mildred Replogle, the daughter of Charles and May Replogle, has been living with Robert and A. Jennie Ridgway, of Amboy, Ind., during her parents' absence in Great Britain and Norway. She has now joined her parents at Cowan, Ind.

Ira Newlin, of Bloomingsdale, Ind., and David Commons, of Tangier, held a series of meetings at Providence, in Vigas County, eight miles south of Terre Haute, commencing 7th ult., and closing 14th—eighteen sessions in all. Quite an interest was taken in the meetings by the members and others.

Under the faithful labors and godly life of Dr. D. J. Bunce, of Nevada, Ia., seed-sowing has been going on for some years, and souls were finding Christ. Many of these, with some others who were saved during a recent series of meetings, united with Friends, and steps are being taken to organize them into a monthly meeting.

On the 7th ult. Irena Hunnicutt, of Lewisville, Ind., closed a four-weeks' series of meetings at Cadiz, Ind. Her manner of teaching was pleasant and practical, and was accompanied by the power of the Holy Spirit. Many were converted or renewed. Ten united with Friends. An effort is being made to raise money to build a new meeting house.

J. W. Elder began a series of meetings at Ringwood, O. T., First month 21st, and continued until Second month 13th, when he was joined by his wife. They continued together until Second month 21st, fifty-eight sessions in all. Eighty-nine professed conversion, renewal and sanctification; fifteen have given their names to unite with Friends, and several more will come in later. The meeting is in the best condition it has been for some time.

Amos Kenworthy recently labored in a protracted effort for two and a half weeks in the meeting at Los Angeles, Cal. He was ably assisted and much definite good was accomplished. Levi D. Barr, the local minister, is now entering upon his third year in the meeting. During his stay there the Y. P. S. C. E. has grown from a membership of four or six to twenty-five or thirty, and the Bible School averages nearly one hundred, an increase of fifty per cent. or more.

"Decision Week" was observed by the Christian Endeavorers at Raysville, Ind., 22d ult., by a week of prayer, followed by a two-weeks' meeting, held by Oscar Moon, of Knights-town, Ind., assisted by T. R. Woodard. The young people took an active part in the meetings. Some were converted and many were stirred to a more active work in the meeting, Christian Endeavor and Sabbath School. This meeting is small, and composed largely of young people, yet almost every member is faithful.

Our dear friend, Asa Hockett, whose death was recently reported, was a faithful and highly valued Friend. He was born in Clinton County, Ohio, Eighth month 1st, 1823, and passed away at the age of 80 on the 24th of First month, 1904, after an illness of ten weeks, which he bore with much resignation. He joined Friends at the age of 21, and has through his long life manifested a steady faith in the mercy of God through Jesus Christ. He was the father of Martha E. Newlin, wife of Sylvester Newlin.

A Friend who recently attended Twelfth Street Meeting, Philadelphia, and the Bible School following, writes of his appreciation of the genuine spirit of worship which pervaded the meeting, and of his gratification at seeing the excellent instruction and interest in the class in the life of Christ. He says: "How Joseph John Gurney, to whom the revival of Bible study and evangelization among Friends is due more than to anyone else, would have rejoiced to see such a class of searchers of the Holy Scriptures?"

Under the faithful labors of Cyrus Emery and wife, of Gross, Boyd County, Nebraska, a few persons have been brought into the fold. They are now building a neat little house for a meeting place, and expect soon to have an organized meeting there.

David H. Harold, of Indianapolis, labored in a series of meetings at Vermilion Grove, Ill., from the 7th to 21st ult. Our brother showed himself "apt to teach," so that under his ministry the meeting was greatly blessed. About thirty persons, nearly all young people, and many of them students of Vermilion Academy, gave themselves to the Lord. Melissa Hawthorn was also in attendance. Her service, and especially her personal work, was blessed to the help of many. It is expected that Lewis W. McFarland, of Lowell, Kansas, will locate in the meeting about 1st of Fourth month.

The contractors are working on the main room of the Friends' Meeting House in Washington, D. C., with the object in view of completing it in time for the holding of Baltimore Quarterly Meeting in that city for the first time in its history in Fourth month next. Meetings have been held for five years in the basement of the house, and resident Friends are looking forward with pleasure to the long-deferred completion of the building. Two new members were received at the last monthly meeting, both by letter, one from a Methodist congregation in Arkansas, and the other from a Lutheran congregation in the city.

George N. and L. Ella Hartley left the Shawnee missions on the 1st inst. to attend the World's Sunday School Convention at Jerusalem. They will be absent from the missions until the 1st of Sixth month. During their absence all communications in regard to the general work should be directed to John Nicholson, 1305 McCulloh Street, Baltimore, Md., or Edward M. Wistar, 908 Provident Building, Philadelphia, Pa. J. Edward Hartsuck and wife will fill their place at the missions during the time. The Friends' Meeting House is to be used for school purposes for the spring term. The children will have much more room than they had before the fire. New school buildings will likely be erected this summer.

Albert I. and Mary A. Bailey, James M. and Elizabeth Miller, Josiah W. and Laura B. Sparks, and Olive L. Welsh, members of Wilmington, Ohio, Meeting, expect to attend the Sabbath School Convention at Jerusalem. On the evening of Second month 22d a social was given in the basement of the meeting house, at which the Jerusalem delegation and the members of the Sabbath School class to which most of them belong were present, a total of fifty-six persons. Each member of the Jerusalem party was presented with a tiny silk flag as a reminder of home and native land and class No. 8. E. W. Kirk, from near Wilmington, who is a member of the same quarterly meeting with the above, will also be with the party.

Our friend Joshua L. Baily has been visiting the National Soldiers' Home at Hampton, Va., to compare its present condition with that which he described in these columns three years ago. He is gratified to discover improvement. He writes: "Helen Gould, at an expense of about $40,000, has erected just outside the gates of Fortress Monroe a very fine and commodious building for the army Y. M. C. A. It is as complete in all its equipment as any building of its size that I know of for this purpose. It is just about completed, and is open for its beneficent work. I responded to an invitation to address the young soldiers this evening, and, notwithstanding a heavy rain, we had a fair attendance, and it was never my privilege to stand before a more attentive and appreciative audience. It interested me to find in the person of the secretary a young man named Mahlon G. Baily, of Chester County Quaker ancestry. He is filling the place with self-sacrificing and earnest devotion."

A second session of the Friends' Summer School of Religious History will be held at Haverford College, Pennsylvania, from the afternoon of Sixth month 15th to Sixth month 25th, at noon, 1904, under the care of a committee which is substantially the same as that which had charge of the session of 1900. Courses of lectures will be given on the Life of Christ, on various aspects of truth as understood by Friends, on the application of Christianity to Present-day problems, and on other topics. The lecturers will be President Isaac Sharpless, Dr. Richard H. Thomas, Professors Thomas Newlin, Rufus M. Jones, Elbert Russell, George A. Barton and others. There will also be lectures by Professor George A. Coe, of Northwestern University, and other distinguished scholars, not members of the Society of Friends. A special feature of the school will be a series of open-air conferences on topics of vital interest in Quakerism. There will also be a daily Bible class. The afternoons will be devoted to excursions and recreation. Various points closely associated with the early history of Pennsylvania and the period of the Revolution will be visited. Board may be obtained in the halls of Haverford College at $1.00 per day. There will be no charge for tuition. A detailed program will be issued later. Isaac Sharpless, chairman of the committee; George A. Barton, secretary.

The following is taken from the "Union Signal": "Around the shores of the eastern end of Kotzebue Sound, and just north of the Arctic Circle, are a number of villages of the Arctic Eskimos. Here there is a Quaker Mission, and a resident missionary has written Dr. Jackson of a wonderful meeting held last July on the shores of the Sound. After an hour's talk of Jesus by the shores of Galilee seeking the lost, one after another of the adult Kotzebues came forward, saying, 'We want this Jesus,' until the whole tribe had surrendered themselves to God. They have ever since given genuine evidence that 'old things have passed away and all things have become new.'

"They were extravagantly given to the drinking of whiskey and the use of tobacco—even the little children being habituated to its use. Since that memorable meeting all tobacco and whiskey have been absolutely done away with, and when, twice since, schooners loaded with whiskey and tobacco sailed up the Sound expecting, as heretofore, to reap a rich harvest, not a pint of whiskey nor a pound of tobacco was landed. These people living beyond the Arctic Circle, away from everything we deem essential to civilization, said: 'No more tobacco, no more whiskey; we God's man.'

"Dr. Jackson, with Governor Brady, of Alaska, was largely instrumental in having high license substituted for prohibition in that territory, they believing the change would be beneficial, but after four years' trial Dr. Jackson assures me that high license has not worked well, 'not even a very little bit.'"

MARRIED.

GREEN—THOMPSON.—At the home of the bride, Second month 20th, 1904, Benjamin Johnson Green to Agnes B., only daughter of R. T. Thompson, Steubenville, O. The young couple are at home at 1904 G Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

STANLEY—BUTLER.—At the home of the bride's parents, Milton and Matilda Butler, Shadeland, Ind., Second month 18th, 1904, Justin O. Stanley and Lidia C. Butler.

DIED.

Cox.—At Union, Iowa, First month 31st, 1904, Hannah Cox, daughter of Charles and Eunice Davis, and wife of Jesse Cox, aged 50 years. The deceased was a birthright member of Friends, and at the time of her death was overseer of Stanford Monthly Meeting. She was also a valuable member of the W. C. T. U.

HOLLOWELL.—At his home at Kokomo, Ind., First month 30th, 1904, Walter Kent Hollowell, youngest son of Charles and Anna B. Hollowell, aged 21 years. He was a birthright member of the Union Street Friends' Meeting.

HOSKINS.—At her home, near Pleasant Plain, Iowa, First month 16th, 1904, Ruth Hoskins, wife of Ellis Hoskins, deceased, in the 77th year of her age. She was a lifelong member of Friends.

JEFFERIS.—At his home, near Lewisville, Ind., Second month 16th, 1904, John T. Jefferis, at the age of 71 years. He was a member of Rich Square Meeting of Friends, and an elder.

STANDING.—At the home of his parents, George and Sarah Standing, near Earlham, Iowa, Wilford George Standing, aged 6 years and 8 months. He was a member of Bear Creek Monthly Meeting.

STANFIELD.—At the home of his parents, Union, Iowa, Second month 15th, 1904, Frank Stanfield, son of David L. and Mary Stanfield, in his 25th year. He was converted when a boy and united with the Stanfield Friends about a year before his decease.

WHITE.—At her home, near Prairie Centre, Kansas, Second month 2d, 1904, Martha A. White, widow of Rowland White.

WOOLMAN.—At Cincinnati, Ohio, First month 29th, 1904, Elizabeth S. Woolman. The deceased was a beloved member and overseer of Cincinnati Monthly Meeting.

Events and Comments.

During the past year the number of ships equipped with the Marconi system of wireless telegraphy has been increased from twenty-five to fifty-four, and efforts are now being made to increase the number of land stations.

The demand of the Federal Assembly of Porto Rico for statehood or independence, by a vote of 60 to 15, is a lesson in colonialism. A subject colony with any ambition wishes to rise in the world and have some dignity.

The bill prohibiting the co-education of whites and blacks in Kentucky, which is aimed directly at Berea College, has passed the Kentucky House of Representatives by a vote of 75 to 5. Evidently it will pass the Senate and become a law.

The United States Senate ratified without amendment the Hay-Bunau Varilla Panama Canal Treaty by a vote of 66 to 14. The treaty follows the lines of the Hay-Herran convention. The most significant feature of the treaty is the guarantee by the United States to maintain the independence of Panama, which is to receive $10,000,000 and an annual payment of $250,000, beginning nine years from the date of the treaty.

The effort of the Department of Agriculture to induce the cotton farmers of the South, and of Texas particularly, to diversify their farming and plant less

A DOCTOR'S FOOD

Found a Food That Lifted Him Out of Trouble.

The food experience of a doctor experimenting with himself is worth knowing. He says:

"I had acid dyspepsia since I have any knowledge, from eight years old I know.

"It worked down from stomach to intestines, locating at the umbilicus in enteritis, until six years ago the agony every few days was something terrible. I have walked the floor for hours unable to eat or digest if I should eat.

"Medicine would not relieve me at all. Four years ago I began the use of Grape-Nuts, and since the first dish I have never had an attack of the old trouble. I take four tablespoonfuls once a day with my supper which is composed only of whole wheat bread and the Grape-Nuts.

"The wonderful part of my case is that I have never had an attack or even any of the dreadful symptoms since the very first meal of Grape-Nuts. Most of my patients know how suddenly and promptly Grape-Nuts cured me, and I have prescribed the food with more good results in many cases." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Grape-Nuts is regularly prescribed in place of medicine by many physicians for stomach or intestinal trouble, lack of nourishment, brain-fag and nervous prostration. The result usually shows immediate improvement and a speedy complete cure.

Ten days' trial of Grape-Nuts in place of starchy foods works wonders.

"There's a reason."

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

acres of cotton this year with a view to the eradication of the boll weevil is not working out as was expected. The returns to the Department indicate that the general increase all over the leading cotton districts will be at least 30 per cent.

While New York is building a subway for passenger traffic and leaving the streets to the teamsters, Chicago is building a subway for freight, and keeping the streets for the people. So quietly has the tunnel in Chicago been constructed that it is said that many residents of the city do not know of its existence. Twenty miles of subway have been built in the heart of the business district without disturbing a stone of the street pavements—another feature in which it differs from the New York subway. Not an accident has occurred during construction, and no complaint has been made to the city authorities by abutting land-owners or others.

The resignation of Representative Shafroth, of Colorado, because of evidence satisfying him that his election was illegal is a welcome and striking phenomenon; and it has its bearing on the validity of the title of other of that State's representatives in the national legislature. Here and there throughout the country journals have said that the Congressman was a fool, and that he should have hung on to his place until put out. But such opinion is exceptional, not normal. Evidence taken in this contested case shows venality among the women voters of Colorado; but some was to be expected.

Viceroy Alexieff and other military leaders of the Russian forces left Port Arthur for Harbin, in Manchuria, where the military forces of Russia will be assembled and deploy to meet the Japanese advance. This practically leaves Port Arthur and Dalny and Southern Manchuria to Japan. Not that she will secure this territory without some fighting with such Russian land forces as may now be there; but rather that it is the Russian policy to lure Japan inland, in view of present unpreparedness to make a stand either by sea or on land at points so remote from the base of supplies. Japan has negotiated a treaty with Korea, whereby the independence and integrity of Korea are assured. The Korean Government, on the other hand, has become an open ally of Japan against Russia, and has ordered its troops to join the Japanese army in the field. The port of Wiju has been declared open to the trade of the world. Reports from Lake Baikal and other points along the Siberian Railway reveal the gravity of Russia's problem of transportation and commissariat. Wisdom has been shown by committing full power over the Russian army in the East to the renowned and competent General Koropotkin, who, both as a warrior in the field and as Minister of War, has shown that he is a man of part.

Contrary to expectation, the Arbitration Tribunal sitting upon the claims of the blockading powers for preferential payment of claims against Venezuela, was unanimous in deciding that the three powers—Great Britain, Germany and Italy—have the right to a preference of 30 per cent. of the customs duties at La Guayra and Puerto Cabello, the litigants to pay their own costs in the procedure

IT IS A MATTER OF HEALTH

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

and to divide equally the costs of the tribunal. A sentence in a London dispatch, stating that the United States is commissioned to carry out the decision of the tribunal regarding costs within three months caused great surprise in this country, and has led to considerable comment relative to the supposed position in which the United States is placed regarding responsibility for carrying out the decision of the tribunal. When the matter was called to the attention of the State Department it was stated that the sentence quoted was unintelligible, and that no interpretation could be safely placed on it until the full text of the decision should be received. At the same time it was distinctly declared by Secretary Hay that there was no guarantee on the part of the United States that could place this government under any obligation whatever, and that the tribunal itself could not, under any circumstances, make a decision that would impose an obligation on the United States.

WORLD'S FAIR AT ST. LOUIS.

FIRST GREAT EXCURSION.

Via Pennsylvania Railroad, May 10th.

The Louisiana Purchase Exposition will open at St. Louis April 30th, and will be in perfect condition on that date. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company will run the first low-rate coach excursion from the East to the World's Fair on May 10th, affording residents of the Eastern section an opportunity to see the great Exposition in all the glory of its pristine freshness. Tickets will be sold from all principal stations on the Pennsylvania Railroad System. The fare from New York will be $20.00; from Philadelphia, $18.50, with proportionate rates, approximating one cent per mile, from other points. These tickets will be good going only on special coach trains to be run on May 10th, and returning in coaches of regular trains leaving St. Louis not later than May 19th.

THIS IS WHAT THE MOTHERS DO.

Playing with the little people
Sweet old games forever new;
Coaxing, cuddling, cooing, kissing,
Baby's every grief dismissing,
Laughing, sighing, soothing, singing,
While the happy days are winging,—
This is what the mothers do.

Planning for the little people,
That they may grow brave and true;
Active brain and busy fingers
While the precious seedtime lingers,
Guiding, guarding, hoping, fearing,
Waiting for the harvest nearing,—
This is what the mothers do.

Praying for the little people
(Closed are eyes of brown and blue),
By the quiet bedside kneeling
With a trustful, sure appealing;
All the Spirit's guidance needing,
Seeking it with earnest pleading,—
This is what the mothers do.

Parting from the little people,
(Heart of mine, how fast they grow!)
Fashioning the wedding dresses,
Treasuring the last caresses;
Waiting then as years fly faster
For the summons of the Master—
This is what the mothers do.
—Mary L. C. Robinson, in "S. S. Times."

John R. Mott, who has been twice around the world in the interest of the Student Volunteer movement, has just returned from a short trip to Europe, which was attended by many of the same spiritual results that marked his work in India and Japan two years ago. His three days' meeting with the students of Edinburg University recalls the day when

DOCTOR'S COFFEE

And His Daughter Matched Him.

Coffee drinking troubled the family of a physician of Grafton, W. Va., who describes the situation briefly:

"Having suffered quite a while from vertigo, palpitation of the heart and many other derangements of the nervous system, and finding no relief from usual methods of treatment, I thought to see how much there was in the Postum argument against coffee.

"So I resorted to Postum, cutting off the coffee, and to my surprise and satisfaction have found entire relief from all my sufferings, proving conclusively the baneful effect of coffee and the way to be rid of it.

"I have found Postum completely takes the place of coffee both in flavor and in taste. It is becoming more popular every day with many of our people, and is having great demand here.

"My daughter, Mrs. Long, has been a sufferer for a long time from attacks of acute indigestion. By the dismissal of coffee and using Postum in its place she has obtained complete relief.

"I have also heard from many others who have used your Postum very favorable accounts of its good effects.

"I prescribe Postum in place of coffee in a great many cases, and I believe that upon its merits Postum will come into general use." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Look for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville," in each package.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

We particularly invite the attention of the readers of "The American Friend" to this column. It will be found useful for almost everyone who wishes to advertise. The cost is 5c. per line each insertion. No advertisement is accepted for less than 25c. Cash with order.

OLD-FASHIONED grandfather clocks repaired at home. If yours needs attention send me a postal or, better, call. My store is within three minutes' walk of the Market Street ferries. Repairing of clocks and watches of every kind. Prompt service and moderate prices. W. L. Berry, Watchmaker and Jeweler, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

NEW SONG BOOK.—"Gold Tried in the Fire." One of the best song books on the market for church, Sunday school and evangelistic work. Bound in limp cloth and contains over 200 songs. Sells for $15.00 per hundred. 20 cents a copy. Published by Friends. BROWN BROS., Indianapolis, Indiana.

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER.—Careful and accurate repairing, with prompt service, has brought me the custom of many Friends. Their patronage is particularly solicited. My store is nearest to the Market Street ferries, and is easy of access from every part of the city. W. L. Berry, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

WANTED.—A thousand families of "Friends" and others to come west and buy land in Woods county, Oklahoma, while you can get good farms at half their value. Rich valley land near Friends' meeting, Stella Academy, railroad and good market. In the great wheat and alfalfa belt, and fruit in abundance, the best part of Oklahoma. Warm, healthy climate, with splendid society. Write us for circulars and price lists. References, Pastor "Friends'" Church, First National Bank of Cherokee. Very truly, VOTAW and SETZER, "Friends."

FOR SALE.—In consequence of advancing age I offer my Cold Storage Plant for Sale, fully equipped; a desirable business in an extensive Fruit Section for a young or middle aged man. Good Friends' Meeting information as to capacity, income, etc. Apply to W. T. Willis, Proprietor, Clintondale, N. Y. Terms easy.

FOR SALE.—A modern house of fifteen rooms, hot water heating, gas and city water, well and cisterns, barn and 3 acres of ground, 2 squares from Earlham College, 2 squares from two lines of Street cars. Wm. H. Middleton, Richmond, Ind.

Professor Drummond was so influential in student circles there. At one of the sessions over one thousand men were present, chiefly medical students, always difficult to reach spiritually, and though he intended to talk less than an hour, in response to requests from the floor, he was kept talking two hours and a half, and at the close of the conference nearly seventy students declared their purpose to become disciples of Christ. Among them were some of the strongest men of the university. He hastened on to France, where he addressed the students at the Universities of Paris and Nancy, and thence went to Italy in response to invitations, where he visited six student centers. At Rome he conducted the first Christian student congress ever held in Italy, at which two hundred delegates from fourteen universities and fourteen higher colleges were present. At one of the sessions the American Ambassador presided.

A Union general when asked by another commander where he would place his troops, replied: "Anywhere; there's lovely fighting all along the line." He who is anxious to serve his Master will have no difficulty in finding his field. "There's lovely fighting all along the line."

First Russian: "You say the fight was quickly over?"

Second Russian: "Yes; it was finished before you could say Jackopolinsky Robinsonopolotowsky."—"New Orleans Times-Democrat."

Beautiful Country Seat

I OFFER FOR RENT FOR THE SEASON of 1904, the Summer Home of John S. Kimber, Esq., in Middletown, Rhode Island. The estate is situated on the main road, one-half a mile from city line and one and one-half miles from County Court House. There are about 5 acres of spacious grounds, high elevation, unsurpassed view.

7 MASTERS' ROOMS, 2 bath rooms, quarters for six servants, house artistically furnished, large stable and several smaller buildings. Section abounds with charming drives. Electric railroad between Newport and Fall River pass the place. Reasonable rental.

For plans and full particulars, address,

C. H. WRIGHTINGTON, 94 Broadway, Newport, R. I.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

STENOGRAPHER

GEO. B. COCK

Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter Street.

Telephones.

It is one of the sad things of life that the innocent must sometimes suffer with the guilty. An engineer fails to observe the signal and a score of lives are lost and many homes plunged into sorrow. Some one blunders and 600 lives are lost in a burning theater. A ruler is ambitious and nations are plunged into war, and countless thousands mourn. It seems that "each iniquity must be paid for out of the resources of the race."

The British Friend

Published on the 15th of each month.

Being the only religious and literary review written chiefly for the general public, but from the standpoint of the Society of Friends, The British Friend offers a unique opportunity for spreading "The Truth" among thoughtful enquirers.

The February issue contains:

"Three Apocalypses." By John Wilhelm Rowntree.

"The Life of the Spirit," II. By D. Macfadyen, M. A.

"Bible Notes," II. (Prophetic Period). By A. Neave Brayshaw.

"The Society of Friends in America;" "Helen Keller;" "Personal Covenants;" and "A Prophet of Unbelief." By the Editors.

A distinct feature is made of Reviews and Notices of Books, especially such as are likely to be helpful to preachers and social workers.

Subscription: 6s. 6d. ($1.58) per annum, post free

A specimen copy may be obtained by sending 14 cents in stamps to Asenath H. Reece, 122 West Miner St., West Chester, Pa.

Editor and Publisher:

EDWARD GRUBB, M.A.

Devonshire Chambers Bishopsgate, Without, Lon. E. C.

We are Going to the Christian Endeavor Hotel,
World's Fair, St. Louis

Because it will be headquarters during the Exposition for Christian People, Educators and friends of morality. The hotel is located at the Fair Grounds, with street cars direct from Union Station. Built for safety and comfort. Hotel capacity 3,000. Auditorium capacity 3,000. Backed by men of highest standing and endorsed by the Clergy and World's Fair officials. Now is the time to arrange for reduced rates. Send for illustrated booklet giving particulars. Tell your friends about it. Address at once, Christian Endeavor Hotel and Auditorium Co., Chemical Building, St. Louis, Mo.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a.

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote, 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p.m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cts. per night; $3 per week.

Two occupants, 50 cts. each, per night.
2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL

Phone Spruce 33-55. Clerk.

DREER'S Garden Book
for 1904

should be in the hands of every lover of flowers, grower of vegetables, and farmer in the country. Contains 208 pages and six high-class full page colored plates, illustrating Hardy Chrysanthemums, Asters, Poppies, Garden Pinks and Vegetables. Full of valuable cultural information and hints on the beautifying of the home, garden and surroundings.

Sent by mail to any address on receipt of 10c in stamps or silver. With each copy we send free one package each, Dreer's Superb Branching Asters, Fringed Japanese Pinks and Select Shirley Poppies.

HENRY A. DREER,

714 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

THE NEW HYMN BOOK!

BY THREE FAMOUS COMPOSERS
DOANE, KIRKPATRICK AND MAIN
256 pages. 276 hymns with music.

One-half new songs that will never grow old.
One-half old songs that will always be new.

If you need a new hymn book you had better see

DEVOTIONAL SONGS
before making your choice.

Substantially bound in cloth, $25 per 100.

THE BOOK ITSELF IS ITS BEST ADVERTISEMENT.

Returnable copies for examination mailed on request.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York—Chicago.

RELIANCE.

Not to the swift, the race;
Not to the strong, the fight;
Not to the righteous, perfect grace;
Not to the wise, the light.

But often faltering feet
Come surest to the goal;
And they who walk in darkness meet
The sunrise of the soul.

A thousand times by night
The Syrian hosts have died;
A thousand times the vanquished right
Hath risen, glorified.

The truth the wise men sought
Was spoken by a child;
The alabaster box was brought
In trembling hands defiled.

Not from my torch, the gleam,
But from the stars above;
Not from my heart, life's crystal stream,
But from the depths of Love.

—Henry van Dyke, in January "Atlantic."

OLD POINT COMFORT, RICHMOND AND WASHINGTON.

Six-day Tour via Pennsylvania Railroad.

The first personally-conducted tour to Old Point Comfort, Richmond and Washington via the Pennsylvania Railroad for the present season will leave New York and Philadelphia on Saturday, March 12th.

Tickets, including transportation, meals en route in both directions, transfers of passengers and baggage, hotel accommodations at Old Point Comfort, Richmond and Washington, and carriage ride about Richmond—in fact, every necessary expense for a period of six days—will be sold at rate of $36.00 from New York, Brooklyn and Newark; $34.50 from Trenton; $33.00 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other stations.

OLD POINT COMFORT ONLY.

Tickets to Old Point Comfort only, including luncheon on going trip, one and three-fourths days' board at Chamberlin Hotel, and good to return direct by regular trains within six days, will be sold in connection with this tour at rate of $17.00 from New York, Brooklyn and Newark; $15.50 from Trenton; $14.50 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other points.

For itineraries and full information apply to ticket agents; Tourist Agent, 263 Fifth Avenue, New York; 4 Court Street, Brooklyn; 789 Broad Street, Newark, N. J., or George W. Boyd, Assistant General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

FLORIDA AND THE CAROLINAS—
WINTER RESORTS.

Palm Beach, Miami, Daytona, Tampa, Jacksonville, Camden, Southern Pines, Pinehurst are quickly and most conveniently reached via the Seaboard Air Line. Three daily trains in each direction, including the Seaboard Florida Limited, the handsomest and quickest train in the Florida service. Tourist tickets on sale daily, with stop-over privileges. For description, booklets and information, address W. E. Conklyn, General Agent, 1411 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Good lamp-chimneys one make my name on 'em all.

MACBETH.

How to take care of lamps, including the getting of right-shape chimneys, is in my index; sent free.

MACBETH. Pittsburgh.

"What did you see about that wholesale butcher's sign that caused you to giggle so?"

"Headquarters for hindquarters."—
"Houston Post."

THE INFANT

takes first to human milk; that failing, the mother turns at once to cow's milk as the best substitute. Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk is a cow's milk scientifically adapted to the human infant. Stood first for forty-five years.

HOOPING-COUGH AND CROUP.

Roche's Herbal Embrocation

The celebrated and effectual English Cure without internal medicine. Proprietors, W. EDWARDS & SON, Queen Victoria St., London, England. Wholesale of E. Fougere & Co., 80 North William Street, N. Y.

S. F. BALDERSTON'S SON

Wall Paper and Decorations

Window Shades Made to Order

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILA.

IT is 53 years young; up to 20th century methods throughout.

Get particulars free.

No importunity.

PENN MUTUAL LIFE

921-3-5 Chestnut Street.

FINANCIAL.

6%

to 7% Choice First Mortgage Loans, Seattle and vicinity. Local and N. Y. references. Established 1887. Correspondence Solicited. JAMES BOTHWELL, Seattle, Washington.

Mortgages Net 6% in North Dakota.

I place mortgages on land covering about one-third its value. The value of this land is constantly increasing.

I know every mortgagor personally, know his land, his integrity, his habits and his ability to pay.

These combine to make me certain that these mortgages are as safe as GOVERNMENT BONDS.

Investigate me. You can't make the investigation too rigid to suit me. I'll stand it. I've been in this business for 18 years, and never lost a cent for a customer, nor foreclosed a mortgage.

I collect the interest and principal without charge and remit in New York exchange. Write to me for further information.

WALTER L. WILLIAMSON

Investment Banker

Lisbon

North Dakota

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE.

Sifts the flour and mixes 10 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for booklet. Agents wanted.

Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CYRUS CHAMBERS, Jr.) 52d & Media Sts., Philadelphia

WILLIAM S. YARNALL

Manufacturing OPTICIAN

118 S. FIFTEENTH ST., PHILA.
4th Door Below Chestnut St.

OSTEOPATHY

EDWARD D. BURLIGH
ALEXANDER STETSON

Osteopathic Physicians, 1537 Chestnut St., Room 401

Hours, 9 a.m. to 12.30 p.m. and 2 to 4 p.m.

Bell Telephone

Consultation free.

JOSEPH G. FOGG

UNDERTAKER AND EMBALMER

S. W. Cor. Sixteenth and Race Sts.

Phone Spruce 44-38-W.

PHILADELPHIA.

Suburban orders promptly attended.

FREE-MILLING GOLD MINES

Having large ore bodies accessible for cheap mining, where the simplest and cheapest process will turn the ore into gold bars at the mines, are always winners, and head the list for large and regular dividend-payers. The reason is that mining under such conditions resolves itself into a stable manufacturing business, Free-milling GOLD Ore, the raw material, and GOLD BARS, the finished product. With the element of uncertainty connected with the treatment of refractory ores eliminated, the results can be as accurately computed as in the manufacture of coke and sugar, and only requires judicious management to make it absolutely A Safe and Profitable Investment.

An opportunity for such an investment is now offered by

THE PAN-TONOPAH MINING & EXPLORATION COMPANY

who have enormous, well-developed bodies of absolutely free-milling GOLD Ore at their Silver Star Mines, near Sodaville, Nevada. Mill run values $5.00 to $50.00 per ton. Estimated $3,000,000 of ore in sight. United States Mint returns show $300,000 from present mill on property, by former owners. A limited amount of stock is offered at 25 cents per share to increase capacity of mill to 100 tons. Write for Prospectus and Letters of Endorsement from eminent mining experts, bankers and editors.

Address the Company, at 5-7 E. 42d Street, New York City

ELIAS G. MINARD, Secretary. ARLANDO MARINE, Treasurer.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA. Office, 409 CHESTNUT STREET

CAPITAL, $1,000,000

ASSETS, $63,970,335.34

Surplus and Undivided Profits, belonging to Stockholders

4,026,151.15

Surplus, belonging to Insurance Account

5,635,620.25

Incorporated Third month 22, 1865. Charter Perpetual.

INSURES LIVES, GRANTS ANNUITIES, RECEIVES MONEY ON DEPOSIT, returnable on demand for which interest is allowed.

And is empowered by law to act as EXECUTOR ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, GUARDIAN, ASSIGNEE, COMMITTEE, RECEIVER, AGENT, etc.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the assets of the Company.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.

BOXES $5 AND UPWARDS

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY, President.

T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-Prest.
ASA S. WING, Vice-President.
JOS. ASHBROOK, Man. Ins. Dept.
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer.

J. R. FOULKE, Trust Officer.
DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary.
J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Assistant Trust Officer.
C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary.

DIRECTORS:

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY,
T. WISTAR BROWN,
HENRY HAINES,
RICHARD WOOD,
CHAS. HARTSHORNE,

ASA S. WING,
PHILIP C. GARRETT,
JAMES V. WATSON,
WM. LONGSTRETH,
THOS. SCATTERGOOD,

J. PRESTON THOMAS,
ROBERT M. JANNEY,
MARRIOTT C. MORRIS,
FRANK H. TAYLOR,
JOSEPH B. TOWNSEND, Jr.

43 Flowers 30¢

Worth $1.25
SPECIAL OFFER to introduce our goods. Money back if not pleased.

20 Pkts. Seeds
1 Pkt. Diamond Flower.
" Simple Aster, 4 cols.
" California Sweet Peas.
1 Pkt. Washington Weeping Palm.
1 Pkt. Heliotrope, mxd. 1 Pkt. Umbrella Plant.
1 Pkt. Double Chinese Pink. " Japan Morning Glory.
" New Candytuft Empress. 1 Pkt. Phlox Drummondii.
1 Pkt. Bouquet Chrysanthemum. " Carnation Marguerite.
" Poppy—" American Flag. " Petunia Hybrid, mxd.
" Forget-me-not Victoria. " Pansies, 10 colors mxd.
" Lovely Butterfly Flower. " Calif. Golden Bells.
" Alyssum Little Gem, mxd. " Giant Verbena, mixed.

23 BULBS

1 New Begonia "Splendens," 1 Summer Flowering Hyacinth, 1 Double Pearl Tuberosa, 2 Butterfly and 2 Hybrid Gladioli, 8 Fine Mixed Oxalis, 2 "Fair Maids of France," 2 Hardy Wind Flowers, 2 Lovely Cinnamon Vines, 2 Splendid New Cannas Lilies—1 crimson, 1 "Novelty."

A Return Check Good for 25¢, on first $1.00 order; also our New Floral Guide, telling all about Roses and 400 other choice flowers. All above postpaid, only 30¢.

THE CONRAD & JONES CO.
"Growers of the Best Roses in America,"
Box X, West Grove, Pa.

FREE

GREGORY'S SEED CATALOGUE FOR 1904

Safe Sowers Sure Growers

GREGORY'S SEEDS

have been successfully sown and grown for nearly 60 years. Sold under three guarantees. Send to-day for free catalogue.

J. J. H. GREGORY & SON, Harborside, Mass.

10,000 Plants for 16c

More gardens and farms are planted to Salzer's Seeds than any other in America. There is reason for this. We own and operate over 5000 acres for the production of our warranted seeds. In order to induce you to try them, we make you the following unprecedented offer:

For 16 Cents Postpaid

1000 Early, Medium and Late Cabbages,
2000 Delicious, Cactois,
2000 Blanching Celery,
2000 Rich Nutty Lettuce,
1000 Splendid Onions,
1000 Rare Lucious Radishes,
1000 Gloriously Brilliant Flowers.
Above seven packages contain sufficient seed to grow 10,000 plants, furnishing bushels of brilliant flowers and lots and lots of choice vegetables, together with our great catalogue, telling all about Flowers, Roses, Small Fruits, etc., all for 16c in stamps and this notice. Mammoth 140-page catalog alone, 4c.

JOHN A. SALZER SEED CO.,
R. La Crosse, Wis.

Delavau's Remedy

A SPECIFIC FOR
Whooping Cough and Croup

Also a safe and speedy cure for Bronchitis, Bronchial Catarrh and ordinary coughs. 50 Cents a Bottle, at Druggists, or

J. W. S. DELAVAU & CO., Prop'rs.
N. E. Cor. 6th and Wood Sts., Phila.

Earlham College Library

The American Friend

Vol. XI

THIRD MONTH 10, 1904

No. 10

	PAGE
EDITORIALS. — "Milk for Babes." — Children and the Theater. — The Religious Education Association 159-160
The Source of Peace	160
Amory H. Bradford.
The Light in the Desert	161
Clarence M. Case.
Theater-Going for Children	162
SOME VIEWS ON PRESENT TOPICS:
The Church at Play	164
Mead A. Kelsey,
THE INTERNATIONAL LESSON	165
Lesson for Third month 20, 1904.
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR	166
Topic for Third month 20, 1904.
MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT	166
CORRESPONDENCE	168
THINGS OF INTEREST AMONG OURSELVES, 169
MARRIED.—DIED	169
EVENTS AND COMMENTS	170

THE COMING BROTHERHOOD.

There shall come from out this noise of strife and groaning,

A broader and a juster brotherhood ;

A deep equality of aim, postponing

All selfish seeking to the general good.

There shall come a time, when each shall to another,

Be as Christ would have him, brother unto brother.

There shall come a time when brotherhood grows stronger

Than the narrow bounds which now distract the world,

When the cannons roar and trumpets blare no longer,

And the ironclads rust, and battle flags are furled ;

When the bars of creed and speech and race, which sever,

Shall be fused in one humanity forever.

—SIR LEWIS MORRIS.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.50 A YEAR ❁ ❁ ❁ PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
AMERICAN FRIEND PUBLISHING COMPANY, 718 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA

EDUCATIONAL.

EARLHAM COLLEGE,

RICHMOND,
INDIANA

Prof. Elbert Russell offers courses regularly in Kings, New Testament Times, Life of Christ, The Apostolic Age, Church History, New Testament Literature, Romans, John, Biblical Literature, Isaiah.

Prof. Cyrus W. Hodgkin, The Protestant Reformation.

Prof. Anna M. Demaree, New Testament, Greek.

Asst. Prof. Lindley, History of the Hebrews.

Pres. Kelly, History of Philosophy, Ethics, Psychology.

The Oakwood Seminary

UNION SPRINGS, N. Y.

Founded in 1796.

A boarding school for boys and girls under the care of New York Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Academic, College Preparatory and Commercial

Spring term begins Fourth month 5, 1904

SAMUEL H. HODGIN,
Principal.LINDLEY M. STEVENS,
Superintendent.

WHITTIER COLLEGE

Classical, Scientific and Literary courses. Highest requirements. Students unable to continue their studies in more rigorous climes will find this climate the best in the world for study. Natural advantages for scientific investigation unsurpassed. Well equipped laboratory. Whittier, a Friend's community, —morally clean, —no saloons or kindred sources of corruption. For catalogue address,

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, President.

SHORTHAND TAUGHT BY MAIL

or in school. Each student receives personal attention. Moderate rates. Write for full information.

PROVIDENT SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND

805 Provident Building Philadelphia, Pa.

STENOGRAPHING, TYPEWRITING and
MIMEOGRAPHING. Prices moderate.

MARY M. KITE

407 Lippincott Building, 12th and Filbert Sts., Phila.
Phone No. 3-33-00WILLIAM S. YARNALL
Manufacturing OPTICIAN118 S. FIFTEENTH ST., PHILA.
4th Door Below Chestnut St.FLORIDA AND THE CAROLINAS—
WINTER RESORTS.

Palm Beach, Miami, Daytona, Tampa, Jacksonville, Camden, Southern Pines, Pinehurst are quickly and most conveniently reached via the Seaboard Air Line. Three daily trains in each direction, including the Seaboard Florida Limited, the handsomest and quickest train in the Florida service. Tourist tickets on sale daily, with stop-over privileges. For description, booklets and information, address W. E. Conklyn, General Agent, 1411 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Delavau's Remedy

A SPECIFIC FOR

Whooping Cough and Croup

Also a safe and speedy cure for Bronchitis, Bronchial Catarrh and ordinary coughs. 50 Cents a Bottle, at Druggists, or

J. W. S. DELAVAU & CO., Prop'r's.

N. E. Cor. 6th and Wood Sts., Phila.

OSTEOPATHY

EDWARD D. BURLEIGH
ALEXANDER STETSON

Osteopathic Physicians, 1537 Chestnut St., Room 401.

Hours, 9 a.m. to 12.30 p.m. and 2 to 4 p.m.

Bell Telephone

Consultation free.

S. F. BALDERSTON'S SON

Wall Paper and
Decorations

Window Shades Made to Order

302 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILA.

Acker has it—that American
Breakfast Coffee.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA. Office, 409 CHESTNUT STREET

CAPITAL, $1,000,000

ASSETS, $63,970,335.34

Surplus and Undivided Profits, belonging to Stockholders 4,026,151.15

Surplus, belonging to Insurance Account 5,635,620.25

Incorporated Third month 22, 1865. Charter Perpetual.

INSURES LIVES, GRANTS ANNUITIES, RECEIVES MONEY ON DEPOSIT, returnable on demand for which interest is allowed.

And is empowered by law to act as EXECUTOR ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, GUARDIAN, ASSIGNEE, COMMITTEE, RECEIVER, AGENT, etc.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the assets of the Company.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.

BOXES $5 AND UPWARDS

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY, President.

T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-Prest.
ASA S. WING, Vice-President.
JOS. ASHBROOK, Man. Ins. Dept.
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer.

J. R. FOULKE, Trust Officer.

DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary.

J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Assistant Trust Officer.

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary.

DIRECTORS:

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY,
T. WISTAR BROWN,
HENRY HAINES,
RICHARD WOOD,
CHAS. HARTSHORNE,

ASA S. WING,
PHILIP C. GARRETT,
JAMES V. WATSON,
WM. LONGSTRETH,
THOS. SCATTERGOOD,

J. PRESTON THOMAS,
ROBERT M. JANNEY,
MARRIOTT C. MORRIS,
FRANK H. TAYLOR,
JOSEPH B. TOWNSEND, JR.

FREE

GREGORY'S SEED CATALOGUE FOR 1904

Our catalogue gives special instructions for the most successful cultivation of each class of vegetables.

GREGORY'S SEEDS

are always safe. They sell the purest grass and clover seed in the United States. Try it.

J. J. H. GREGORY & SON, Marblehead, Mass.

Salzer's National Oats

Greatest oat of the century. Yielded in 1903 in Ohio 187, in Mich. 231, in Mo. 255, and in N. Dakota 310 bus. per acre. You can beat that record in 1904!

For 10c and this notice

We mail you free lots of farm seed samples and our big catalog, telling all about this oat wonder and thousands of other seeds.

JOHN A. SALZER SEED CO.
La Crosse, Wis.

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

Gluten Grits AND BARLEY CRYSTALS,

Perfect Breakfast and Desert Health Cereals.
PANSY FLOUR for Biscuits, Cake and Pastry.
Unlike all other goods. Ask Grocers.
For book of sample, write
FARWELL & RHINES, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE.

Sifts the flour and mixes 10 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for booklet. Agents wanted.

Scientific Bread Mach. Co.
(CYRUS CHAMBERS, Jr.)
52d & Media Sts., Philadelphia

EMINENT PHYSICIANS
throughout the world recommend

QUINA-LAROCHE

AS A SPECIFIC IN CASES OF
ANAEMIA, COLDS, LA GRIFFE,
SLOW CONVALESCENCE,
STOMACH TROUBLES,
TYPHOID and MALARIAL
FEVERS.

E. Fougere & Co., 30 N. William St., N. Y.

The American Friend

"Truth is the highest thing a man may keep."
"That they all may be one."

VOL. XI.

PHILADELPHIA, THIRD MONTH 10, 1904.

No. 10.

"MILK FOR BABES."

THE Apostle Paul has very much to say about "spiritual babes." Some of the primitive churches seem to have been well supplied with them, and Paul regrets that he can give them only "milk," because they are not strong enough for "meat." Any one, however, who undertakes to grasp the profound messages which Paul wrote to those "spiritual babes" will be convinced that they must have been extraordinary infants. After more than eighteen hundred years of Christian civilization we still find this "milk," which he gave his "babes," about as "strong meat" as we can assimilate to-day! The truth is that "babyism" has always been a striking feature in the Church—in every branch of it. Study any period of church history and we find beliefs and practices prevailing which are so inconsistent with the revelation in the Gospel that it is hard to conceive how followers of Christ could have permitted them to grow up. But we must remember that the churches originally were made up mostly of persons who had been pagans. They brought their practices with them into the Church, and while Christianity changed them they also changed Christianity. They leveled it down to their spiritual stature. It has always remained so. Even the best churches to-day have a very human side to them. He who goes looking only for "meat" will be disappointed. He will discover many still in swaddling clothes, and he will be surprised at the amount of "milk" which is furnished. He will come away feeling that the church is still in the nursery stage, that most Christians are "spiritual babes." It is a fact.

Again and again attempts have been made to rise above "babyism" and to have the Church composed only of persons of spiritual stature, eager for strong meat. That would be lovely if it were possible. But such attempts always fail, because it is the mission of the Church to deal with the world as it is, to take into itself imperfect human beings who are just "babes" and nothing more.

What an awful world this would be if all of us who are grown up despised babies and helpless infants! The most beautiful thing about our world is the tenderness of men and women for little helpless creatures who have just come into being. What a pretty sight it is to see a strong man talking baby-talk to a tiny, wee upturned face which only half understands the little monosyllables. Why doesn't this strong man teach the newcomer the mysteries of metaphysics, and tell it the latest secrets of science? Why, it's a baby. It must learn by slow stages. It needs tremendous patience. Teach it too fast and it fails to get on at all, and all development is arrested. It is a baby and it must have "intellectual milk"!

Well, the world is all full of persons who are in the baby stage spiritually. They have grasped very little of the riches of the knowledge of the glory of God. They are beginning to see; truth is just dawning; their appetite is small, their spiritual perceptions weak. What shall be done with such persons? Shall we ignore them, leave them to their fate, give them strong meat or nothing; or shall we treat them as a tender mother and speak to their condition? Surely the latter course is right. We must take men as we find them. We must start with them as they are. We must not be ashamed of swaddling clothes and "milk." We must speak in a language which our spiritual babes can understand. But let us not lose sight of the goal and purpose, which is to get beyond babyism and childish things just as fast as possible, and to come up to the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ.

CHILDREN AND THE THEATER.

WE are reprinting this week from the "Congregationalist" a splendid article on "Theater-going for Children," written by an expert. The impressive teaching which this article gives may seem not to be needed by most of our readers. In a sense this is true. Friends as a people are not theater-goers themselves, and their children are not often spectators of plays. We have reprinted the article for two reasons: (1) Because these undeniable psychological facts should be clearly known by every mother for their bearing upon theater-going, and (2) because the principles set forth in the article have a very much wider bearing, and concern every mother whether there is a theater in her neighborhood or not. Few things are more important than the necessity of understanding child-nature. Children should not be treated as though they were just like adults only smaller. Most of the mistakes which are made are made through this fundamental error. This article deals with the whole subject in a clear and adequate way.

THE RELIGIOUS EDUCATION ASSOCIATION.

THERE are many indications that there is a steadily-growing interest in the Bible, and that there is a great desire among earnest men and women everywhere to discover its real message to the individual and to society. Nothing in recent years has manifested the truth of these statements more conclusively than has the remarkable growth of the Religious Education Association, which was born in Chicago one year ago. Its annual sessions in Philadelphia have just come to a close. They have been attended and participated in by the leading educators of America, both men and women, and by distinguished persons from all Protestant denominations. No movement in recent years has been more full of promise, and those who read the proceedings of these three days of conference will look ahead with hope.

The Association has many aims. One of the main aims is to work out more adequate methods of teaching the Bible in Sunday School. Everybody is conscious that, important as Bible schools are, for various reasons they do not succeed in arousing the interest in the Bible or the enthusiasm for its message that its promoters have prayed and labored for. There are weaknesses and discouragements where we all yearn for strength and power. What is lacking? How can the Sunday School be made the actual training place for the great masses of young people who have no other opportunities for having the Bible opened to them? Just such questions this Association has gone to studying and has already begun to answer.

How can the public schools, from the lowest primary grade to the high school, become centers of moral and religious influences, so that they shall not only instruct the mind, but also feed the whole nature? How shall they supply not only information, but also formation, of the life itself? This is another question which the Association is trying to answer. How can the colleges and universities fulfill their great mission of ministering not merely to the intellect, but to the whole man? This is still another problem which the Religious Education Association is taking up with the serious purpose of finding an answer for it. There are altogether seventeen departments of work organized under the central Association. The papers and addresses which were given in Philadelphia will soon be published, and they will make a solid contribution to the constructive religious literature of this generation.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

THE SOURCE OF PEACE.

BY AMORY H. BRADFORD.

In our earlier years we seek happiness; in our later years we are grateful for peace. Where may that golden grace be found? There is none too much of it anywhere. The prevalence of murder among animals is a terrible fact. Nature is "red tooth and claw." The antagonism between human beings and the lower creation, due chiefly to man, is equally sad. Among men in business, in society, and in nations, rivalry and conflict are almost universal. Industries are pitted against one another; commercial interests are engaged in remorseless competition and governments are armed to make sure that no one gets the better of any other. What is true of nations, commerce and society is true also of individuals. What does aspiration mean? Why do we reach toward better things? The race has long been approaching perfection, but this in itself furnishes no assurance that it will continue to do so. Our hope depends upon our faith in a beneficent power behind the processes of life. We believe that events are moving toward a blessed goal, and that that goal is the perfect man; but if there is no loving personality behind, the process may sometime revert to chaos. If, on the other hand, God is, life will not cease until Tennyson's dream of the crowning race is realized.

A young man finds that his character is in ruins. He dare not go to his business, he dare not go to his home. The harmony of his life is broken. What shall be said to him? "Go out into the black night and make yourself as comfortable as you can;" or speak to him in Professor Huxley's words, "Nature never overlooks a mistake, and never makes the slightest allowance for ignorance." If that is all that can be said, such persons may as well bury themselves at once. But if they know that they are in the hands of One infinitely tender as well as infinitely just, who loves with a love passing that of friends, they will begin to look upward because there is thus offered to them the possibility of a nobler life.

All efforts to uplift and ennoble humanity depend upon a conviction that God is, that He is love, and that we are not simply in the midst of a process, in the hands of a Person.

Why do we live? Why do we suffer? Why do we die? Think of the processions of human beings which have been moving down the ages. Whence did they come? Whither do they go? What is the meaning of their aspirations and desires? Why have they been trained, disciplined, cultured? Is it possible to believe that from nothing they have come, and that to chaos they are going? Such questions knock at the doors of our minds with terrible importunity.

Whence? Whither? Why? Without God no answer is possible. He is the key which unlocks all the doors. On the hypothesis of His existence the problem of suffering and of sin, and all the mysteries of nature, may have reasonable solution. All beings who aspire, endure, rejoice, live, die, must be parts of an infinite plan because God exists. Without Him there is neither peace nor rest; with Him events come into order, and the goal at the end of the way is seen to be full of blessing. With Him every enigma is explicable; without Him nothing can be explained. If He is, humanity "with all its tears and all its hope for future years," moves on toward a great and splendid consummation in the fullness of His times, in the greatness of His purpose. One of the most beautiful spirits whom I have ever known once said to me, with an intensity which I cannot describe, "Tell me, what do you mean by God?"; and then added, "O! I would give the world if I could find Him!" It seemed to me as if in those tones I caught an echo of a far older voice exclaiming, "O! that I knew where I might find Him!"

How may the idea of God be made real to us? To this question we reply, "Do not be concerned about finding God; let Him find you." It has been said that other religions represent men as seeking God, but that Christianity represents God as seeking men. Our inner ears must hear the Spirit speak; otherwise there will be no assurance. No mere argument, however carefully formulated, could endure the fires of experience through which all have to pass. Nothing but the vision which appears in the midst of darkness can give peace and rest. My first answer to the inquiry, How may I find Him? is, Do not try to find Him, but be sure that you are willing that He should find you. If He exists, and you desire Him, He will not fail you. If He does, then He is not. The seeker after God who can say, "I would give the world if I might find Him" is sure to be found; he need never do anything except keep his mind pure, and his heart right, so that when the vision comes the eyes may see, and when the voice speaks the ears may hear.

"But," you say, "I have tried to do all that, and yet I am not sure." Are not sure? Have you not in your hours of quiet heard some one telling you of the right, and urging you to do it? Have you not in the midst of the struggle and despair caught glimpses of better things, and said, "Oh! if they only would be true I should be satisfied." Those glimpses of better things were a vision of God and His purpose. When you hear the inner voice telling you to be loyal to the right, you are listening to God. When there shines in the midnight some fair star of hope, and the heart springs toward it and says, "If it only were true!" that response is assurance enough that it is true. The Divine One makes Himself known by the hopes which He inspires and the ideals which He uplifts.

There is also a shorter and, for most persons, a better way to the realization of God. When there rises that eager cry, "I would give all the world if I could find Him," it is needful only to point to Jesus Christ and say, He is the One whom you are seeking. Trust Him and all your problems and difficulties will go. Is one carrying secrets which he would not dare to have photographed? Let him take the Christ at His Word; live according to what He says; obey Him, and before the process can be explained there will be peace and rest. If society would be true to Him, if the nations would accept Him as Master, rivalries would cease, enmities would disappear, and in the place of conflict the day of light and love would dawn. If Jesus Christ were truly followed there would be peace in every heart and concord in every land. But how about those in darkness? How about those who are in poverty and vice? What shall we say about death? Those in poverty and vice are being led toward better things, and at the head of the dark procession, serene and patient, is the Man of Calvary, who bears griefs and carries sorrows. The Christian answer to the world's cry, "How can I find Him?" is, follow Jesus Christ; trust Him; He will dissolve doubts and bring faith and strength. The discontented, dissatisfied, disappointed, disheartened, despairing are on every hand. What may we do to ameliorate their terrible conditions? There is peace for all who have entered into a realization of God, because then they see all men and all events as He sees them.

How may we realize God? The shortest, surest, and a well-proven answer is, Trust Jesus Christ; obey Him; follow Him, and faith will give place to vision.

Then not only among individuals, but also into society, and among the nations, will come the peace which passeth all understanding, which the world cannot give and which it cannot take away. Of this we are sure because God is perfect harmony, and peace is the atmosphere in which He dwells.

Montclair, N. J.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

THE LIGHT IN THE DESERT.

(An Allegory.)

BY CLARENCE M. CASE.

Characters and Setting.—Moses—typifying the human spirit seeking for Divine truth.

The Angel of the Lord—representing God, the Author and Essence of all Truth.

The Children of Israel—typifying the human spirit in bondage to ignorance and sin.

The desert—the soul's solitary communion.

The bush—external nature, particularly familiar objects of every-day life.

The promised land—true spiritual freedom.

Now Moses kept the flock of Jethro, his father-in-law, the priest of Midian, being a man engrossed outwardly with the affairs of earthly existence, and bound down by the exacting duties of the shepherd life. But, impelled by the upward striving of his own soul, he lifted his earthly pursuits to the exalted plane of devotion to the Highest, refused to be hampered by daily cares, or to forsake them, but in the midst of their faithful performance was led to the back side of the desert of spiritual communion, where every human soul sees God and Truth alone.

And the Angel of the Lord—that reflection from the Divine Author of all created things that makes each object, however common, an epitome of the universe and a source of divine inspiration—appeared unto him out of the midst of a bush. The familiar object suddenly became imbued with a new and deeper meaning. Something more beautiful and enduring than graceful twig or delicate leaf or fragrant blossom burst upon the shepherd's inmost vision. The familiar plant beneath whose shade his dog had shared the noon-day meal, around whose stem the flock had grazed, suddenly became the habitation of God, the source of a great light.

And Moses said, "I will now turn aside and see this great sight, why the bush is not burnt." Happy decision! in which for the moment heaven and earth lay in the balance; for only he findeth who seeketh, receiveth who asketh, entereth eternal life and truth who turneth aside to knock at her portals.

And when the Lord saw that he turned aside to see, God, the rewarder of them that diligently seek Him, called unto him out of the midst of the bush, and said, "Moses, Moses." And he, devoting himself to the light, said, "Here am I."

And he said, "Draw not nigh hither; seek no nearer approach in a bodily sense, nor hope by change of physical surroundings to draw closer to spiritual life. The flower in the crannied wall, the most common-place instrument of thy daily toil, may be to thee the key to unlock the secret of what God and man is. Thou art a seeker after the Highest Life; therefore put off thy shoes from off thy feet. Tread reverently thy earthly journeyings; walk thou with stiller feet beneath the skies, for, as with every seeking soul, the ground whereon thou standest is holy ground."

And Moses hid his face and worshiped, made sore afraid by the presence of that unconsuming fire that glorified with strange new light the meaning of earth, and sky, and of his own human life. And the Voice, which thus had spoken from the deeper, inmost heart of nature, from the hidden springs of real Being, wherein dwell the relations of things, thus sealed him to itself, saying:

"No longer shalt thou live to thyself alone. I have surely seen the affliction of my people which are in Egypt, land of the darkness of ignorance and sin; land where the soul gropes in the shadow of death; whence I have heard their cry by reason of their taskmasters of passion, lust and error; for I know their sorrows, against whose imprisoned souls the walls of the Unknown press in to stifle. Thou hast beheld the light of my Truth; henceforth thou art lost if not henceforth its own in true devotion. Come now, therefore. I will send thee back to men and the busy world from this place of blest communion, and thy fellows thou shalt lead up and out of the land of darkness into a good land and a large, unto a land of light and freedom of soul, a land flowing with milk and honey."

Noblesville, Ind.

THEATER-GOING FOR CHILDREN.

BY MARY WOOD ALLEN, M.D.

The tragedy at the matinee in the Iroquois Theater was a veritable "slaughter of the innocents." It is pitiful to read the lists of the dead and their ages: "Mary, nine"; "Ethel, six"; "Harold, four"; "Margaret, twelve"; "Paul, two," and so on through hundreds of names, each one of which means a desolated home, and broken-hearted parents.

In view of the fact that so large a proportion of the audience on that dreadful day were children, the question of the advisability of theater-going as an amusement for children is being widely discussed, and from different standpoints. Much is being said both from the moral and from the physiological points of view, and there is still much that may be said from the psychological; but in order to say this wisely, we must investigate the process of psychological development in the child.

At birth the babe is blind and deaf, and, we may say, without a brain. True, he has brain cells, but they are mostly embryonic, and the principal business of his child-life is to build a brain out of these undeveloped cells. The brain-building begins at once through the sensations brought to it from the outer world. Light-waves strike upon the retina, and are transmitted to the brain and the child begins to see. Day after day the vibrations pour in, and little by little the child comes to recognize them as mother's face, or his bottle; growing slowly into a complete recognition of the objects around him.

Sound-waves pelt his tympanum and are transmitted through bony chain and perilymph to the brain, and in time differentiate themselves into his mother's voice, his rattle, the bark of a dog or the mew of a cat, until at last he has built up brain structure that recognizes all the ordinary sounds of daily life. In the same way, through a gradual unfolding or development of brain cells, he grows into an understanding of his environment, and in the same way he grows into the use of his voluntary muscles.

At first his movements are aimless and largely reflex, but gradually they become orderly and under control of his will. In order that his development may be symmetrical the various stimuli should be given in an orderly manner. That is, there should be no forcing of the process of brain building. Nature does furnish him the material for brain growth as fast as he can use it, and makes no insistent demand for attention in advance of his powers. The child left to himself in his early life will find outdoors the objects that claim his notice and interest him, and they present themselves to him as fast as he is able to receive them. In outdoor play he is happy hour after hour, and it is only when he is brought into the restricted limits of indoor life that he becomes restless and needs to be entertained.

Parents who take their children to the theater to be amused make the mistake of judging the child-nature from the adult standpoint. Children do not need amusement. They need occupation and opportunity for self-expression. We are quite apt to consider the play of children as their amusement, whereas it is their occupation, their serious business. By means of play they are being educated into the possession of their bodies and minds.

Let us examine theater-going for children, bearing in mind these few fundamental psychological principles, viz.: What the child needs is an opportunity for brain-building through occupation and self-expression, and through the orderly presentation of the various stimuli which, suited to his comprehension, give him this opportunity.

The very young child, taken to the theater, is, in the first place, bewildered by the multiplicity of sights and sounds. His immature brain is not prepared for such a complexity of impressions. He is dazed, and not infrequently frightened. Many times parents are surprised that what they had imagined would give the child delight has only caused fear. They have fancied that the spectacular representation of a fairy tale or of some child's story would give the child the same pleasure that the simple home-telling of the story had given. As has been said, they judged the child from the standpoint of the adult. With their broader knowledge of life they could disentangle the multiplicity of sounds, the shifting panorama of colors and movements and make of them something comprehensible; while to the child, untrained and inexperienced, all is at first a chaos of noise and motion and color.

After a time he will become able to see part of that which is portrayed before him, but much of it, being incomprehensible, is by him unseen and unheard. It is true that after a series of experiences he may become able to see and comprehend the play, but this indicates that he has been stimulated to an unnatural development of brain power and that means a disturbing of the balance and consequent inharmony. He has really been subjected to a species of intoxication, from which there must come a reaction.

The theater-going child becomes nervous, irritable, demanding amusement, an unchild-like, and therefore an undesirable, condition. The normal child finds his delight in self-expression and asks only the opportunity for that expression. By the gift of elaborate and perfectly-completed toys, and by teaching him to sit still and be amused by theatrical representations, the child is educated into that most unfortunate condition of looking to outward agencies for entertainment. The result is that he loses the power of self-expression and early becomes blasé.

But, some may ask, Why, if it is allowable to tell these tales to the children, is it not allowable for them to see them portrayed on the stage? Is it not merely another method of telling the story with effective illustrations?

In the mere telling of the story there is no forcing of the child's mind. He is left free to exercise his own imagination, to set the tale to pictures of his own making; so the story-hearing becomes to him an opportunity for self-expression. Each child illustrates the tale according to his own mental acquirements.

In the stage presentation there is nothing for him to do. He is left simply passive. But is there not something for his imagination to work on as he recalls the various scenes? Unfortunately, yes. He has been introduced to an unreal world in such a way that it seems real, and knowing nothing of real life he is led to imagine that what he has seen is real; so false ideas may have been engendered which may eventuate later in wrong conduct. In telling a story to a child you can omit, or add, or qualify, as you see his special need would indicate, and so make the tale a medium for communicating to him some lesson.

Even the portrayal of virtues may have undesirable results. It is a well-known axiom of educators that to have the emotions of pity and generosity aroused with no opportunity for their active employment is detrimental. The child may see fictitious woes and weep over them, with the only result that he is satisfied to see, and do nothing.

This constant arousing of emotions, even though they be desirable in themselves, tends to create an unbalanced condition, a nervous state that borders upon hysteria. This is a poor preparation for approaching adolescence, that time when, because of the endowment of new powers, the youth is brought into a world of strange emotions, and when he needs all possible self-control to help him over this crisis.

If the theater is objectionable for the child who is approaching puberty, how much more undesirable is it for the growing boy and girl who is passing through this great change! This is the period when the feelings have dominion, when emotions rule. To add to their power through the influence of the drama is to add to the dangers of this critical time. Now, if ever, should the youth be led away from thoughts of romance into the domain of facts. Now is the time for intellectual pursuits, for study of nature, for a quiet, wholesome life, free from excitement, free from all the meretricious surroundings of society life, either on the stage or off; the time for early hours, simple food, pure air and the light of day; instead of late bedtime and late rising, unwholesome eatables at unreasonable hours, vitiated air and the glare of artificial lights.

The theater managers in Chicago are clamoring for permission to reopen their places of amusement, urging as a reason, not the present loss by closure, but the fact that people are learning to be entertained at home. The tide that has turned so strongly towards the theater is, through its closing, ebbing away from their doors, and will not readily be induced to return to its former channels. We sincerely trust that this opinion may prove a true prophecy, and that, for the sake of the children and youth, the home and family circle may be rediscovered as the true theater of enjoyment.—From the "Congregationalist."

Some Views on Present Topics.

THE CHURCH AT PLAY.

BY MEAD A. KELSEY.

(Concluded from last week.)

THE CHURCH AT PLAY FOR MONEY.

Not content with simple amusement and sociability some one conceived the idea of making these occasions sources of revenue. The new virus took and the infection spread rapidly. In fact, it is a question if the amusement problem would ever have become a very serious one to the church if it had not been discovered that there was money in it. This has greatly multiplied and intensified the evil.

"But pray tell us, what is the harm in charging an admission fee to a social? or in putting a price upon a supper? And what is the difference between selling a dish of oysters and giving the money to the Lord, and selling a horse on the market and giving all or part of the proceeds into the Lord's treasury?" These and many similar questions come thick and fast. We answer:

1. As to the social fee or tax, it is opposed to good taste. Suppose that a husband and wife were to get up a social event, and either because it was beyond their means or else to help on some good work entrusted to them, perchance the rearing of their children, they should put a price upon the refreshments! Would not people say at once that it was a peculiar arrangement? "Who ever heard of such a thing? Churches and societies have pay-socials, but who ever heard of a family getting up an affair of the kind?" Well, I never did, but what is the difference, except that people have gotten used to one and not to the other? To me, at least, it seems self-evident that in the pay-social we have the mixing of two things that ought forever to be kept separate.

2. But this method of raising money for the church also mixes other things that ought to be kept distinct. As the editor of "The Sunday School Times" has so aptly said, "Trading is trading, and giving is giving; and there is a moral loss in any movement or practice that tends to obliterate this distinction."

And another writer, R. F. Campbell, speaking to the same point, says: "There is a great want of discrimination in the thinking of many people along this line. It is urged that the merchant and farmer make by trading, the money which they give to the Lord's cause, and that those who conduct church fairs make theirs likewise by trading; and it is asked, what is the difference? If the money made by trading can be properly given to the Lord's cause in the one case, why may it not be just as properly given in the other?"

"The answer may be found in this simple consideration: In the one case the trading and the giving are kept distinct; in the other they are so intertwined that it is impossible to separate them one from the other." And, to quote further from "The Sunday School Times," "If a grocer puts a notice in his shop window that Christians would do well to buy goods of him, because he gives a percentage of his profits into the Lord's treasury, there is a vicious element thereby introduced into the dealings between the buyer and the seller in such a case."

But "there can be no valid objection to the selling of oysters, or ice cream, or of potatoes, or of firewood, or of tinware, or of fancy articles, at a reasonable price, and in a proper place, as a means of raising money, apart from the question of the use to be made of the money thus raised. All this is simply reputable peddling, or honorable trading.

"And when money has been honestly earned in this way its owner has an undoubted right to give it to the missionary cause, or for church repairs. But it is not a fair and direct method of trading or peddling to ask any man to buy and eat a dish of ice cream, or a dozen oysters, or a loaf of cake; or to ask any woman to buy a handkerchief-case, or a bed-quilt, or a dozen painted plaques, on the ground that the money for which an equivalent is supposed to be given is to be applied to the promotion or sustenance of a religious cause. The outside buyer ought to buy as a matter of trade, and to give as a matter of beneficence, without being led to think that he is doing the latter when he is merely doing the former." *

And I say that it is positively wrong to delude people into thinking they are doing a worthy deed to help on some good cause, when they are primarily spending their money for their personal, if not selfish, gratification.

3. Again, this way of getting money is educating people away from the scriptural standard of giving. The Word says: "Give, hoping for nothing in return," but all of these devices promise something in return as an inducement to the individual to cast into the treasury. But more than this, giving is represented in the Scriptures as a fruit of the Spirit. It is also spoken of as a grace in which we should abound, and in which we should grow. And besides these we are also taught that giving is an act of worship.

Now, tell me, if you will, when I have eaten a dish of ice cream to help on the Lord's work at home or abroad, how is that act to be scripturally classified? Is it a fruit of the Spirit, or a Christian grace, or an act of worship? Oh that our eyes may be opened to see what a monstrous hybrid of worldly wisdom and Christian benevolence the Church has reared within her sacred precincts!

4. Another potent objection to this system of raising money is, that it takes time and strength from the direct spiritual work of the Church. My eyes were opened to this during my second pastorate, and I was led to see clearly that the Church was weakened by the withdrawal of the forces necessary to carry on the entertainments and frequent social functions of the church, all of which were for the purpose of increasing the revenues.† As one of our poets has said:

* "Sunday School Times," March 23d, 1889.

† This was not a Friends' meeting.

"Were half the money spent on camps and courts
Given to redeem the human mind from error,
There were no need of arsenals and forts," so we may say that were half the time devoted to fairs and ecclesiastical amusements, given in the direct work of soul-saving, and building the church up spiritually, there would be no need of any strange devices to help the God of all the earth make up enough to carry on His work.

5. This method also invites sneers and criticism from the outside.

Said an infidel to a minister of the gospel, "I think your God must be in great need of money by the tricks which the churches practice to get it for Him." And a man of affairs said, "I think every time I see a rummage sale that the Lord of all the earth has gone into bankruptcy."

Says a secular paper: "The Church is not a trader, though its members may be. It is appointed to a mightier work than dabbling in tapes and pin-cushions. Its appointment is to divine communion and the saving of souls. It has a psalm to sing whose volume reaches the throne, but it has no groceries to sell. There is not a command, allowance, or example in all the Holy Scriptures that makes the Church a merchant, or tells it to pay its way by holding a fair."

O Church of Christ, wouldst thou be prosperous? Wouldst thou renew thy youth? Wouldst thou have "beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness"? Listen, for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it:

"Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there will not be room enough to receive it."

Pottersville, Mass.

The International Lesson.

FIRST QUARTER.

LESSON XII.

THIRD MONTH 20, 1904.

JESUS FEEDS THE FIVE THOUSAND.

Matthew 14: 13-23.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life. John 6: 35.

DAILY READINGS.

Second-day, Third mo. 14.—Feeds the five thousand. Matt. 14: 13-23.

Third-day, Third mo. 15.—Four thousand fed. Mark 8: 1-9.

Fourth-day, Third mo. 16.—Dull of understanding. Mark 8: 10-20.

Fifth-day, Third mo. 17.—The widow's meal. 1 Kings 17: 8-16.

Sixth-day, Third mo. 18.—Enough and to spare. 2 Kings 4: 38-44.

Seventh-day, Third mo. 19.—Hungry filled. Ps. 107: 1-9.

First-day, Third mo. 20.—Blessing makes abundance. Mark 6: 30-44.

Time.—Some time in the spring of A.D. 29, about the time of the Passover.

Place.—The plain near Bethsaida (Luke 9: 10), not far from the shore of the Sea of Galilee. From John it would be inferred the place was near Tiberias.

Parallel Accounts.—Mark 6: 30-46; Luke 9: 10-17; John 6: 1-15. Read also the discourse following the miracle given in John 6: 22-71. This is the only one of the miracles which is given by all four of the evangelists.

Christ had sent out the twelve (Mark 6: 7-13); they had now returned, probably, to Capernaum. Followed by multitudes, and needing rest, Jesus, with His disciples, went by water to a quiet, uninhabited place near the shore of the lake. But the multitudes are aware of this and follow Him on foot around the head of the lake.

13. "Departed thence." From Capernaum, probably. "Desert place." Uninhabited, not desert in the modern sense of the word. See verse 19.

14. "Went forth." From his retirement. "Compassion." No matter how weary Christ was, He was always ready to help those who needed help. Mark adds, "Because they (the multitudes) were as sheep not having a shepherd."

15. "When even was come." The Jews had two evenings, one which answered to our afternoon, beginning about 3 o'clock, and the other beginning about 6 o'clock. Here the first is meant, and in verse 23 the second. "His disciples came to Him." By comparing all four accounts a clearer picture can be obtained. From this examination it would appear that Jesus first suggested the idea of feeding the multitudes (John 6: 5), and later the disciples came to Jesus, having reached the conclusion that nothing could be done but to send the people away.

16. "Give ye them to eat." The surprise of the disciples is more strongly brought out in the other accounts.

17. "We have here," etc. John says, "There is a lad here which hath five barley loaves and two fishes." But this does not conflict with the others, for the disciples had doubtless engaged them from the boy. From the word used by John we know that the fishes were probably dried or pickled of the kind often eaten with bread. Barley bread was the cheapest and poorest bread.

18. "Bring them to me." Whatever is really brought to the Lord will be made a source of blessing in some way.

19. "To sit down." Mark says, "in ranks by hundreds and by fifties." This was for greater ease in making the distribution, and that everything might be done in an orderly manner. "Blessed." It was probably the thanksgiving which every devout head of a Jewish family gave at the beginning of every meal. Compare Luke 24: 30. "Gave the loaves to the disciples." God often, perhaps generally, makes use of human instrumentalities in dispensing His special blessings, particularly to individuals. There is a double blessing in this—it blesses him that gives and him that takes; it inculcates a feeling of brotherhood; it helps those who are instruments to become better instruments. The five loaves and two fishes were ridiculously insufficient for the multitude. Well might Andrew say, "What are these among so many?" But when brought to the Lord they became more than a sufficiency. What we are and what we have are not to be measured by what we can do alone.

but by what God is pleased to do by us and through us.

20. "And they did all eat, and were filled." It was no scanty meal, but one so bountiful that all had more than enough. "They took up that which remained over of the broken pieces twelve baskets full." Revised Version. John adds that this was done at the command of Jesus, "that nothing be lost." The fragments or broken pieces were not what the people had left, but of the broken bread which remained undistributed because the people had already enough. The number implies that each disciple filled his basket. These were small wicker or rush baskets specially for the purpose of carrying food.

21. The number is given to show the greatness of the miracle. With the exception of raising from the dead this is the greatest of the miracles which Jesus performed. It must be accepted or rejected. There is no middle ground. It cannot be explained in any other way than as a miracle.

22. Jesus sends away His disciples that he may gain an opportunity for complete retirement and prayer.

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

1. Philippians 4: 19.
2. "Give ye them to eat."
3. God sometimes commands men to do what seems impossible, and then of His grace makes it possible. (Phil. 4: 13.)

Christian Endeavor

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Lindley D. Clark, 1429 New York Avenue, Washington, D.C.]

TOPIC FOR THIRD MONTH TWENTIETH.

LITTLE THINGS THAT CHRIST MAKES GREAT.

1 Cor. 1: 25-29.

Second-day, Third mo. 14.—Little but wise. Prov. 30: 24-28.

Third-day, Third mo. 15.—A little stone. 1 Kings 17: 12-15.

Fourth-day, Third mo. 16.—Some little victors. Josh. 24: 11, 12.

Fifth-day, Third mo. 17.—A little lad. John 6: 9-13.

Sixth-day, Third mo. 18.—Paul's young deliverer. Acts 23: 12-22.

Seventh-day, Third mo. 19.—One saves a multitude. Acts 27: 31-44.

The promoter of to-day is a man with a capacity for evolving or adopting some scheme by which those who take part in it will gain wealth or power. After his alluring prospectus is drawn up, the next step is to secure the use of some prominent names to impress the general public whose financial or other support is desired. An impressive beginning is thought to be the only promising one, but if nature has any lesson for us along these lines, it is that what is quickly great quickly perishes.

"The foolish things" of which Paul speaks were only so in the estimates of the foolishly wise, and the "weak things" were in reality the mightiest of all that is earthly, because there was in them no false and deceiving self-sufficiency to keep them from falling back for their support on the one Source of strength.

The story of Christianity is the story of the little leaven that leavened the whole lump. No elaborate system or royal patronage gave it worldly promise of success; and indeed we find that when it has thus been taken up, the result has unfailingly been a weakening and a corruption of the "pure religion and undefiled" for which Christ's life and teaching stand.

When Robert Raikes started his Sunday Schools in 1781, it would have required great presumption or great faith to foresee the more than seventeen millions that would gather into them from week to week in all parts of the world before a century should pass.

That a shoemaker should be a pioneer among missionaries, and by his influence and example set the whole Christian Church anew at the fulfillment of its Great Commission, would appear most unlikely did we not know the story of William Carey.

Sixty years ago the mind of George Williams conceived the idea of the Young Men's Christian Association, and what it has come to be, with its correlative, the Young Women's Christian Association, is to be seen in almost every city and large town, and promises to be a permanent feature of the social and religious life of Christendom.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union also comes in the class of mighty agencies, arising amidst opposing circumstances; and our own Christian Endeavor, so widely welcomed and prospered, sprang from its little beginning in a modest Maine church within the lifetime of multitudes of its members who are yet young.

We may none of us be founders of such far-reaching movements, but the things that we do have their enduring influence, and the little that is done by one becomes the great when it is built into the enduring temple which, in God's plan, includes as essential the work of each, and is to be completed only in the summing up of the work of all.

Missionary Department.

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Herman Newman, 718 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.]

FRIENDS' AFRICA INDUSTRIAL MISSION.

(Extracts of the Quarterly Report, First month, 1904.)

For several weeks we have been bending our efforts toward preparing a home to be occupied by Emory J. Rees and wife and Edgar T. Hole and family. There is considerable work yet to be done before the house can be occupied. We are making and burning bricks with which we expect to build the two chimneys of the new thatched house now under construction. If we can succeed in producing a suitable brick and roofing tile, such building material may be found to be most practicable for us to use; however, we are not beyond the first stages of experiment in this line. Men not employed in connection with the building of the thatched house or the making of brick, are working in the shamba or cutting the grass and bush about the station. The vegetation grows with such rapidity that unless often cut down we should soon find ourselves again in a wilderness of bush, long grass and weeds.

Since our last quarterly report we have succeeded in having two Waganda saw some logs into forty or fifty very irregular planks; few, if any, are at all uniform in thickness, and many are mere slabs, but all are valuable to us for one purpose or another. Two houses for employees have been built in the past three months, but our native quarters are still crowded. Since the burning of our orphanage on Tenth month 20th, some poles have been cut for a new building, but not enough to go far toward its construction.

We will press the evangelistic feature here on the station, and outside as well, by means of itinerating. Permission to locate out-stations appears to depend on our ability to make the industrial feature at Kaimosi pleasing to the officials with whom we have to do. We ourselves feel that in order to accomplish one of our objects here, namely, that of rightly training natives to be useful artisans in various lines, we must have a much fuller equipment than at present.

In addition to our gospel services on the station daily, we usually do Seventh-day itinerating, two of our party frequently going separately to different districts. During the past quarter four native burials have been attended, at three of which messages were given for the Lord. The last one, only five days ago, was that of a young man who had worked for us more than a year, but was dismissed a few weeks ago. He died from the effects of a grievous arrow wound in the abdomen, after which he lived only three days; but the day before he passed away he realized he must die, and prayed earnestly and intelligently for pardon and a home in heaven. We believe he is now safely home with his Saviour, "to go no more out forever," probably as the first representative of this tribe who has sought and gained heaven through the precious blood of the Lamb. How we rejoice to believe that we have one already in heaven, as well as the one converted here in Tenth month, as fruit of our feeble efforts.

School work continues with a present enrollment of twenty-four pupils.

In the medical department 634 cases have been treated during the past quarter.

From Eleventh month 28th to Twelfth month 6th our station was guarded by a Hindu sergeant, with twelve soldiers, on account of some trouble the government was having with the Nandi Tribe, immediately east of us. We should much prefer to have been without the soldiers, but the government officials could not feel right to have us unguarded.

In the past month we have purchased four bullocks, which were greatly needed in our work.

With one slight exception, we have had no rain since Twelfth month 16th, and this porous soil is becoming very dry. We are doubtless entering upon a dry, hot season of longer or shorter duration. A very perceptible earthquake shock was felt and made our iron house rattle late in the evening of Twelfth month 30th.

On Twelfth month 19th Arthur B. Chilson left for a trip to Mombasa and intermediate points for a much-desired change and rest of two or three weeks, after close application to duties here ever since locating the mission. He hopes to visit F. W. Krieger and family, near Nairobi, and the Africa Inland Mission beyond, as well as to attend to some matters in the interest of this work.

After the 9 o'clock gospel service on Christmas Day, we had one bullock and three sheep killed, and, with potatoes, sem sem and salt, distributed to the people living on the station, numbering about fifty. We gave them Christmas Day and the day following as holidays.

EDGAR T. HOLE.

AT BANES, CUBA.

(Taken from a letter from Raymond S. Holding.)

In the early part of last month we were called to have charge at three funerals, a line of service to which we had not before been invited. The first funeral took place under circumstances of much opposition. The Catholic priest tried hard to thwart our efforts by threats and denunciation, and even resorting to court proceedings, thus frightening the people who had accepted our services. But the Lord was manifestly with us, giving us the victory, and it has made us many friends. I went to the house of the deceased early in the morning and stayed until all was ready; then led the procession to the church. As the law here forbids the taking of a corpse into the church, we were obliged to hold the services outside. A large congregation gathered, and we conducted our first funeral service according to Protestant customs. As we were leaving the meeting house the priest came rushing down the street in a fit of anger, denouncing the Protestants. He had tolled his bell and prepared his incense to burn, etc.; he probably felt uncomfortable and so sought vengeance through the courts, but he was unable to effect anything.

On the following day the little one-year-old boy of Henrique Alvarez, one of our members, died, and we had a Christian funeral. We spared no pains to make the occasion as impressive as we could. It was a time of blessing for the church. The entire membership was present, and many realized as never before, probably, what it means to be a Christian at such an hour, and how death should be regarded. Some of our little Sabbath School girls sang a beautiful song and acted as pall-bearers.

I had never been to the cemetery until we had the first funeral, and did not know what a neglected, ugly place it was. Weeds, briars, bushes and unsightly vegetation had taken entire possession. Many of the graves were hidden from view. We began working up on the subject preparatory to doing the work of cleaning up the cemetery. The members seemed willing, and the following Monday morning with hoes, machetes and pick-axes, we went to the cemetery. They worked valiantly all day, but when night came we had not accomplished more than one-fourth of the job. That night I was again called to preach a funeral. A Jamaican had died under circumstances that rendered burial as soon as possible necessary. The services were held at 10 o'clock at night, and the burial took place early next morning. . . . The rain prevented our continuing the work in the cemetery till the next Monday, when all, or about twenty men, responded again. Grubbing and pulling out the bushes was slow, hard work, and not till Tuesday, the third day of work, did we finish. Now all are pleased to think they helped. The work would have cost at least $100 by contract, so it was a victory for Christ and the Church, not only in Banes, but it is quoted elsewhere as an example of the practical Christianity we preach and practice. An article noticing this cleaning up of the cemetery at Banes appeared in a Holguin paper, which was very commendatory of the Friends and their teaching. A man will probably be placed in charge of the cemetery now, and it will be kept up at the expense of the city hereafter.

Piety is the genius of the entire matter; but piety when it fronts sin has got to become grit.—C. H. Parkhurst.

FRIENDS' EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION will meet, the 19th inst., at 140 North Sixteenth Street, Philadelphia, at 2.30 p.m.

PROGRAM.

Alfred C. Garrett, "Some Features of the Late Educational Association."

Walter W. Haviland, "Some Practical Applications to Present-day School Needs."

Mary Ward, "Scripture Studies."

General discussion will follow. All interested are cordially invited.

Correspondence.

DEAR FRIENDS:

Quite recently it was my privilege to attend four of the quarterly meetings in the southern part of New York to visit some of the meetings on the Sabbath, and to hold a few others by appointment. I wish for the encouragement of Friends to speak of the earnest helpful spirit which pervaded all the services.

The attendance at the quarterly meetings was very good, particularly of young people, compared with the numbers present, and their interest in the business and work of the Church in general certainly gives promise for the future. It is not often we find more real consecration to the Lord and His cause than was manifested in these meetings by many.

We are so prone to look on the dark side, to dwell on discouraging features, that I am glad to bring this hopeful word.

The plan pursued by some of our quarterly meetings of having a printed program of the exercises seems to work well. When circulated widely they have something of the effect of a personal invitation to those who are not Friends, and by this, knowing just when gospel services are to be held, Bible School interests, mission work, peace and temperance are to be presented. If they cannot be present through the entire session, they can come when matters in which they are most interested are being considered.

The meeting on ministry and oversight at New York Quarterly Meeting was made interesting and helpful by a paper on prayer which was prepared and read by an earnest young man. It was thoughtful and reverential, and the same spirit characterized the remarks which followed.

It is possible—yes, it would be easy, if some thought were given to the matter—to make all our meetings for business interesting and attractive even to our young people. We are democratic, our theory is right, if we would only get it into practical operation; but we are learning, and shall do better by and by.

We cannot estimate the influences for good which have been set in operation by our branch of the Church, and the end is not yet. Let it be our purpose now

"To serve the present age,

Our calling to fulfill.

Oh, may it all our powers engage

To do our Master's will."

MARY J. WEAVER.

Batavia, N. Y.

BUREAU OF MISSIONS,

Bible House, Fourth Avenue,

New York, Second month 15th, 1904.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND,

718 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Gentlemen: The trustees of the Bureau of Missions have elected as corresponding secretary of the Bureau Henry Otis Dwight, LL.D., who was for thirty-four years a missionary of the A. B. C. F. M. in Turkey.

Dr. Dwight has given much time to the study of missions and their methods throughout the world; he took a leading part in editing the report of the Ecumenical Conference on Foreign Missions and in revising Bliss's "Encyclopedia of Missions," of which a new edition is shortly to be published under the auspices of the Bureau, and is the author of "Turkish Life in War Time," "Constantinople and Its Problems," "The Treaty Rights of American Missionaries in Turkey," and numerous lesser writings on Turkey and the Mohammedan religion. He will make it a point to give cordial attention to any who may apply to the Bureau of Missions, Room 81, Bible House, New York, for information respecting the foreign missionary enterprise in any of its parts.

Yours sincerely,

W. I. HAVEN,
Vice-President.

ABOUT THE PIUTE INDIANS.

I believe it will be right to state in the columns of THE AMERICAN FRIEND that there are large numbers of Piute Indians in and around Bishop, Inyo County, Cal., who are much neglected in a religious way, as I understand they never have had an opportunity of hearing the gospel preached. A Methodist lady, who has taught their school as a government employee for seven years, says they are sadly neglected, and would like for some minister to come and devote his time among them in a religious way.

I have labored among Indians of the Indian Territory and Alaska, but I never have seen a better opening for Friends to labor among them than in Owens Valley of this county. My prayer is, that some suitable person may be divinely led to this place. These Indians are civilized, and some of the younger ones are educated in a small degree. I will be glad to assist in opening this work, and if any one feels led in this way and wishes more information concerning it, please let me know.

E. W. WEESNER.

FRIENDS IN ST. LOUIS.

Editor THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

Dear Friend: We have had it in mind to write thee of the situation here in regard to Friends. There is no organization of Friends here. My wife and I have been here nearly a year and miss the association of our chosen people. Our membership is in Des Moines (Iowa) Monthly Meeting. No doubt there are many Friends in the city; if we knew who and where they were we could interest them in some tangible organization, possibly for social and religious benefits. I would suggest thee would request in the FRIEND that any Friends living here, or any one knowing of Friends living here, or any Friends coming into the city I should be pleased to hear from them, or meet them, at my office address. I am glad to note the active evangelical interest in the churches, and the special efforts being made for the World's Fair crowds to minister to their spiritual needs.

I am, very respectfully, thine,

D. WHEELER SMITH,
601 Burlington Building, 810 Olive Street.

St. Louis, Mo.

Things of Interest Among Ourselves.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND will be sent to a new subscriber from now until First month 1st, 1905, for $1.00.

Samuel H. Hodges will labor in the meeting at South Glens Falls, N. Y., for a time.

Amos Sanders, of Brooklyn, has for some weeks been confined to his house. His many friends are hoping for his speedy return to health and to his field of service.

President Robert L. Kelly, who had expected to attend the sessions of the Religious Education Association last week in Philadelphia, was prevented from coming by an attack of la grippe.

Emily Underhill Burgess, of Highland, N. Y., has been doing most successful evangelistic work in the Reformed Church. As national lecturer in the W. C. T. U. she may serve for a time in North Carolina.

Charles Babcock and wife, ministers from Cleveland, O., just closed a successful series of meetings at Smithfield, O. A number of souls were definitely blessed, and the meeting was edified and strengthened.

A successful series of meetings just closed at South Marion, Ind. The meetings were conducted by John L. Kittrell, of Ogden, O., and Job Dennis, of Hagerstown, Ind. Several claimed conversion or renewal.

Edward Grubb will give an address at Twelfth Street Meeting, in Philadelphia, on the 19th of this month, at 7.45 p.m. His subject will be, "The Inner Strength and Outer Weakness of Quakerism." Friends and others are invited to attend.

Richard H. Thomas gave an address on "Baptism" at Light Street Meeting House, Baltimore, on First-day, the 7th of last month. In spite of the fact that the great fire was raging at the time, an audience of nearly forty persons listened with deep attention to the address.

A ten days' meeting was held at West Milton, O., by John L. Kittrell, commencing Second month 1st. The preaching was practical and in the demonstration of the Spirit. The meeting was strengthened, and several persons claimed the definite experience of conversion or renewal.

Elizabeth G. Underhill is holding successful revival meetings in the limits of Cornwall Quarterly Meeting, N. Y. She has labored in Plattekill and Clintondale and is now in Tillson, N. Y., where the opening meetings were strong and immediately successful. J. Edwards Rawson is the local minister there.

The local minister, J. Farland Randolph, assisted by his wife, Emma G. Randolph, began a series of meetings at Sugar Plain, Ind., First month 10th. Many things transpired to hinder the work, but the ministers were untiring in their efforts, and the teaching was very plain and practical. Heart-searching prayer pervaded the meetings.

The monthly meeting held at Prairie View, Neb., 27th ult. was of much interest. The heads of families were all present. A growing interest in Christian work was manifested. Seven new members were received. Home seekers are invited to come into the community and settle in the meeting. Ida Myres, Clarks, Neb., is the correspondent.

Kansas, New York and California Yearly Meetings are arranging to have an edition of the Discipline printed for use in their respective meetings by the printers of THE AMERICAN FRIEND. The work will be pushed as fast as the details can be arranged and the labor done, yet it will necessarily be some weeks before these Disciplines will be ready for distribution.

A farewell reception was held at the Friends' Meeting House in Prairie Center, Kan., Second month 11th, for Tilghman and Eusebia Couch before they removed to Stirling. About one hundred persons, both Friends and others, partook of the sumptuous dinner. Eusebia Couch ministered to this meeting for more than twenty-five years, and she and her husband will be greatly missed.

Alfred Cook is now returning to his home in England. While in America on this trip he visited the meetings of both branches of Friends at Baltimore and Washington; also the Orthodox meetings at Germantown, Pa., Haddonfield, N. J., Haverford, Pa., and several meetings in Philadelphia. He visited the other branch of Friends at Race Street, Philadelphia, Swarthmore, Pa., and other places. He generally met with acceptance and unity.

Elizabeth G. Underhill, who has been laboring in Clintondale Meeting, New York, for the past three weeks, closed her labors there the 27th ult., which was also monthly meeting day, and a season of much blessing. J. L. Spicer joined in the work a part of the time. He also held one week's meetings in Millbrook, which were blessed of the Lord. Meetings at Clintondale resulted in much good in the awakening of the members and a few conversions.

A Friend gives us this personal word about the death of Professor Charles Michener: "He was unconscious during most of his sickness, but regained consciousness just before his death, and comforted his wife and children with bright assurances of the future and expressed the love and devotion he had for them all from the association here. His death was a very triumphant one, and gives to us all beautiful testimony of the realities of a life hid in Christ Jesus, when the hour of death comes."

Levi T. Pennington, the local minister, faithfully assisted by Frank Edwards, a local worker, and other members of the meeting, has just concluded a series of meetings at Westland, Ind., during which over a dozen definitely entered or re-entered the service of God, and numbers of others professed definite blessings from Him. A similar series of meetings closed at Western Grove recently, in which Levi T. Pennington was faithfully assisted by Rufina White, a local minister, and other members. In these meetings also a number were definitely blessed and found Christ.

West Branch Quarterly Meeting was held at West Milton, O., the 20th and 21st ult. On Seventh-day Enos Pemberton, Robert W. Douglas and F. C. Stanley had messages for the meeting. Anna May Pemberton was granted an extension of her minute of last year to finish her work in the East. On First-day Professor Elbert Russell, of Earlham College, was present and preached morning and evening. In the afternoon he addressed the Sabbath School Conference on the subject of "Education in the Family and Sabbath School," putting the emphasis on the education necessary to prepare the child for a change of heart.

MARRIED.

COSAND—FLOYD.—At Hesper, Kansas, Twelfth month 16th, 1903, J. Parker Cosand, son of Benjamin P. and Sarah A. Cosand, and Minnie L. Floyd, daughter of George and Ada Floyd, members of Hesper Monthly Meeting.

DIED.

BAILEY.—At the home of his daughter, in Muscatine, Iowa, Third month 1st, 1904, Jediah Bailey, formerly of Manchester, Maine, aged 82 years. Less than a week before his death he walked nearly a mile to attend monthly meeting.

CROSMAN.—At her home, in Swampscott, Mass., on the 23d of First month, Deborah Wing Crosman, wife of John Henry Crosman, in her 75th year, a life-long member of the Society of Friends, and identified with all its interests, educational and otherwise. She commenced teaching in her native town, Sandwich, Mass., when but fifteen years of age, and later was principal of the Girls' Department at the Boarding School at Providence, R. I. Soon after she went to Lynn and became fully identified there with the work of the Church, serving many years as clerk both of the monthly and quarterly meetings. She also served the meeting as one of its elders during the latter part of her life.

ELLIOTT.—At his home, near Dublin, Ind., Second month 9th, 1904, Exum Elliott, son of Jacob and Mary Peelle Elliott, aged 80 years. He was a life-long member of Dublin Monthly Meeting of Friends, earnest and consistent. His relation to church work was always marked by meek humility and sincere devotion.

GREEN.—At Carthage, Mo., Second month 7th, 1904, Joseph Green, aged 86 years. He was a member of Fairview Monthly Meeting of Friends, and filled faithfully the place of an elder for nearly half a century. Many can bear testimony to his fatherly care.

HAMMOND.—At his home in Smithfield, O., Second month 25th, 1904, Nathan Hammond, aged nearly 82 years. He was a birthright member of Friends, converted at the age of 40, and ever after an earnest worker for the Master.

WHITE.—At Prairie Center, Kansas, Second month 2d, 1904, Mattie White, aged over 61 years. The deceased was a member of Prairie Center Meeting for about twenty years, and lived an upright Christian life.

Events and Comments.

The Religious Education Association held its second annual convention in Philadelphia, the 2d to 4th inst. Four hundred persons registered as delegates, and two of the evening sessions had an attendance of between two and three thousand persons each. The delegates were from many States, New England sending the greatest proportion of representatives. Educational institutions made a better showing, in point of delegates, than either Sabbath Schools or churches. The convention met in thirty sessions, and enjoyed addresses from more than a hundred speakers, most of whom were distinguished American educators. The number of Friends present from Philadelphia and vicinity was noticeable.

The seventeen departments of the association held afternoon meetings, some holding one session, and some two. Simultaneous meetings were held in a dozen different places. These meetings were naturally small in attendance, with the exception of the Sabbath School section. The papers and addresses, however, were by men and women of high standing in the religious and educational world, and many of them were permanent contributions to the themes treated.

The Sabbath School sessions proved to be conservative, constructive and harmonious. There was little disagreement expressed, and none of that was acrimonious. Some of the most conservative leaders in the international work were present, and afterward expressed themselves favorably toward the Religious Education Association attitude. The necessity for better teaching in the Sabbath Schools, for graded lessons, for a closer relation between the Sabbath School and the home were freely and frequently expressed. An exhibition of modern methods in Sabbath School work, the first of the sort ever brought together, caused no little interest among the delegates.

The general theme of the convention was "The Bible in Practical Life." Discussions kept close to the topic. "The Bible" was the dominant note of the convention. The Bible was emphasized as an essential part of all education, as vital to good citizenship and to character forming. The importance of the study of the Bible from a literary and historical standpoint was less emphasized than its importance as an essential factor in spiritual growth.

The three evening meetings dealt with "The Bible in Religious Experience," "The Bible in Education," and "The Bible in Social and Civic Life." The address of President W. H. P. Faunce, of Brown University, on Fifth-day evening, "The Co-ordination of the Bible with Other Subjects of Study," was one of the conspicuously strong deliverances in which he took an unequivocal position in favor of the use of the Bible in all institutions of learning. Rabbi Abram Simon, who followed him, challenged the Christian note in President Faunce's address, but with no other effect apparently than to remind the audience of the breadth and inclusiveness of the scope of the Religious Education Association.

At almost every session of the convention the importance of the Bible's part in any complete curriculum and the necessity for co-ordinating religious and secular education were touched upon by at least one speaker.

One of the conspicuously moving sessions of the convention treated of "Religious Education in the Home." Many delegates were surprised to find this convention of experts dwelling less on problems of the higher institutions of learning than upon the fundamental questions of religion in the home and in practical life.

The optimistic tone of the convention was no less marked than its conservative fraternal spirit. New elements entered the organization at Philadelphia, so all wings of all the denominations may be said to have aligned themselves with this new and modern effort to serve the interests of the kingdom and of the nation.

"The Annual Survey of Progress in Religion and Moral Education," by the new president of the Association, was the first of what promises to be an important and far-reaching annual deliverance. It was, as its title implies, a survey of the entire religious field with criticism and practical suggestions. President Charles Cuthbert Hall set a standard for this paper which will tax the efforts of succeeding speakers to maintain.

The Religious Education Association declared its conviction as follows:

"1. That, owing partly to rapid changes in the conditions of modern life,

IT IS A MATTER OF HEALTH

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

an emergency has arisen in respect to the training of the young in the matters that pertain to character. To turn the heart of our people to those riches of the spirit that outweigh material prosperity; to inspire our nation with the principles that alone can give it perpetuity or true glory. To withstand the rising tide of disregard for law that threatens to overwhelm our people, and that manifests itself even in our schools, will require a general revival of religious and moral education.

"2. That such education depends primarily upon the influence of high personality. The call that comes to us from the young is first of all a call to do the will of God in Christly living. But personality becomes doubly effective when parent or teacher pursues methods that accord with the nature of the child as well as the nature of virtues. There is needed in all directions more knowledge of the aims, principles and methods of education, and a wider diffusion of such knowledge.

"3. That the most important institution for the development of character is the family. Yet precisely here disintegrating forces are most evident. Partly through neglect, partly through the difficulty of adjusting family training to the complications of modern life, the rising generation is being largely neglected at the most vital point.

"4. That in any complete plan for character training, the Bible must have a permanent and unique place. Somewhere within our trinity of educational institutions—the home, the church, and the school—the child is entitled to receive possession of those treasures of spiritual truth and inspiration that have been the strength of our fathers, and that are still the real strength of our civilization. To this end no equipment in the way of personal study on the part of parents and teachers, or in the way of means and methods, can be too costly.

"To promote these ends, this Association will devote its energies during the coming year: First, to investigation and practical stimulation in the various directions represented by its seventeen de-

ON A RANCH.

Woman Found the Food That Fitted Her.

A newspaper woman went out to a Colorado ranch to rest and recuperate, and her experience with the food problem is worth recounting.

"The woman at the ranch was preeminently the worst housekeeper I have ever known—poor soul, and poor me!

"I simply had to have food good and plenty of it, for I had broken down from overwork and was so weak I could not sit up over one hour at a time. I knew I could not get well unless I secured food I could easily digest, and that would supply the greatest amount of nourishment.

"One day I obtained permission to go through the pantry and see what I could find. Among other things I came across a package of Grape-Nuts, which I had heard of but never tried. I read the description on the package and became deeply interested, so then and there I got a saucer and some cream and tried the famous food.

"It tasted delicious to me and seemed to freshen and strengthen me greatly, so I stipulated that Grape-Nuts and cream be provided each day instead of other food, and I literally lived on Grape-Nuts and cream for two or three months.

"If you could have seen how fast I got well it would have pleased and surprised you. I am now perfectly well and strong again, and know exactly how I got well, and that was on Grape-Nuts that furnished me a powerful food I could digest and make use of.

"It seems to me no brain worker can afford to overlook Grape-Nuts after my experience." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Get the miniature book, "The Road to Wellville," in each package.

partments. Second, to agitation and the diffusion of information through its proceedings and other printed matter, and through public speech. Third, to the organization of local centers for the study of practical problems in the light of established principles. Fourth, to personal effort of each member in his own station to practice and promulgate these principles."

RESULT OF STUDY.

In the middle of the eighteenth century Gilbert West and Lord Lyttleton, leaders among the learned infidels of that controversial age, came together to plan an assault upon Christianity. Each promised to prepare an elaborate and exhaustive attack on what he regarded as the most momentous and salient event of the gospel record. West decided on the Resurrection of Christ; Lord Lyttleton on the Conversion of Saul of Tarsus. A year later they came together to compare notes. The former said, "My essay is finished; but I have arrived at a different conclusion from what I had anticipated. After a comprehensive survey of the evidence in the case, I am forced to believe that Jesus, who was buried in Joseph's garden, did come forth from the sepulchre, and thus proved himself to be the very Son of God." The latter said: "I am bound to admit that my researches have brought me to a similar conclusion. The evidence shows that

"DOETH GOOD"

And Addeth No Sorrow.

"I am an old lady and had used coffee all my life until a year ago, then I found a drink 'that doeth good and addeth no sorrow.'

"For many years I had been troubled with constipation and stomach trouble, sleeplessness and various other ills, and although I had been constantly treated I got almost no relief.

"I have always been a great worker with many cares, and often in the morning I would feel unequal to my daily tasks. So I would drink a good stiff cup of coffee, of which I was very fond, and then for two or three hours afterwards I would feel so smart and buoyant and keyed up to such a high note that I could undertake most anything. But along about 11 o'clock the reaction would begin and leave me stranded on a lounge until dinner time. Then I would get a cup of tea to tide me over the afternoon. So it went on for a number of years, and the great wonder is that I did not collapse altogether. I must have had a good constitution. Every month I got a little worse.

"At last and with great reluctance I was forced to the conclusion that it was coffee that was the chief cause of my many troubles. So I looked the matter up carefully, quit the coffee and began the use of delicious Postum; the wisdom of this change was soon shown in a material improvement in my health.

"Since I have been using Postum I do not have that unnatural elation and consequent reaction, and the craving for the stimulant has left me. I am now strong and steady all the time. Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

Silk Waists AT Popular Prices

Any number of styles to choose from, a great many of them at the popular prices that most women pay. But there are also some very fine ones. These are most unusual values:

At $3.00—WAISTS OF CHINA SILK—in black or white; very full blouse front, with one-inch tucks to waist forming box plaits; stitched plaits in back, full tucked sleeves, stitched cuffs and collar.

At $3.75—WAISTS OF BLACK PEAU DE SOIE—full blouse, tucked waist; each tuck with three rows of stitching; vertical tucks in back; tucked sleeves with full puff at hand, pretty collar with turnover; lined throughout.

At $4.25—WAISTS OF FINE PEAU DE CYGNE—with pretty blouse front of quarter-inch tucks running to waist; tucked sleeves with extra-full puff at hand; stitched collar with deep-pointed turnover.

At $5.00—WAISTS OF CHINA SILK—in black or white; entire waist of inch box plaits, stitched on edges; sleeves plaited to elbow; soft tucked collar and cuffs.

STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER

PHILADELPHIA

Saul of Tarsus met with an extraordinary change in his way down to Damascus, that he saw the living Christ and that this Christ was the very Son of God.—Ex.

THE POWER OF AN UNCERTAIN FUTURE.

As you and I in Paris or London will walk more in a day than a Londoner or Parisian in three, for our curiosity is kept alive by the uncertainties of the unfamiliar streets—so the child will make more character in a week than we grown people will in months, for life, not yet having hardened into routines and certainties, is always vividly interesting to him, and is always enticing him a little farther on. There are old men who look back with wistful longing to the interest life had for them when they were children. Living has disenchanted them with life. But what has gone out of life is simply its uncertainty. They have solved all the problems. Once each New Year's Day was a pinnacle on which they stood and looked out into an enticing splendor of vague possibilities. Now, on New Year's Day they balance their books, and settle down to the dull content of a certain competence. The interest of life depends on its uncertain futures.

It is the opening of another future, with new uncertainties, which has turned many an old man into a child again as he stood at the gateway of the Everlasting Life. To him the interest of life is still preserved by the power of an uncertain future.—Ex.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

We particularly invite the attention of the readers of "The American Friend" to this column. It will be found useful for almost everyone who wishes to advertise. The cost is 5c. per line each insertion. No advertisement is accepted for less than 25c. Cash with order.

OLD-FASHIONED grandfather clocks repaired at home. If yours needs attention send me a postal or, better, call. My store is within three minutes' walk of the Market Street ferries. Repairing of clocks and watches of every kind. Prompt service and moderate prices. W. L. Berry, Watchmaker and Jeweler, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

NEW SONG BOOK.—"Gold Tried in the Fire." One of the best song books on the market for church, Sunday school and evangelistic work. Bound in limp cloth and contains over 200 songs. Sells for $15.00 per hundred. 20 cents a copy. Published by Friends. BROWN BROS., Indianapolis, Indiana.

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER.—Careful and accurate repairing, with prompt service, has brought me the custom of many Friends. Their patronage is particularly solicited. My store is nearest to the Market Street ferries, and is easy of access from every part of the city. W. L. Berry, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

WANTED.—A thousand families of "Friends" and others to come west and buy land in Woods county, Oklahoma, while you can get good farms at half their value. Rich valley land near Friends' meeting, Stella Academy, railroad and good market. In the great wheat and alfalfa belt, and fruit in abundance, the best part of Oklahoma. Warm, healthy climate, with splendid society. Write us for circulars and price lists. References, Pastor "Friends'" Church, First National Bank of Cherokee. Very truly, VOTAW and SETZER, "Friends."

FOR SALE.—In consequence of advancing age I offer my Cold Storage Plant for Sale, fully equipped; a desirable business in an extensive Fruit Section for a young or middle aged man. Good Friends' Meeting information as to capacity, income, etc. Apply to W. T. Willis, Proprietor, Clintondale, N. Y. Terms easy.

FOR SALE.—A modern house of fifteen rooms, hot water heating, gas and city water, well and cisterns, barn and 3 acres of ground, 2 squares from Earlham College, 2 squares from two lines of Street cars. Wm. H. Middleton, Richmond, Ind.

Stenography, Typewriting, Mimeographing and Reporting

LYDIA ARETE CONN,

805 Provident Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

BUSHIDO—The Soul of JAPAN

An Exposition of Japanese Thought, by Inazo Nitobe, A.M., Ph.D., Professor in the Imperial College, Sapporo, Japan. Price, postpaid, white leatherette cover, 75 cents; bound in cloth, $1.00.

THE LEEDS & BIDDLE CO., Inc.

1019-21 Market St., Phila.

ALL you have guessed about life insurance may be wrong. If you wish to know the truth, send for "The How and the Why." It is issued free by the 921-3-5 Chestnut Street.

PENN MUTUAL LIFE

FINANCIAL.

6% NET

Sound, conservative first mortgages on improved realty. We examine every security and know every borrower. We make our loans with our own money and turn them over complete. In 23 years we have learned how to select the best. No one now handling western mortgages has had more experience. We give you the benefit of that experience. The quality of the securities now on hand has never been surpassed. Highest references. Write for circulars and full information free.

PERKINS & COMPANY Lawrence, Kan.

6%

to 7% Choice First Mortgage Loans, Seattle and vicinity. Local and N. Y. references. Established 1887. Correspondence Solicited. JAMES BOWWELL, Seattle, Washington.

TO INVESTORS

I have For Sale $50,000—5 per cent. Gold First Mortgage, Coupon Bonds, in 1,000's, Street Railways, Electric Light, Gas and Warehouse, at from par to 102½ and accrued interest. Full particulars on application.

HOWARD M. SWAB,
Member Philadelphia Stock Exchange.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a.

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hôte, 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p.m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cts. per night; $3 per week.

Two occupants, 50 cts. each, per night.

2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL

Phone Spruce 33-55. Clerk.

A. M. ADAMS, PRINTING

230 N. Twelfth St., Philadelphia.

BELL TELEPHONE.

The success of every Christian life depends upon a beginning. One may fail without beginning, but he cannot succeed. Thousands hesitate to begin, and because of this live without God or hope.

FREE-MILLING GOLD MINES

Having large ore bodies accessible for cheap mining, where the simplest and cheapest process will turn the ore into gold bars at the mines, are always winners, and head the list for large and regular dividend-payers. The reason is that mining under such conditions resolves itself into a stable manufacturing business, Free-milling Gold Ore, the raw material, and GOLD BARS, the finished product. With the element of uncertainty connected with the treatment of refractory ores eliminated, the results can be as accurately computed as in the manufacture of coke and sugar, and only requires judicious management to make it absolutely A Safe and Profitable Investment.

An opportunity for such an investment is now offered by

THE PAN-TONOPAH MINING & EXPLORATION COMPANY

who have enormous, well-developed bodies of absolutely free-milling Gold Ore at their Silver Star Mines, near Sodaville, Nevada. Mill run values $5.00 to $80.00 per ton. Estimated $3,000,000 of ore in sight. United States Mint returns show $300,000 from present mill on property, by former owners. A limited amount of stock is offered at 25 cents per share to increase capacity of mill to 100 tons. Write for Prospectus and Letters of Endorsement from eminent mining experts, bankers and editors.

Address the Company, at 5-7 E. 42d Street, New York City

ELIAS G. MINARD, Secretary. ARLANDO MARINE, Treasurer.

Mortgages Net 6% in North Dakota

THEY are the best, gilt-edged, rock-ribbed, guaranteed 6% investment in America. Safe as government bonds and pay better.

I have been selling these mortgages for 18 years, and have never had to foreclose, and never lost a cent of principal or interest for a single customer.

I personally know every farm covered by the mortgages, as well as the farmers giving them. I know them both to be right, or I have nothing to do with them. Their land is increasing in value every day, thus increasing the value of the security.

I collect both the interest and principal free, and remit in New York exchange, without the least trouble or bother of the customer.

I will be pleased to put you in the way of finding out all about me. Write me for further information.

WALTER L. WILLIAMSON

Investment Banker

LISBON, NORTH DAKOTA

The Money that You Want

and find it hard to save, can be accumulated with the greatest certainty and ease through an Endowment Policy, which protects your family while the saving is going on, and furnishes a profit as well.

THE PRUDENTIAL INSURANCE CO. OF AMERICA.

JOHN F. DRYDEN,
Pres.

Home Office:
NEWARK,
N. J.

Without committing myself to any action I shall be glad to receive free, particulars and rates of Endowment Policies.

Send Coupon for Information.

For

Name Age.....

Address.....

Occupation.....Dept. 67.

HOOPING-COUGH AND CROUP.Roche's Herbal Embrocation

The celebrated and effectual English Cure without internal medicine. Proprietors, W. EDWARDS & SONS, Queen Victoria St., London, England. Wholesale of E. Fougere & Co., 80 North William Street, N. Y.

Earlham College Library

The American Friend

Vol. XI

THIRD MONTH 17, 1904

No. 11

	PAGE
EDITORIALS.—Can Christianity Still Draw Men?—Art and Life.—Open- ing Exercises—Editorial Note, 175-176
“Thus Saith the Lord”	176
Mary M. Hobbs.
Clear Shining After Rain	178
Theodore L. Cuyler.
For Sufferers	179
From the Notebook of R. B. M.
SOME VIEWS ON PRESENT TOPICS:
Pastoral Visiting	179
J. Lindley Spicer.
The Hepburn-Dolliver Bill	180
Joshua L. Bailey.
THE INTERNATIONAL LESSON	181
Lesson for Third month 27, 1904.
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR	182
Topic for Third month 27, 1904.
MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT	182
CORRESPONDENCE	183
THINGS OF INTEREST AMONG OURSELVES,	184
DIED	184
EVENTS AND COMMENTS	185

A CREED.

*I believe in human kindness
Large amid the sons of men,
Nobler far in willing blindness
Than in censure's keenest ken.
I believe in Self-Denial,
And its secret throb of joy;
In the love that lives through trial,
Dying not, though death destroy.*

*I believe in Love renewing
All that sin hath swept away,
Leavenlike its work pursuing
Night by night and day by day;
In the power of its remoulding,
In the grace of its reprieve,
In the glory of beholding
Its perfection—I believe.*

*I believe in Love Eternal,
Fixed in God's unchanging will,
That beneath the deep infernal
Hath a depth that's deeper still!
In its patience—its endurance
To forbear and to retrieve,
In the large and full assurance
Of its triumph—I believe.*

—NORMAN MACLEOD.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.50 A YEAR ❁ ❁ ❁ PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
AMERICAN FRIEND PUBLISHING COMPANY, 718 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA

EDUCATIONAL.

EARLHAM COLLEGE,RICHMOND,
INDIANA

Prof. Elbert Russell offers courses regularly in Kings, New Testament Times, Life of Christ, The Apostolic Age, Church History, New Testament Literature, Romans, John, Biblical Literature, Isaiah.

Prof. Cyrus W. Hodgkin, The Protestant Reformation.

Prof. Anna M. Demaree, New Testament, Greek.

Asst. Prof. Lindley, History of the Hebrews.

Pres. Kelly, History of Philosophy, Ethics, Psychology.

The Oakwood Seminary

UNION SPRINGS, N. Y.

Founded in 1796.

A boarding school for boys and girls under the care of New York Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Academic, College Preparatory and Commercial

Spring term begins Fourth month 5, 1904

SAMUEL H. HODGIN,

Principal.

LINDLEY M. STEVENS,

Superintendent.

Stenography, Typewriting,
Mimeographing and Reporting

LYDIA ARETE CONN,

805 Provident Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

SHORTHAND TAUGHT BY MAIL

or in school. Each student receives personal attention. Moderate rates. Write for full information.

PROVIDENT SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND

805 Provident Building Philadelphia, Pa.

STENOGRAPHING, TYPEWRITING and MIMEOGRAPHING. Prices moderate.

MARY M. KITE

407 Lippincott Building, 12th and Filbert Sts., Phila.

Phone No. 3-33-00

STENOGRAPHER

GEO. B. COCK

Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter Street.

Telephones.

The

New Century

TYPEWRITER

does the BEST WORK and lots
of it, EASILY.

Strong, Thoroughly Built,
Superior in results to any other.

Write for

"THE BOOK OF THE NEW CENTURY."

AMERICAN WRITING MACHINE COMPANY,
1033 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Peddlers and fakirs frequently take cakes of Ivory Soap, remove the name, cut them into small pieces, wrap these in tin foil and sell them at a high price as a new and wonderful cleanser. Those who have tried it say that nothing is better than Ivory Soap for taking out spots and for similar special uses. Ivory Soap is a powerful cleanser, but pure and safe.

IT FLOATS.

"Put your confidence in God; trust Him, trust thyself, and go forward."

BUSHIDO—The Soul of JAPAN

An Exposition of Japanese Thought, by Inazo Nitobe, A.M., Ph.D., Professor in the Imperial College, Sapporo, Japan. Price, postpaid, white leatherette cover, 75 cents; bound in cloth, $1.00.

THE LEEDS & BIDDLE CO., Inc.

1019-21 Market St., Phila.

Acker has them—those new Swiss Bon Bons.

Penn's Treaty with the Indians

on India paper; engraving 23 inches by 18 inches, on sheets 30 inches by 24 inches; from the original Boydell engraved plate made in 1775 from the original painting of Benjamin West. $8.00 by mail.

A. L. SMITH

29 E. Penn St., Germantown, Phila., Pa.

The American Friend

*"Truth is the highest thing a man may keep."
"That they all may be one."*

VOL. XI.

PHILADELPHIA, THIRD MONTH 17, 1904.

No. 11.

CAN CHRISTIANITY STILL DRAW MEN?

THE common people heard Christ gladly. Men were added daily while the power of Pentecost lasted. Whenever a man has arisen in the Church who could make the Gospel real again, the people have responded, as in the early days when it came to men's ears with freshness and power. As soon as Christ is actually presented so that men see Him, wherever the quick and powerful Word is heard, results follow as they did in the first century.

There never has been anything in human history which has proved so perennially and unfailingly interesting to man as religion. Other interests play out; this one never does. It has had to compete with sexual passion, with love of wealth, with ambition for fame and glory, with the pure sentiments, such as appreciation of beauty, love of home, patriotism, intellectual aims. It has overpowered them all, again and again. It has conquered men of every type. It has absorbed the man of narrow horizon. It has also mastered the many-sided person whose life touched the world at a thousand points.

There is evidently something in man which needs and demands religion. He is unfinished without it. He turns toward God as instinctively as the newborn babe seeks the mother's breast. There is something in him which nothing else will fit or satisfy. The moment a person appears who can interpret God and reveal Him, the ancient wonder is repeated. Men hear Him gladly. Multitudes are added to the Church. The word again becomes quick and powerful.

Sensational methods will work for a little while, for it takes time for men to discover the difference between the real and the sham, but sooner or later they do discover what is genuine and what is not, and they invariably refuse to live on straw as soon as they find that it is straw. The same thing applies to all schemes for drawing the multitude to Christianity. They will work for a brief space. But everybody soon realizes that any kind of religion is played out when its own adherents have lost confidence in its power to draw and are using other expedients to catch the multitude. There is something wrong with an article when the manufacturer of it begins to depend on chromos to sell it, and those who are wary question the quality of a thing which requires sensational advertising. Investments which are urged upon the public with startling promises of wealth make some of us hesitate to put our money there. If they are so good, why do they require such eloquent pleading? Things that are inherently and intrinsically genuine and good sell themselves without chromos.

Sensational methods and startling attractions in church service invariably work against Christianity in the long run. They indicate to the thoughtful that the Gospel itself is exhausted and has lost its attractive force. Those who count on side-issues and schemes to attract have more or less lost their faith. They do not dare to let Christianity stand in its own power. They are afraid to stop offering chromos. They may talk about their faith in most eloquent language. Their actions belie their words. They have no hope of reaching men with the quick and powerful word of truth. The multitude are not deceived. They know whether Christians believe in Christianity or not. When they see bait they know that there is a bare hook underneath. Nothing will steadily draw men but the genuine attractive power of religion itself. Give them a religion which makes God actual and real, help them to find something which fits their need, and which puts power into their own lives, and there will be attraction enough. If they go home saying, "Come here, where I discovered all about myself and found something to live by; is not God there?" others will come back with them to have the same experience. The great need in these days is for Christians to have absolute faith in Christianity, to have confidence in the Gospel, and to put religion on its own merits and let it work.

ART AND LIFE.

THIS is the title of a beautiful and charming little book by an English Friend, M. Catharine Albright, who has had one or two articles in THE AMERICAN FRIEND. The first thought perhaps will be, "Art? what has art to do with earnest, serious life? What place for art can there be in Quakerism, or in any virile, positive kind of Christianity?" Our Friend's little book answers this question very well, and goes much farther, too. It makes one ask himself whether it is possible to live a whole, full, complete Christian life without getting some lessons and help from art. The true life must manifest beauty and symmetry and unity of purpose, which are just the qualities which every work of art manifests. Too often, alas, we have known some good Friend whose life lacked just that mysterious something which a genuine appreciation of beauty would have added. What a fine touch that Psalmist had who calls upon us to "worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness." "Grace" is one of our loftiest Christian words. It means that a divine and heavenly quality of beauty comes out in the life of those who partake of Christ. The most triumphantly beautiful thing in the world is a good life—a life of symmetry and unity. Yes, our friend is right. Art and life go together.

OPENING EXERCISES.

MANY public meetings are spoiled or killed by "opening exercises." Those who come to the meeting come to hear some special subject considered or to hear some distinguished speaker who has been announced. But for a half or three-quarters of an hour they are dragged through a slow, wearisome list of "exercises." Addresses of "welcome" which mean nothing; "Responses," which are cut and dried are given. One person is brought forward to read scripture, another to offer prayer, a third to sing a solo, or to render a selection. Then the audience rises and sings. The chairman of the meeting next finds it his solemn duty to give an address before he presents "the distinguished speaker whom you have all come to hear!" By this time the night is far spent and the "distinguished speaker" has a sleepy audience to address. He gets about half through and his listeners begin to go out to catch trains, or because it is time for them to be at home.

This picture is not overdrawn. It is taken from life. Many a religious meeting drags and grows burdensome through this same long, set program of preparatory exercises. There are persons probably who like such things, but if a census were taken the vote would go against them. Almost everybody dislikes anything that drags, and is lifeless and formal. Singing which is spontaneous and hearty is one thing; singing which gasps and wheezes, and is lugged in to fill up time is quite another thing. Public gatherings and meetings which are to draw and satisfy must have life and directness, and it will generally be found that long opening exercises tend toward weariness and deadness.

EDITORIAL NOTE.

THOSE who have followed the revelations of Mormonism which have been made before the Senate committee fully realize that there is a relic of barbarism still among us that ought to cause solicitude. We have guessed that the moral conditions which exist where this form of religion prevails were bad. Now we know it. This is a free country, and no religion is discriminated against as religion, but when men practice customs which destroy the home and substitute the harem for it in the name of religion, we have the best of grounds for striking as hard as possible against such an institution.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

"THUS SAITH THE LORD."

BY MARY M. HOBBS.

This expression is frequent in the writings of the prophets of Israel, and from them it has been handed down to such in later times and in our own as feel themselves to be inspired of God with certain messages for others.

We may well believe that in the mouth of an Isaiah or a Jeremiah it carried weight and convinced those whose ears were open Godward. We learn from them, however, that even in that day there were certain other prophets who had influence and spoke with the authority of "Thus saith the Lord" who led the people astray. They inspired a false and vain courage which ended in terrible disaster.

We would not for a moment question that there are persons in our day inspired of God with messages from Him. His power is as great now as ever; but the more we learn of the human mind and soul, the more we realize that the treasure is in an earthen vessel, and that psychical experience is influenced not only by the bodily condition, but that our ancestors meet there, and the currents and counter-currents of their wills affect our own. Since this is true, it is evident that the convictions of individuals, no matter how earnest and sincere, need the confirmation of other minds and hearts, and that a general assent to the truth of a revelation renders it far more trustworthy.

Most of the troubles of the religious world have had their origin in an attitude of mind which imposes the "thus saith the Lord" of an individual upon an unassenting multitude. Reformers voice the great unspoken discontent of the masses whose ears are already unstopped to hear what God shall speak.

Most of the troubles in the Society of Friends—and they have been many and full of rancor—have arisen from the fact that some man or body of men has concluded that to him God has given a kind of monopoly of the Holy Spirit; whereas, in fact, He has dealt very generously with the human family in this respect. Although Friends were the first to recognize this truth in the full sense in which it has up to this time been recognized, in practice they have too often allowed the individual to dominate the body. We have been trained to regard "weight," and while in one way it is wise to listen to the counsel of age and wisdom, in another it is a custom full of peril in such a denomination as ours, and in its reflex action is leading us from our beautiful old custom of deciding things in meeting according to the spirit, to the modern barbarity of voting.

No right attitude is easily maintained. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty, and this very great and glorious truth of the immediate guidance of God to each soul must be fortified by other truths, else the bulwarks of our frail human nature will crumble beneath it, as has often been the case, and we shall have destruction instead of triumph. We must cherish our individual light as a part of that great all-inclusive love of God manifested in its fullness in His well-beloved Son, our Saviour, sent to redeem the world; shown forth in the Holy Spirit given to all to enable each to walk in newness of life with Christ, not as the first Adam with the beasts, but as sons of God with the second Adam in spirit. Our part will be seen to be a very small part of this grand whole. We cannot on that account be excused from exercising ourselves in it, nor refrain from letting our light shine; but the magnitude of the whole, the transcendent greatness and blessedness of the word, "Our Father," should make us gladly humble as well as loyally courageous, and we shall be far from claiming extraordinary power to ourselves.

At present in our own Society it seems to me we ought to put into practice a little bit of advice contained in our old discipline, in which Friends are warned against laying too much stress upon their own apprehension of God's will, leaving the matter to make its own appeal to the hearts of the listeners. No advice is more needed, for in point of fact, when we hear one proclaiming "Thus saith the Lord," we at once conclude that it is the man himself who "thus saith," and most likely a very ignorant man at that. As Friends we must ever maintain the inviolability of the individual conscience for the individual, but whenever one person attempts to stamp his own apprehension of truth upon others as upon a whole meeting, then he transgresses the very fundamental law of our denominational being, and becomes a dictator, a tyrant, a pope. I am not sure but what as a Society we have to some extent fostered this very thing, and we have surely gathered the harvest in dissensions, parties, separations in much strife and bitterness. We have been subservient to the "head of the meeting"; we have waited for him to speak, and then been willing to say, "That is my mind," and in so doing we have acknowledged a thing we bear testimony against—that God is nearer to certain persons than to others. That He can work through the willing and obedient more readily, and that such are more experienced in the things of God than those whose minds are on stocks and markets, etc., is not to be questioned; but that does not prevent grave injury both to the meeting and to "the head" in this childish dependence.

Most of the vagaries which have attacked the Society of Friends, of late years at least, have arisen in the conscientiousness of well-intentioned enthusiasts, who believed themselves ordained of God to declare His will, and they have done this thing to the utter confusion of Israel. Very few, I apprehend, have intended to work harm, but this has not prevented the sorrowful effect. As individual members we must practice modesty as to our own inspiration. As a denomination we need to insist upon the consensus of Christian opinion before any matter affecting all is endorsed. The church, and not the individual, is the Bride, the Lamb's wife; and when brethren differ, the exhortation of Christ was to take it to the church and abide its decision, or be like a heathen or a publican. If we are not willing to accept the judgment of the church, which is the consensus of Christian opinion, we at once assume the position of autocrats and forfeit our right to a place in a Society organized as ours is with the principle, "the spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets," as one of its corner-stones. These three Bible texts then seem to be the proper propositions of our formula: "Thus saith the Lord;" "The spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets," and Christ's "Tell it to the church." The Friends in contradistinction to the other churches have emphasized the first, and declared that to every man God is pleased to reveal His divine will, so that every believer becomes a priest of the Most High, and the church a priesthood of believers. I repeat that as Friends we must ever maintain the absolute infallibility of the individual conscience for the individual; there is no other way, save the old priest-ridden way. At the same time we must, if we intend to maintain an organization, adhere rigidly to the second proposition which is that the individual perception of divine truth must be in submission to the general apprehension of the same, or of the consensus of Christian opinion. There is no other way, except the anarchy of division, which is utterly subversive of Christian feeling. Too often we have followed the "Thus saith the Lord" of individuals, and thereby have been led far afield and wandered in dreary wildernesses. It does not matter whether the individual be extremely conservative—that is, clinging to the old; or extremely radical—that is, flying off on a tangent over some fad as old as Christendom, and doubtless as old as heathendom, too, if it were sifted, but springing up every now and then as if it were a fresh revelation. No matter which of these forms appear the cause is the same. The individual believes himself to be the mouthpiece of God, and is unwilling to be advised. In such cases the words of Christ, "Tell it unto the church," are of special force, and His own verdict in case of a refusal to hear the church is pronounced with emphasis.

As Friends we must deal with even those who "think of themselves more highly than they ought to think" in the spirit enjoined upon the Galatian Church: "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such an one in the spirit of meekness, considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted." The spirit of submission when it is impossible to see eye to eye is one of the most beautiful and cementing experiences in the Society of Friends. The differing elements "are tendered," the tried souls are kept sweet and open to fresh light; the others are humbled under a sense of the love and Christian forbearance manifested. This is the spirit which has so marvelously united the main body of the denomination, and which in the face of very unusual opportunity for erratic action has preserved the sanity and sanctity of the organization. It is to be cherished, cultivated and inculcated.

Guilford College.

CLEAR SHINING AFTER RAIN.

BY THEODORE L. CUYLER.

One of the numberless touches of exquisite poetry in the Old Testament is that which describes the "tender grass springing out of the earth by clear shining after rain." The verdant grass plot which gladdens the eye is the result of a double process—shower and sunshine. Both are indispensable. We find in this beautiful expression a type of our deepest and richest spiritual expressions. It is a type of the most thorough work of conversion by the Holy Spirit. Over every impenitent soul hangs the dark cloud of God's righteous displeasure; His holy Word thunders against sin, and His threatenings beat like a storm of hail. Repentance and faith in Christ sweep away this cloud; the thunders cease; the face of the atoning, pardoning Saviour looks forth like a clear, blue sky after a storm; for there is no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus. No two cases of conversion are exactly similar, yet in every thorough work of grace the darkness and dread which belong to a state of guilt, give place to the smile and peace of God in the face of Jesus Christ.

What is true in the beginnings of the most thorough Christian life is often realized in the subsequent experiences of the believer. Rain and sunshine both play their part in developing godly character. It ought to be a comfort to such of my readers as are under the heavy downpour of trials to open their Bibles and read how it fared with some of God's most faithful children. Abraham toiled on his sorrowful way to Mount Moriah under a dark cloud of apprehension, but the clear shining came when God approved his faith and spared the beloved son Isaac to the father's heart. The successive strokes of trial that burst on the head of Joseph only made his exaltation the more signal when he became prime minister of Egypt. There are forty-one chapters of the book of Job through which beats the tempest which smote the four corners of his house, but in the forty-second chapter comes the clear shining after the rain, and the blaze of restored prosperity. The biographies of Elijah and of Daniel prove how light is sown for the righteous; and the eleventh chapter of the Hebrews is a meteorological record to show how faith paints rainbows on thunder clouds.

In our day God often employs stormy providences for the discipline and perfecting of His own people. He knows when we need the drenchings. Every rain drop has its mission to perform. It goes right down to the roots of the heart, and creeps into every crevice. Not one drop of sorrow, not one tear, but many have some beneficent purpose. The process is not joyous, but grivous; nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruits of righteousness and purity and strength. Christ's countenance never beams with such brightness and beauty as when it breaks forth after a deluge of sorrow, and many a Christian has become a braver, stronger and holier man or woman for terrible afflictions; there has been a clear shining after rain.

This principle has manifold applications. Sometimes a cloud of unjust calumny gathers over a good man's name; lies darken the air, and it pours falsehoods forty days and forty nights. But when the shower of slander has spent itself, the truth creeps out slowly but surely from behind the clouds of defamation, and the slandered character shines with more luster than ever. The same storm that wrecks a rotten tree only roots the more firmly the sound tree, whose leaves glisten in the subsequent sunshine.

All ye children of God who are under the peltings of poverty, or the downpour of disappointments, or the blizzards of adversity, "think it not strange as though some strange thing had happened unto you." Millions have had the same experiences before you. No storm ever drowned a true believer, or washed out the foundations of his hope. The trial of your faith will be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of your Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Two things ought to give you courage. One is that our Lord loves to honor and reward unwavering faith. He permits the storm to test you, and then sends the smile of His sunshine to reward you. Another thought is that the skies are never so brilliantly blue as when they have been washed by a storm. The countenance of Jesus is never so welcome and lovable as when He breaks forth upon us—a sun of consolation and joy after trials.

Long years ago, on a day of thick fog and pouring rain, I ascended a mountain by an old bridle path over the slippery rocks. A weary, disappointed company we were when we reached the cabin on the summit. But toward evening a mighty wind swept away the banks of mist, the body of the blue heavens stood out in the clearness, and before us was revealed the magnificent landscape stretching away to the sea. That scene was at the time, and has often been since, a sermon to my soul. It taught me that faith's stairways are over steep and slippery rocks; often through blinding storms; but God never loses His hold on us, and if we endure to the end He will yet bring us out into the clear shining after rain.

So it's better to hope though the clouds run low,
And to keep the eye still lifted;
For the clear, blue sky will soon peep through,
When the thunder-cloud is rifted.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

FOR SUFFERERS.

FROM THE NOTEBOOK OF R. B. M.

Whilst reading a book, which I chanced to open, I was struck by the comparison of a human life with an untuned musical instrument. As it is struck by the master's hand, its notes, jarred and dissonant, give only pain to his critical ear, until at last, under his skilled touch, a single chord rings out sweet and clear. This chord it is only which answers to his desire, and is in accordance with his purpose. So in this jangling life of ours, it is not the discords which are in accord with Our Father's will, but whenever there is a harmony then is His pleasure being fulfilled in us.

There is, I think, scarcely any truth which we fail to recognize more than this. "Thy will be done" is oftenest a moan, or at most a sad acquiescence, and submission, hard, though needful. We cannot believe that God's will is good will to men. And yet, if we believe in the two definitions by which He reveals Himself to us, that "God is our Father" and that "God is Love," we must also believe that His loving will is His children's happiness, and that yielding ourselves to it is our only sure way to secure that happiness.

All the brightness, then, and all the pleasures, for the enjoyment of which such large capacities are given us, are but foretastes of what "God has prepared for those who love Him," and are but gifts of His providence. Then it must follow that the pain, the sorrow and the trials are not "His will," but emanate from another source. "Sin entered into the world, and death by sin, so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned."

Here then do we find the fruitful source of grief and suffering, as consequences of this "death which came (not by the will of God), but by Sin."

Truly we "die daily"; throbbing nerve, aching heart, strained muscle, quivering flesh and the frightful accidents it is liable to, are sequences of this necessity for death, and all the frailty and decay of the house of this tabernacle.

Looked at in this light, life itself becomes awful, the possibilities of suffering such that it seems scarce worth the risk, and yet through the shadows of its darkest valleys come gleams of sunlight, rifts in stormiest clouds, through which the blue skies gleam and the stars look down. In all these things we are "more than conquerors through Him that loved us"; for He takes the occasion of these agonies to make "all things work together for good to those who love Him." "Tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope." He takes the very weapons of our warfare, with which our unwearied adversary thought to slay us, and fights for us with them, making even this tribulation bring us not despair, but hope. He does not smite, but He sustains.

"Underneath are the everlasting arms," and in the very extremity of our weakness and weariness we sink willingly into them, and He holds us lovingly and firmly. "In all our afflictions He is afflicted," and when our cry goes up in mortal struggle, then it is we hear, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."

And when death does come at last, and we have fought our way through a great "fight of afflictions," then, it is told us, that "These light afflictions, which are but for a moment, work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

So then the tribulation which has wrought such a good work in us—patience, experience, hope and the peaceable fruits of righteousness, love, joy and peace in the Holy Ghost—have also been working for us in that which passes within the veil. What we know not, "for eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, what God has prepared for them that love Him." But this we do know: it will be glory, glory far more exceeding the affliction—"glory eternal, not passing away." And a "weight of glory." Of that no human soul can conceive.

Can we not, then, take every pleasure as a gift from Him, not being afraid to be happy for fear He will be displeased, but, as He has given us all things "richly to enjoy," take all the love, all the smiles, all the kind words, every gleam of sunshine, every strain of melody, every wayside flower, all things, in short, which touch in their subtle way the spiritual within us, as gifts from Our Father?

Can we not also "endure hardness" as a "good soldier," bearing down its weight on Him, and letting Him bring out of it, for us, its hidden blessing, as He surely will, and in any case, saying joyously and not grievously, "Thy will be done"?

Some Views on Present Topics.

PASTORAL VISITING.

BY J. LINDLEY SPICER.

When we read the accounts of early Friends we are impressed with their unceasing activity.

In "steeple houses," inns, barns, fields and streets; at fairs, prize-fights, musters or any public gathering; when in prison or before magistrates, they were earnestly engaged "everywhere" preaching the "gospel of the kingdom." Having aroused interest in this manner they seemed to seek out and convince many "tender" people in their homes. In years gone by our ministers came from other yearly meetings with minutes for religious service, and to "visit families" as way might open in the subordinate meetings. Thus the individual member and the child was reached.

When a little boy I was profoundly impressed by these grave, godly men and women.

In time of harvest, even whenever these servants of the Lord came and desired "an opportunity" with the family, I was sent in great haste to the field to tell my father. No pressure of work was too great, no threatening weather too serious to deter his giving immediate attention. "The messengers of the Most High with a divine message were at his house"—this could not be lightly put aside, whatever loss of crops it might involve.

The teams were all called in and fed under the shade of a tree. All the "help" were summoned. They washed hurriedly, and if they felt they were not presentable in their working clothes they took chairs in the broad kitchen.

The big rocking chair, for the preacher, was set near the connecting door, and silence fell upon the assembled family. Oh, how solemn it was! All my boyish misdeeds seemed to come up in order before me. The minister sat with closed eyes, slowly rocking (they rarely kneeled), and in solemn tones "spoke to our conditions."

"The dear lad" did not then relish being told of "becoming a preacher of the truth" some day, and more than once clenched his fists in silent but firm denial as to becoming "a vessel chosen in affliction." How little he knew!

Those old-time preachers were persons of acute observation and interesting experiences.

In the long evenings how their stories of the big world kindled our imaginations, and to be a preacher—to know the will of God, and to be the channel of transmission from the mind of Jehovah to that of mortal man—how mighty and blessed seemed the privilege. We considered them as divinely chosen and inspired. They were highly esteemed for their works' sake.

About thirty years ago there was a great concern in New York Yearly Meeting as to the state of Society. Committees were appointed to do family visiting, to the end that every member of the Society and those who attended meetings as well should be seen in their homes. Meetings were held almost every night, then others appointed in the homes of the people. The gospel of Jesus Christ as held by Friends was preached. Individuals were sought out, instructed, and prayed with. Some workers spent two or more months in this blessed service.

Then general meetings sprang up, ministers and workers massed efforts, and gathered in scores at the objective point. Homes were packed with guests, stores were closed, business stopped, and hundreds experienced the "birth from above." Other denominations profited greatly by accessions to membership, and our own Society was largely increased. Children and young people were held and united with Friends. The spirit of reverence and personal responsibility are slipping away. There are new conditions and problems to meet. We are letting the pastor or the pastoral committee do the "pastoral visiting," and so often they fail to do it, and it is not done.

I sincerely believe if there were earnest prayers and Bible study, with consecration for this service, that a great many individuals would feel called to this quiet, unobtrusive work of family visiting, and gather fruit for life eternal "in breaking bread from house to house." I have met many individuals who are already called, but shrinking from this duty. Be faithful that no person within the circle of thy influence, fellow-worker, shall say, "No man careth for my soul."

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

THE HEPBURN-DOLLIVER BILL.

BY JOSHUA L. BAILY.

The Judiciary Committee of the United States House of Representatives gave a hearing last week on the Hepburn-Dolliver Bill. The hearing extended over three days—two sessions each day. There was a pretty full and continuous attendance of the members of the committee, and the room was thronged by parties either for or against the Bill. All who spoke were treated with the utmost fairness and courtesy. As all readers of THE AMERICAN FRIEND may not be familiar with the Bill it may be well to point out its object, viz.: The Bill provides that all intoxicating liquors transported into any State or Territory for delivery therein should, on arrival within the boundary of such State or Territory, be subject to the operation and effect of the laws of such State or Territory, and should not be exempt therefrom by reason of being introduced therein in original packages or otherwise.

The reason for the introduction of this act was to remedy the effect of a construction put by the Supreme Court as to the act of August 8th, 1900. That act provided that all intoxicating liquors transported into any State or Territory should upon arrival in such State or Territory be subject to the laws of such State or Territory. The Supreme Court decided that arrival in such State or Territory was to be construed to mean "until delivered to the person to whom they were consigned."

Under the law thus construed, dealers in intoxicants in other States sent soliciting agents into prohibition States and Territories, and took orders for liquors and shipped them direct to the parties giving the orders. In this way a regular trade in liquors was and still is carried on with impunity, and the State is powerless to prevent it or to exercise its lawful police powers.

The Hepburn-Dolliver Bill, should it become a law, will correct this evil by subjecting all intoxicating liquors transported from one State into another to the jurisdiction of the law of the State into which the said liquors are transported, immediately that such liquors come within the boundaries of such State.

A number of persons, manufacturers or dealers, appeared in opposition to the Bill, and there were also several lawyers and at least six clergymen. The latter were all Germans, or, as they claimed, German-Americans. The stock argument with all of them was that the Bill was an abridgment of personal liberty. All of them declaimed vigorously against prohibition, both as a principle and a practice, and at least two of the clergymen claimed that the use of wine and strong drink was commended all through the Bible, and one of them cited the patriarch Noah as high authority for wine drinking, and also referred to St. Paul's instructions to Timothy.

The friends of the Bill dwelt chiefly on the legal points involved, and showed by ample evidence how the recent unfortunate construction of the law by the Supreme Court had made it possible for a large traffic to be carried on in prohibition States, largely blocking the exercise of the police powers of the State.

Most of the opponents of the Bill were Germans or German-Americans. One of the speakers for the Bill asked whether it was not inopportune for German-Americans to be so pronounced in advocating the use of intoxicating liquors at the same time that the Germans of the Fatherland, conscious of the mischief wrought by their use, are doing so much to abate it. It was further pointed out as unbecoming in German-Americans or any class to demand that the indulgence of their peculiar drinking customs should have special consideration, even at the sacrifice and peril of the larger and more important interests of the country.

Among the speakers in behalf of the Bill were our friends, Edgar Nicholson, representing the Anti-Saloon League, and Joshua L. Baily, representing the National Temperance Society.

The International Lesson.

FIRST QUARTER.

LESSON XIII.

THIRD MONTH 27, 1904.

REVIEW.

(Read Luke 2: 46-52; 4: 17-20.)

GOLDEN TEXT.—And Jesus went about all Galilee teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the Kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness. —Matt. 4: 23.

DAILY READINGS.

Second-day, Third mo. 21.—John's preaching. Mark 1: 1-8.
Third-day, Third mo. 22.—The temptation. Matt. 4: 1-11.
Fourth-day, Third mo. 23.—Four disciples called. Luke 5: 1-11.
Fifth-day, Third mo. 24.—In Capernaum. Mark 1: 21-34.
Sixth-day, Third mo. 25.—Hearers and doers. Matt. 7: 21-29.
Seventh-day, Third mo. 26.—John's death. Mark 6: 14-29.
First-day, Third mo. 27.—Feeding the five thousand. John 6: 5-14.

The lessons during the past quarter have covered the life of Christ up to the third year of his ministry. According to the division of Stolker, in his "Life of Christ," this comprises "The Birth, Infancy, and Youth of Jesus"; the "Year of Obscurity," which He spent mostly in Judea, and the "Year of Public Favor," spent mostly in Galilee, when He was followed by multitudes, who would have taken Him by force to make Him a king.

There is almost nothing recorded of His youth, and there are but few records of the first year of His ministry. He seems to have come but slowly into public notice. This was in itself what might have been expected, but something may have been due to the character of the Jews of Judea, who were much more conservative and formal than the Galileans.

The second year, on which we have spent most time, was passed, as has been said, almost wholly in Galilee. Here the people were much more exposed to outside influences; they were more ready to receive new impressions, were more open to conviction, and not so much bound down to formalism. Besides this, Galilee was very thickly settled. Josephus tells us it had about 3,000,000 inhabitants, and that there were many towns. Upon the shores of the lake there were nine cities of about 15,000 inhabitants each. It is easy to see that such teaching as that of Christ, and the miracles which He performed, would soon call public attention to Him. His teaching was simple, plain and practical. It did not refer to authorities, like that of the Scribes, but it carried its authority with it, for He spoke to the heart, He appealed to that personal experience with which every one of His hearers was familiar.

He took the suffering human race,
He read each wound, each weakness clear;
And struck his finger on the place,
And said, "Thou ailest here, and here!"

In the "Boyhood of Jesus" we have the only glimpse of that period in the life of Christ that is recorded, but it shows an ideal youth—one in which Jesus "increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man." No one is expected to reach the height of Christian perfection all at once; there must be growth and development. As there can be a youth fully complete as a youth, a man fully developed as a man, so there are stages in the Christian life, and at each stage it is possible by grace to live in favor with God and man. In the "Preaching of John the Baptist" there is the lesson of a man wholly devoted to His service and calling men to a thorough repentance and change of life. In the "Baptism and Temptation of Jesus" we are shown how He, for our sakes, took upon Him human nature, with its temptations and sufferings, that He might be a merciful and faithful high priest, and be able to succor them that are tempted.

In "Jesus Rejected at Nazareth" we see how "He came unto His own and His own received Him not." When we read that "Jesus calls four Disciples" we are taught that He works through human instrumentalities, and that such service calls for whole-hearted devotion. In the story of "A Sabbath at Capernaum" we see how the compassion of Jesus led Him to heal those that needed healing. In the lesson "Jesus Forgives Sins" we see that there is something worse than physical ailments, and that an aching heart is worse than palsied limbs. We also see how the faith and service of Friends can bring a sufferer to the Lord for healing. In "Jesus and the Sabbath" we are taught that "it is lawful to do well on the Sabbath day," and that "the Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath;" that Christ is Lord of the Sabbath, and that what is according to His will is always lawful.

In "Hearers and Doers of the Word" we are taught that it is not those who say "Lord, Lord," or who make professions, that are accepted, but those who do the will of our Heavenly Father. The only safe position is that which is upon the sure foundation—the Rock of Ages. The account of Jesus calming the storm, should fill believers with confidence that Jesus cares for those who put their trust in Him. “The Death of John the Baptist” brings before us a fearless, righteous life, whose influence was great and far-reaching. His life, though short, is a perpetual inspiration. In “Jesus Feeds the Five Thousand” we are taught not only that Jesus can supply every need, but that He makes use of human instrumentalities, and that a very little, if consecrated to Him, may be greatly blessed and made to do marvelous things.

Christian Endeavor

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Lindley D. Clark, 1429 New York Avenue, Washington, D.C.]

TOPIC FOR THIRD MONTH TWENTY-SEVENTH.

JESUS' WORK FOR HIS OWN COUNTRY; WHAT I CAN DO FOR MINE.

Matt. 4: 23-25; 23: 37.

Second-day, Third mo. 21.—Seek national purity. Prov. 14: 28-34.

Third-day, Third mo. 22.—Desire spirituality. Amos 5: 14-17.

Fourth-day, Third mo. 23.—Obey our rulers. Tit. 3: 1-8.

Fifth-day, Third mo. 24.—Enlighten immigrants. 2 Chron. 6: 32, 33.

Sixth-day, Third mo. 25.—An old-time patriot. Neh. 1: 1-11.

Seventh-day, Third mo. 26.—Paul's love of countrymen. Rom. 10: 1-11.

First comes the duty of knowing. The impulses and efforts of the ignorant often do more harm than would neglect. The facts are some of them easy to learn; but in many cases, easily learned facts are but symptoms, and their causes lie deeper than can be reached by a casual glance; or they may be interwoven with other facts that we ought to know for the best direction of our efforts at doing good.

But we do not wish to join that class of theoretical students who exhaust themselves before they get to any practical application of remedies; nor into any class that loses sight of righteousness and common-sense (which go hand in hand), such as those who urge the temperance reformer to find first a remedy for poverty as being the cause rather than the result of intemperance.

Then we need to feel—not pity, but sympathy. “If you want to lift, get under.” Pity is very apt to be just a little supercilious, to reach down just a little from a treasured point of vantage, while sympathy get alongside the needy one, and finds ready access to the avenues of helpfulness.

Then action: “If ye know these things, blessed are ye if ye do them.” To know the need and to wish to supply is a dead knowledge and a vain desire until our own powers are in the work of meeting it.

Christ knew His country because He lived among the common people who afterward heard Him gladly. No outcast or needy one was beneath His notice. He knew the sacred writings that were at once history and revelation. He knew the teachings of the scribes and rabbis that bound grievous burdens on men's shoulders and released filial obligation by a pretense of consecration. Conversation, travel, reading, meditation, and, above all, an all-inclusive love made Him the efficient Helper of His countrymen and of all men. The sum is, He went about doing good.

Whose needs do we know? The poor have needs, but have less of need of alms than of almost any other thing. The mountaineers of the Southern Appalachians and the black man of the South have needs, but so do many villages in some of our North-eastern States, where a little girl of five years was recently found to know nothing whatever of God; had never heard of Him, a product possible only in an absolutely godless home. Of a tribe of Indians in California, we read in last week's FRIEND that have never heard the Gospel. Perhaps near our own doors are some to whom it has never come with personal, practical meaning.

The “problems” of our land are neither few nor simple, but for them all we cannot doubt that the law of love in Christ is the solution. Our duty is to make the potential cause an actual one; that our country might know the things that belong to its peace.

Missionary Department.

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Herman Newman, 718 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.]

THE SITUATION IN CHINA.

Luh Hoh, China, First month 20th, 1904.

TO THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

Dear Friends: It has occurred to me that it might be useful to those who are praying for us to have a concise statement of the conditions that confront us, and the means at our disposal to meet them. Picture to yourselves four foreigners in a district of some thirty-five or forty thousand inhabitants. Until within the past month we have been only three, Margaret Holme, my wife and myself. We are, however, thankful to say that Wilbur A. Bates has been transferred to this side of the Yang-tsi River, although his being here leaves our Nanking work without a male missionary.

As for the people they are heathen, for the greater part extremely poor, though some have considerable wealth, ignorant of pretty much everything, except their own language and their own “sacred” writings. The average Chinese teacher has little in his head besides myriads of Chinese hieroglyphics and an interminable folk-lore of most unreliable character. Diseased, few being free from infirmity of one kind or another; degenerate, anæmic, lame, blind, pock-marked, haggard, deformed, and opium-wrecked will perhaps pass our chapel door while you read this page.

Superstition is imprinted on their souls and egotism is proverbial. They, as well as we, have all sinned and come far, very far, short of the glory of God. They are noted for politeness, but it is superficial, and opium is robbing the nation of that. In the last analysis the heathen are much the same now as always. Jeremiah, the prophet, summed it up most clearly in the 9th verse, the 17th chapter: "The heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked." Who can know it? Such are the unregenerated of our city.

How can such be reached and saved? Thank God, diseased though they be, He has provided us the remedy. The fountain of cleansing is equal to the need. Christ is what they require. When known and received he never fails to cure the vilest disease of the human heart. It is our work to convince them of their need and point them to the great Physician.

We are located in the southwest quarter of the city. Our plant consists of a street chapel, a hospital, a school and a dwelling house. The three former are rented, and so are Chinese buildings—cold, poorly lighted and small. Besides these, we have a street chapel at Kua pu, with a Bible woman, in charge. This station is three hours distant by bamboo chair. There is also a street chapel at the east gate just outside this city.

In regard to the chapel we have money to erect a very serviceable building for our regular church services, but are hindered on account of the great difficulty of buying land. Our hospital is a temporary expediency, for although we have the land we have as yet no funds for a hospital building. As for a school-house, we at home would think it pretty small quarters, but it is fairly comfortable from a Chinese point of view.

From what I have said you get an idea as to how we divide our time. Preaching, teaching, healing, personal visitation and the distribution of religious literature are the chief means at our disposal. There are two great ends in our minds to be achieved; first, the heralding of the gospel message so that no one in all this city shall fail to know that there is a Saviour, and that forgiveness of sin and eternal life may alone be found in Christ. The second is the training of those whom we believe to know God, to understand His word, and to lead them on to holy living. The magnitude of the task causes us to seek out every available means of multiplying our lives. The use of native evangelists, street and chapel preaching, selling of gospels and distribution of tracts may be put down as the seed sowing, while in the home, the dispensary and the hospital we strive to show the practical working out of the love message. The deeper work, that of bringing these precious souls to the point of entering the kingdom, receiving the Spirit of God into their hearts and learning to serve the King of kings is done in the inquirers' class, at the morning prayers, or in the school. The work with the children is the most encouraging of all. Every Friday evening we have a prayer meeting in our home for workers only, at which the deeper truths of the Gospel are taught. Of late the Holy Ghost has been bringing to light the things of darkness in unusual ways. It makes one sad to realize all that has been covered up, but a pure church is preferable to a large one where sin is covered. Pray on, dear friends; God hears and answers prayers.

Yours faithfully,
GEORGE F. DE VOL.

We need, each and all, to be needed,
To feel we have something to give
Toward soothing the moan of earth's hunger;
And we know that then only we live
When we feed one another, as we have been fed
From the Hand that gives body and spirit their bread.
—Lucy Larcom.

Correspondence.

CHRISTIAN CONSISTENCY.

Editor of THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

Contesting the right of Reed Smoot to a seat in the United States Senate seems to claim the attention of the entire country, especially the Protestant churches. To us there seems to be more involved, from the standpoint of the Protestant Church, than a question of polygamy only. When we find ourselves handicapped in our testimony against polygamy by numerous divorces granted to our members by the civil courts and re-marriages solemnized (?) by our own ministers. Is the teaching of Christ on "the putting away of husband and wife" (Mark 10: 4-12; Matt. 5: 32; Luke 16: 18, etc.), so elastic that the Church may interpret it to suit the occasion? Jesus Christ says but little on this subject, and what He says is so plain it needs no reconstruction. It may be true there is but little comparison between polygamy and divorce and re-marriage, but when Reed Smoot, the Mormon apostle and United States Senator-elect, comes back at us on the divorce question it should at least cause us to examine ourselves as a Church and see if there is not a "mote" in our own eye, if not a "beam."

We sincerely hope and pray the Church will show herself consistent on this, as well as other lines that may have a tendency to detract from her real spiritual life, so essential to the completion of her mission here on earth.

Fairmount, Ind.

CORNELIUS R. SMALL.

Editor of THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

Dear Friend: It would seem as if our missionary societies should turn their attention to work in our own country. After the revelations made in the Smoot inquiry comes this story from a Maine island, clipped from a current newspaper:

"BANGOR, Me., March 10.—The Holiness Society's ministers, whose revival services on Beal's Island, near the coast town of Jonesport, have stirred the inhabitants of the place to frenzy and the verge of murder, have been banished from the island by the sheriff, who interfered just as the slaughter of children as sacrifices seemed to be imminent. Deputy Sheriff French arrived just in time to rescue Frank Beal from the hands of a frenzied mob of Holiness disciples, who had bound and blindfolded him, and who were pounding him unmercifully in the effort to cast out the devil. When the sheriff reached the island he found the Beal residence locked and barred, while a noisy ceremony was going on within. He burst open a door. Deputy Sheriff French was at once attacked by the mob, women screeching and men striking him, while his clothing was torn and his lantern smashed. Drawing his revolver, he held the crowd at bay and arrested Mrs. Beal and took her to Jonesport, where she was adjudged insane and sent to Bangor Asylum.

"The whole population, with a few exceptions, appears to have become insane over the new cult brought to the island by the Holiness Society. The creed requires converts to impoverish and humiliate themselves, giving all their money to the ministers as the representatives of God, and casting away all other valuables. The leaders seem to possess a hypnotic influence over the 300 islanders, most of whom are ignorant and superstitious fishermen."

Very sincerely,

E.

Things of Interest Among Ourselves.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND will be sent to a new subscriber from now until First month 1st, 1905, for $1.00.

J. Perry Hadley has begun a tour of the meetings in South-eastern Kansas.

Four new members were received at the last monthly meeting at Douglas, Alaska.

The meeting at Kake Village, Alaska, seems to be growing in number of attendants and interest.

A. J. Bond recently conducted a series of meetings at Antioch, Kan. He was very ably assisted by Wilford and Michael Swafford.

At Dartmouth Monthly Meeting, Mass., held the 24th ult., six members were received by request, making an addition of ten for the year, two by certificate and eight by request.

President Edmund Stanley, of Friends' University, gave an address at the annual meeting of the Kansas State Peace Society, which was held at Wichita on Washington's Birthday.

A series of meetings was commenced the 21st ult at Fairview, near Glen Elder, Kan., by Anna J. Winslow, assisted by J. Perry Hadley, of North Branch, Kan. They closed on the evening of the 28th, with some definite results, apparently.

The meeting at Clintondale, N. Y., is in need of a local minister since Fred Ryon, who formerly served in that capacity, has moved to Poplar Ridge Meeting. Any one who feels called to this field should correspond with Charles E. Cornell, Clintondale, N. Y.

Edward Grubb has been appointed by the trustees of Bryn Mawr College to give the annual Founder's lecture on "Quakerism." The lecture will be given on the evening of the 17th, at 8 o'clock. Edward Grubb's subject will be "The Place of Quakerism in the Development of Christian Ethics."

Emily Ellis, a well-known minister from Kokomo, Ind., and her husband, John Ellis, visited Spiceland, Ind., Meeting the 6th instant, and attended a large meeting there, having a favored service. Next day they visited relatives and friends at Raysville and Knightstown and returned to their home.

Leannah Hobson and Lida Lyon held a meeting at Dunreith, Ind., for about three weeks, in which a most profound interest was taken by the people. Eight requested membership with Friends, and others will follow without doubt. Leannah Hobson expects to locate in this meeting until Ninth month next.

A few items from North Carolina have just reached us: Thomas F. Andrews and Mary C. Woody were laboring in a meeting at Holly Spring, N. C., in Twelfth month. Some definite results were manifest. Ada E. Lee labored in Rock River Meeting, N. C., during the Second month; also Levi Cox. Friends in Rock River Meeting feel the need of some young Friend to come and teach school among them.

At the recent election in Vermont forty-eight towns changed from license to no-license. Monkton, which went 11 majority for license at the special election last fall, gave 72 majority against on a vote of 112 cast. Of course the statute cannot be changed until the Legislature sits in 1905. The Anti-Saloon League and W. C. T. U. have been at work, and it is interesting to note in this connection that Mother Short, of Ohio, the recognized mother of the W. C. T. U., is still able at the age of 85 to go about and address large audiences.

Salem Quarterly Meeting, Iowa, was held the 26th to 28th ult. The reports from subordinate meetings to the meeting on ministry and oversight were good. Steps were taken to establish a new monthly meeting. The ministry of E. Howard Brown was helpful. He also spoke in two sessions on peace and temperance. The earnest part taken in the meetings for worship by the college students and others who made a profession two months ago, added to the spiritual uplift. The superintendents of department work made good reports of the past quarter's service.

John G. Woolley, of Chicago, editor of "The New Voice," and prohibition candidate for President in 1900, will deliver a series of addresses in Philadelphia commencing on the 13th. On First-day afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock, he will deliver an address in the hall at 715 North Broad Street, and at 7.30 p.m. he will speak in the East Baptist Church, East Columbia and Girard Avenues; on Second-day evening, the 14th, an address will be made in the Centenary Methodist Episcopal Church, Forty-first and Spring Garden Streets; on Third-day evening the address will be in the East Baptist Church.

E. S. Hinshaw, of Lynn, Ind., has been very acceptably with Friends at Barber's Mill Meeting, Indiana, holding evangelistic services. A goodly number of souls received the baptism with the Holy Ghost. The meeting was edified and strengthened.

Fred T. Coppock commenced a series of meetings at Glen Elder, Kan., Second month 2d, assisted by the local minister, A. J. Winslow, also Stanley Coppock, who took charge of the singing. They continued six days, with good success, when Fred and Stanley Coppock were called home. The meetings, however, were continued by the local workers. Several were converted and renewed and moved to a higher experience.

An interesting series of meetings held at the Second Friends' Meeting, Indianapolis, Ind., closed recently. Mary A. Cox, the local minister, and Alice C. Lawrence, an evangelist and minister of Spiceland, Ind., made an earnest and effective effort. About forty claimed to be converted, renewed or to have taken definite steps in their Christian experience; fourteen names have been presented for membership with Friends, and one or two families will join soon by letters. This branch of Indianapolis Monthly Meeting sprang up about fifteen years ago, having about thirty-five members. They met in different halls until thirteen years ago, when they settled permanently in their present meeting house. Just prior to the meeting there were 115 members, of whom 95 were resident and 75 active workers. A live and active Sabbath School, with a general yearly average of fifty, is maintained. Cottage prayer meetings were kept up during the winter, and some gospel services done in shops at noon hour. Since the revival an increase of interest has been manifested in all the departments of the meeting.

There was a good attendance at Whittier Quarterly Meeting, which was held at Whittier Second month 20th and 21st. Harry A. Keats, pastor of Pasadena Church, preached a sermon at the first session from the truths of the Old Testament, which was interesting and instructive. He also preached on Sabbath morning. Levi Rees, who came to California for his health, had many words of comfort and courage, both in prayer and testimony, for us. At the business session a minute was read from Cleveland Meeting, O., liberating Alice Terry for work in California. She and Timothy Nicholson, of Richmond, Ind., were present. A special feature of interest during the business session was brief reviews of departmental work. Rhoda M. Hare spoke concerning the book and tract interest, and some money was raised for her use in that branch of work. Ella C. Veeder gave a very spirited talk on peace. John Osborn's wife spoke on Sunday School work; Amanda Way on temperance, each declaring her department the most important. I. H. Commock spoke concerning foreign missions; Irvin and Margaret Tabor described the Spanish work in our immediate vicinity, to which they have devoted most of their time last year and this. John Henry Douglas, as superintendent of evangelistic work, gave a good report of work being done all along the coast. A subscription of about $300 was raised towards the support of the work in the meeting at Ramona, and liberal contributions were made to Friends' Church interests in Los Angeles. The Christian Endeavor session Seventh-day evening, under the leadership of Lorena Mills, was very interesting indeed. Papers were read by Maud Moon, Professor C. E. Cook, Professor Harris and Miss Trueblood, of the college faculty. Professor C. E. Tebbetts preached Sunday evening to a large audience.

DIED.

CARTLAND.—At her home near East Parsonsfield, Me., Second month 27th, 1904, Isabel Cartland, wife of Asa Cartland, deceased, aged 73 years. She was a member of Parsonsfield Monthly Meeting.

KIMBAL.—At her home near Parsonsfield, Me., Second month 26th, 1904, Flora, daughter of Asa and Julia Kimbal, aged nearly 28 years. During her lingering illness she often expressed a wish to depart and be with Jesus. Her end was peaceful.

KNIGHT.—At Guilford College, N. C., Second month 17th, 1904, John Leslie, son of Cornelius S. and Susan E. Knight, aged 15 years.

LORD.—In Limerick, Me., Twelfth month 27th, 1902, James Lord, aged over 58 years. He was a member of Parsonsfield Monthly Meeting, Me.

SHERWOOD.—At Cincinnati, O., Eleventh month 27th, 1903, Emily Neale Sherwood. A beloved elder of Cincinnati Monthly Meeting.

Events and Comments.

Senator Hoar has completed thirty-five years of continuous service in Congress. In this respect his record surpasses that of any other Massachusetts statesman.

The Grand Trunk shareholders, at a meeting in London this week ratified the agreement with the Canadian Government for the construction of a Grand Trunk line to the Pacific.

"Father Endeavor" Clark is giving Second and Third months to an Australasian tour. Beginning at New Zealand, he passes thence to the States of Australia. Ample and cordial preparations are being made for his visit.

Japan has a Red Cross Society, with 800,000 members, more than 2,500 nurses, two hospital ships, and a large income. Russia's Red Cross Society is also well organized, with thousands of nurses and large financial resources. This showing presents a striking contrast to the Society in the United States.

The framework for the Russian pavilion at the St. Louis World's Fair was torn down last week, on receipt of a cablegram from St. Petersburg by Contractor Lecour, who has been in charge of the work. Work on the framework of the pavilion was well under way. The cablegram was from the Department of FOOD'S WORK.

How It Cured Paralysis.

Paralysis comes from weak nerves and bad blood and is often cured nowadays by proper feeding.

"For fifteen years I was an invalid; haven't walked a step for over twelve years; not able to move my feet, or even my toes."

"But recently a wonderful thing has happened, for I had never expected to have the use of my limbs again; a four months' diet of Grape-Nuts Food for breakfast and supper, made the change, and now, just think of it! I can move my toes freely on my left foot and a little on the right foot, and can let the foot piece on my chair down and swing my feet vigorously, which I think is a wonderful improvement for the time I have used the food.

"And that is not all! My blood and my stomach are so much better I am confident my trouble came from too much rich food and an overstrain of the nerves, but my nerves are much better, my mind is clearer and I don't forget things like I did. It must be the food, for I stopped taking medicine years ago for the paralysis.

"Of course I have the sympathy and prayers of many Christians, but it is wonderful what good pure food will do for one out of health, and why would it not be as good to keep one's health up? I have heard lots of others praise Grape-Nuts, but I for one cannot praise it enough." Name given by Postum Company, Battle Creek, Mich.

Here was a well-defined case of paralysis, which came from weakened nerves and blood trouble, and which began yielding almost immediately when proper food Grape-Nuts was substituted for improper food. There's a reason.

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

the Interior, briefly ordering such work as had been completed torn down.

Nothing very significant has happened during the week in connection with the war in the Far East. Port Arthur and Vladivostock have been bombarded by the Japanese at intervals with little effect. Both Russia and Japan are massing their land forces in Northern Korea, but it will probably be some time before decisive action occurs.

Local elections in Vermont last week have general interest because of the verdict of the people on the retail sale of intoxicants. Only one town changed from "No" to "Yes" on the license issue, and forty-four towns which voted "Yes" in 1903, after the experience of the twelve-month, voted "No." The majorities for license in towns still preferring the saloon are reduced also. Rutland, which voted for license by 1,175 majority last year, voted "No" this year. This home rule on a vital aspect of communal life places responsibility where it belongs and makes for enforcement of law when it is declared.

It is a rather significant fact that, following the close of the year that broke all records for immigration, "Charities" should come out with a number devoted almost exclusively to this problem. It would appear from the contents of the magazine that it is, in fact, largely a charity problem. One cartoonist not long ago illustrated the situation as he saw it by drawing an immense steamship, one end touching Europe and the other America, with hordes of emigrants trooping from the poor-houses of their countries to the poor-houses of our own. Most of the immigrants who make the movement a "problem" come from Southern Europe, and within the last few months a new steamship line has been started between New York and Odessa, which will tap the Russian Jew region, and half a dozen lines are putting in new service, or increasing the old, to Mediterranean ports. Some seven thousand agents of the steamship companies, we are told, are distributed over Italy alone to "drum up" immigration to America, with a corresponding number in other countries; and he predicts that in a few years, as the number and size of steamships increase still further, we may easily have two million newcomers every year.

Spring is drawing near, with its usual casualties. Last week a disastrous storm of wind and rain swept the Pacific coast, causing much damage, while the breaking up of the ice on the Atlantic coast caused destructive floods in many sections. Reports from all parts of the country seem to show that it was the most severe in years, if not the worst on record. The mean temperature of the winter for Boston was 24.05 deg. above zero (Fahrenheit) with sixty-six inches of snowfall. In New York the season has been the coldest on record, with a mean temperature of 26½ deg. above zero. This is five and one-third degrees lower than in any winter for more than thirty years, and one degree colder than that of 1874-75, hitherto the coldest on record. Blizzards and heavy snowstorms were responsible for a fall of twenty-eight and one-half inches, which cost more than $600,000 to remove. In fact, according to the officials of the Street Cleaning Department, no such amount of snow has ever been shoveled from the streets of New York in any previous winter in the city's history. Chicago experienced a mean temperature slightly lower than New York's, and serious epidemics of grip and pneumonia in these and other cities are attributed to the severe cold. In Winnipeg, Manitoba, the temperature stayed a large part of the time in the neighborhood of 30 and 35 below. Railroads have been greatly hampered by the snow, especially in Canada. The freight service on three Canadian lines was abandoned altogether for a time, and only a fraction of the passenger trains were running. We read of a train, in upper New York, two days late because the track was buried for sixteen miles under snow-drifts twelve feet deep.

IT IS A MATTER OF HEALTH

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

LOW RATES TO CALIFORNIA, ARIZONA, MEXICO AND OTHER WESTERN POINTS.

Any one desiring to make trip to California, Arizona, Mexico or other Western points, either for business or pleasure, can do so now at a small cost.

Daily until April 29th, 1904, inclusive, special one-way colonist tickets will be sold via the Southern Railway at rate of $49.75 from Philadelphia to Los Angeles, San Francisco and other points; corresponding low rates from other points.

The Southern Railway operates through personally-conducted excursion sleepers from Washington to Los Angeles and San Francisco without change, via Atlanta, New Orleans and El Paso, leaving Washington at 7.10 p.m., every Monday, Tuesday and Friday. Berth rate in these sleepers is only $8.50 to Pacific Coast points, two people being allowed to occupy one berth, if desired. There are other new, convenient and economical features connected with these sleepers, which may be ascertained from Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

BETTER THINGS.

BY J. L. SPICER.

Beyond the things of time and sense
God holds a blessed recompense.
The Future! Vast Eternity!
For every door Christ holds the key.

Through time, the way is one of tears.
Sorrow and pain make up the years.
The things of Earth our senses pall;
God's grace and love surpasses all.

He meets us at our lowest need;
On daily manna each may feed.
To souls cast down great joy He brings:
Foretaste of Heaven's "Better Things."
Poughkeepsie.

A GENUINE IMPROMPTU.

The late President McKinley, says a writer in "Collier's Weekly," was a firm advocate of putting every man on his mettle in order to bring out his good points. His ideas in this respect are attributable to a trick played upon him long before he became a factor in national politics.

Former Senator Manderson, of Nebraska, now general counsel of one of the great trunk lines of the West, taught the future President his lesson. It was back in the campaign of 1868. Major McKinley was just then beginning to broaden out as a stump speaker among the Republican clans in State politics.

Major McKinley and General Manderson were asked to make speeches at Greentown, O. They accepted. The two traveled together.

They had a long drive through lonesome country, and they fell to talking

THIN DIET.

No Nourishment in It.

It's not easy to keep up when coffee has so ruined the stomach that food won't digest.

A Missouri woman says: "I had been an invalid for two years from stomach trouble caused by coffee; got so bad I couldn't digest food, and for quite a while I lived on milk and lime water—nothing but that—a glass of milk and lime water six times a day. In this way I managed to live, but of course did not gain.

"It was about five months ago I began using Postum Food Coffee; I did not need the milk and lime water after that for I gained rapidly and I can now eat a good meal and drink from one to three cups of Postum each meal and feel fine.

"I would not go back to coffee for any reasonable pay. I like Postum better than coffee now, and make Postum by directions on box, and it is just fine; never found a better way to make it than on box. Now this is all true, and you can easily prove it." Name given by Postum Company, Battle Creek, Mich. Postum is a brew from field grains, with all the nourishment left in. It makes red blood and rebuilds particularly well where coffee has done damage as it does to nearly all who drink it.

A ten-days' trial of Postum in place of coffee works wonders. There's a reason.

Get the little book, "The Road to Wellville" in each package.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

We particularly invite the attention of the readers of "The American Friend" to this column. It will be found useful for almost everyone who wishes to advertise. The cost is 5c. per line each insertion. No advertisement is accepted for less than 25c. Cash with order.

OLD-FASHIONED grandfather clocks repaired at home. If yours needs attention send me a postal or, better, call. My store is within three minutes' walk of the Market Street ferries. Repairing of clocks and watches of every kind. Prompt service and moderate prices. W. L. Berry, Watchmaker and Jeweler, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

NEW SONG BOOK.—"Gold Tried in the Fire." One of the best song books on the market for church, Sunday school and evangelistic work. Bound in limp cloth and contains over 200 songs. Sells for $15.00 per hundred. 20 cents a copy. Published by Friends. BROWN BROS., Indianapolis, Indiana.

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER.—Careful and accurate repairing, with prompt service, has brought me the custom of many Friends. Their patronage is particularly solicited. My store is nearest to the Market Street ferries, and is easy of access from every part of the city. W. L. Berry, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

WANTED.—A thousand families of "Friends" and others to come west and buy land in Woods county, Oklahoma, while you can get good farms at half their value. Rich valley land near Friends' meeting, Stella Academy, railroad and good market. In the great wheat and alfalfa belt, and fruit in abundance, the best part of Oklahoma. Warm, healthy climate, with splendid society. Write us for circulars and price lists. References, Pastor "Friends'" Church, First National Bank of Cherokee, Very truly, VOTAW and SETZER, "Friends."

FOR SALE.—In consequence of advancing age I offer my Cold Storage Plant for Sale, fully equipped; a desirable business in an extensive Fruit Section for a young or middle aged man. Good Friends' Meeting information as to capacity, income, etc. Apply to W. T. Willis, Proprietor, Clintondale, N. Y. Terms easy.

WANTED.—We should like to have a copy of THE AMERICAN FRIEND, of Twelfth month 13th, 1900. Any subscriber who can spare this issue will confer a favor by forwarding same to THE AMERICAN FRIEND, 718 Arch St., Philadelphia.

about the speech-making. Manderson suggested that McKinley, as the younger man, should speak first. McKinley demurred, and politely offered to give place to Manderson.

The latter's eyes twinkled. "Let me look over your speech," he said, "so that we won't trespass on each other's field."

McKinley had written his speech very carefully, and he delved into his pocket and gave it to his friend. The latter read it over, and remarking that it was a splendid effort, returned it.

Evening came; likewise the festal speech-making event. Manderson spoke first. McKinley watched the crowd.

Then he pricked up his ears. For a moment he was dazed. Manderson was reeling off the speech McKinley had so laboriously prepared. McKinley thought there must be a mistake, but still Manderson talked on, and confined himself to McKinley's own framework of thought.

It was a trying hour for the future President, and his heart sank at the humiliation he was sure was in store for him. He pictured his shambling attempt to speak and the weakened feeling that was inevitable.

Manderson closed, and, as he resumed his seat, winked at McKinley. The latter arose. For a moment he thought he would like to be back in Canton, but only for a moment. He clutched at a subject untouched by Manderson and struck out boldly. He threw his whole soul into the effort. He waxed eloquent, and expounded views that were broad and sound and imbedded in clear, con-

"NICE" PAINTS

Painting the House or Outbuilding is an expensive necessity, and an operation that oftentimes must be repeated—all too often in these times of cheap material.

Remember it costs no more for labor to put on the kind of Paint that lasts than the kind that don't, and very little more for the material itself.

WRITE US ABOUT THE
KIND THAT LASTS

EUGENE E. NICE

Nos. 272-274 So. Second St.
PHILADELPHIA

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE.

Sifts the flour and mixes 10 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CYRUS CHAMBERS, Jr.) 52d & Media Sts., Philadelphia

HOOPING-COUGH AND CROUP.

Roche's Herbal Embrocation

The celebrated and effectual English Cure without internal medicine. Proprietors, W. EDWARDS & SON, Queen Victoria St., London, England. Wholesale of E. Fougere & Co., 80 North William Street, N. Y.

Established 1860

150 Varieties

Esterbrook's Steel Pens

Sold Everywhere

The Best Pens Made

cise Queen's English. It was a noble effort crowned with success. It was one of the most brilliant perorations of that campaign in the old Buckeye State. When finally he sat down, the crowd applauded uproariously.

Manderson and McKinley rode back together. "It was a mean trick to take that advantage of me," suggested McKinley.

"It's the turning-point in your life," said Manderson. "I wanted to see what there was in you, and I found out."

We are Going to the Christian Endeavor Hotel,
World's Fair, St. Louis

Because it will be headquarters during the Exposition for Christian People, Educators and friends of morality. The hotel is located at the Fair Grounds, with street cars direct from Union Station. Built for safety and comfort. Hotel capacity 3,000. Auditorium capacity 3,000. Backed by men of highest standing and endorsed by the Clergy and World's Fair officials. Now is the time to arrange for reduced rates. Send for illustrated booklet giving particulars. Tell your friends about it. Address at once, Christian Endeavor Hotel and Auditorium Co., Chemical Building, St. Louis, Mo.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a.

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote, 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p.m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cts. per night; $3 per week.

Two occupants, 50 cts. each, per night.
2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL

Phone Spruce 33-55.

Clerk.

THE commercial credit of a firm is enhanced by insurance on the life of each member for the benefit of the survivors. Is your credit thus buttressed?

PENN MUTUAL LIFE

921-3-5 Chestnut Street.

THE NEW HYMN BOOK!

BY THREE FAMOUS COMPOSERS
DOANE, KIRKPATRICK AND MAIN
256 pages. 276 hymns with music.

One-half new songs that will never grow old.
One-half old songs that will always be new.
If you need a new hymn book you had better see

DEVOTIONAL SONGS

before making your choice.

Substantially bound in cloth, $25 per 100.

THE BOOK ITSELF IS ITS BEST ADVERTISEMENT.

Returnable copies for examination mailed on request.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York - Chicago.

FRIENDS' LIBRARY,

142 North Sixteenth Street, Philadelphia.

Open on week-days from 11.30 a.m. to 2 p.m., and from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Recent additions to the library include the following:

Baker, M. N.—"Municipal Engineering and Sanitation."

Bolen, G. L.—"Getting a Living."

Curtis, W. E.—"To-day in Syria and Palestine."

Hotchkiss, S. F.—"Penn's Greene Country Towne."

Kuhns, Oscar.—"Great Poets of Italy."

Potter, H. C.—"The East of To-day."

Rhoads, D. P.—"Pleasure-book of Grindelwald."

Singleton, Esther (ed.).—"Historic Buildings as Seen and Described by Famous Writers."

Trumbull, H. C. (ed.).—"Child Life in Many Lands."

Williams, Archibald.—"Romance of Modern Engineering."

Never depend upon your genius; if you have talent, industry will improve it; if you have none, industry will supply the deficiency.—John Ruskin.

FLORIDA AND THE CAROLINAS—
WINTER RESORTS.

Palm Beach, Miami, Daytona, Tampa, Jacksonville, Camden, Southern Pines, Pinehurst are quickly and most conveniently reached via the Seaboard Air Line. Three daily trains in each direction, including the Seaboard Florida Limited, the handsomest and quickest train in the Florida service. Tourist tickets on sale daily, with 'stop-over' privileges. For description, booklets and information, address W. E. Conklyn, General Agent, 1411 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Established 1810 at 324 North Second Street.

WATCHES

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

S. F. BALDERSTON'S SON

Wall Paper and Decorations

Window Shades Made to Order

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILA.

Delavau's Remedy

A SPECIFIC FOR

Whooping Cough and Croup

Also a safe and speedy cure for Bronchitis, Bronchial Catarrh and ordinary coughs. 50 Cents a Bottle, at Druggists, or

J. W. S. DELAVAU & CO., Prop'r's.

N. E. Cor. 6th and Wood Sts., Phila.

It takes a good dealer to sell right lamp-chimneys when wrong ones pay so much better.

MACBETH.

The Index tells you, in ten minutes, all you need to know for comfort with lamps and the saving of chimney-money; sent free; do you want it?

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

FEAR NOT.

BY GEORGE M. HICKS.

Again fair hope revives,
The dreary night is past;
No more, dear heart, the pall
Of darkness overcast!

Aye, light and glory shine,
And summer's roses bloom,
Resplendent in loveliest hues,
Dispelling all the gloom.

Be true, for God is true;
The darkness, for a time,
Accomplished His own will,
Wrote His eternal rhyme.

Therefore, fear not, believe;
In time God's purpose know!
His blessing full receive
In ceaseless, rhythmic flow.

NO SUBSTITUTE

not even the best raw cream, equals Borden's Peerless Brand Evaporated Cream for tea, coffee, chocolate, cereals and general household cooking. It is the result of forty-five years' experience in the growing, buying, handling and preserving of milk by Borden's Condensed Milk Co.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD'S WASHINGTON TOURS.

The Pennsylvania Railroad's sixth three-day personally-conducted tour to Washington will leave New York, Trenton and Philadelphia March 28th. Round-trip rates—only difference being in the hotel selected in Washington—are $10.50 or $13 from Trenton, $9 or $11.50 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other points. Tickets cover railroad transportation for the round trip and hotel accommodations. A special side trip to Mt. Vernon may also be taken. All tickets good for ten days, with special hotel rates at expiration of hotel coupon. For itineraries and full information apply to ticket agents, or Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, Pa.

FINANCIAL.

6% to 7% Choice First Mortgage Loans, Seattle and vicinity. Local and N. Y. references. Established 1887. Correspondence Solicited. JAMES BOTHWELL, Seattle, Washington.

Mortgages Net 6% in North Dakota.

I place mortgages on land covering about one-third its value. The value of this land is constantly increasing.

I know every mortgagor personally, know his land, his integrity, his habits and his ability to pay.

These combine to make me certain that these mortgages are as safe as GOVERNMENT BONDS.

Investigate me. You can't make the investigation too rigid to suit me. I'll stand it.

I've been in this business for 18 years, and never lost a cent for a customer, nor foreclosed a mortgage.

I collect the interest and principal without charge and remit in New York exchange. Write to me for further information.

WALTER L. WILLIAMSON

Investment Banker

Lisbon

North Dakota

WILLIAM S. YARNALL

Manufacturing OPTICIAN

118 S. FIFTEENTH ST., PHILA.
4th Door Below Chestnut St.

OSTEOPATHY

EDWARD D. BURLEIGH
ALEXANDER STETSON

Osteopathic Physicians, 1537 Chestnut St., Room 401

Hours, 9 a.m. to 12.30 p.m. and 2 to 4 p.m.
Bell Telephone Consultation free.

JOSEPH G. FOGG

UNDERTAKER AND EMBALMER

S. W. Cor. Sixteenth and Race Sts.

Phone Spruce 44-38-W. PHILADELPHIA.

Suburban orders promptly attended.

TO INVESTORS

I have For Sale $50,000—5 per cent. Gold First Mortgage, Coupon Bonds, in 1,000's, Street Railways, Electric Light, Gas and Warehouse, at from par to 102½ and accrued interest. Full particulars on application.

HOWARD M. SWAB,

Member Philadelphia Stock Exchange.

FREE-MILLING GOLD MINES

Having large ore bodies accessible for cheap mining, where the simplest and cheapest process will turn the ore into gold bars at the mines, are always winners, and head the list for large and regular dividend-payers. The reason is that mining under such conditions resolves itself into a stable manufacturing business, free-milling Gold Ore, the raw material, and GOLD BARS, the finished product. With the element of uncertainty connected with the treatment of refractory ores eliminated, the results can be as accurately computed as in the manufacture of coke and sugar, and only requires judicious management to make it absolutely A Safe and Profitable Investment.

An opportunity for such an investment is now offered by

THE PAN-TONOPAH MINING & EXPLORATION COMPANY

who have enormous, well-developed bodies of absolutely free-milling Gold Ore at their Silver Star Mines, near Sodaville, Nevada. Mill run values $5.00 to $80.00 per ton. Estimated $3,000,000 of ore in sight. United States Mint returns show $300,000 from present mill on property, by former owners. A limited amount of stock is offered at 25 cents per share to increase capacity of mill to 100 tons. Write for Prospectus and Letters of Endorsement from eminent mining experts, bankers and editors.

Address the Company, at 5-7 E. 42d Street, New York City

ELIAS G. MINARD, Secretary. ARLANDO MARINE, Treasurer.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA. Office, 409 CHESTNUT STREET

CAPITAL, $1,000,000

ASSETS, $63,970,335.34

Surplus and Undivided Profits, belonging to Stockholders 4,026,151.15

Surplus, belonging to Insurance Account 5,635,620.25

Incorporated Third month 22, 1865. Charter Perpetual.

INSURES LIVES, GRANTS ANNUITIES, RECEIVES MONEY ON DEPOSIT, returnable on demand for which interest is allowed.

And is empowered by law to act as EXECUTOR ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, GUARDIAN, ASSIGNEE, COMMITTEE, RECEIVER, AGENT, etc.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the assets of the Company.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.

BOXES $5 AND UPWARDS

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY, President.

T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-Prest.

ASA S. WING, Vice-President.

JOS. ASHBROOK, Man. Ins. Dept.

SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer.

J. R. FOULKE, Trust Officer.

DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary.

J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Assistant Trust Officer

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary.

DIRECTORS:

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY,
T. WISTAR BROWN,
HENRY HAINES,
RICHARD WOOD,
CHAS. HARTSHORNE,

ASA S. WING,
PHILIP C. GARRETT,
JAMES V. WATSON,
WM. LONGSTRETH,
THOS. SCATTERGOOD,

J. PRESTON THOMAS,
ROBERT M. JANNEY,
MARRIOTT O. MORRIS,
FRANK H. TAYLOR,
JOSEPH B. TOWNSEND, JR.

The NEW

Crimson Rambler "Philadelphia"

Pronounced by experts to be "the most magnificent Crimson Climbing Rose in existence." It is a descendant of the Old Crimson Rambler, but far finer and better in every way.

The plants are hardy as oaks and will grow 10 to 15 feet in a season. A prodigious bloomer, often 15,000 to 20,000 blossoms on a single plant by actual count. The effect is dazzling and beautiful beyond description.

For making Rose arbors, screens or hedges "Philadelphia" is unsurpassed. For training up the side of a porch it is "ideal." We are the introducers of this beautiful rose, and now have splendid plants in all sizes.

PRICES.

Pot {One year at 25c each; 10 for $2.00, post paid
Plants {Two " 50c " 10 " 4.00, express.

Extra Size Field Grown Dormant Plants.

Before shipping these we trim them back to proper size for planting.

2 to 5 ft. at 75c each 5 for $3.00, express.

3 " 4 " " $1.00 " 5 " 4.00 "

4 " 5 " " 1.50 " 5 " 6.00 "

Send for Special Prices in large quantities; also our New Floral Guide, 138 pages, telling all about Roses and 400 other choice plants. Free.

THE CONRAD & JONES COMPANY,

Box X, West Grove, Pa.

"Growers of the Best Roses in America."

SEED, POTATOES 500,000 BUSHELS FOR SALE CHEAP

Largest seed potato growers in the world!

Elegant stock. Tremendous yields.
From 400 to 1000 bushels per acre.

FOR 10 CENTS

and this notice we send you lots of farm seed samples and big catalogue, telling all about Teosinte, Speltz, Peasat, Aerid Land Barley, Macaroni Wheat, Bromus, Earliest Cane, etc. Send for same today.

JOHN A. SALZER.
SEED CO. LA CROSSE, WIS.

JOSEPH B. SCATTERGOOD
House and Sign Painter
313 South 5th St., Philadelphia

DREER'S Garden Book for 1904

should be in the hands of every lover of flowers, grower of vegetables, and farmer in the country. Contains 208 pages and six high-class full page colored plates, illustrating Hardy Chrysanthemums, Asters, Poppies, Garden Pinks and Vegetables. Full of valuable cultural information and hints on the beautifying of the home, garden and surroundings.

Send by mail to any address on receipt of 20c in stamps or silver. With each copy we send free one package each, Dreer's Superb Branching Asters, Fringed Japanese Pinks and Select Shirley Poppies.

HENRY A. DREER,

714 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

The American Friend

Vol. XI

THIRD MONTH 24, 1904

No. 12

	PAGE
EDITORIALS.—The Importance of Fellowship in Christian Life.—Saloon Fellowship	191-192
The Progress of Quakerism	192
Edwin D. Starbuck.
The Bible as Literature	195
Daisy Barr.
William B. Morgan	196
THE INTERNATIONAL LESSON	197
Lesson for Fourth month 3, 1904.
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR	198
Topic for Fourth month 3, 1904.
MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT	198
EDUCATIONAL	199
CORRESPONDENCE	201
THINGS OF INTEREST AMONG OURSELVES, 201
MARRIAGES, DEATHS	202
EVENTS AND COMMENTS	203

SOME CHARIOTS OF GOD.

I HAVE not a shadow of doubt that if all our eyes could be opened to-day, we should see our homes, and our places of business, and the streets we traverse, filled with the "chariots of God." There is no need for any one of us to walk for lack of chariots. That cross inmate of your household, who has hitherto made life a burden to you, and who has been the Juggernaut car to crush your soul into the dust, may henceforth be a glorious chariot to carry you to the heights of heavenly patience and longsuffering. That misunderstanding, that mortification, that unkindness, that disappointment, that loss, that defeat,—all these are chariots waiting to carry you to the very heights of victory you have so longed to reach. Mount into them, then, with thankful hearts and lose sight of all second causes in the shining of His love, who will carry you in His arms safely and triumphantly over it all.

—HANNAH WHITALL SMITH.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.50 A YEAR ❁ ❁ ❁ PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
AMERICAN FRIEND PUBLISHING COMPANY, 718 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA

EDUCATIONAL.

EARLHAM COLLEGE,RICHMOND,
INDIANA

Prof. Elbert Russell offers courses regularly in Kings, New Testament Times, Life of Christ, The Apostolic Age, Church History, New Testament Literature, Romans, John, Biblical Literature, Isaiah.

Prof. Cyrus W. Hodgkin, The Protestant Reformation.

Prof. Anna M. Demaree, New Testament, Greek.
Asst. Prof. Lindley, History of the Hebrews.
Pres. Kelly, History of Philosophy, Ethics, Psychology.

The Oakwood Seminary

UNION SPRINGS, N. Y.

Founded in 1796.

A boarding school for boys and girls under the care of New York Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Academic, College Preparatory and Commercial

Spring term begins Fourth month 5, 1904

SAMUEL H. HODGIN,
Principal.LINDLEY M. STEVENS,
Superintendent.Stenography, Typewriting,
Mimeographing and Reporting

LYDIA ARETE CONN,

805 Provident Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

SHORTHAND TAUGHT BY MAIL

or in school. Each student receives personal attention. Moderate rates. Write for full information.

PROVIDENT SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND

805 Provident Building Philadelphia, Pa.

STENOGRAPHING, TYPEWRITING and MIMEOGRAPHING. Prices moderate.

MARY M. KITE

407 Lippincott Building, 12th and Filbert Sts., Phila.

Phone No. 3-33-00

STENOGRAPHER

GEO. B. COCK

Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter Street.

Telephones.

JOSEPH B. SCATTERGOOD

House and Sign Painter

313 South 5th St., Philadelphia

FLORIDA AND THE CAROLINAS—
WINTER RESORTS.

Palm Beach, Miami, Daytona, Tampa, Jacksonville, Camden, Southern Pines, Pinehurst are quickly and most conveniently reached via the Seaboard Air Line. Three daily trains in each direction, including the Seaboard Florida Limited, the handsomest and quickest train in the Florida service. Tourist tickets on sale daily, with stop-over privileges. For description, booklets and information, address W. E. Conklyn, General Agent, 1411 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Delavau's Remedy

A SPECIFIC FOR

Whooping Cough and Croup

Also a safe and speedy cure for Bronchitis, Bronchial Catarrh and ordinary coughs. 50 Cents a Bottle, at Druggists, or

J. W. S. DELAVAU & CO., Propr's.

N. E. Cor. 6th and Wood Sts., Phila.

OSTEOPATHYEDWARD D. BURLEIGH
ALEXANDER STETSON

Osteopathic Physicians, 1537 Chestnut St., Room 401.

Hours, 9 a.m. to 12.30 p.m. and 2 to 4 p.m.
Bell Telephone Consultation free.

S. F. BALDERSTON'S SONWall Paper and
Decorations

Window Shades Made to Order

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILA.

Acker has it—that perfect
Mo-Kof-Fee Pot.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA. Office, 409 CHESTNUT STREET

CAPITAL, $1,000,000

ASSETS, $63,970,335.34

Surplus and Undivided Profits, belonging to Stockholders 4,026,151.15

Surplus, belonging to Insurance Account 5,635,620.25

Incorporated Third month 22, 1865. Charter Perpetual.

INSURES LIVES, GRANTS ANNUITIES, RECEIVES MONEY ON DEPOSIT, returnable on demand for which interest is allowed.

And is empowered by law to act as EXECUTOR
ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, GUARDIAN, AS-
SIGNEE, COMMITTEE, RECEIVER, AGENT, etc.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the assets of the Company.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.

BOXES $5 AND UPWARDS

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY, President.

T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-Prest.
ASA S. WING, Vice-President.
JOS. ASHBROOK, Man. Ins. Dept.
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer.

J. R. FOULKE, Trust Officer.
DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary.

J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Assistant Trust Officer.
C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary.

DIRECTORS:

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY,
T. WISTAR BROWN,
HENRY HAINES,
RICHARD WOOD,
CHAS. HARTSHORNE,

ASA S. WING,
PHILIP C. GARRETT,
JAMES V. WATSON,
WM. LONGSTRETH,
THOS. SCATTERGOOD,

J. PRESTON THOMAS,
ROBERT M. JANNEY,
MARRIOTT C. MORRIS,
FRANK H. TAYLOR,
JOSEPH B. TOWNSEND, Jr.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

We particularly invite the attention of the readers of "The American Friend" to this column. It will be found useful for almost everyone who wishes to advertise. The cost is 50. per line each insertion. No advertisement is accepted for less than 250. Cash with order.

LEAFLETS OF PRAISE.—Containing new hymns by Wm. J. Kirkpatrick, H. L. Gilmour and others. Includes "Peace Hymn of Nations." All peace lovers should have this song. 6 cents, postpaid. Jennie E. Hussey, Henniker, New Hampshire.

NEW SONG BOOK.—"Gold Tried in the Fire." One of the best song books on the market for church, Sunday school and evangelistic work. Bound in limp cloth and contains over 200 songs. Sells for $15.00 per hundred. 20 cents a copy. Published by Friends. BROWN BROS., Indianapolis, Indiana.

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER.—Careful and accurate repairing, with prompt service, has brought me the custom of many Friends. Their patronage is particularly solicited. My store is nearest to the Market Street ferries, and is easy of access from every part of the city. W. L. Berry, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

WANTED.—A thousand families of "Friends" and others to come west and buy land in Woods county, Oklahoma, while you can get good farms at half their value. Rich valley land near Friends' meeting, Stella Academy, railroad and good market. In the great wheat and alfalfa belt, and fruit in abundance, the best part of Oklahoma. Warm, healthy climate, with splendid society. Write us for circulars and price lists. References, Pastor "Friends'" Church, First National Bank of Cherokee. Very truly, VOTAW and SETZER, "Friends."

FOR SALE.—In consequence of advancing age I offer my Cold Storage Plant for Sale, fully equipped; a desirable business in an extensive Fruit Section for a young or middle aged man. Good Friends' Meeting information as to capacity, income, etc. Apply to W. T. Willis, Proprietor, Clintondale, N. Y. Terms easy.

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

GLUTEN FLOUR For DYSPEPSIA.
SPECIAL DIABETIC FLOUR.
K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR.
Unlike all other goods. Ask Grocers.
For book on sample, write
Farwell & Rhines, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE.

Sifts the flour and mixes
10 lbs. of best bread in 3
minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for booklet. Agents wanted.
Scientific Bread Mach. Co.
(CYRUS CHAMBERS, Jr.)
52d & Media Sts., Philadelphia

EMINENT PHYSICIANS
throughout the world recommend

QUINA-LAROCHÉ

AS A SPECIFIC IN CASES OF
ANAEMIA, COLDS, LA GRIPE,
SLOW CONVALESCENCE,
STOMACH TROUBLES,
TYPHOID and MALARIAL
FEVERS.

E. Fougere & Co., 30 N. William St., N. Y.

The American Friend

*"Truth is the highest thing a man may keep."
"That they all may be one."*

VOL. XI.

PHILADELPHIA, THIRD MONTH 24, 1904.

No. 12.

THE IMPORTANCE OF FELLOWSHIP IN CHRISTIAN LIFE.

THERE is constant complaint in certain sections of the country that men, particularly young men, are attracted to lodges and secret societies, and that churches suffer more from this tendency than from any other single influence. The correspondence which comes to us reveals a very vigorous feeling of opposition to these lodges. There is no doubt that they draw away many of our young men, and the situation is one which needs serious consideration. It is a matter which must be handled delicately and properly, and it can be done so only by those who know what the lodges really are and why young men go to them. Those of us who have only heard the names of such organizations feel too ignorant to say anything. Our opinions would be useless and valueless.

There is one thing, however, which we can say, and that is that most persons require and demand fellowship. Wherever there is human life there is bound to be fellowship. If it is not furnished in one way, it will be sought in another. If it is not provided for in one place, it will be found somewhere else. The most natural place for fellowship of the right sort is in the home. If the home is an actual fellowship, where these deep human needs for companionship are met, and where the demand for social joy is supplied, that will be a happy home. If a boy enjoys his mother's company and feels that his father is the best kind of a comrade, that boy will not stray off in search of associations; and as the family grows in number the home fellowship will get richer. Such homes are the best safeguard against evil associations. But the home by itself does not furnish a wide enough fellowship for most persons. There is an inherent desire in almost every young person for some kind of larger social life or life of fellowship. This is as natural and as proper as breathing.

Now, just as far as it can possibly be done, the church ought to furnish opportunities for this spirit of fellowship. This was a remarkable feature of the early Church. Its members needed no other outlet for their social instincts. The multitude of new converts "continued steadfast in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship," and "breaking bread from house to house, they did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart."* Church life was through and through social, and this need of fellowship was met in a way which made it minister to the spiritual life, as it always ought to do.

In the early days of our Society (note the name) fellowship and social intercourse were the most prominent thing. If anybody suffered, it was an affair of the whole group. Everybody knew everybody. It was a society. The members felt themselves united in a great living, active fellowship. There has sometimes been a disposition to laugh at the monthly and quarterly meeting dinners and at the clannishness of Friends as it was in the days of our youth. These things were just as important as Discipline or Queries. They did more to hold the Society together than any legislation of business meetings did.

But, unfortunately, the Church of to-day (and our branch of it must be included) has partly lost sight of the importance of fellowship, or at least it has not succeeded in supplying it in ways that are true and noble. "Baked-bean suppers" and "tea-meetings" are good as far as they go, but they are more or less artificial. They are affairs which are got up for social purposes. We need more of that fellowship which springs right out of the life of the Church itself. Some of the best of our Bible Schools supply a very genuine kind of fellowship and social life. Some of the young people's organizations do much in this direction, but yet probably very few of our meetings are supplying opportunities for the kind of fellowship which meets the highest need of the younger half of the congregation. It is by no means an easy matter. But it has been strangely neglected. In many places the need has been absolutely ignored, while the elders have wondered why the young people drifted away. There are probably many ways of dealing with this problem of the lodges. But this is surely one of the ways. Our Christian homes and our Christian churches must recognize that young men go to lodges to get their need for fellowship supplied, and that this need must be met in higher and more spiritual ways if we are to hold those who go to these other organizations.

* The reader will do well to study carefully the first five chapters of Acts and the Corinthian Epistles.

SALOON FELLOWSHIP.

It is surprising how many who have attacked the saloon and who have worked all their lives to abolish it have failed to discover what passion it is in human nature to which the saloon ministers. Of course, an old drunkard, with a habit formed, has a passion for intoxicants. He goes to the saloon because he wants a particular mental state which an alcoholic drink will give him. But all recent investigations show that the saloon gets its great grip on men because it ministers to their desire for fellowship. Here old comrades meet; here they talk over the things that interest them; here they forget their troubles in jolly fellowship. Most of these men come from homes where there is little or no companionship. Life is dreary at home. They have no resources there. There is nothing to do, nothing which entertains them. They are too tired to read. They have never learned how to enjoy wife and children. It is pitiable, but it is unfortunately true.

The saloon is always open. It charges no admission. Those who meet there all have something in common, and the tongue which was tied up at home runs easily here. They talk and smoke and drink, and silently they forge a chain of habit which makes them seek the drink for its own sake. The saloon lives and flourishes upon this human need for fellowship. The Church may neglect to minister to this need, but the saloon never does neglect it. It studies it and caters to it. While we are quoting the Bible against it, the saloon rests quietly upon a human instinct which is older than the Pentateuch.

If we had nothing to fight against except the depraved appetite for intoxicants we should soon win. Those who drink just to satisfy an abnormal craving are undoubtedly very numerous. But they alone would make a poor, weak showing against the forces which are opposed to the drink traffic. The great bulwark of the saloon is deeper. It is planted in an instinct which of itself is healthy and good. It is an immortal human instinct which never can be conquered. Its mighty hold is just this love of fellowship and social intercourse. Now that cannot be put down. Defeat it in one place and it breaks straight out in another. NO ANNIHILATION OF THE SALOON CAN BE PREDICTED UNTIL SOCIETY LEARNS HOW TO MEET THIS INSTINCT AND PASSION FOR FELLOWSHIP IN SOME OTHER WAY. Persons who are congenial to each other are going to get together somewhere and enjoy their society. If ways which are harmless can be found for them to do this, the saloon will begin to suffer. It is the old fact—the everlasting fact—that a new world, a world of goodness, cannot be produced by driving the devil out, leaving the life empty. (Read Luke 11: 24-26.) The life must be filled up with something which leaves no place for the devil to occupy.

Already successful experiments have been made which are full of promise. Substitutes for the saloon have in many places been provided, where men could find what they were seeking without the moral dangers which crowd the saloon, and such substitutes have proved effective. We are just at the beginning of such work. It will grow. Along with this constructive work, every attempt must be made to deprive the saloon of all its social features. It should be made absolutely barren. In places where it cannot be destroyed it should at least be stripped of everything which appeals to men's instinct for fellowship. That need should be supplied elsewhere, in ways that are good and wholesome. But this method of attack should not take the place of direct efforts to destroy the saloon.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

THE PROGRESS OF QUAKERISM.

BY EDWIN D. STARBUCK.

Every fresh enumeration of Friends, showing, as it does, little or no increase, or in proportion to population an actual decline in membership, is naturally a cause for earnest concern to all those who have the interests of the Society at heart. While it is a matter of great anxiety, it is not one for undue discouragement, unless our courage and faith have grown weak. If the Society of Friends has fulfilled its mission to mankind, it ought to have largeness of faith to go the way of all earthly things, and have the strength to decide to do as Robert Louis Stevenson did about his personal life, and lay itself down with a will. If it still has a mission, then our business is to grow wiser in mind and heart, and be willing and glad to live out its message with our might. I have a deep-going conviction, due, it may be, to inbred bias, that if Quakerism is true to its light, much of its best history is still to be made. It is an old story, and a true one, that numbers are no test of right or of righteousness. The time will never come when individuals and groups should not be willing to stand along with God. But if an ideal of life or religion has many decades of propitious surroundings in which to test its worth, and does not take root and grow into a plentiful harvest, like seeds cast into the soil, it is an evidence that something is going wrong. I believe it is an evidence that Quakerism is losing the freshness of its message. What the cause of that is I do not know. May be, with its happy surroundings and lack of enemies, it is too much at ease, and has gone to slumbering. Quakerism had its inception in a spiritual revelation, to be sure, but it was also a protest. It kept its horizon clear and its gospel strong by having something to resist. Some of the distinctive marks that it won in those earlier days that tried men's souls—the plain language and dress, the attitude toward those in authority and the like—have become little more than a badge of membership. It is conceivable that one thing the Society stands in need of to-day is something to oppose or some great end to accomplish into which it could throw its full strength. If that is the need, the remedy is surely to be had, even if it is nothing more than the perfecting of its own inner life; for surely the recent words of Dr. Theodore Munger in regard to the churches in general, that “more work lies before the churches than any so far achieved,” applies to the Friends' Church as much as the others. It may be, too, that we have not only become a little at ease in Zion, but that we have too much contentment with our history and pride of our past. People point with rather too evident pride to the fact that they belong to Quaker ancestry from far back, and all about the world we find people who are happy to confess that their parents or grandparents were Friends. When an institution, just as a family line, begins to pose before the world and cherish its record, its days are numbered. It is not a reason for pride that the Society of Friends has won a great spiritual battle in the past and produced beautiful-souled men and women, but rather it is our shame, unless we are using that heritage for the working out of still greater things in the present and for the future.

But the great thing before the Society of Friends to-day is not so much to hunt for causes of its difficulties as to seek earnestly and prayerfully for present duties. That it is alive to the need I believe is evident. There is no denomination which has made more amendments and revisions, and shown more signs of transformation to fit modern conditions within recent years than have the Friends, and I doubt if there are any which can equal it in that respect. While many of these have made for progress, I am of the opinion that many others are compromises and marks of retrogression. The problem, at least, is not solved—nor will it ever be, for that matter, for the growth of a denomination never ceases until its death, and every step in the process brings with it a fresh demand for wisdom and renewed endeavor. The present status of the Society demands the most tolerant, earnest and consecrated thought of all the persons who compose it; and in what follows I am giving expression to what seems to me to be a few of the most pressing needs of the hour.

1. The Society needs to preach as never before the old-fashioned gospel of the spirituality of religion. Nothing vital can be done with an institution by tampering and temporizing with its externals. If it is anything worth while, it is a living thing and not a mechanism; and life is always from within outward, and not the reverse. When Christ found the Jews tripping and stumbling among the entanglements of a religion carried over from an earlier age, and showing signs of decay, He did not go to patching up its imperfections and revising its forms. He went straight at the hearts of men with a direct message from the Father to the innermost lives of His children; and religion took a fresh start and lived. The same history has repeated itself again and again—in the case of Augustine, Savonarola, Luther, Wesley, Fox, Brooks, and every one who has really influenced the lives of men.

There are not a few indications, it seems to me, that Quakerism is in danger of losing something of its freshness of spirit. A while ago I saw a large yearly meeting assembly profoundly moved by an address advocating tithing. From the “amens” that arose and the absence of a dissenting voice it looked as if the body would gladly have entered tithing as the rule of giving; and I know that many Friends do adopt the custom. What sort of a follower of Christ is it that will not use ten-tenths of his substance for the Lord, and be willing, furthermore, to accept the responsibility of being the steward of it. If buying shoes for the children is not giving to the Lord, something is wrong. If, in building a meeting house or doing some charity, a man should find the undertaking to lie near his heart, and should give one-tenth when he knows he is able to give three-tenths, or even nine-tenths, of his income, something is also wrong. The spiritual life, when it is really awake, cannot be gauged by fixed rules. And if Quakerism lives in any large-souled way to its tradition of being guided in all things by the Spirit, the serious advocacy of tithing as a rule of conduct ought to fall as a discordant note. The matter of tithing is only a single illustration from the many. Still another instance too significant to pass by in silence, which is also a symptom, I fear, of enfeebled spiritual vitality, is the concern of Friends in recent years to formulate a code of doctrine. That is a sign of soul weariness and a desire to rest in some finality. When persons or groups of persons find time for and interest in sitting and talking theology or discussing doctrine, it is an indication that spiritual health is going out of them. The older the world gets the better it learns the lesson that Christ lived and taught with all His might that doctrines will not save a man, that they are but the husks and rags, and that religion centers in what a man does, and how he does it, and in the attitude he holds to men and the Divine Father. What were the “doctrines” of Phillips Brooks or of George Fox? They did not bother to tell, because they were too religious and too much filled with the Spirit. What was the theology of Christ? He not only had no interest in formulating one, but probably saw the danger of it, and refused to do so. And the world has had so much of it since, because men have not always been big enough in mind and heart to launch their barks on the spiritual seas, with faith in the Father's guidance, as Christ did. Now, when so many of the denominations are outgrowing their creeds and leaving them behind, it is a pity that Friends are trying to build one. A creed is no basis of unity, but of diversity. No good man is ever as wise in his head as in his heart, where the Spirit of God dwells. The basis of unity is in sympathy and fellowship in living divinely and in doing prayerfully the will of the Father. If we seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, all the rest will take care of itself.

There is now outstanding a commentary upon a day when Friends drifted toward the more superficial things of thought, and lost by so much their hold upon the deeper things of the Spirit. I refer to the Trinitarian-Unitarian controversy, which separates them into two bodies over matters of belief, while they remain one in the features which give to Quakerism its essential distinction. Instead of sinking deeper into verities of religion, and laying hold afresh upon the saving life of Christ through the discussion, the controversy has sent both wings toward the shallows of rational controversy, which must ever be subsidiary to the real life of religion, and furthermore into partial statements of truth that find their inception, not in the Sermon on the Mount, but in unhappy controversies which have sprung up in the history of the Church. Quakerism has thereby suffered the loss that every house that is divided against itself must suffer. If we had more of the Spirit of Christ, and less man-made theology, all this waste might be saved.

2. Friends need to revivify their conviction that religion is a personal matter between man and God. That was the central message of Quakerism in its beginning, and I believe there is as much reason now as ever before in preaching it. The Church is ever burdened and deadened by the priestly function. There are many evident causes which tend to fasten it upon all denominations alike, and there are so many reasons why they should be resisted. It is certainly one of the greatest triumphs in religious history that men have tasted of that emancipation of soul by which each one could dare to stand in the presence of God and drink directly of His fullness and receive His comfort and guidance. It was a great event, too, in religious history when the Friends gave expression to the fact in their peculiar form of service. It is comparable in matters of religion, as Carlyle rightly pointed out, to the great events in political history which mark the attainment of mankind to majority in matters political and secular. The earlier form of Friends' services stands, it seems to me, as the almost necessary embodiment of that idea of an immediate personal relation existing between men and God. And it gives room, too, for the necessary implications of that idea:—equal rights in proportion to equal gifts; the importance of each person exercising his talent in order that it may grow; the importance of each person uttering that particular message that has become his under Divine guidance, and many others. In making the service conform to this ideal, the Society has encountered many pitfalls, and all of them have been well filled with victims; but I believe it must be confessed that everywhere and always when the members are alive to their duty, the Friends' service is most helpful, and is well-nigh unsurpassable as a form of devotion.

3. Friends need to evangelize. I mean by that that they should feel their mission keenly enough to have a living gospel for men. This might be, and I believe is, somewhat antithetical to the kind of evangelization that has been the custom among many of the denominations during the last century or two, and which the Friends, especially to the westward from the Atlantic seaboard, have been borrowing. Simply holding series of meetings and making converts, usually by un-Quaker methods, has a doubtful effect in the long run upon the growth and health of the Church. Until human nature changes radically the time will probably never come when certain types of men will not have to be born of the Spirit in the same dramatic way that Paul, Fox and so many others have been. But that it can ever be the predominant method on which the Church may safely depend for its growth I do not believe. On the contrary, if largely employed, it will tend to make against its enlargement and to mar its health. Its effect is to fill the Church with persons untutored in Friends' ways, unprepared for living consistently the Christian life, and who are temperamentally unsteady and intermittent in their characters.

Then what is to be done in addition to the ordinary evangelization? I would suggest two things. In the first place, renewed effort for the regeneration and upbuilding of the members in the meetings that already exist, so that they will reach out and affect the communities in which they live; in the second place, an organized attempt, with the means back of it, such as some of the churches now have, to send workers into promising communities to establish meetings and do missionary work, who shall not hold a series of meetings and run away and leave the seed to die, but who shall stay there and grow up with the life of the community, at least until there is a sure and abundant harvest. Many of the denominations are working with foresight for the permanent increase of their influence, while, in comparison, the efforts of Friends in the mission field are somewhat haphazard.

4. Friends should make greater effort to educate their members in the things that pertain to religion. We are talking a good deal, and rightly, about the need of an educated ministry. The customs of Friends and their form of worship make the demand for an educated laity a particularly urgent one. The point is clear if we accept the statement that educators are so often making in regard to secular education, that in a democracy it is particularly important that we spare no pains in making the most of the individual units that form the body politic. The Society of Friends happily professed to have as its first concern the personal life of its members, and not religion in general. The success of the Friends' meetings, and of the mission of the Society to the world, depends on having the body of members brought to the point that they are able to take a comprehensive view of religion, its meaning, and of the history of the Bible and of Christianity. Outlying meetings especially, which are somewhat removed from the steady influence of the traditions of the Society, are often victimized by some obsolete theology, by abnormal emotional demonstrations, by some "healing" or "Christian Science" cult, by a narrow interpretation of sanctification, and the like, which bring not only Quakerism, but religion, into disrepute. To have a few staunch, spiritually-minded persons in each community is the best possible way of preserving the dignity and insuring the growth of religion.

While the Friends' colleges are doing a vast service among us in this direction, the English Friends have had success in an undertaking which ought to be suggestive for Friends in America. They have a six weeks' summer school each summer, at which several scores of the members, mostly young men and women who are just coming into their strength, assemble for mutual contact, and for listening to sermons and lectures on topics most intimately related to the spiritual life. They are indeed occasions of great inspiration and enlightenment.

5. The growth of the Church depends in no small measure upon the right nurture of its children. The Friends' service is distinctly a form of service for spiritually mature persons, and not so much to the tastes of children. There is undoubtedly something in the reverent atmosphere of quiet Friends' meetings that even the average child is much impressed with, and that he should not lightly be allowed to miss. But that is not enough. I have seen too many rows of restless, bench-cutting, time-marking, yawning children in Friends' meetings to wonder overmuch that the children are not drawn in large numbers into the heritage of their parents. Students of the mental life of children are showing us that the minds of children cannot handle general conceptions readily and naturally until they are in the early 'teens. It ought to awaken our chagrin that we have expected even little children to appreciate the more abstract matters of the spiritual life, which interest their elders, or else have been so engrossed with our own religion as to be indifferent to the children. Friends are doing much more at present than formerly in furnishing infants' diet in matters spiritual to infants, in the home, Sabbath School and Christian Endeavor, but the problem is far from solved. A consideration of what can be done would take us farther still beyond our limits; but I believe that the most pressing need which is upon the Society to-day is that of nurturing and keeping its children and young people, just as it has been its greatest defect in the past to fail to win and hold them. That the growth of the Society depends upon it should make it a question to which we are alive with our whole minds. A hundredfold weightier consideration is that the responsibility is upon us of making of the children men and women in whom the glory of the Father dwells, and who are towers of strength for righteousness.

Christianity wants nothing so much in the world as sunny people; and the old are hungrier for love than for bread; and the oil of joy is very cheap; and if you can help the poor on with a garment of praise it will be better for them than blankets.—Henry Drummond.

Our character is but the stamp on our souls of the free choice of good and evil we have made through life.—Geikie.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

THE BIBLE AS LITERATURE.

BY DAISY BARR.

O Book of books! O precious Word!
With promises so broad;
O message of our blessed Lord,
A treasury of God!

Literature is defined by Webster as being the class of writing distinguished for beauty of style or of expression, as poetry, essays or history. The best judges of all times have agreed that another test for true literature is that it shall be ideal, also universal; that it must, in other words, be something which contains idea or sentiment so grand or beautiful that its influence and usefulness is not local, but worldwide. Laying aside if possible all reverence for the Bible as the revealed will of God and judging it solely by these tests it triumphs over the keenest criticism.

Literature must be a record of achievement or of aspiration. Along with music and painting it has been the medium through which the human soul has endeavored to reach, or in some measure to approach the expression of the grand travail of soul which is a pleasure akin to pain that an all-wise Providence permits us to cheer a weary way. Especially is our English or Anglo-Saxon literature indebted to the Bible. The Authorized Version of the Bible is the best example of clear, vigorous, concise and elegant use of the English-Saxon tongue that this world will probably ever see. The men who labored on it builded much wiser than the knew, for, along with priceless religious blessing, they built a standard for the English language which at that time was split up in different dialects till the members of the English Parliament could scarcely understand each other. After the printing and reading of the Bible, language became more nearly common, gradually merging into that glorious language of the freest people of the earth, the Anglo-Saxon race.

The master writers of our tongue have drawn on the Bible for ideas and have acknowledged the very material aid it has been to them as a standard of expression. Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress" is one of the classics which might be offered for an example. The study of Shakespeare shows that he had a detailed knowledge of the structure and content of the Scriptures. Tennyson, Longfellow, Lowell, Whittier all have used it freely. It is a fact not generally known that Abraham Lincoln is considered one of the greatest masters of English of the past century, and he owed and attributed it solely to his exhaustive study of the Bible in his early years.

Examples of poetry which skeptical judges have pronounced equal to any abound in the books of Job and Isaiah. The awful majesty of the books of Daniel and Revelation makes any comparison seem like sacrilege. The elemental ideas of justice and right in the community which uphold all our system of laws to-day were written by the great lawgiver, Moses.

The historical parts of the Bible are gems of narration. No modern book of adventure excels the story of Samson's stormy life and tragical death. Contrast this terrible story with the pastoral of Ruth. Reading it, we see the finest touches of romantic attachment and human sympathy of which the mind can conceive. We see the sojourners in a strange land, stricken with sickness and its attendant misfortune, poverty. We see the practical Orpah kiss her mother-in-law and depart, and then begins the painting of a character which well might be that of an ancestress of our Blessed Lord.

Few authors of worldly writing would dare to try to conceive such a character, and they would fail if they endeavored to paint it.

No essays on human life and conduct will ever approach those of that stern but loving apostle to the Gentiles, who turned all the power of his great mind to upholding a creed which he knew and hoped would lead him to a bloody grave. His defense before Agrippa will be studied as long as English is spoken as an example of logic and argument which few can imitate.

But when all is done and said, when a reverent mind approaches the Bible the beauty of its style and the eloquence of its diction are forgotten. They are lost in thankfulness for that goodness which has handed down through ages through strife and tumult and bloodshed such a guidepost from earth to glory. Bless God, in reading it we see

The light which never shone on sea or land;
The consecration, and the poet's dream.

And my highest and holiest ambition is for my boy to say when I am gone to meet the authors, "This was my mother's Bible, and she lived and died by its precepts."

Weary seekers of the best,
We come back laden from the quest
To find that all the ages said
Is in the book our mothers read.

Greenfield, Ind.

WILLIAM B. MORGAN.*

"William B. Morgan, son of Charles and Michal Morgan, was born Twelfth month, 2d day, 1830," is the entry made in the family record of an old and highly-treasured Bible. In Dublin, and afterwards on a farm just south of Raysville, his childhood and youthful days were passed. In boyhood he proved an apt apprentice at the trade of carpentering under the direction of his father. He achieved a name in this field of labor by his skillful construction of a railroad bridge. Under the tutorship of his father, he early gained a practical knowledge of the strength of timber, the underlying principles of which he afterwards learned in the university.

It was his mother's wish that her son should receive a good education, and to her ambition in this direction is due the opportunity early afforded him for the cultivation of his literary taste. When only the west wing of Earlham Hall, then known as Friends' Boarding School, with its limited capacity, had been erected, he was enrolled as a student for one and one-half years. He was in time privileged to graduate from Haverford College after a four-years' course. At college his even temper, genial nature and ambition to excel in scholarship won for him many friends. He once wrote his mother that he became oblivious to the holes in his elbows when he was working at the blackboard. The long vacation home-coming was a time of great rejoicing at the Morgan homestead. In after years he spent a year at the University of Michigan, where he made such a reputation for ability in mathematics that he was offered the position of assistant professor.

Before graduation from college he taught, to help out on expenses, one year in Ohio. Immediately after finishing at Haverford he taught three years in Westtown Boarding School, where he became acquainted with his future wife, Sarah Henley, from North Carolina, who was also a teacher in the same school. After their marriage they turned their faces westward and began their work at Friends' Boarding School, which in time became Earlham College. For twelve years he continued in this position, and the figure of Professor Morgan moving to and fro was always a welcome sight to the students. For some years he was associated with Clarkson and Hannah Davis and Luzena Thornburg in the management of Spiceland Academy. In the half century of his professional life, he also held positions in the Indianapolis High School and at Purdue University.

Fortunately for the Church and the cause of education, he was called to various fields of work upon which he left the impress of his strong personality. When President Woody, in 1876, resigned his position at Penn College to pursue a special course at the Michigan University, his place was ably filled for two years by President Morgan. His services were of lasting benefit to this young and rising institution. He assisted in paying off the college debt and in laying the foundation for the thorough scholarship and high standard of moral life that have been so strikingly manifested in Penn College. All old students will remember him for his high sense of justice, gentle bearing, and exemplary walk no less than for his sound scholarship. Again, for almost a score of years, he filled the chair of mathematics at Earlham College. Upon retiring from Earlham in 1897, his active life in the school-room ceased, as he sought the quiet of his home near Lowell, Kan.

After moving to Kansas, he took a deep interest in all that pertained to the interest of Kansas Yearly Meeting. All who attended a reunion of the old Earlham students, held in the parlors of the Girls' Dormitory, during the yearly meeting that convened at Wichita, will remember to their dying day the tenderness and simplicity of his prayer upon that occasion. In every portion of our country are to be found students who are better and more useful for their having come into contact with William B. Morgan. They one and all feel grateful that they were permitted to become acquaintances with such a manly man.—"Western Work."

* Died Second month 24th, 1904, aged 73 years.

The International Lesson.

SECOND QUARTER.

LESSON I.

FOURTH MONTH 3, 1904.

JESUS VISITS TYRE AND SIDON.

Mark 7: 24-37.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Without faith it is impossible to please him. Heb. 11: 6.

DAILY READINGS.

Second-day, Third mo. 28.—Jesus visits Tyre and Sidon. Mark 7: 24-37.

Third-day, Third mo. 29.—Faith defined. Heb. 11: 1-6.

Fourth-day, Third mo. 30.—Fruits of faith. Heb. 11: 24-40.

Fifth-day, Third mo. 31.—Faith and works. Jas. 2: 14-26.

Sixth-day, Fourth mo. 1.—Miracles performed through faith. Mark 9: 14-29.

Seventh-day, Fourth mo. 2.—Faith tried. Jas. 1: 1-14.

First-day, Fourth mo. 3.—Faith overcometh the world. 1 Jno. 5: 1-5.

Time.—In the summer of A.D. 29, not long after the last lesson.

Place.—First, in Phœnicia, in the neighborhood of Tyre and Sidon, about fifty miles northwest from the Sea of Galilee. Second, near the Sea of Galilee.

Period in life of Christ.—About the middle of the third year of His preaching.

Parallel account.—Matthew 15: 21-31. Neither Luke nor John refers to the incidents of the lesson.

The lesson is an extremely interesting one because it describes one of the very few times when Christ went beyond the boundaries of His own country, and came in direct contact with the Gentiles.

24. "From thence." From Galilee and probably Capernaum. "Borders of Tyre and Sidon." The neighborhood or district near those cities. Tyre and Sidon, though not having the importance they once had, were rich and important seaports of Phœnicia. The inhabitants were noted for their wealth and luxury. Christ does not appear to have visited either of these cities. "Would have no man know it." He had gone there for rest and recuperation. "Could not be hid." His reputation had preceded Him, and the people would see Him.

25. "An unclean spirit." Matthew tells us she was "grievously vexed with a demon." Any one possessed by a demon was deemed unclean.

26. "A Greek, a Syro-Phœnician by race." R. V. The Jews used the word Greek as a synonym for Gentile, so the expression means she was in general a Gentile, and in particular a Syro-Phœnician. Syro is used to distinguish her from the Phœnicians who lived in Africa. Matthew says she was a Canaanitish woman, which is equivalent to Mark's description. Matthew also says "she wailed after Christ."

27. "Let the children first be filled." As if to say, the Gospel must first be preached to the Jews. "The dogs." Dog was a common term among the Jews for the Gentiles. Here, however, while the reference is undoubtedly to the Gentiles, the word used signifies little dog, or pet dog. The statement is, therefore, not so severe as it might appear. Christ spoke in gentle irony, probably quoting a proverb.

28. The woman takes up Christ's words and replies in a manner in which faith and wit are wonderfully combined. Her words mean, "There is a place for dogs in the household, and there is a place for Gentiles in God's world." "It is not needful to deprive the children to supply the dogs. So it is not needful to deprive Israel of its blessing in order to give me the blessing I crave."

29. "For this saying." It showed the greatness of her faith. Matthew says, "O woman, great is thy faith." "This is the essence of faith, to hold fast to what your heart and the highest things in you tell of God, in spite of all appearances to the contrary."

30. She received the reward of her faith.

31. "He went out from the borders of Tyre and came through Sidon unto the Sea of Galilee." Amer. Rev. Ver. This shows conclusively that Christ was in Gentile territory. "Coasts of Decapolis." Borders or district. Decapolis, a district of ten cities east of the Sea of Galilee and on both sides of the Jordan.

32. Matthew says great multitudes came to him, "having with them the lame, blind, dumb, maimed and many others, and He healed them." Mark selects one instance, and describes the miracle fully.

33. "Took him aside from the multitude privately." R. V. Christ wished to avoid publicity, and it may have been needful for the man. "Put." A strong word, "he thrust." "He spat and touched his tongue." Why should not he have spoken the word? Probably the man's faith needed strengthening, and by using means which the man might expect, his faith became strong enough. Compare 2 Kings 5: 11.

34. "He sighed." Groaned with sympathy. Compare John 11: 33-35. Eph'-pha-tha. This is an Aramaic word meaning, "Be opened." This and Talitha cumi (Mark 5: 41) are doubtless the exact words which Christ spoke, and are possibly the only words of His preserved for us just as He spoke them. If He spoke to Pilate in Greek, then the words used by Him on that occasion may have to be added.

35. "The bond of his tongue." R. V. Probably his defect in hearing was in whole or in part caused by deafness. The word translated "bond." (R. V.) does not mean necessarily a defect in the organ, but something which hindered him from speaking perfectly. "He spake plain." Literally, "correctly," or "rightly." The account implies that the man could speak before the miracle was performed, but only partially.

36. The injunction was given because Jesus did not wish to be followed by idle and curious crowds. He needed rest and wished to be alone with His disciples to give them much needed instruction.

37. "And they were beyond measure astonished." Literally, "were struck out of their senses." Christ had not performed many miracles in this part of the country, and so they were taken aback by this signal proof of His power.

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

1. Faith should be triumphant over difficulties.

2. God sometimes puts us off to make us use our faith, and grow thereby. At other times he condescends to our weakness and uses methods which will give us courage.

Christian Endeavor

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Lindley D. Clark, 1429 New York Avenue, Washington, D.C.]

TOPIC FOR FOURTH MONTH THIRD.

OUR VICTORIES THROUGH CHRIST.

1 Cor. 15: 50-58.
(Easter Meeting.)

Second-day, Third mo. 28.—Moses taught a resurrection. Luke 20: 34-38.
Third-day, Third mo. 29.—Job hoped for it. Job 19: 25-27.
Fourth-day, Third mo. 30.—David expected it. Ps. 16: 9-11.
Fifth-day, Third mo. 31.—Daniel rejoiced in it. Dan. 12: 2-3.
Sixth-day, Fourth mo. 1.—The Pharisees held to it. Act 23: 6-9.
Seventh-day, Fourth mo. 2.—Christ taught it. John 6: 39, 40.

What victory is there outside of Christ? There are outposts that lie in the border kingdom of morality which may be held by the man of this world with as fair a show as by him whose citizenship is in heaven; but when the battle is forced to the citadel of life, it is found that "Except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain." People who go about with a boast of self-sufficiency and self-righteousness are foredoomed to defeat, while the nearness of the divine help to make them overcomers "because of the blood of the Lamb, and because of the word of their testimony," is hidden from their eyes. And what profit is three-score years of seeming success, if the enemy is to conquer in the last bitter conflict?

Except we abide in Him, we can bear no fruit, is the sweeping word of our Lord, and it is only as we take Him at His word that we will see the truth as to the achievements of men.

The apostle is summing up here a wonderful discourse, moving in unbroken argument, as G. Campbell Morgan points out, from the 9th verse of the 1st chapter, as premise to the triumphant conclusion of the verses of our lesson, the last being the climax. Drop for a moment the modifying phrases, and read, "Wherefore, be ye in the work of the Lord." Then as we re-read we see with new force, perhaps, what is the commandment, what the measure of our duty, and what the assurance of our success.

Who does not need such resurrection cheer? Not one of us dares forget for a moment our dependence on the risen Christ, with us always, and in all things mighty to deliver. And if we know Him risen, we have no desire to forget, but rather to proclaim the Lord of life, who could not be holden of death, and who is able also to take us with Him through daily victory into the unending triumph "in the presence of the King."

"Surely even the angels in heaven keep this Paschal Day with joy; the glory of that victorious Lion who hath triumphed over death and hell is even to them matter of rejoicing. It is the Sabbath of the new world, our Passover from everlasting death to life, our true jubilee and the chief day in our calendar. Christ's death did justify us; His resurrection did justify His death. He buried the law with Himself, and both with honor; He raised up the gospel with Himself, and both with glory."

Missionary Department.

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Herman Newman, 718 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.]

PLANTAIN GARDEN RIVER, JAMAICA, WEST INDIES.

Second month 13th, 1904.

Dear Friends:—Letters from the United States telling of a temperature of 32 degrees below zero make us appreciate the zephyrs that float in through our wide-open windows, laden with the twitter of birds and the hum of insects.

The landscape, too, is not without its charms; every spot as far as eye can reach is clothed in green, the level lands all being under cultivation, with the banana fruit now well formed in the bunches. In the distance appear fields of corn of mammoth growth.

It may be of interest to some to note that the banana lives to bear but one bunch of fruit, and exists but a few months. The stalk is of a trashy, fibrous nature, some eight to ten feet tall, and is crowned with a few leaves about two feet wide and eight feet long. These are parallel-veined at right angles to the mid-rib. The embryo fruit is encased in a tough pod the size, shape and color of an ox-heart. This splits into two parts and turns back; each little banana asserts its individuality and curls upward, while the tip of the fruit stalk points downward.

Our house is situated upon an abrupt hill. All the white people seek the elevated portions in their attempt to be above malaria. Along the river banks at night the air is strong and acrid with fever germs, yet the lowlands are thickly peopled with Creoles and East Indians. Fever is very prevalent, and, it is said, especially so since the hurricane of last Eighth month. I am quite frequently asked if there will be another hurricane in a few months' time.

The most lasting damage done by the storm was the destruction of cocoanut trees. They are, of course, indigenous growers, and the heart of the tree is in the top, so if even a small part is broken off, it is destroyed.

We have beautiful roads here, equal to English gravel roads, but if we are driving after sundown without a light we are liable to be stopped by a constable and sent to the station to pay a fine. Concrete and stone work is seen everywhere—in aqueducts, bridges, doorsteps and walls. One common feature is to be seen in the stone ruins of old sugar works. Now large trees have grown up inside some of them, or the walls are almost concealed by the running stems and roots of a kind of spreading tree growing upon them. Many ants' nests are to be seen, from the size of a bucket to a small barrel, fastened to tree trunks. Ants may do very well in the United States, but the varieties that take possession of our house, infest the cupboards and even nibble off several inches of cotton curtains, as they did for us this week, are not so welcome.

We are about five miles from the sea. The bay is scarcely visible by day, but on a moonlight night is a strip of beautiful gleaming sheen. A revolving light from the point sends us its friendly flashes throughout the night.

Four days a week my work takes me to Golden Grove, a little town three-fourths of a mile distant, lying by the river. Here are long lines of low mud-walled dwellings, with zinc roofs, where natives of India dwell. A few of the houses are so low that only the children can stand upright in them.

From these homes, at the ringing of the bell, come little dirty toddlers or bright-faced little brownies, with eyes of jet, some bare-headed, some riding a baby brother or sister astride the hip. Three months have passed in which daily lessons have been given on cleanliness and suitable covering for the body. The other day little Elite, 8 or 9 years of age, was in a predicament; his shirt was very dirty, and his trousers had not yet come from the wash, but he was equal to the occasion. He put on a jacket and neck-tie! And was admitted on the strength of the effort. There are a few, including two little Chinese girls, who always come in dresses nicely starched and ironed. Here we have a happy time together. The morning bows and handshakes never grow old. Neither do the ball plays and skipping, the nature studies and occupations, nor the motion songs and stories; best of all, perhaps, the call of Samuel, the faithfulness of Joseph and the victories of Moses, David and Daniel. The young eyes open with wonder and delight as for the first time they hear of the Great Healer calling to life the dead child or taking the children in His arms and blessing them. When the baby organ was taken to school we were asked to sing over and over again "Let me to thy bosom fly."

The little people are quite earnest in their efforts to read English, and are making a beginning at Hindi. Our catechist, Fred Amir, is an educated man, and well versed in both Hindi and English. He preaches in the same building every Sabbath morning or interprets for us. He comes once a week and gives a lesson to the children and to me, which I review with them twice a day, so I may say that I am teaching Hindi alphabet and easy spelling. The language is very superior to ours in the phonic value of the characters. I am in love with it. So many of these people return to India that it is a daily inspiration to think that the lessons given will in all probability be carried to that heathen land; and when working among them in their homes with their native ways and dress and the tropical vegetation one can almost fancy that this is India.

One daily scene is a drove of oxen, commonly called cows, imported from the same country, which are being taken to work or to pasture. They weigh, perhaps, 1,500 pounds, have a hump over the shoulder, and horns as big and long as a man's arms. They are driven by lithe, spare, wiry little men in India wrappers (a long strip of white cloth, wrapping the limbs).

The grandmothers especially like to come in and chat. The other day one told me the value of the different articles of jewelry she wore. Seven pair of bracelets and two neck bands amounted to sixty dollars. She also had a gold stud through one nostril. Frequently they fasten silver or gold coins to the neck piece, and when the money is needed they melt the solder and use them as coins again.

There does not seem to be much distinction of caste among them. There is a sore need among all of them of saving grace. They have the same vices as the rest of fallen humanity and many of them are still idol worshipers and all are more or less enslaved in the superstition of ignorance, but they are capable of great affection; the family tie is strong with them, and real grief is shown in cases of death. The other day, when calling at a house, the mother was found sitting on the ground, wildly singing some heathen hymn and keeping time by beating her breast with either hand—her baby had just been carried away to its burial. She grew calm, though understanding very little English, on hearing what only the beautiful Christian religion can offer: a hope beyond the grave. Five years ago there were very few adults of these people who could be induced to enter a place of worship. Now we have fifty-four church members from among them. For both those who have come to Christ and those who have not it is yours, dear reader, to plead earnestly that they may be enabled to cast off the old garment of superstition, receive spiritual eyesight and follow Jesus.

Sincerely,

GERTRUDE MARRIAGE.

Educational.

EARLHAM COLLEGE.

Professor Joseph Moore, who has been associated with Earlham for over fifty years, passed his "seventieth birthday" on Second mo. 29th. He was the recipient of a number of presents, letters of greeting, and other remembrances from the faculty, students, old students and his many friends.

The annual award of the Haverford and Bryn Mawr scholarships for 1904-05 was recently made by the faculty of Earlham College. The Haverford scholarship was awarded to William J. Reagan, of New London, and the Bryn Mawr scholarship to Olive Hedges, of New Castle.

At the annual inter-collegiate debate on the evening of Third month 11th, the question debated was: "Resolved, That the Fifteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution has not been justified." Earlham supported the affirmative and DePauw University the negative. The decision of the judges was unanimous in favor of Earlham. Out of eight annual inter-collegiate debates, Earlham has won all except the first.

At a recent meeting of the Board of Trustees the office of registrar of the college was created, and Professor Harlow Lindley was chosen for the work.

Andreas Bryne, a son of one of the prominent Friends of Norway, recently entered Earlham College. He has attended a Friends' school in England, and is preparing to engage in educational work in his own land.

FRIENDS' SCHOOL, PROVIDENCE, R. I.

During almost a half century there has been only one change of principals in this famous institution on the headwaters of Narragansett. Albert K. Smiley withdrew from his long service to take up the work which has given him a national reputation, and he was succeeded by Augustine Jones, then a member of the Boston bar. He had won distinction as a teacher at Oak Grove Seminary, and then had turned to law for a career. He became law partner with ex-Governor Andrews, the famous "war governor" of Massachusetts. When the Providence committee gave him an urgent and unanimous call to take the place left vacant by the resignation of Albert K. Smiley, he at first felt it impossible to obey the summons. He, however, yielded under a sense of duty, and for twenty-five years he has filled this most important post in the gift of New England Yearly Meeting. He has rounded out a quarter of a century of service, giving an administration which has had no parallel in the long history of the school. At the close of the present school year he will end his period of service and enter upon a well-deserved and honorable release.

The committee has united in appointing Seth K. Gifford, Ph.D., professor of Greek in Haverford College, to the principalship. Both Professor Gifford and his wife have formerly been teachers in the school, and fully comprehend the importance of the work to which they have been called, and they are well qualified for it. This school is deservedly one of the most famous of the educational institutions which Friends have built up in America, and its multitude of friends and old scholars will wish it great success under the new administration.

BRYN MAWR COLLEGE.

The annual lecture in memory of Dr. Joseph W. Taylor was delivered to-night in Taylor Hall by Edward Grubb, of London, the editor of "The British Friend," and secretary of the Howard Association. The lecturer was briefly introduced by President Thomas, and his subject was "The Place of Quakerism in the Development of Christian Ethics." Starting with the Sermon on the Mount, he showed that in the teaching of Christ there was no system whatever; righteous life was simply the assimilation of the character of man to the character of God, and this was first fully and adequately disclosed by Christ. Love is the sum and inner life of all moral things whatever. Let us consider the idea of human brotherhood; there was never a time in human history when brotherhood was not known and practiced. Self-repression is the dawn of morality, and the feeling of brotherhood is the basis of all right feeling towards our fellows; Christianity first widened the idea to cover all mankind. In Greek philosophy the idea of brotherhood had inevitable limitations; three classes, barbarians, slaves and women, were excluded; with the Roman stoic thinkers, the idea of universal brotherhood began to dawn. It was unknown to the Jews, and a great part of the force of the new idea was due to the plane on which Jesus placed it. It did not appeal to human reason; some modern theosophists have tried to prove it, but their proofs involve assumptions on human personality.

The lecturer then ran briefly through the chief stages of Christianity up to the development of Puritanism, which was essentially the religion of manhood, the most masculine form Christianity had yet assumed. There was ample room for an uprising against Calvinism in the name of the principles of Christ, and this was the part of Quakerism. The early Quakers were protestants of the Protestants, and they preached the dignity and responsibility of the individual, and this thought is also the secret of the belief in human brotherhood, the essence of Socialism; the practice of this belief is philanthropy. From this came also the attitude of the Quaker Church towards war, so well stated by Fox. The movement against slavery was slow to develop, and the attitude of the early Quaker Church was not decided; it was not till 1776 that the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting agreed that all Friends who persisted in slave-holding should be disowned. Another important question on which the influence of the Quaker Church has made itself felt is in the elevation of the position of women, and their higher education.

The problems before the world to be solved at present are the great problem of imperialism and commercial expansion, the race question, the purification of civic and municipal life and administration, and the regulation of divorce, and the looseness of the marriage tie. To the solution of all these problems the lecturer showed the principles of the Quaker religion might perhaps point the way.

The students sang after the lecture the college hymn.

THE OAKWOOD SEMINARY.

A second term of successful work at the Oakwood Seminary will close on Third month the 25th. Those who have the immediate care of the school feel much gratified at the work that has been accomplished, that much has been done not only in the regular school work, but in the strengthening of the moral and religious tone of those who are here. Particularly during the week just past a quiet but healthy religious spirit has settled over the entire institution—a spirit that exists not merely in name; it is a fact. There are very few there now who do not take some part in some of the meetings held in the school.

It is a matter over which the management rejoice that this condition has come about without any attempt at a so-called revival of religion. It seems to be an answer to the efforts and prayers of many faithful hearts.

The spring term will begin on the fifth of Fourth month.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of THE AMERICAN FRIEND:

I should like to commend to all the readers of THE AMERICAN FRIEND the following appeal from the Women's Christian Association of St. Louis, hoping that as opportunities offer, each will endeavor to co-operate in this good work.

Very sincerely,

ELIZABETH B. JONES.

"St. Louis, Mo., March 1st, 1904.

"An appeal for co-operation of Christian women for the protection of young women, especially for those ambitious for employment in our city during the 'World's Fair.'

"The Women's Christian Association of St. Louis are aware of the fact that plausible people are secured to bring young women to our city with assurance of any employment they desire being in waiting for them (but one idea is theirs—ruin). To in any degree meet this monster, all must unite in a general protective plan, if by any peradventure we may save a few of the many tempted by alluring promises.

"You ask, how can we co-operate? One effective way is to organize a Travelers' Aid where there is none, by one of two ways. First, by appointing a committee for this service in one of your local organizations, to be known as 'Travelers' Aid Committee.' (This name is emphasized to prevent confusion among workers.)

"The other plan is to organize by selecting a woman of your place for president, who has a heart for the work and ability to lead; also a capable secretary and treasurer. Add others for your committee work who should be a safeguard for your young women. This form of work can be organized in one church or by all uniting. This appeal is made to unify the protective forces that may be promptly available.

"If any of your young women have been induced by a stranger to visit or seek employment in St. Louis, during the Exposition, sound the note of alarm. There is danger. Let every young woman, unattended by a friend, see to it: First, that she has money enough with her for an emergency and safe return home; second, know from a reliable source her destination here is safe before she leaves home; third, depend upon herself and officials on the railroad for information concerning trains. Any added intelligence necessary reserve for 'Travelers' Aid,' referred to in following paragraph.

"One of your committee should be at the railroad station at train time. As your introduction of any young woman leaving for St. Louis, to the representative of the 'Travelers' Aid' here, pin a knot of blue ribbon on her waist, left side, and instruct her to find a woman in the waiting room at Union Station who wears a blue badge with 'Travelers' Aid of Women's Christian Association, St. Louis,' printed on it in gold letters. They are to be found at above place at the time of incoming and outgoing trains.

"The Women's Christian Association will be willing to be interrogated by letter or telegram, and do all in their power to save. But, remember, the greatest success must be with you, where the numbers are so much less than in St. Louis at this time.

"Hoping this appeal may be promptly approved and this work inaugurated, by which effort many may be saved from a fate worse than death, we subscribe ourselves,

"Yours in Christian service,

"WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION."

"Headquarters, 1814 Washington Ave., St. Louis, Mo."

Things of Interest Among Ourselves.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND will be sent to a new subscriber from now until First month 1st, 1905, for $1.00.

Sanford Pickering has taken charge in the Hesper, Bluffton and Highland Meetings.

Emma F. Coffin is engaged in a series of meetings at Grinnell, Iowa. The blessing of the Lord is resting upon the meeting.

Minnie Bassett, of Carmel, Ind., has been compelled to take a rest from her pastoral work for a time on account of ill health.

Lydia Hoath, of Thorntown, Ind., recently engaged in evangelistic service in Westfield Meeting, Ind. Her labors were greatly blessed of the Lord, and much appreciated by the membership.

Many of the congregations of Iowa Yearly Meeting are temporarily reduced in size by the prevailing sickness, la grippe.

Our friend, S. Edgar Nicholson, is editing the "Keystone Citizen," the official organ of the Pennsylvania Anti-Saloon League, at Harrisburg, Pa.

Westfield Quarterly Meeting, Ind., was held at Westfield, Ind., the 5th and 6th inst. A remarkable feeling of love and unity pervaded all the sessions.

Springfield Monthly Meeting, N. C., was held on the 8th inst. Five new members were received, and one who had united with another branch of the Church was released.

Allen Jay, wife and daughter, held meetings with the students of Guilford College four evenings recently. These were times of blessing to the students and others who attended.

Elwood O. Ellis will give stereopticon lectures at the Maxwell Meeting House, Ind., Third month 30th and 31st, and Fourth month 1st, 1904, describing his travels in Bible lands.

Mary N. and Stephen Cox, of Westfield, Ind., recently held a two-weeks' revival at West Grove, Ind., in which twenty-two professed conversion or renewal, and the meeting was greatly benefited.

The Friends at Ramallah recently enjoyed a visit at the mission from Dr. G. Buchanan Gray, of Oxford University, who has been a frequent lecturer at the English Friends' Summer Settlements.

Susan Berry Sisson closed a series of meetings at Earlham, Iowa, on the 9th inst. Scores of souls received definite blessing during the meeting, and seventeen united with Friends. Albert E. Wright, the pastor in Earlham Meeting, is doing excellent work.

Tilghman Couch and family are now settled in their new home at Sterling, Kan. Their coming into this monthly meeting is highly appreciated by all the members. Others who are looking towards a change of residence will find a welcome at Sterling, Kan.

George Cadbury, whose efforts to produce a clear, strong high-class daily newspaper have been so successful, has just decided to reduce the price of the "London Daily News" to a half penny—that is, to one cent a copy. This is a tremendous step to take, but it will succeed.

Rose Hill Quarterly Meeting was held at Rose Hill, Kansas, the 4th to 6th inst. The meeting was enjoyed by all who attended, but the attendance was small owing to the prevalence of sickness in the neighborhood. Fred Coppock, of Iowa, was in the midst of a revival effort there at the same time.

Estella Pitts and Ethel Clark, two of the most interested workers in Indianapolis Meeting, are now in training for city charity work under the manager of the Charity Organization Society of Indianapolis. No greater blessing can come to a meeting than the sending out of consecrated, trained workers into the whitened harvest.

The Des Moines Quarterly Meeting, held the 5th and 6th inst., was a time of blessing. D. B. Cook, superintendent of Bear Creek Quarterly Meeting, was present, and gave a helpful sermon on Seventh-day. Boulder Monthly Meeting, Col., was by their own request transferred from Hiawatha Quarterly Meeting to Des Moines.

A series of meetings began at Highland, Ohio, Second month 29th, and continued till Third month 10th, inclusive, conducted by Elwood Scott, of Marion, Ind., assisted by the pastor, Thomas L. Scott, and by Fremont B. Milner, from an adjoining meeting. A Christian Endeavor Society was organized with twenty-eight members and more will follow. The pastor is pushing the work forward, and the outlook is very encouraging.

Professor George A. Barton, Associate Professor of Semitic Languages and Biblical Literature in Bryn Mawr College, director of the American School of Oriental Studies in Palestine in the year 1902-03, will deliver two lectures in Taylor Hall, Bryn Mawr College, at 8 o'clock on Second-day, Third month 21st, and on Fifth-day, Fourth month 14th. Subjects: "Recent Archaeological Explorations in Palestine," and "Jerusalem and the Temple Hill."

The missionaries of the stations of the American Friends' Board in Cuba wish to express the pleasure and profit received in the recent visit among them of Thomas Potts, Alfred C. Garrett and Edward C. Wood, members of Germantown Monthly Meeting, Pennsylvania. The workers on the mission field are so shut out from all helpful associations that the coming among them of such Friends as these is a real means of grace, as well as a pleasure.

Spiceland Quarterly Meeting, Ind., held 11th to 13th inst., was largely attended. Leannah Hobson, Luke Woodard, Isaiah Lacy, Levi Pennington, Fred Smith and others had acceptable service. F. W. Thomas obtained a minute for service in New York Yearly Meeting. Phariha Stephens, of Richmond, gave a good account of mission work in Mexico, illustrated by views of idol worshippers in the land of the Montezumas. A good sum of money was raised for her work.

There are four families of Friends in Flat Head Valley, Mont., with no Friends' Meeting anywhere near. There seems to be a good prospect to build up a meeting there if there was some capable one to organize and push forward the work. If any feel drawn this way Friends will be glad to co-operate with them. This valley is level land, very productive and well watered. The climate is very healthful. Further particulars can be secured from W. F. Dubre, Flat Head Valley, Mont.

Temperance Day was observed in Indianapolis Meeting, Third month 6th. The services were under the auspices of the Temperance Department of the meeting. The morning service was addressed by Thomas E. Clark, of Columbus, Ohio. His address was declared to be one of the strongest and most logical presentations of the question ever heard by an Indianapolis audience. In the evening Dr. A. A. Hopkins, of New York, gave a striking and effective lecture on "The Cost of a Boy." Splendid audiences were present at both these services, and we feel that definite results must follow.

Last winter the Christian Endeavor Society of Gibara Meeting, Cuba, undertook, under Sylvester Jones's general care, to carry on a mission in Potrerillo, a village across the bay, six miles or so distant. At their own expense they rented a room, cleaned and whitewashed it, and furnished it with rude seats, and invited the people to their meetings. Quite a good many come and hear the glad tidings of a new-found grace from these young workers. S. Jones writes in last month: "I have just held a three-day meeting at Potrerillo. We had splendid meetings. I think we may expect some good results from the work there."

Deep River Quarterly Meeting was held at Springfield, N. C., on the 5th instant. The weather was very inclement, and the roads rough and muddy, but notwithstanding this there was a good attendance. This was the home meeting of Allen Jay when he lived in North Carolina, and he is especially endeared to the people who knew him in his younger days. His ministrations on Seventh-day and First-day and his talk to the Bible School were especially appreciated. On First-day evening he attended an appointed meeting at Archdale, near Springfield, and preached a touching sermon to a full house. His wife, Naomi Jay, and their daughter, Miriam Harrison, had acceptable service at all of these meetings.

Nathan and Abigail Brothers, now living in Sterling, Kan., were married according to the order of Friends at Deep River Meeting, North Carolina, Third month 14th, 1844. Just sixty years from that day their children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, to the number of twenty-seven, gathered at their present home to help them celebrate this sixtieth anniversary of their wedding. They all assembled in one room just before dinner to hear them repeat the ceremony which made them man and wife. But few then present had ever heard the ceremony used by Friends. The occasion was closed by a devotional season, with scriptural reading and prayer, after which they both spoke a few words of testimony to the goodness of God to them.

The first Friends' Conference in Cuba will be held in Holguin from the 12th to the 17th of Fourth month, 1904. It is under the direction of Zenas L. Martin, superintendent of Friends' missions there. He has the first paper: "Our Mission Field and How Best to Reap It and Extend Its Territory." The missionaries of all four of the Friends' stations in Eastern Cuba are on the program for papers upon subjects of practical interest on the mission field, with time allowed for the discussion of each subject. Most of the papers will be in English. The evenings are devoted to religious meetings with services in Spanish, to which all the people are invited. The program, if carried out, will be rich in the results of individual experience, instructive to the missionaries in the spirit and methods of work, and helpful, the Holy Spirit leading, in unifying the whole work of the Friends in Cuba.

New Garden Quarterly Meeting was held at Greensboro on the 12th instant. In the meeting for worship Allen Jay preached on "The Rebuilding of the Broken Walls of Jerusalem" in an encouraging and helpful manner. Ada Elliott Lee gave an excellent discourse on "Joining the Work Together." In addition to Allen Jay there were in attendance the six members of the quarterly meeting and half a dozen others from three other quarters in North Carolina. The business of the afternoon session was promptly transacted. Among other matters a letter was read from the Friends in Rich Square Monthly Meeting, loyal to North Carolina Yearly Meeting in response to a letter sent from this meeting three months ago. The meeting directed another letter to be sent to said Friends. The queries were read, and, after solemn silence, Allen Jay spoke very acceptably and to the edification of all on "Family Worship." David Sampson spoke of the evils of liquor drinking. The meeting was much baptized into love and sympathy, and with overflowing hearts gave expression to their feelings of love and gratitude.

Sterling Quarterly Meeting, held at Sterling, Kansas, Second month 26th to 28th, was not as large as usual owing to both revival work and sickness in the home meetings. The spiritual opening of the meeting was characteristic in the outbreak of praise and testimony in which nearly all took part, beginning in the congregation while in silent waiting. The several matters of business were adjusted in a manner that deepened spiritual fellowship. The ministry gave evidence of God's care for and purpose in the Church. There were none but home ministers present, and four of these were absent in revivals. As the Spirit still hovers over the field of the Quarterly Meeting there is much to be thankful for. In the limits of La Crosse Monthly Meeting over 130 professions have been made under the ministry of Eliza P. Williams, and many "solid" additions have been made to the meeting. J. J. Danks has done most of the revival work in Hoisington Monthly Meeting. He has been assisted at Shannon by Edna Hill, whose exceptional gift in song and spiritual ministry has been a blessing to many. Second month 20th D. Gidley, Quarterly Meeting Superintendent, attended Hoisington Monthly Meeting in the morning, and Bethel Monthly Meeting in the evening. At the latter place there were eight received into membership. D. Gidley attended the two meetings of this monthly meeting on First-day following, and at the afternoon meeting at Mt. Zion six gave their names for membership. This is a further result of the recent revival meetings held there by Edith Stanton. This monthly meeting is praying the Lord for a pastor who can minister to their needs.

MARRIAGES.

SAYERS—TALBERT.—At Friends' Meeting House, South Wabash, Ind., on the evening of Third month 2d, 1904, William J. Sayers, pastor in Winchester Meeting, and Flora Pearl Talbert, of South Wabash Meeting.

DEATHS.

DIGGS.—At her home, near Earlham, Iowa, Second month 29th, 1904, Anna Peacock Diggs, in her 81st year. She was a consistent member of Earlham Monthly Meeting, and died as she had lived, with a strong faith in Christ as her Saviour.

EDGE.—At his home in Downingtown, Chester County, Pa., Third month 7th, 1904, Dr. John P. Edge, in his 82d year. In his daily life he maintained a sincerity and integrity unquestioned by his fellow-men. His teaching, as well as practice, was above reproach—an example worthy of emulation.

EDGERTON.—At his home, near Dunrieth, Ind., Second month 12th, 1904, Wm. Edgerton, son of Walter and Rebecca Edgerton, aged 76 years. A lifelong Friend, he was ever zealous for the prosperity of the church, the temperance cause, the Sabbath School, and the upbuilding of the neighborhood.

OSBORN.—At her residence, North Weare, N. H., Second month 22d, 1904, Jane P. Osborn, in the 84th year of her age. She was a birthright member of Friends, and often expressed her love for their principles.

OSBORN.—At the home of her son, Emory Osborn, near Paoli, Ind., Second month 29th, 1904, Martha Trueblood Osborn, aged nearly 74 years. The Master greatly blessed her life of loving service for others. She was a birthright member with Friends, and for many years an overseer.

FOX.—On Fourth-day, Second month 24th, at her residence in Bryn Mawr, Pa., Harriet B. Fox, wife of Samuel L. Fox, in the 71st year of her age. She was an esteemed member of Haverford Particular Meeting of Friends and Philadelphia Monthly Meeting for the Western District.

TOWLE.—In Limerick, Me., Tenth month 23d, 1902, Jane Towle, aged 71 years. She was a member of Parsonsfield Monthly Meeting, Me.

VARNEY.—At the residence of her nephew, George W. Tuttle, Dover, N. H., Third month 7th, 1904, Eliza P. Varney, widow of the late Isaac Varney, aged over 88 years. The deceased was for many years a valued elder of Berwick Monthly Meeting, Maine.

Events and Comments.

Ex-President Cleveland celebrated his 67th birthday the 18th instant.

President Roosevelt has fixed the salaries of the Isthmian Canal commissioners at $12,000 a year, and in addition thereto $15 a day while they are on the isthmus.

A national anti-tuberculosis association has been incorporated in Springfield, Ill. The object of the organization is to prevent tuberculosis by legislation, and through a campaign of education. According to the incorporators the association is purely philanthropic.

Five tons of gold coin were moved in a truck from the United States Sub-Treasury to the New York Clearing House Wednesday. The gold was to pay a debit balance of $2,734,394 that was against the government and in favor of the banks Wednesday. This amount of money, when paid in gold, weighs 10,000 pounds. The gold is in the vaults of the Clearing House. Certificates were issued

GRAND WIFE.

The Kind Worth Having.

A well-known lady of Carthage, Mo., says: "Although I do not drink tea or coffee myself I have had a most interesting experience in my family, for about a year ago my husband began to fail in health. He would get so very nervous at times he would have to give up his work and come home. His eyes were failing him and the doctor became alarmed—was afraid he was going to lose his sight. He also got very yellow in complexion, at times his blood ran cold, from nervous chills the doctor said.

"In a few days he would return to work still in that dull, chilly condition. He would drink coffee, coffee, coffee, 'for a stimulant,' he would say (as he drank no liquor).

"His condition gradually got worse instead of better, until finally I made up my mind coffee had something to do with it, so I bought a package of Postum without telling him, and made it according to directions. He drank it, and seemed to like it, so I continued to make it and before the first package was gone he began to get so clear of complexion and feel so well, gaining fast in flesh, he was so delighted he would get weighed every day.

"Finally he talked so much about it (he had gained 10 pounds in 10 days) I could not keep it a secret any longer, and told him to give Postum the credit. The consequences are there has been no more coffee in the house since (and no doctor either).

"Postum is a delightful drink made according to directions, I have found no better way as it is a rich golden-brown when cream is added.

"I forgot to say husband's eyes are as strong as they ever were, he is well and hearty, does not sit around the stove chilled all the time as he did before." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Coffee poison causes eye trouble in many cases as well as other ails, and is never suspected. A 10 days' trial proves things you will never forget.

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

by the Clearing House to the banks to which the gold was due.

The Maryland House of Delegates last week, by a strict party vote of 64 to 27, passed the bill proposing a constitutional amendment limiting the franchise in Maryland, the purpose of which is to eliminate the negro vote. The measure has passed the Senate, and now goes to Governor Warfield for his action.

The proportion of our wheat crop shipped abroad in the form of flour is little appreciated, this being practically half the total. The growth of flour exports has been steady for a great many years, while that of wheat not converted into flour has fluctuated with surplus crop available for exportation. So recently as 1880 scant 18 per cent. of the wheat shipped abroad was in the form of flour, while last year the percentage was nearly 55.

Some facts of interest in relation to pensions are finding publication from Washington. Thus, to date the government has disbursed pension money in the following aggregate amounts on account of the several wars of the republic:

Revolutionary war	$70,000,000
War of 1812	45,186,197
Indian wars	6,234,414
War with Mexico	33,483,309
War of the rebellion	2,878,240,400
War with Spain	5,479,268

Total disbursements ... $3,038,623,590

The United States Supreme Court, in a majority opinion, five justices concurring, has declared the Northern Securities Company a combination in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust law, upholding in its entirety the contention of the government and affirming the decree of the United States Circuit Court for the District of Minnesota in every particular. That capital will accept the decree humbly is not likely, and with the superior legal talent at its command, it may find a way to carry out its determination. The point the public will be most interested in is that this is the highest judicial indorsement of the legality of an act by the national executive. This endorsement will strengthen President Roosevelt with the plain people; it will but further embitter his foes whose power he has thwarted and whose coffers he may have depleted somewhat.

Whatever conclusion the Senate may reach with respect to Smoot's eligibility to membership in that body, it has been clearly established that the Mormon hierarchy has pursued and permitted polygamous practices after promising to abandon them. The investigation has not ended, and it is announced that a mass of evidence is to be produced to show that plural marriages have taken place since the issuance of the Mormon manifesto of 1890 prohibiting them. The faithlessness of the hierarchy has also been shown by its violations of its pledge that if Utah were admitted into the Union it would withdraw from political activity. In pursuance of these pledges and promises Utah was admitted, but immediately after Utah became a State Mormon political activity was conspicuously in evidence in the shaping of bills passed by the Legislature. Measures which received the disapproval of the Legislative Committee of Mormon Elders were doomed.

IT IS A MATTER OF HEALTH

We shape ourselves the joy or fear
Of which the coming life is made,
And fill our future's atmosphere
With sunshine or with shade.

BUSHIDO

THE SOUL OF
J A P A N

An Exposition of Japanese Thought, by Inazo Nitobe, A.M., Ph.D., Professor in the Imperial College, Sapporo, Japan. Price, postpaid, white leatherette cover, 75 cents; bound in cloth, $1.00.

THE LEEDS & BIDDLE CO., Inc.

1019-21 Market St., Phila.

WILLIAM S. YARNALL
Manufacturing OPTICIAN

118 S. FIFTEENTH ST., PHILA.
4th Door Below Chestnut St.

BRAINS plus energy make capital. They are often the whole capital, especially of a young man. Prudent men insure it; make it sure for the family. Full particulars free. No importunity.

PENN MUTUAL LIFE

921-3-5 Chestnut Street.

Women's Spring Walking Suits

This time we point out several of the popular-priced numbers that have attracted a good deal of attention in our spring display of women's wearables. Not more attention, though, than many others attracted; for this year's Walking Suit styles include an unusually large number of exceedingly chic effects:

At $10.00—WOMEN'S WALKING SUITS
—of black zibeline. Collarless double-breasted hip jacket, lined with satin; two rows fancy metal buttons; neck and cuffs trimmed with fancy braid. Seven-gore skirt, with lapped seams. A $12.00 value.

At $13.00—WOMEN'S WALKING SUITS
—of mixed suiting. Jaunty collarless double-breasted jacket, lined with good satin; two rows of fancy buttons; neck trimmed with soutache braid. Seven-gore skirt with lapped seams, neatly stitched; trimmed with braid. A $15.00 value.

At $15.00—WOMEN'S WALKING SUITS
—of black or blue chevrot. Eton jacket, lined with taffeta, vest of fancy braid with a touch of color; front and collar trimmed with taffeta and soutache braid; full sleeves, braid-trimmed cuffs. Seven-gore skirt, lapped seams, trimmed with fancy braid.

STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER
PHILADELPHIA

OLD-FASHIONED grandfather clocks repaired at home. If yours needs attention send me a postal or, better, call. My store is within three minutes' walk of the Market Street ferries. Repairing of clocks and watches of every kind. Prompt service and moderate prices. W. L. Berry, Watchmaker and Jeweler, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

Y. F. A. Building,
140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a.

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote, 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p.m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cts. per night; $3 per week.

Two occupants, 50 cts. each, per night.

2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL
Phone Spruce 33-55. Clerk.

FINANCIAL.

6% NET

Sound, conservative first mortgages on improved realty. We examine every security and know every borrower. We make our loans with our own money and turn them over complete. In 28 years we have learned how to select the best. No one now handling western mortgages has had more experience. We give you the benefit of that experience. The quality of the securities now on hand has never been surpassed. Highest references. Write for circulars and full information free.

PERKINS & COMPANY Lawrence, Kan.

6%

to 7% Choice First Mortgage Loans, Seattle and vicinity. Local and N. Y. references. Established 1887. Correspondence Solicited. JAMES BOTHWELL, Seattle, Washington.

TO INVESTORS

I have For Sale $50,000—5 per cent. Gold First Mortgage, Coupon Bonds, in 1,000's, Street Railways, Electric Light, Gas and Warehouse, at from par to 102% and accrued interest. Full particulars on application.

HOWARD M. SWAB,
Member Philadelphia Stock Exchange,
Room 61, Main Floor, Bourse.

Mortgages Net 6% in North Dakota

THEY are the best, gilt-edged, rock-ribbed, guaranteed 6% investment in America. Safe as government bonds and pay better.

I have been selling these mortgages for 18 years, and have never had to foreclose, and never lost a cent of principal or interest for a single customer.

I personally know every farm covered by the mortgages, as well as the farmers giving them. I know them both to be right, or I have nothing to do with them. Their land is increasing in value every day, thus increasing the value of the security.

I collect both the interest and principal free, and remit in New York exchange, without the least trouble or bother of the customer.

I will be pleased to put you in the way of finding out all about me. Write me for further information.

WALTER L. WILLIAMSON

Investment Banker

LISBON, NORTH DAKOTA

“Marvelous

are the Wonders of Time” and Life Insurance. The few hundred dollars invested annually, growing year after year to the matured Endowment of thousands, is a great satisfaction to the policy - holder.

THE PRUDENTIAL
INSURANCE CO. OF AMERICA.

JOHN F. DRYDEN,
Pres.

Home Office:
NEWARK,
N. J.

Without committing myself to any action I shall be glad to receive free, particulars and rates of Endowment Policies.

Send Coupon for Information.
For Name Age.....
Address.....
Occupation.....Dept. 67.

HOOPING-COUGH AND CROUP.

Roche's Herbal Embrocation
The celebrated and effectual English Cure without internal medicine. Proprietors, W. EDWARDS & SON, Queen Victoria St., London, England. Wholesale of E. Fougere & Co., 50 North William Street, N. Y.

The American Friend

Vol. XI

THIRD MONTH 31, 1904

No. 13

	PAGE
EDITORIALS.—Pastoral Care of the Membership.—The Heroism of Faith.—The Indian Scandal	207-208
The Perils of Our Virtues	208
Robert E. Speer.
That Men May Glorify God	209
R. Ella Levering.
The Next World's Legal Tender	211
H. W. Warren.
A Record of the Olden Time	211
J. Lindley Spicer.
SOME VIEWS ON PRESENT TOPICS:
One of Our Needs	212
Jonathan M. Steere.
Joshua L. Baily on Temperance	213
Joseph Elkinton.
THE INTERNATIONAL LESSON	214
Lesson for Fourth month 10, 1904.
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR	215
Topic for Fourth month 10, 1904.
MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT	215
THINGS OF INTEREST AMONG OURSELVES,	216
DEATHS	217
EVENTS AND COMMENTS	218

THE POWER OF CHRISTIANITY.

"It was reserved for Christianity to present to the world an ideal character, which through all the changes of eighteen centuries has inspired the hearts of men with an impassioned love, has shown itself capable of acting on all ages, nations, temperaments and conditions; has been not only the highest pattern of virtue, but the strongest incentive to its practice; and has exercised so deep an influence that it may be truly said that the simple record of three short years of active life has done more to regenerate and to soften mankind than all the disquisitions of philosophers and all the exhortations of the moralists. This has indeed been the wellspring of whatever is best and purest in the Christian life. Amid all the sins and failings, amid all the priestcraft and persecution and fanaticism that have defaced the Church, it has preserved in the character and example of its Founder an enduring principle of regeneration."

—Lecky's "History of European Morals." Vol. 2, page 9.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.50 A YEAR ❖ ❖ ❖ PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
AMERICAN FRIEND PUBLISHING COMPANY, 718 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA

EDUCATIONAL.

EARLHAM COLLEGE, RICHMOND, INDIANA

Prof. Elbert Russell offers courses regularly in Kings, New Testament Times, Life of Christ, The Apostolic Age, Church History, New Testament Literature, Romans, John, Biblical Literature, Isaiah.

Prof. Cyrus W. Hodgkin, The Protestant Reformation.

Prof. Anna M. Demaree, New Testament, Greek.

Asst. Prof. Lindley, History of the Hebrews.

Pres. Kelly, History of Philosophy, Ethics, Psychology.

The Oakwood Seminary

UNION SPRINGS, N. Y.

Founded in 1796.

A boarding school for boys and girls under the care of New York Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Academic, College Preparatory and Commercial

Spring term begins Fourth month 5, 1904

SAMUEL H. HODGIN, Principal. LINDLEY M. STEVENS, Superintendent.

STENOGRAPHING, TYPEWRITING and MIMOGRAPHING. Prices moderate.

MARY M. KITE

407 Lippincott Building, 12th and Filbert Sts., Phila.
Phone No. 3-33-00

STENOGRAPHER

GEO. B. COCK

Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter Street.
Telephones.

Delavau's Remedy

A SPECIFIC FOR
Whooping Cough and Croup

Also a safe and speedy cure for Bronchitis, Bronchial Catarrh and ordinary coughs. 50 Cents a Bottle, at Druggists, or

J. W. S. DELAVAU & CO., Propr's.
N. E. Cor. 6th and Wood Sts., Phila.

FLORIDA AND THE CAROLINAS—WINTER RESORTS.

Palm Beach, Miami, Daytona, Tampa, Jacksonville, Camden, Southern Pines, Pinehurst are quickly and most conveniently reached via the Seaboard Air Line. Three daily trains in each direction, including the Seaboard Florida Limited, the handsomest and quickest train in the Florida service. Tourist tickets on sale daily, with stop-over privileges. For description, booklets and information, address W. E. Conklyn, General Agent, 1411 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The New CenturyTYPEWRITER

does the BEST WORK and lots of it, EASILY.

Strong, Thoroughly Built,
Superior in results to any other.

Write for
"THE BOOK OF THE NEW CENTURY."

AMERICAN WRITING MACHINE COMPANY,
1033 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

JOSEPH B. SCATTERGOOD
House and Sign Painter
313 South 5th St., Philadelphia

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA. Office, 409 CHESTNUT STREET

CAPITAL, $1,000,000

ASSETS, $63,970,335.34

Surplus and Undivided Profits, belonging to Stockholders 4,026,151.15

Surplus, belonging to Insurance Account 5,635,620.25

Incorporated Third month 22, 1865. Charter Perpetual.

INSURES LIVES, GRANTS ANNUITIES, RECEIVES MONEY ON DEPOSIT, returnable on demand for which interest is allowed.

And is empowered by law to act as EXECUTOR ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, GUARDIAN, ASSIGNEE, COMMITTEE, RECEIVER, AGENT, etc.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the assets of the Company.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.

BOXES $5 AND UPWARDS

T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-Prest.
ASA S. WING, Vice-President.
JOS. ASHBROOK, Man. Ins. Dept.
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treas. urer.

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY, President.

J. R. FOULKE, Trust Officer.

DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary.

J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Assistant Trust Officer.

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary.

DIRECTORS:

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY,
T. WISTAR BROWN,
HENRY HAINES,
RICHARD WOOD,
CHAS. HARTSHORNE,

ASA S. WING,
PHILIP C. GARRETT,
JAMES V. WATSON,
WM. LONGSTRETH,
THOS. SCATTERGOOD,

J. PRESTON THOMAS,
ROBERT M. JANNEY,
MARRIOTT C. MORRIS,
FRANK H. TAYLOR,
JOSEPH B. TOWNSEND, Jr.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

We particularly invite the attention of the readers of "The American Friend" to this column. It will be found useful for almost everyone who wishes to advertise. The cost is 5c. per line each insertion. No advertisement is accepted for less than 25c. Cash with order.

LEAFLETS OF PRAISE.—Containing new hymns by Wm. J. Kirkpatrick, H. L. Gilmour and others. Includes "Peace Hymn of Nations." All peace lovers should have this song. 6 cents, postpaid. Jennie E. Hussey, Henniker, New Hampshire.

NEW SONG BOOK.—"Gold Tried in the Fire." One of the best song books on the market for church, Sunday school and evangelistic work. Bound in limp cloth and contains over 200 songs. Sells for $15.00 per hundred. 20 cents a copy. Published by Friends. BROWN BROS., Indianapolis, Indiana.

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER.—Careful and accurate repairing, with prompt service, has brought me the custom of many Friends. Their patronage is particularly solicited. My store is nearest to the Market Street ferries, and is easy of access from every part of the city. W. L. Berry, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

WANTED.—A thousand families of "Friends" and others to come west and buy land in Woods county, Oklahoma, while you can get good farms at half their value. Rich valley land near Friends' meeting, Stella Academy, railroad and good market. In the great wheat and alfalfa belt, and fruit in abundance, the best part of Oklahoma. Warm, healthy climate, with splendid society. Write us for circulars and price lists. References, Pastor "Friends'" Church, First National Bank of Cherokee. Very truly, VOTAW and SETZER, "Friends."

FOR SALE.—In consequence of advancing age I offer my Cold Storage Plant for Sale, fully equipped; a desirable business in an extensive Fruit Section for a young or middle aged man. Good Friends' Meeting information as to capacity, income, etc. Apply to W. T. Willis, Proprietor, Clintondale, N. Y. Terms easy.

WILLIAM S. YARNALL
Manufacturing OPTICIAN

118 S. FIFTEENTH ST., PHILA.
4th Door Below Chestnut St.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

HOOPING-COUGH AND CROUP.Roche's Herbal Embrocation

The celebrated and effectual English Cure without internal medicine. Proprietors, W. Edwards & Son, Queen Victoria St., London, England. Wholesale of E. Fougere & Co., 80 North William Street, N. Y.

EMINENT PHYSICIANS
throughout the world recommend

QUINA-LAROCHE

AS A SPECIFIC IN CASES OF
ANAEMIA, COLDS, LA GRIPE,
SLOW CONVALESCENCE,
STOMACH TROUBLES,
TYPHOID and MALARIAL
FEVERS.

E. Fougere & Co., 30 N. William St., N. Y.

The American Friend

"Truth is the highest thing a man may keep."
"That they all may be one."

VOL. XI.

PHILADELPHIA, THIRD MONTH 31, 1904.

No. 13.

PASTORAL CARE OF THE MEMBERSHIP.

Few blunders are more serious than the blunder of supposing that the church has nothing to do but to provide stated occasions for public worship. There are about a hundred hours of wakeful life in the week, and from one to four are perhaps spent in public worship. The rest of life is divided between busy occupations, eating and social intercourse. Churches have too much limited their sphere to this little realm of life inside the walls of the meeting place. This is supposed to be the place for religion, and the great domain beyond is called the world.

No church can perform its mission unless it can expand its sphere so as to touch the whole of life. Family worship and Scripture reading in the home are fully as important as the public gathering on First-day morning, for the moment "home religion" declines public worship shows deadness. It is a matter of deepest concern to any church whether its children are growing up at home "in the nurture of the Lord." If they are not, the chances are small that these children will ever become solid, interested members when they reach maturity. The real nursery of the church is the home, and wherever the church ceases to extend its pastoral care and spiritual influence out into the homes its days are numbered.

It is a well-known fact that most persons come into the religious life under personal influence and face to face talk rather than under preaching. Some are reached one way and some another. But no church may safely neglect to provide for the wider outside influences. A church which has only one point of contact with its attenders, namely, the public meeting, is poorly equipped for its mission. It may minister fairly well to the needs of its mature and spiritual members, but it will have no long arm out feeling for such as ought to be saved.

Every congregation has its share of shut-in members who need the tender ministry of the church. Each week there are many forced absences from all our gatherings. Has the church no ministry for those who lie on beds of sickness, for those who tend the sick, for those who mourn loved ones lost? Christ's answer is, they that are whole need not a physician, but they that are sick. Births and deaths, funerals and marriages, are events which deeply concern the church, and a church which has not learned how to fulfill its mission in these great crises of life must always be weak and have a weak hold over the life of its membership.

All these and many other lines of Christian activity come under the pastoral work of the church. How is it to be done? Is it done at all? In many meetings it is very feebly and inadequately done—in some hardly at all. It would be delightful if the life of the church were so high that each member felt a personal responsibility for this pastoral ministry. That would be something like a priesthood of believers. That situation is by no means a realized fact. What is "everybody's duty" in these busy days rarely gets done at all. It must be done by those who have a gift for it, and it must be done by those who feel a concern for it. But this much is reasonably certain that no modern church can fulfill its mission until it learns how to extend suitable pastoral care over its membership.*

THE HEROISM OF FAITH.

HEROISM and faith always go together. Whoever has one has the other. In fact, the very essence of heroism is in its venture of faith. The moment a man is absolutely certain of anything no chance is left for any heroic risk. If God had given us full foreknowledge He would have taken all the heroic stuff out of us. Every act of self-sacrifice has a risk, a venture in it. We can never know when we are surrendering ourselves to save some other life, whether that other life is worth what we are giving. No mortal ever knows, when he is venturing his all to rescue some drowning child, whether the child is worth the risk. He takes the venture on faith. It is just that risk, taken on faith, that constitutes the heroism. The man who knows everything about the step he is taking, and all its issues, may be prudent, but he is not heroic.

Now, if this is true (and it is), it will help us to see that the truly religious life is in a high degree heroic.

* Several Friends have been asked to write short, practical articles on this subject, suggesting ways, means and methods of attaining the ends here indicated. The editor will reserve further comment until after these articles are printed.

The Christian life is a life lived on a venture of faith. The man who lives it believes in God, in holiness, in immortality. He walks by faith. He lives as though he knew the reality of these great things toward which he lives. He throws himself on an unseen God, and acts as though this God were visibly present, walking by his side. He practices the holy life, for the sole reason that he believes in it and believes that he is called to live in holiness. He ventures out on a faith in an endless life. He realizes that nobody has come back to tell him about the life after death. He has no knowledge about it. He believes in its reality and lives as though he were sure of it. This is the highest kind of heroism.

When the Church guaranteed the future life to its converts the high and heroic quality disappeared. They settled down to a life of lazy ease and drifted on passively toward the sure harbor. With Protestantism came back the individual responsibility and personal faith. Men saw again that there could be no spiritual victory without faith—that nobody could have heaven who would not take the venture of faith. With this attitude came again the old heroic quality which is the finest thing life has to show.

THE INDIAN SCANDAL.

FRIENDS have always been jealous for the rights of the Indians. More than that, they have felt themselves debtors to them, as Paul did to the Greeks and barbarians, to give them the gospel and to raise them morally and spiritually. Every Friend will feel a sense of humiliation and shame to learn that the Dawes Commission has proved unfaithful to its sacred duty. S. M. Brosius, agent of the Indian Rights Association, brought several serious charges against members of this commission last autumn, and President Roosevelt appointed Charles J. Bonaparte and Clinton R. Woodruff to investigate these charges. They have made their investigation, and they conclude that the charges were understated. Some of the commissioners have used their positions for personal ends. They have aimed at private wealth rather than at the welfare of those whom they were appointed to guard and protect. The report of the investigators recommends that the commission be abolished and that all officials engaged in Indian lands be removed from the government service. It is shame enough to discover that our postoffices have been made a prey for money-grabbers, but it is a deeper shame that these high officials in the Indian service have been filling their pockets at the expense of these wards of the nation.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

THE PERILS OF OUR VIRTUES.

BY ROBERT E. SPEER.

There is no getting away from the danger and discipline of life. Monks thought they could escape by retiring to cells and caves, but the attempt was futile, because men carry their life with them wherever they go, and it is in the movings and responses of life that the real perils are found. St. Anthony withdrew where he would not see the sights of the world that dazzle and allure, but he was not delivered. He had an inward eye, and its possibilities of peril were as great as physical vision. Indeed, the only peril of his physical vision arose from the assent and acquiescent interest of the eyes of the mind. To move the body away from the world is not to deliver the soul of fleshliness. The real dangers are within.

Many men have been delivered from the coarse physical temptations. They walk in the midst of them exempt, unawares, unsolicited, because there is no inward response, no momentary consciousness of desire. And this is a great gain. This is the proper movement and destiny of life, a progressive inward deliverance, range succeeding range of ever new and expanding life, and each new development leaving behind the grosser perils of the life now transcended.

The Christian life is full of concentric or successive belts of temptation. Many men fall because they do not perceive this. They assume that the only temptations are the grosser ones which they meet at the outset of their Christian lives, and they prepare for battle with them. They do not realize that beyond these the very virtues which the Christian life produces are beset with new dangers. And not seeing this, they yield to subtle evils which they have not discovered and scrutinized. In this way many have made shipwreck of their character on the rocks of an aspiration for spirituality. Perhaps this was part of what Gladstone meant when he wrote to the Duchess of Sutherland: "There is one proposition which the experience of life burns into my soul; it is this, that a man should beware of letting his religion spoil his morality."

No small measure of contempt falls upon the higher Christian life on this account. And many earnest men lose their influence with the world because they do not perceive that their very progress has brought them into a new range of perils, against which they must be on their guard, and from which they must save their souls. There are so many of the perils common among active Christian workers, as to deserve a general characterization.

The Christian man begins by fighting a battle against actual evil and by winning it, but he is exposed in doing so to the danger of depreciating the guilt of evil thought and imagination. He will never fall into gross sin, therefore he need not be scrupulous about avoiding books and papers which deal with it. Purity of art constitutes no warrant for imperiling purity of imagination. Once the fountain is tainted the stream will not long continue clean. Good men should be the more, not the less, cautiously scrupulous to keep their conversation stainless of all faintest suggestion of evil or coarseness, and their minds aloof from all salacious curiosities.

The Christian worker fights against the spirit of torpor, of indolence, of self-solicitude, and sooner or later begins to possess the character of intense and continuous application to work and activity. The zeal of his Father's house eats him up. He spends himself, and with Paul, spends himself out. "Be doing and be done," quotes William Gladstone. Is he aware that this very new virtue carries with it a new danger, the perils of absorption in work, of incapacity for relaxation and rest? Some men get so busy in Christian work that they have no time for prayer and none for friendship, and the consequence is surely seen in lessened power and impoverished love. Many Christian workers are the slaves of good purposes. They are not free. They are bound. The intensity of their will to accomplish much of good, prevents their minds from ever being at leisure from themselves to soothe and sympathize, for cheerful fellowship and unrestrained kindness. The Saviour left us an example here. He made it His meat and drink to do His Father's will, yet the little children knew He was accessible and were not repulsed, and the people thronged Him, and the Pharisees called Him the friend of publicans and sinners. He was Himself, and He was all men's.

The Christian worker contends against the sense of pride and self-exaggeration. He seeks to esteem other men better than himself and to be like Christ, who made Himself the servant of all. The peril is that he will not be able with Christ to realize that he is a prince of God and of the truth, and a King's son, and master of the worlds and of men, and that his work is the supremest of all works and for the saving of the world. Dickens has said that it is a requisite of success that a man should believe his particular work to be the greatest work in the world. But the Christian spirit of humility and the sense of humor which give a man a just perspective of himself, are full of the danger that a man will fail thereby to take a justly-exaggerated view of his own place and work, and will accordingly get much less accomplished than some other man who takes himself seriously, who sees his work in exalted outlines, who has learned the secret of Paul, both to be abased and to abound, and the lesson of the Saviour who was both the servant and the sovereign of humanity.

The firmer Christian life and service are full of these anomalies, these balanced dangers on every hand. The difficulty of walking evenly between absolute faith in the unseen potency of truth on one hand and the legitimate desire to see the tangible results of spiritual effort on the other. The difficulty of personal judgment—of avoiding all malice and yet speaking the truth, even about wicked and unworthy men, believing all things and yet believing only the truth, speaking lovingly of all men and yet denouncing liars.

Much of this advancing peril of life is due doubtless to the confusion of simple impulse by reflective self-consciousness. We conquer coarse sin by fighting against the inner disposition to respond. But the victory over the outer evil leaves us with the new conflict of the inner soul upon us, the struggle between unconscious instincts toward good and the self-consciousness of virtue. To imbed our moral impulse in conscious reason is a gain, but it is a gain with loss, with new and real possibilities of danger.

The comfort and encouragement of it all is that our introduction to new perils is parallel with our deliverance from old, and that with finer dangers, we have also ampler resources of strength and skill to antagonize them and subdue them. If evil presents itself in more delicately-seductive forms as we draw nearer Christ, we may rejoice that it is because we are drawing nearer Christ, and that the Saviour close at hand is able to deliver us and to present us flawless before His presence with exceeding joy.

New York.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

THAT MEN MAY GLORIFY GOD.

BY R. ELLA LEVERING.

"Let your light shine before men, that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven." (Matt. 5: 16, R. V.)

It is the way of men of the world to desire honor for the good they do, and the way of the world to glorify the men who, according to its standards, do good.

Herein lies a line of separation between the Church and the world, for the "good works" of the children of God, if their light is put upon a candlestick and allowed to shine, cause beholders to glorify their Father instead of the men who perform them.

In the life of our Lord we may find examples of good works which led men to glorify God:

A man sick of the palsy was brought to Jesus, borne of four. Let down through the roof into the presence of the divine Teacher, he was bidden to arise, and the crowd saw him walk away whole. The multitude heard a man speak the word of command, but were so sure God had wrought the healing that they "glorified God which had given such power unto men." (Matt. 9: 2-8.)

Jesus went up into a mountain near the Sea of Galilee and a great multitude came to Him, among whom were many disabled people. "The multitude wondered when they saw the dumb to speak, the maimed to be whole, the lame to walk, and the blind to see; and they glorified the God of Israel." (Matt. 15: 29-31.) Jesus and His disciples were traveling in Galilee when they met a funeral procession. The body of the only son of a widow was being carried to a place of burial. Jesus had compassion on the mother, touched the bier, and said: "Young man, I say unto thee, arise. And he that was dead sat up and began to speak." "There came a fear on all, and they glorified God." (Luke 7: 11-16.) In all these cases the people saw and heard a man, but the results being such as they were sure nothing but the power of God could accomplish, they gave glory not to man, but to God.

"Behold there was a woman which had a spirit of infirmity eighteen years, and was bowed together, and could in no wise lift up herself. And when Jesus saw her, He called her to Him and said unto her, Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity. And He laid His hands on her and immediately she was made straight and glorified God." (Luke 13: 11-13.) This woman felt the touch and heard the voice and saw the face of a man, but glorified God because she recognized it was God who had mercy on her, and the power of God that wrought a mighty work in her.

Is it possible that the "good works" of people who have been sinners and are saved by grace, should have this same quality of convincing men of the presence and working of God?

It was so in the case of Peter and John when, shortly after their wonderful pentecostal filling, they went up to the temple at the hour of prayer and met a lame beggar at the Beautiful gate. Peter said: "In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, rise up and walk. And He took him by the right hand and lifted him up; and immediately his feet and ankle bones received strength, and he leaping up stood, and walked, . . . praising God," and "All men glorified God for that which was done." (Acts 3: 1-8 and 4: 21.)

Here again the people heard the voice of a man and saw him dealing with the cripple, but recognized that what was done was the work of God; and both the healed man and all the people gave glory to God.

Again, Peter, having retired to a housetop to pray, was taught by the vision of a great sheet let down from heaven and an accompanying voice, to call no man common or unclean, but to go to the house of the waiting Gentile, Cornelius. Here he saw undoubted manifestations of the work and favor of God, in that He gave "them the Holy Ghost even as He did unto us." Later he declared particularly to the brethren at Jerusalem the circumstances of his own altered vision and of the reception of the Holy Ghost by the Gentiles, which when they heard they glorified God; for they looked beyond Peter, the servant and instrument, and saw that God had wrought mightily. (Acts 10, 11, and 15: 18.)

Saul of Tarsus being exceedingly mad against the Christians, persecuted them unto strange cities, and journeyed toward Damascus to bring them bound to Jerusalem. Stopped by an overpowering light, and instructed by a voice from heaven, he discovered that he was persecuting the God whom he thought he was serving.

Surrendering and praying, his sins were washed away, and the people who knew him were amazed to see that "he who persecuted us in times past now preacheth the faith which once he destroyed." Paul says: "They glorified God in me"; for they recognized the work of God in the transformation of the man. (Gal. 1: 13, 23, 24.) These are apostolic examples of the good works of men, by which other men were led to glorify God.

There are some promises which, when accepted, have led to the same result in all ages of the church's history, are doing it now, and will continue so to do.

Jno. 14: 13 reads: "Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do that the Father may be glorified—." Hence, when a man lives in fellowship with God, so as to be able to pray in the name of Jesus Christ and receive what he asks, men beholding the remarkable answers to his petitions, will see the work of God and give glory to Him. Witness the case of George Muller, who said: "My whole life is one service for God. Caring for the children is the mere instrumentality. My heart bled for the poor orphans, and I desired to see them well housed and fed; but that was not my motive. My heart desired to give them a good education; but that was not my motive. My heart longed for their salvation; but that was not my motive. The glory of God, that it might be seen by the whole world and the whole church that yet in these days God listens to prayer, and is the same in power and love as ever, to illustrate that I have devoted my whole life."

"He that abideth in me and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit." "Herein is my Father glorified that ye bear much fruit." (Jno. 15: 5, 8.)

Hence when a man abides in Christ and Christ in him, the much fruit borne will lead men to glorify God, for they will be sure God is the author of the life they see in such a man. His "love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance" (self-control), will be of such a quality as to speak of the excellencies of his God rather than of his own.

Read 1 Cor. 14: 24, 25 and judge if we are not safe in saying, when Spirit-filled disciples are met together for worship, and, in true apostolic fashion, all prophesy or speak "as the Spirit gives utterance," unbelievers who may be present, will feel their own hearts searched, recognize the presence of God with His people, and give glory to Him.

1 Peter 4: 11 teaches that when those who profess to speak for God, do it as the oracles of God, "not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power," and when those who minister do it in the ability that God giveth, He is glorified, and when He is glorified it is that men are caused to give honor to Him to whom alone it belongs. Verse fourteen of the same chapter shows that when disciples are reproached for the name of Christ, other men are led to glorify God, as has been often witnessed in the case of those who have patiently and victoriously suffered for their Lord.

Beloved, it costs the children of God much to lose the life that seeks its own, it being "crucified with Christ," and to receive and live in the power of that other life that speaks of God and causes beholders to glorify Him, because "Christ liveth in me." Is it worth what it costs?

Maryville, Tenn.

THE NEXT WORLD'S LEGAL TENDER.

BY H. W. WARREN.

We all know what legal tender is in this world—cowrie shells, elephant tusks, silver, gold or paper based thereon. But this world is to pass away. Wood, hay, stubble, gold, silver, precious stones are classed together as things to be burned up. But surely values will be increased and exchanged thereafter. What will be the medium of exchange?

There is always something of such seeming importance that it is the one thing asked for—as one of our authors says:

I asked no other thing,
No other was desired.
I offered Being for it!
The mighty merchant smiled.
Brazil? He twirled a button
Without a glance my way.

What is the legal tender where gold is only fit for paving streets?

Perhaps we can judge what is best there by what brings best things here. When the blessings of liberty for growing millions of men in America was procured by a spirit represented in Washington and his fellow soldiers what was the price paid? When millions of slaves were suddenly transformed into free men what was the price paid? It cost millions of dollars for arms and ships to be sure, but dollars could not be the legal tender for blessings so large. There were pangs of sacrifice and pouring out of blood for thousands of men, and more poignant pangs of sacrifice in thousands of homes. There were children orphaned and widows desolate, but none of these greatest sufferers ever thought that the price outweighed the blessing brought, or if in the intensity of their grief for a moment they thought so, the general judgment of mankind is, that ghastly and terrible as it was, the liberty of millions was worth all it could possibly cost.

The men who have conferred great blessings on the world are loved according to the sacrifice it cost them. If a man make a good invention and gain millions of dollars by it no one holds him in special love. But if a Grace Darling or Florence Nightingale puts all in peril for a far lesser good, every one holds them in most tender regard.

Emerson says that "Good manners are made up of petty sacrifices." Those dear and gentle delights that make home a haven of bliss could not be bought with gold. The legal tender that brings them is coined out of soul.

So when we go to the greater values of the better world the legal tender that brings them cannot be coined out of corruptible things, out of silver or gold, but out of precious blood as of a lamb without blemish and without spot, even the blood of Christ.

If blood signified only the sacrifice of physical life it would not reach the height of the blessing received. It was characteristically stated by the Father of lies that all that a man had would he give for his life. No, there are many things for which a true man counts not his life dear unto himself. So of the Lamb of God, laying down His physical life was not the greatest sacrifice. Other men have died as bravely, but no other man ever was legal tender for such great good. He was made a curse for us—bare our sins—on Him was laid the iniquity of us all—He was wounded for our transgressions, He bore our grief and carried our sorrows.

We measure greatness of the price by the benefits received. The names of Washington and Lincoln grow great and luminous with the speeding years. But what comparison is there with the power of the spreading Kingdom of God. It spreads over nation after nation, it crosses seas and over-leaps the mountains.

We conclude then that love, outgrowing in any way—being grieved 40 years with hardness of heart in the wilderness, exclaiming, "How shall I give thee up, O H. Pharaoh. I have loved thee with an everlasting love." Or so loving the world as to give His only begotten Son, is the price of this world's highest good, and will be the price of our highest good in any other world.

The divine love has no human measures. So the value of the purchase redemption has no human measures. It will take unmeasured years of growth to begin to comprehend the things God hath prepared for them that love Him, and whom He loves with an everlasting love. Eye hath not seen nor ear heard, nor has it entered into the heart of man to conceive these things at present.

Dancer, Col.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

A RECORD OF THE OLDEN TIME.

BY J. LINDLEY SPICER.

In an attic was found a fragment of an old book. It was the "Minutes of a Preparative Meeting of Women Friends held at the Branch" (a place a few miles from Quaker Hill, N. Y.).

The cover is all gone and the pages more or less torn. The first date is 13th of 8th mo., 1795, when it is noted that "fore & six pence" was collected for the use of the poor. "Elizabeth Wing" was clerk. "Rachel Height" is the first name which appears. The first business recorded was: Granting a certificate of removal to Sarah Hoag, wife of Abraham Hoag, and her children, to Cornwall Monthly Meeting. In the answers to Queries it is pleasant to note, "We don't know of any that give up to sleep in meetings."

Ans. 2d. "We believe friends are generally Clean of Backbiting, tailbareing and Spreading Evil Reports."

Ans. 4th. "Some friends are in a good Degree Careful to keep themselves and those under their Call in plainness."

Ans. 5th. "We believe friends are in the practice of frequently reading the Holy Scriptures and guard against Reading pernicious books, and engaging in the corrupt Conversation of the World. Moderation at Marriages, Births, and Burials, as far as appears."

Ans. 6th. "Don't know of any friend amongst us in Need of assistance or any Children but what partake of Learning. None placed out from friends that is Known."

"This meeting adjourns as comes in course to the 13th of 10th mo. at the 10th hour."

At a later meeting it is noted that "Friends are clear from the Unnecessary use of Spirituous Liquors and attending places of Diversion."

The answer to the 7th Query states: "Except one instance of Keeping Company with one Not of our Society and Care taken."

Those appointed to attend the monthly meeting produced Epistles from Philadelphia and Rhode Island of the year 1794, which were "Read in this Meeting to our Comfort and Satisfaction."

In 1796 they were "Clear of Negroes and Care is taken to Instruct other Children under our Care in School Learning to fit them for business." None seemed disposed to "Launch out into business beyond their ability to Manage."

The 10th of 6th mo., 1796, concern was expressed for "Sarah Soul," who was reported by the Overseers as "Neglectful in the attendance of our meetings and Doth not keep to plainness and hath been to places of Diversion. She has been Laboured with from time to time." This case was referred to the monthly meeting.

Purchase Quarterly Meeting of Women Friends, held at Purchase the 8th of 8th mo., 1796, sent a communication noting "The Deficiencies from our Queries"—"a cause of exercise"—"A concern was Livingly Spread that friends give individual attention to the principals of truth, etc." Removal certificates were granted to those who removed to "Live within the verge of other monthly meetings."

"Almy Allen formerly a Hill Kept Company and married one Not of our Society after being cautioned."

An Epistle from London of the year 1796 was read:

New York Yearly Meeting of Women Friends, in 2d of 6th mo., 1797, send an Epistle expressing "An exercise hath attended this meeting on observing Various Deficiencies—Concern has been Spread that friends may become quickened in Labour for the renewings of that which Can alone preserve and abilitate to perform our Religious Duties. . . . This meeting hath been Dipped into affecting weighty Exercise on account of the many apparent weaknesses . . . particularly that of Sleeping and the indulgence of a Drowsy Spirit which so prevails amongst us."

"Double Diligence" is recommended that "The Little ones be not caused to Stumble at the threshold of the Door."

In 1798 there seems to have come in some changes in the Queries, or they were more fully answered, for we read in answer to the 8th Query: "Clear of Oaths, and of being concerned in fraudulent Clandestine trade. Lotteries or Dealing in prize goods, as far as appears."

The 16th of 9th mo., 1798, the action of New York Yearly Meeting, in regard to "Raising and Establishing a permanent fund for nine Partners Boarding School" was considered. "The Interest arising therefrom to be applied for the benefit of poor friends children." This proposition was united with.

In 1800, "Sleeping in meeting" is first reported, and "It don't appear we are Clear of backbiting, talebearing and Spreading evil reports."

Carolina Thompson was guilty of "Attending a Separate meeting, and hath gone Contrary to good order in keeping her Seat in time of Vocal service. For which misconduct She had been Laboured with."

Comfort Richards was complained of in 1801 for "Tattling, talebearing and spreading evil reports."

In 1803 Friends are reported as being clear of paying "Priests' wages."

This year parents request membership for their little child.

During the records which close 14th of 6th mo., 1804—one hundred years ago—there are many acknowledgments and reinstatements noted, also many young people who, it is reported, "Lay their intentions of marriage before the meetings."

So we reverently lay aside these old yellow records, and take up the present duties.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Some Views on Present Topics.

ONE OF OUR NEEDS.

BY JONATHAN M. STEERE.

We hear and read a great deal about the needs of Quakerism. We are constantly told that our numbers are not increasing, that meetings are dying out and being "laid down," that the ministry is lacking in power, that other branches of the Christian Church have absorbed many of our principles and practices, and it is even suggested, because of all this, that perhaps the work of Quakerism has been done, and that we might with better grace resign our place and blend with other denominations.

No one of sound judgment can pretend to deny that we have many and sore needs as a Church. What Church or what individual has not? And yet, on the other hand, it cannot the less be denied that we have great elements of strength and power as a part of the militant Church. It is almost needless to draw attention to these elements of strength, our educational institutions of undoubted force, scattered from one side of the continent to the other, the growing meetings in many localities which are supplying in large measure the needs of the people; the recent attention which has been paid in some quarters to the early history of our Society and its tremendous influence on English history; our staunch attitude on the subject of peace—all these and many more are unmistakable signs of the durability of these principles which were so clearly set forth by Fox and Barclay and their contemporaries, and which are the tangible signs of present-day Quakerism. We no doubt need more of them; we need greater spiritual insight; we need a clearer vision; we need to reach out to our fellow-men; we need a score of things, but do we not need to bear more clearly in our minds the strength and the power we have? I would not that we unduly praise ourselves. Let others do that if they choose. I would not that we settle into a feeling of self-satisfaction. We have no excuse for that. We cannot afford to rely on an easy-going optimism. We have too many needs to ignore them.

But the point I wish to make is that we make more of what we have, that we realize our own strength more fully; that we have a little more righteous boldness. I believe we are stronger than we think we are.

Have we not fallen too much into the habit of self-inspection? Are we not in danger of becoming an invalid because we think we are weak? Are we not examining ourselves too closely? Are we not making a little too much of our shortcomings and not enough of our successes? I cannot help believing, were more of the time we spend in studying our own condition and diagnosing our own case spent in healthy exercise in some form of active, constructive Christian work and in closer seeking that power without which all our work will be in vain, that in due time we should find that the needs of Quakerism were far less than we thought they were.

The healthy, normal boy does not spend much time in thinking about why he is healthy. He eats and plays and works and sleeps according to certain well-recognized habits, and health results. Too much thought of ourselves betrays an unhealthy condition of body and mind. There is no lack of opportunity for exercise of the gifts and powers we have. I cannot but feel that there is as much need to-day in the world for Quakerism in its purity as there was in the time of the Leicestershire weaver, but I cannot see how we can apply it and live it until we look less at our needs, more at our strength, and more at the needs of the men about us.

Philadelphia.

JOSHUA L. BAILY ON TEMPERANCE.

BY JOSEPH ELKINTON.

In the meeting house at Media, Pa., on the evening of the 24th, Joshua L. Baily addressed a good-sized gathering of Friends and others on the subject of "Temperance as a Policy and Principle." He treated the various phases of this age-long contention in a clear and comprehensive manner, and in a non-partisan spirit.

The very fact of the persistent and widely-prevalent vice of intemperance has a paralyzing effect upon the public conscience, so that from unwise methods and the apparent hopelessness of the cause of reform, there results in the minds of many a general apathy on the subject. This might be corrected in some measure by each individual becoming a vigilance committee of one to guard his own appetite and to use every suitable opportunity to advocate total abstinence. The sin is not a new one in history, as from the days of Noah to the present time there are ample records of the shame and sorrow which follow in the train of drunkenness. The demands of modern business requirements not only show the premium that is paid on temperance by commercial institutions; they actually exclude from service those who are known to be in the habit of drinking. One of the most striking illustrations of this was the action of one of our transcontinental railroads by first refusing to employ any man who drank while on duty, then extending the prohibition to all who thus indulged when off duty, and finally making his reported presence in a saloon sufficient cause for his dismissal from the company's service.

Sixty years ago a total abstainer could not get his life insured in England because moderate drinking was believed to contribute to longevity; now this class of citizens have special rates, because statistics show that on the average fifteen years are added to one's life by this wholesome practice. The hold that intemperance unconsciously gets upon its victims was aptly illustrated by an eagle feasting upon the carcass of a sheep while floating down the Niagara River on a cake of ice. The bird ever and anon lifted its head as it approached the falls, evidently calculating upon its chances of escape. When on the very brink of the mighty cataract it made a few frantic efforts to fly, only to be carried over the falls, as its talons had become frozen fast to its prey.

As a principle temperance was enforced on lines of the responsibility of brotherhood, such as the apostle commends in his noble resolve not to do anything which would cause his brother to offend or stumble. This right attitude of mind and spirit was expressed in the reply of a little girl who was carrying her brother across a muddy street in London; when an officer said, "My little girl, isn't he too heavy?" "Too heavy! Why he's my brother."

Our friend Joshua L. Baily has studied this subject as few in his generation, and he is dedicating the remainder of his useful life in bringing home to his fellow members in a Society which has always stood in the fore ranks of moral reform, some needed reminders that we cannot fold our hands and expect the world to free itself from a habit which has more victims annually than war, famine and pestilence. No! we must arise and meet this evil, which is acknowledged to be the greatest problem of modern times, not with spasmodic or partisan efforts, but wisely and unitedly.

We can at least listen to facts and lend our sympathy and support to those who have looked over the whole field and, after mature deliberation and long experience, formulated a policy of action.

If Friends in any community, conveniently near to Philadelphia, would arrange to gather their neighbors together and do what lies within their power to share in promoting this suffering and most worthy cause, I believe our friend would gladly share with them his views and experiences.

Philadelphia.

The International Lesson.

SECOND QUARTER.

LESSON II.

FOURTH MONTH 10, 1904.

PETER CONFESSES THE CHRIST.

Mark 8: 27-38.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. Matt. 16: 16.

DAILY READINGS.

Second-day, Fourth mo. 4.—Peter confesses the Christ. Mark 8: 27-38.

Third-day, Fourth mo. 5.—Witnessing for Christ. Acts 1: 6-9.

Fourth-day, Fourth mo. 6.—The precious corner stone. Isa. 28: 14-20.

Fifth-day, Fourth mo. 7.—Living stones. 1 Pet. 2: 1-10.

Sixth-day, Fourth mo. 8.—Following Christ. Matt. 10: 32-42.

Seventh-day, Fourth mo. 9.—Counting the cost. Luke 14: 25-33.

First-day, Fourth mo. 10.—Forsaking all for Christ. Heb. 11: 24-27.

Time.—In the autumn of A.D. 29, very soon after the last lesson.

Place.—In the neighborhood of Cæsarea Philippi, not far from Mount Hermon, near the headwaters of the Jordan, twenty-five miles north of the Sea of Galilee.

Place in the Life of Christ.—In the last half of the third year of his ministry.

Parallel Accounts.—Matthew 16: 13-28; Luke 9: 18-27.

27. "Cæsarea Philippi." This town was formerly called Panium, from the god Pan. It was enlarged and beautified by Herod Philip, tetrarch of Trachonitis, and given a new name in honor of the emperor and of himself. The addition of Philippi distinguished it from the larger and more important city on the coast, so often mentioned in the Acts. This visit marks the most northern limit of Christ's journeyings. It was in this journey that Christ gained the retirement and quiet that he wished. Compare Luke 9: 18. "Who do men say that I am?" So far as we know this was the first time that Jesus asked His disciples this question. It was now time that they should be able to answer from their own experience and observation.

28. "And they told Him, saying, John the Baptist, and others, Elijah; but others one of the prophets." Revised Version. The first was the opinion of Herod Antipas, as has been seen in a previous lesson (Mark 6: 14). Elijah; this was in accord with a common belief that Elijah would come before the Messiah. (Mal. 4: 5.) See also Matt. 11: 14.

29. "And He asked them, But who say ye that I am?" Revised Version. The emphasis is upon "ye," in distinction from "men" in the preceding verse. It is a great clarifier of opinions to put them into words. When we define a thing then we know it. "Peter answereth." Impetuous Peter was always ready to speak. "Thou art the Christ." Thou art the Messiah. Messiah is the Hebrew and Christ the Greek word. Peter's ideas about the Messiah were still crude, and not correct in many points, but he was sure as to the fact. Matthew adds, "The Son of the living God." This confession was the result of inward conviction, and illumination by the spirit. Compare Matt. 16: 17.

30. "That they should tell no man." The time was not yet come for the declaration. The universal misconception regarding the character of the Messiah would prevent acceptance, and a declaration would do far more harm than good. Besides this, the disciples themselves did not yet fully understand Him or His mission.

31. "And he began to teach them." This was the beginning of Christ's enlightening His disciples as to this phase of His Messiahship. It was needful that they should be prepared for what was to come, or they might be discouraged, or become unbelievers.

32. "Openly." That is without any reserve. "Peter took him." Took him aside. "Began to rebuke him." Matthew says Peter said, "Be it far from thee Lord, this shall not be unto thee." Peter assumes that he knows better than his Master. Peter could not bear to hear such things so contrary to his idea of a Messiah.

33. "But he turning about, and seeing His disciples, rebuked Peter, and saith, Get thee behind me, Satan." The meaning of the word Satan is adversary. Peter was acting in the spirit of Satan, and putting temptation in the way of Christ. "Thou mindest not the things of God but the things of men." He did not look at things as God looks at them, but as men look at them. His idea of a Messiah was of a great earthly sovereign who would restore the outward kingdom of David.

34. "The multitude." The preceding teaching had been for the disciples alone, now he had something for every one. "If any man would come after me," etc. That is, if any one wishes to be my disciple. "Deny himself." This is much more than to give up things; it is to renounce self. He must not make himself the object of his life. It is to change the fundamental principle of one's life. "Take up his cross." "The cross does not mean here any disagreeable thing, but the instrument of death." It means, to be willing to die for Christ. "Follow me." Obey, follow His example.

35. "Would save his life," etc. "The passage consists in the two meanings of the word life. In the first clause, it means the bodily life, and in the second the true life of the spirit. In this case a man loses his life only to receive it again enriched and multiplied." "He sacrifices himself so far as he is identified with lower interests, only to become absorbed in higher and larger interests, in righteousness and love, in God and man."

36. "For what doth it profit a man to gain the whole world and forfeit his life." Revised Version. The contrast now is between the world and all that it contains and life. If a man forfeits his life what does it profit him to have every worldly pleasure? If this is true in outward things how much more true is it in spiritual things.

37. "For what should a man give in exchange for his life?" Revised Version. The words life and soul in these verses represent a single Greek word which should be translated "life." There is nothing which can be exchanged for life—once gone it is gone forever. It is a loss which can never be repaired. The whole world could not buy back a life if it was lost.

38. This verse refers to the whole preceding passage, and is the statement of a fact, and partakes of the nature of a prophecy. "Adulterous." Used in the sense of unfaithful—unfaithful to God.

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

1. To every one some time comes the question, "What think ye of Christ?"

2. Self-effacement is the mark of true discipleship.

3. "What should a man give in exchange for his life?"

Christian Endeavor

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Lindley D. Clark, 1429 New York Avenue, Washington, D.C.]

TOPIC FOR FOURTH MONTH TENTH.

HOW THE WORLD'S STANDARDS CONFLICT WITH CHRIST'S.

Matt. 5: 43-48; 1 John 2: 15-17.

Second-day, Fourth mo. 4.—Resistance of evil. Matt. 5: 38-42.

Third-day, Fourth mo. 5.—Purity. Matt. 5: 27-32.

Fourth-day, Fourth mo. 6.—Hatred. Matt. 5: 21-26.

Fifth-day, Fourth mo. 7.—Kingliness. John 18: 33-38.

Sixth-day, Fourth mo. 8.—Unselfishness. John 10: 11-15.

Seventh-day, Fourth mo. 9.—Ministering to others. Matt. 25: 41-46.

It is one of the perfections of Christ's teachings that He put the supreme truth of His message on a plane to be understood by the simplest, not to be interpreted, but to be lived. It is at once man's glory and his shame that to him such a gospel should have been confided without reserve, and that he should have so failed to accept its requirements and promises.

The message was not merely a challenge to the wicked and sensual, but to those who professed a form of righteousness as well. Our Lord was speaking to an era. It was the enduring revelation spoken at the end of the days by the Son, and the world in its most cultured centers has not yet attained to the standard set up by the Galilean on that mountain side twenty centuries ago.

Why? Because it is at cross purposes with the perverted desires of men, and cannot be reached by them without divine help; and freely as that is offered they are not willing to accept it.

The man is accounted wise in his generation whose favors are for those who can recompense him, and whose enemies are vanquished by superior strength and skill. Christ's gains and conquests are so different from this that even ministers of the gospel, appointed as such by their churches, have failed to accept Him at His word, and have let down the requirements that He made so plain. That is to let the world prevail over Christ in us, and to risk a fearful woe by "teaching men so."

He who came to conquer came also to give His followers victory. But the call is for an easier teaching. If place and fortune hunters use corrupt means to gain their ends, they do not wish to be made uncomfortable, or to be rebuked before their fellow men by some modern John the Baptist. Having escaped the strictures of human law, they dislike to be reminded of a higher law that calls for love to one's neighbor, and a regard for riches that includes a ministry to the "little ones" who may have been overridden in the conflict.

But if there is a difference in requirements and processes, there is greater difference in the achievements and rewards. The life lived by Christ's standard goes on to perfection, here and eternally; while earth's earthiness returns to the low level of its origin, and may, like the swimmer's belt of gold, sink treasure and treasure-seeker beyond rescue.

Missionary Department.

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Herman Newman, 718 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.]

INDIANS IN OWEN'S VALLEY.

[The information in this article was forwarded to us by Anna F. Tabor.—Ed.]

Owen's Valley, Inyo County, Cal., is a narrow depression, only some ten miles wide, through which flows the river born of the melting snows of the Sierras, which rise on either side. This river brings fertility to this "Land of Little Rain," where the mean rainfall does not exceed three or four inches. Inyo County possesses Mt. Whitney and Mt. Tyn-dall, two of the highest peaks of the Sierras, and to the south Death Valley, of gruesome memory—a desert stretch some forty miles long, sunk below the level of the sea.

By aid of irrigation Owen's Valley has been rendered fertile, and here are found some 350 Indians, scattered in various bands, as at Independence, Big Pine and Bishop. All live in their brush wickings, but during the past year the sixteen families at Independence have taken their land in severalty. The others are still nomadic in character, shifting from place to place on the government land which still remains in Inyo County. They may own horses and wagons, but continue to live in the primitive ways of old. The men work for a little while, till they have accumulated $100 or $200, then, picking up their families, they drive off to visit some other camp and spend their earnings in feasting and gambling, returning to work only when necessity compels. The women still cook in the old-time fashion. A fire is made on the ground; the woman sits beside it, with a semi-circle of baskets around her. In these are water and meal, and into this mixture, from time to time, she throws stones, heated red hot in the fire. Tin cooking vessels are beginning to take the place of the baskets, but the old custom persists. The women are expert basket and bead workers, but do not make many, as the prices received do not pay for the labor expended. The old heathen customs continue. There is a belief in one God, for they accept the white man's God as the same as their own, but this does not alter their habits. The superstition which burns the old dwelling into which death has come continues. This, they think, releases the parting soul, which otherwise would haunt its old abode, for they believe in immortality. Funerals are accompanied by wailing and offerings to the dead. A harvest festival is held in the fall, when days of feasting and gambling use up the wages earned during the summer.

In the mountains live a still more primitive people, a people still untouched by the white industrial life, but also still untouched by the white vices. These people are honest, moral and independent. They hunt and fish, gather nuts and gress seed, and some still wear deerskin garments. Their children are untaught. They have no knowledge of the gospel, but are really better men and women than the valley Indians, to whom the white race has brought much of evil and little of good. For white men have come into Inyo County, some 4,000 of them. It is a frontier population of miners and ranchers. A life of hardship has developed a virile race, but it lacks the softening, elevating influences we consider essential to civilization. Books and magazines have been so scarce that a generation has grown up which does not care for them, save among the mines, where there are men who hunger for these companions of earlier life. One doctor attends the sick, up and down the valley for 150 miles. Knowing that he must pass by a certain road, a red flag is hung at a crossroads to show that another patient needs him up the other road. The Church has little hold on the people. A new minister brings out a congregation for a week or two, but life and death go on untouched by a vital religious influence.

What of the Indians in this community? Liquor abounds; no convictions can be obtained under our excellent State law against selling liquor to Indians, for white juries will not convict a white man for the offense, in spite of clear evidence of guilt, and a judge and prosecuting attorney ready to do their duty. All forms of immorality go on unchecked, not only by law, but by public sentiment, which takes no cognizance of offenses so long as the victim is "only an Indian."

But the white man who legally marries an Indian woman and supports his family is socially ostracised.

But the picture is not all dark. At Independence, Big Pine and Bishop the government has placed Indian day schools. They are taught by fine women, who are doing a great work. Mrs. Barrows, at Bishop, is an Eastern woman of culture, who devotes herself to her work with true missionary zeal. When she first came there the prejudice against the Indians or any one who sought to elevate them was intense. When asked by Mrs. Barrows to conduct a Christian funeral over one of her Indian girls a minister declined, as it was Seventh month 4th, and he wanted to attend the celebration. A doctor refused to care for another who was dying in convulsions caused by taking poison because of remorse for sin unwillingly committed.

But patient effort has borne fruit, and Mrs. Barrows has won social recognition for herself and endurance of her work. But no school teacher can have time and strength to bring these people all the help they need. A man and his wife to work as missionary and field matron would be a wonderful blessing. The parish would have to be as large as the doctor's circuit, but a good pair of horses and a wagon would make this possible in that land of sunshine. If two workers cannot be secured, a consecrated, capable woman, trained in knowledge of domestic economy, with practical, common sense and good courage to face opposition and win her points by tact and patience, would have a grand field for effort and be able to do the things the teachers have not time for. Just now is the important time. Public land is still there, open to the Indians, but they have not reached the place where they want it. A wise woman, training the women in household arts, would influence them to desire homes. Before long that land will be settled and the Inyo County Indians in the same plight as our other Indians further north. A field matron is needed in several localities, but Bishop is, perhaps, the place to be first occupied. One woman could not cover all the ground.

Things of Interest Among Ourselves.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND will be sent to a new subscriber from now until First month 1st, 1905, for $1.00.

Noah C. and Clara E. McLean have just finished a series of union revival meetings at Ashtabula, Ohio, with good results.

Martha E. Newlin and Belle Johnson, in the capacity of a committee, have been visiting Poplar, a meeting near Sheridan, Ind., with good results.

Mattie White, widow of Lilburn White, of Spiceland, Ind., is visiting her step-daughter, Abbie Pierce, and other friends, in Westfield, Ind., and vicinity.

A very successful tea meeting was held at Haverford Meeting on the 25th. It was addressed by Alfred C. Garrett on "The Twentieth Century's Need of Quakerism."

A correspondent informs us that the item in our correspondence column on the religious fanaticism on Beal Island, Me., should have stated that the persons who were responsible for this situation were so-called "Sanfordites."

Celia A. Wood, daughter of Adelbert Wood, of Chicago Monthly Meeting, has accepted a position as general secretary of the Y. W. C. A. at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., where she will enter upon her new duties about the 1st of Fourth month.

The sale of liquor, which has been one of the great hindrances of the Maxwell, Ind., Friends' Meeting, has been for the present legally abolished, and public sentiment is demanding that the three remaining blind tigers cease business. Attorney W. C. Walburn's services and the Anti-Saloon League lecturers have done much to awake sentiment.

Buffalo Quarterly Meeting was held at Stark, Kansas, the 26th to 28th ult. First-day afternoon session was devoted to a discussion of the subject, "Qualification and Duty of Elders." Much interest was manifest, and many helpful suggestions given. J. Perry Hadley has been visiting the meetings of Buffalo Quarter during Third month.

Isaiah Jay recently held a twelve-days' meeting at West Newton, Ind., within the limits of Western Yearly Meeting. A goodly number was renewed and some additions made to Friends. He attended Spiceland Quarterly Meeting, the 12th inst., and began meetings at Clear Spring in Henry County, Ind., the 13th. The Lord is greatly blessing the work.

Elizabeth G. Underhill has been used of the Lord in holding a series of special meetings at Tillson, N. Y., in Cornwall Quarter. She, in company with the pastor, J. Edw. Ransome, visited nearly every home of Friends in the meeting. There were several who gave their hearts to God for the first time. Several backsliders were reclaimed, some were sanctified and believers were much strengthened. Thirty-one in all professed to be definitely blessed. The meetings continued nineteen days, and closed the 17th instant.

James Wood, of Mt. Kisco, N. Y., has received a very pleasant honor. He has been unanimously chosen by the Republicans of his Congressional District as their candidate for Presidential elector. It will perhaps be remembered that Whittier was chosen Presidential elector in the Blaine campaign.

The young people of Upland Monthly Meeting, Upland, Ind., organized a Christian Endeavor Society the 15th inst., with 41 members. The pastor in the meeting recently closed a series of meetings at Walnut Creek, a place about two and a half miles from Upland, with 17 professed conversions and renewals, and 16 who have made application for membership.

After extensive travels in the South and Central West, studying our American penal system, Edward Grubb returned to Philadelphia, where he had much religious service. His addresses and his messages have come to us in freshness and with power. His visit has been a memorable one, and our only regret has been that he has not been physically stronger to bear the strain of the work which has been laid upon him. He sails for England this week from Boston.

Simon Hadley, of whose death mention is made in this issue, was the father of Martha E. Hadley, who has labored as missionary in Kotzebue, Alaska. She arrived home First month 15th, after an absence of nearly five years, and found her father apparently as well as usual, and no one guessed that his end was near. It is a source of comfort to her friends, and they are thankful to "Him who directeth our steps" that Martha Hadley was spared to reach home and be with him in his last moments.

The advance party for the Friends' colony near Battleford, in the Canadian Northwest, expect to leave Toronto about the 5th or 6th of Fourth month, and will probably be at Battleford about the 15th. All parties wishing to be there in time to inspect the land before selections are made should plan to be at Battleford about that time. Those who are bringing in car-loads of settlers' effects should plan to have their cars arrive at Saskatoon by the 25th of Fourth month, if possible, and all parties wishing to put in a crop this year should plan to be on their locations about the first week in Fifth month.

About six months ago a swarm of bees took up their abode in the tower of the Friends' Meeting House in Gibara, Cuba, and set busily to work, carrying all their sweets in through a knot-hole, which was the only opening in the tower. Some of the Christian Endeavor Society that meets there decided to investigate. Thirty-seven pounds of nice honey was the prize. One of the Endeavorers set out to sell on the streets, with the nicer pieces arranged in squares in a tray on his head, according to Cuban custom. The rest was sold as strained honey, the comb made into beeswax, and altogether a neat little sum was realized from the sale, which the Endeavorers applied to the support of their mission and other enterprises of their society. The "little busy bees" are much in favor with them for this timely financial aid.

Marion, Ind., Quarterly Meeting was held the 11th to 13th inst. The meeting on Ministry and Oversight was not well attended, many being kept at home by ill health. No visiting Friends were present. On Seventh-day J. O. Binford, Yearly Meeting Superintendent; Arthur L. Casey, from Clear Creek Monthly Meeting, and Gurney H. Dicks and Louisa Rush, of Fairmount, Ind., all took some part in the devotional services. J. O. Binford preached. Pleasant Plain Monthly Meeting, composed of Pleasant Plain and Milo Meetings, which had been established for five years, was discontinued for the reason that Pleasant Plain Meeting had not sufficient unity with it to help maintain it. The next quarterly meeting will be held at Sycamore, Howard County, Ind., except that the meeting on Ministry and Oversight on Sixth-day will be held at Marion.

Judge George Gray, the well-known jurist and former Senator from Delaware, will be the presiding officer at the coming conference on International Arbitration to be held at Lake Mohonk, N. Y., the first week in Sixth month. Judge Gray's identification with several famous arbitral bodies gives him special qualifications for presiding over such an important gathering as the conference at Lake Mohonk. He was a member of the Peace Commission in Paris in 1898, and became a member of the Joint High Commission at Quebec in the same year. In 1900 he was appointed as one of the four American representatives in the International Court of Arbitration at The Hague. Two years ago he was chosen president of the Anthracite Strike Commission, and in that capacity had a conspicuous part in settling the great conflict in the coal regions. At the recent conference in Washington looking to the negotiation of an arbitration treaty with Great Britain Judge Gray was present and took a prominent part in the proceedings.

Murray S. Kenworthy, pastor in Friends' Meeting, Kokomo, Ind., is giving a series of weekly lectures on the early history and the causes which led to the organization of the Society of Friends. These services are proving very helpful to the hearers. Interest is manifested by an increased attendance at all the church services, not only by the membership, but by others as well.

The following extract from a private letter from Oakwood Seminary, N. Y., written Third month 14th, is of interest:

"There has been a good degree of interest in the Endeavor and other prayer meetings of late, and last evening one of the young men arose and said he was not a Christian, but wanted to be, and asked us to 'help' him. Soon after another made a similar statement, and two more followed. It seems that nobody in particular had been consciously instrumental in bringing this about, and it was evidently of the Lord. Many tears were shed. After the meeting closed the four young men were invited into the parlor for conversation and prayer, and were followed by one and two at a time, until all the male boarders, except five, and two day students were there. The teachers were melted to tears, and for an hour the young men were instructed, prayed with, and encouraged, until each one seemed to have decided for Christ. At ten o'clock I stepped into the hall, and found several of the girls waiting at the head of the stairs to hear the result. They told me that two of the girls who felt they had for some time been going wrong, had turned over a new leaf and were very happy. From another source it is reported that the small number of young men who were professed Christians began a prayer meeting in one of their private rooms early in the term, which has been growing in interest, and is probably one of the means blessed by the Master in bringing about this good result."

DIED.

AKIN.—At the residence of her nephew, Frederick Stokes, Brooklyn, N. Y., Second month 21st, 1904, Sarah Akin, daughter of the late William and Lydia Moore Akin. Possessing by nature an intellectual and active mind, brought under the government of divine grace, she was qualified to fill the various positions in life to which she was called.

BOSLEY.—At her home near Paoli, Ia., Third month 15th, 1904, Della Stout Bosley, daughter of William and Adaline Stout and wife of Sherman Bosley, aged nearly 34 years. She was converted at the age of 10 and joined the M. E. Church, later uniting with Friends.

BUTLER.—At his home, Damascus, Ohio, Second month 16th, 1904, Benjamin Butler, in the 74th year of his age. He was the son of John and Drusilla Butler, deceased, and a beloved member and elder of Damascus Monthly Meeting. Quiet and unassuming in spirit, yet his life gave forth no uncertain sound for his Saviour.

CAREY.—At his home in Manhattan, Kansas, First month 26th, 1904, Joel T. Carey, aged nearly 72 years. He was a good husband and father, a faithful friend and a consistent Christian. His sorrowing friends have abundant assurance that he has gone from works to reward.

HADLEY.—At his home, near Harveysburg, Ohio, Second month 14th, 1904, Simon Hadley, in his 82d year, a consistent Christian and a member of Miami Monthly Meeting.

HAWKINS.—At her home, near Thorntown, Ind., Second month 16th, 1904, Amy (Hill) Hawkins, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Kendall (widow of Joseph Hill), aged 80 years. She was a lifelong member with Friends, mostly in Sugar Plain Monthly Meeting.

LEWIS.—At his home, Oskaloosa, Iowa, Third month 2d, 1904, Enoch Lewis, M.D., son of Jehu and Hannah (Foulke) Lewis, nearly 66 years of age. He was for many years practicing physician in Marshall County, Iowa, and a valued member of Albion Monthly Meeting and Bangor Quarterly Meeting.

RICH.—At his home, Hubbard, Iowa, Second month 28th, 1904, Joseph Floyd, the third son of Isaac N. and Emma J. Rich, in his 16th year. With his quiet, unassuming manner and unselfish nature, his was a beautiful Christian life.

THOMPSON.—Near Paoli, Ia., Third month 20th, 1904, Rachel, daughter of David and Melinda Thompson, nearly 64 years of age. She was an earnest Christian from her childhood.

WHITE.—At the home of her son, John O. White, near Hartford, N. C., Third month 2d, 1904, Mary R. White, in the 80th year of her age. She was a lifelong member of Piney Woods Monthly Meeting of Friends, and for many years an elder of the meeting.

Events and Comments.

The marking of the boundary line of Southeastern Alaska in accordance with the award of the Joint High Commission in London last Tenth month will begin early this summer. There are about 600 miles of the line to be marked.

The management of the St. Louis Fair on First month 31st had spent $14,474,368; and, if the balance due on contracts already made had been included, the total disbursements would have been, on that date, $16,683,529. These figures reveal the magnitude of the exposition, for the sixteen millions have been spent merely in preparing for the great show of the year.

The recent action of the British House of Commons in adopting by an overwhelming vote, 182 to 68, a resolution in favor of allowing women to vote for parliamentary candidates was cheered in the Italian Chamber of Deputies. The subject was introduced in a brief speech by Signor Rossi, congratulating the House of Commons on its step toward granting the suffrage to women.

DOCTOR DID IT.

Put on Thirty-six Pounds by Food.

Feed a physician back to health and he gains an experience that he can use to benefit others. For this reason Grape-Nuts food is daily recommended to patients by hundreds of physicians who have cured themselves of stomach trouble. One doctor says:

"Although a physician and trying to aid and assist my fellow-beings to enjoy good health it must be admitted I formerly did not enjoy the best of health myself. In January, 1899, I only weighed 119 pounds. At this time I was living in the Ohio valley, and began to think I had about seen my best days. One day about three years ago I had an opportunity to try Grape-Nuts food for my breakfast. I liked it so well that I ate three teaspoonfuls three times a day, and have regularly used it up to the present time, and I now weigh 155, a gain of 36 pounds, and enjoy the best of health.

"Not only has Grape-Nuts made this wonderful change in me, but through it I have helped my friends, relatives and patients. The sustaining power of this food is simply wonderful.

"I have one patient who is a section hand on the C. & O. R. R., who eats nothing in the morning but four tablespoonfuls of Grape-Nuts, and yet does his very hard work up to lunch time and enjoys the best of health and strength.

"I could name a great many cases like this, and I still prescribe Grape-Nuts in my practice every day." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Ask any physician about the scientific principles on which Grape-Nuts food is made. He'll tell you the principles are perfect.

Then a 10 days' trial proves that the principles are carried out in the food ("all the good of the grains so treated that anyone can digest it all"). Shown in renewed physical strength and brain energy.

"There's a reason."

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

Apparently Austria-Hungary thinks that a heavy drain of the population through emigration to the United States is a matter to be encouraged. Its government has offered a subsidy of $100,000 a year to the Cunard Company, under which the company is to send its Mediterranean liners to the port of Fiume, Austria, in a fortnightly service. This is a principal outlet for the very heavy Hungarian emigration to the United States, and the subsidy arrangement will have the effect of increasing and cheapening emigration facilities.

John Alexander Dowie, who is now in Australia, is meeting with less success even than he did in New York-city. He is fast becoming the laughing stock of the people. The "Congregationalist," in commenting upon the matter, says: "The general feeling of those without any personal bias is one of amazement that a man with no great powers of speech, and of personal appearance more comical than imposing, should have made such claims, and of still greater amazement that so many people in America should have accepted them."

The Department of Commerce and Labor, through the Bureau of Corporations, is making an investigation into the operations of the Beef Trust. The department officials will ascertain, if possible, the cause of the difference between the price of live and dressed beef. This is the first investigation of the kind undertaken by any branch of the government, and it is made for one reason—to test the power of the Bureau of Corporations under the law. Western stockmen believe that they are being discriminated against by the trust, and the markets of the country are being manipulated to their detriment.

There will be less railroad building in the country this year than last. According to the "Railway Age," of Chicago, some 6,908 miles of new road are under contract or construction, compared with 8,500 miles at this time last year. The end of last year showed that about 68 per cent. of the 8,500 miles, or 5,786 miles, were actually built; and if the same proportion of actual to contracted construction is maintained this year, the amount of steam road extension will be only about 4,700 miles. We may venture the guess that the construction of electric railways will fall off to a greater extent than this.

It is expected that the new treaty regulating the admission of Chinese into the United States, now in preparation, will permit certain Chinamen, not of the coolie class, who are now excluded, to enter the country. Under the existing Exclusion law, Chinese laborers are prohibited from coming to or remaining in the United States. Registered Chinese laborers may leave the country and return to it, under certain conditions, and Chinese officials, teachers, students, merchants and travelers may come into the country when properly certified. The law has been strictly construed by the Attorney-General, who ruled that not all Chinese persons might enter the country who were not specifically forbidden, but that only those are entitled to enter who are expressly permitted to do so. The ruling excluded traders, salesmen, buyers, bookkeepers, accountants, managers, storekeepers, interpreters, physicians and agents, against whom the Exclusion law was not particularly directed.

IT IS A MATTER OF HEALTH

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

The classes excluded by the rulings are numerous, and the new treaty may provide for the admission of some of them.

An order has been issued by Pension Commissioner Ware and approved by Secretary of the Interior Hitchcock, which virtually places a pension of at least $6 a month within reach of all old soldiers who served in the Northern army during the Rebellion, provided they care for it and are 62 years old or over. The order is based upon an interpretation of an act of Sixth month, 1890, but the action is severely criticized from several quarters, since it seems to be a step toward the centralization of power in the executive to the disparagement of Congress. It is doubtful whether the courts would sustain the decision, but the nature of the case excludes the likelihood of its ever being brought up for their decision.

DIET AND DOCTORS.

That the value of diet in connection with medicine is fully appreciated by medical men as a preventive and aid in treatment of disease is daily evidenced by the call from the profession and from intelligent laymen for really hygienic foods. The popularity of the idea spread when the public realized that they could diet and yet not deprive themselves of palatable food.

Among the most delicious table delicacies obtainable are the cereal products of Farwell & Rhines, of Watertown, N. Y. The entire capacity of their mills is devoted to the production of health foods. Among these are Gluten Flour, for Dyspepsia; Special Diabetic Food for Diabetes; K. C. Whole Wheat Flour, for Constipation, while Gluten Grits and Barley Crystals are the most delicious of cereal breakfast foods.

Their pamphlet, giving full information regarding their various foods, together with samples of the same, will be sent free to anyone interested. Send for it. Physicians are specially invited to request samples for themselves or their patients.

The British Friend

Published on the 15th of each month.

Being the only religious and literary review written chiefly for the general public, but from the standpoint of the Society of Friends, The British Friend offers a unique opportunity for spreading "The Truth" among thoughtful enquirers.

The March issue contains:

- "The Life of the Spirit," III. By D. Macfadyen, M. A.
- "The Church and the Social Problem." By Percy Alden (Secretary of Friends' Union for Social Study).
- "Review of George Fox." By Rufus Jones, M. A. (Professor of Philosophy in Haverford College).
- "A Friends' Meeting." By Henry Bryan Binns.
- "The Yearly Meeting and Education." By J. F. Mather.
- "Moral Restoration." (A Visit to Elmira.) By the Editor.

A distinct feature is made of Reviews and Notices of Books, especially such as are likely to be helpful to preachers and social workers.

Subscription: 6s. 6d. ($1.58) per annum, post free

A specimen copy may be obtained by sending 14 cents in stamps to Henry N. Hoxie, Book Department, Strawbridge & Clothier, Philadelphia.

Editor and Publisher:

EDWARD GRUBB, M.A.

Devonshire Chambers Bishopsgate, Without, Lon. E. C.

And judge none lost; but wait and see,
With hopeful pity, not disdain;
The depth of the abyss may be
The measure of the height of pain
And love and glory that may raise
This soul to God in after days.
—Adelaide Proctor.

OLD POINT COMFORT, RICHMOND AND WASHINGTON.

Six-day Tour via Pennsylvania Railroad.

The second personally-conducted tour to Old Point Comfort, Richmond and Washington via the Pennsylvania Railroad for the present season will leave New York and Philadelphia on Saturday, March 26th.

Tickets, including transportation, meals en route in both directions, transfers of passengers and baggage, hotel accommodations at Old Point Comfort, Richmond and Washington, and carriage ride about Richmond—in fact, every necessary expense for a period of six days—will be sold at rate of $36.00 from New York, Brooklyn and Newark; $34.50 from Trenton; $33.00 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other stations.

OLD POINT COMFORT ONLY.

Tickets to Old Point Comfort only, including luncheon on going trip, one and three-fourths days' board at Chamberlin Hotel, and good to return direct by regular trains within six days, will be sold in connection with this tour at rate of $17.00 from New York, Brooklyn and Newark; $15.50 from Trenton; $14.50 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other points.

For itineraries and full information apply to ticket agents; Tourist Agent, 263 Fifth Avenue, New York; 4 Court Street, Brooklyn; 789 Broad Street, Newark, N. J., or George W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

G. Campbell Morgan's many American friends are somewhat disturbed lest he will return to England and take up work in London. He has received a call to Westminster Chapel, in the very heart of the English metropolis. He expects to sail for Europe the 14th of Fifth month, and in the meantime is holding his final decision in abeyance.

HOW TO REACH THE HEART OF A BOY.

Study his parentage and home influences.

Observe closely his likes and dislikes, aptitudes, temper, companions, reading.

Converse often with him in a friendly way.

Ask as to his purposes and ambitions. Lend him books.

Interest yourself in his sports.

Speak to him of the lessons in the lives of good men.

Tell him of your own struggles in boyhood or girlhood under adverse circumstances.

In brief, be his friend; when he leaves school and neighborhood, keep informed as to his whereabouts by correspondence. —"Western School Journal."

THE MOTHER'S FRIEND

when nature's supply fails, is Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk. It is a cow's milk adapted to infants, according to the highest scientific methods. An infant fed on Eagle Brand will show a steady gain in weight.

Acker has it—that Walnut Molasses Candy.

Established 1860

150 Varieties

Esterbrook's Steel Pens

Sold Everywhere

The Best Pens Made

One of Our Customers says:

"You do such clean pretty work. The printing on my envelopes is like engraved work."

We make a specialty of printing stationery (envelopes, letter-heads, bill-heads, etc.) which don't cost as much as engraved work but looks almost as good.

THE LEEDS & BIDDLE CO., Inc.

Makers of the Better Kind of Printing
Phones 1019-21 Market-Street, Phila.

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE.

Sifts the flour and mixes 10 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for booklet. Agents wanted.

Scientific Bread Mach. Co.
(CYRUS CHAMBERS, Jr.)
52d & Media Sts., Philadelphia

I am proud of my lamp-chimneys. I put my name on them.

MACBETH.

How to take care of lamps, including the getting of right-shape chimneys, is in my Index; sent free.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

A partnership with God is motherhood,
What strength, what purity, what self-control,
What love, what wisdom, should belong to her
Who helps God fashion an immortal soul!

—Selected.

"NICE" PAINTS

Painting the House or Outbuilding is an expensive necessity, and an operation that oftentimes must be repeated—all too often in these times of cheap material.

Remember it costs no more for labor to put on the kind of Paint that lasts than the kind that don't, and very little more for the material itself.

WRITE US ABOUT THE
KIND THAT LASTS

EUGENE E. NICE

Nos. 272-274 So. Second St.
PHILADELPHIA

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a.

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hôte, 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p.m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cts. per night; $3 per week.

Two occupants, 50 cts. each, per night.
2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL

Phone Spruce 33-55. Clerk.

FINANCIAL.

FOR SALE

$10,000—5 per cent. Gold First Mortgage Electric Light Bonds at 100 and interest. $5,000—5 per cent. Gold First Mortgage Warehouse Bonds at 102½ and interest. $5,000—5 per cent. Gold First Mortgage Guaranteed Gas Bonds at 100 and interest. $10,000—5 per cent. Gold First Mortgage Guaranteed Street Railway Bonds at 100 and interest.

HOWARD M. SWAB,
Member Philadelphia Stock Exchange,
Room 61, Main Floor, Bourse.

6% to 7% Choice First Mortgage Loans, Seattle and vicinity. Local and N. Y. references. Established 1887. Correspondence Solicited. JAMES BOTHWELL, Seattle, Washington.

Mortgages Net 6% in North Dakota.

I place mortgages on land covering about one-third its value. The value of this land is constantly increasing.

I know every mortgagor personally, know his land, his integrity, his habits and his ability to pay.

These combine to make me certain that these mortgages are as safe as GOVERNMENT BONDS.

Investigate me. You can't make the investigation too rigid to suit me. I'll stand it.

I've been in this business for 18 years, and never lost a cent for a customer, nor foreclosed a mortgage.

I collect the interest and principal without charge and remit in New York exchange. Write to me for further information.

WALTER L. WILLIAMSON

Investment Banker

Lisbon North Dakota

GET THE BEST

WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

English Biography Geography Fiction, Etc.

25,000 NEW WORDS, Etc.

New Gazetteer of the World

With over 25,000 entries based on the latest census.

New Biographical Dictionary

Over 10,000 names of noted persons, birth, death, etc.

Edited by W. T. HARRIS, Ph.D., LL.D.,
United States Commissioner of Education.

New Plates. 2380 Quarto Pages.

Rich Bindings. 5000 Illustrations.

Should be in Every

Home, School, and Office

Also Webster's Collegiate Dictionary with 1100 pages, 1400 Illustrations. Size: 7x10x2½ in.

A Special Thin Paper Edition

Printed from the same plates as regular edition. It has limp covers and round corners. Size: 6½x8½x1½ in.

FREE, "A Test in Pronunciation," instructive and entertaining. Also illustrated pamphlets.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO.,

Publishers, Springfield, Mass.

BETTER live rich than die rich. Many who skimp themselves would live rich if they had a good policy of life insurance. Particulars free. No importunity.

PENN MUTUAL LIFE

921-3-5 Chestnut Street.

S. F. BALDERSTON'S SON

Wall Paper and
Decorations

Window Shades Made to Order

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILA.

JOSEPH G. FOGG
UNDERTAKER AND EMBALMER

S. W. Cor. Sixteenth and Race Sts.

Phone Spruce 44-38-W. PHILADELPHIA.

Suburban orders promptly attended.

WALKING SKIRTS

AT POPULAR PRICES

These three numbers show that a Walking Skirt need not be at all expensive to be stylish, up-to-date and in good taste. We have quite a good many handsome spring styles at the following popular prices. Lots of women buy two or three of them, which, with as many shirt waists, will give several combinations:

At $4.00 — WOMEN'S WALKING SKIRTS—of light-weight melton, in blue, black or brown; seven-gore, full flare, cluster of pinch tucks on each seam; yoke effect; finished with covered buttons.

At $5.00 — WOMEN'S WALKING SKIRTS—of gray mixed homespun; seven-gore, full flare, strapping of same material on front gore, going into a point at the bottom, and finished with tabs and buttons—an entirely new effect.

At $6.50 — WOMEN'S WALKING SKIRTS—of unfinished worsted in black or blue mixture; seven-gore, with lapped stitched seams, strapping of cloth at hips, and same effect around bottom with a pretty flare; very light in weight, and gracefully shaped.

STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER

PHILADELPHIA

The
NEW

Crimson Rambler "Philadelphia"

Pronounced by experts to be "the most magnificent Crimson Climbing Rose in existence." It is a descendant of the Old Crimson Rambler, but far finer and better in every way.

The plants are hardy as oaks and will grow 10 to 15 feet in a season. A prodigious bloomer, often 15,000 to 20,000 blossoms on a single plant by actual count. The effect is dazzling and beautiful beyond description.

For making Rose arbors, screens or hedges "Philadelphia" is unsurpassed. For training up the side of a porch it is "ideal." We are the introducers of this beautiful rose, and now have splendid plants in all sizes.

PRICES.

Pot. (One year at $5.00 each; 10 for $2.00, postpaid Plants (Two " " 500 " 10 " 4.00, express.

Extra Size Field Grown Dormant Plants.

Before shipping these we trim them back to proper size for planting.

2 to 3 ft. at 75c each 5 for $3.00, express.

8 " 4 " " $1.00 " 5 " 4.00 "

4 " 5 " " 1.50 " 5 " 6.00 "

Send for Special Prices in large quantities; also our New Floral Guide, 136 pages, telling all about roses and 400 other choice plants. Free.

THE CONARD & JONES COMPANY,
Box X, West Grove, Pa.

"Growers of the Best Roses in America."

JUST ISSUED!

Devotional Songs

Edited by three famous composers and compilers.

DOANE, KIRKPATRICK and MAINE

One-half new songs that will never grow old. One-half old songs that will always be new. $25 per 100; 30c. per copy, postpaid. A returnable copy for examination will be sent on request.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York—Chicago

OLD-FASHIONED grandfather clocks repaired at home. If yours needs attention send me a postal or, better, call. My store is within three minutes' walk of the Market Street ferries. Repairing of clocks and watches of every kind. Prompt service and moderate prices. W. L. Berry, Watchmaker and Jeweler, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

DREER'S Garden Book for 1904

should be in the hands of every lover of flowers, grower of vegetables, and farmer in the country. Contains 208 pages and six high-class full page colored plates, illustrating Hardy Chrysanthemums, Asters, Poppies, Garden Pinks and Vegetables. Full of valuable cultural information and hints on the beautifying of the home, garden and surroundings.

Sent by mail to any address on receipt of 20c in stamps or silver. With each copy we send free one package each, Dreer's Superb Branching Asters, Fringed Japanese Pinks and Select Shirley Poppies.

HENRY A. DREER,

714 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

The American Friend

Vol. XI

FOURTH MONTH 7, 1904

No. 14

	PAGE
EDITORIALS.—The Signs of the Coming of the Kingdom of Heaven.—Preserve the Family Home.—Editorial Notes	223-224
Worship a Lost Art A. F. Swift.	225
Texts That Have Helped and Comforted Me Theodore L. Cuyler.	226
God's Slow Making of Us	227
The Mystery of Life and the Easter Revelation	228
Passing the Golden Milestone	229
Mary Brownell	229
SOME VIEWS ON PRESENT TOPICS: The Pastoral Work of a Congregation Isaac Sharpless.	230
TEMPERANCE DEPARTMENT	230
THE INTERNATIONAL LESSON Lesson for Fourth month 17, 1904.	233
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR Topic for Fourth month 17, 1904.	234
MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT	234
CORRESPONDENCE	235
THINGS OF INTEREST AMONG OURSELVES,	236
EVENTS AND COMMENTS	238

THE SEPULCHER IN THE GARDEN.

*Joseph of Arimathea little thought,
When he the tomb within his garden wrought,
The very spot that seemed for sorrow meet
Would sometime prove most joyful and most sweet!*

*So may the darkest place in all my lot
Prove but my spirit's resurrection spot,
And what I laid away with tears and sighs
Divine and glorious from the grave-clothes rise.*

—James Buckham.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.50 A YEAR * * * PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
AMERICAN FRIEND PUBLISHING COMPANY, 718 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA

EDUCATIONAL.

EARLHAM COLLEGE, RICHMOND, INDIANA

Prof. Elbert Russell offers courses regularly in Kings, New Testament Times, Life of Christ, The Apostolic Age, Church History, New Testament Literature, Romans, John, Biblical Literature, Isaiah. Prof. Cyrus W. Hodgkin, The Protestant Reformation.

Prof. Anna M. Demaree, New Testament, Greek. Asst. Prof. Lindley, History of the Hebrews. Pres. Kelly, History of Philosophy, Ethics, Psychology.

The Oakwood Seminary

UNION SPRINGS, N. Y.

Founded in 1798.

A boarding school for boys and girls under the care of New York Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Academic, College Preparatory and Commercial

Spring term begins Fourth month 5, 1904

SAMUEL H. HODGIN, Principal.

LINDLEY M. STEVENS, Superintendent.

STENOGRAPHING, TYPEWRITING and MIMEOGRAPHING. Prices moderate.

MARY M. KITE

407 Lippincott Building, 12th and Filbert Sts., Phila.

Phone No. 3-33-00

STENOGRAPHER

GEO. B. COCK

Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter Street.

Telephones.

GO SOUTH OR SOUTHWEST

via the Seaboard Air Line Ry. Two daily trains from Washington with Pullman Sleepers and a la carte Dining Cars. The best service to Atlanta, Birmingham, New Orleans, Savannah, Jacksonville and Tampa. For Industrial, Resort or Manatee booklets, address W. E. Conklyn, General Agent, 1411 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER.—Careful and accurate repairing, with prompt service, has brought me the custom of many Friends. Their patronage is particularly solicited. My store is nearest to the Market Street ferries, and is easy of access from every part of the city. W. L. Berry, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

We particularly invite the attention of the readers of "The American Friend" to this column. It will be found useful for almost everyone who wishes to advertise. The cost is 5c. per line each insertion. No advertisement is accepted for less than 25c. Cash with order.

FRIEND! Here's a message for thee. The "Friend" Mfg. Co., Gasport, N. Y., would like to send one of their catalogs of Spraying Outfits. Will thee ask for it?

EUROPE—$170.—Select tour 41 days. Best class on steamers. Great success. Fourth year. Longer tours at higher prices. Apply at once. Levi D. Temple, Flemington, N. J.

INDIANA YEARLY MEETING OF FRIENDS, 1844. is the title of a very instructive picture drawn by Marcus Mote. In the foreground is a group of the old-time Friends in their queer garb, while in the background stands the plain meeting-house, surrounded with trees and numerous vehicles. An excellent half-tone copy on enameled paper, 6x10 inches. Postpaid, 5c. each, 50 cents per dozen. THE AMERICAN FRIEND, 718 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

WANTED.—A thousand families of "Friends" and others to come west and buy land in Woods county, Oklahoma, while you can get good farms at half their value. Rich valley land near Friends' meeting, Stella Academy, railroad and good market. In the great wheat and alfalfa belt, and fruit in abundance, the best part of Oklahoma. Warm, healthy climate, with splendid society. Write us for circulars and price lists. References, Pastor "Friends" Church, First National Bank of Cherokee. Very truly, VOTAW and SETZER, "Friends."

OLD-FASHIONED grandfather clocks repaired at home. If yours needs attention send me a postal or, better, call. My store is within three minutes' walk of the Market Street ferries. Repairing of clocks and watches of every kind. Prompt service and moderate prices. W. L. Berry, Watchmaker and Jeweler, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

Christ would still seek the lost, but He must do it now on our feet; He would still minister, but He must do it with our hands. He would still warn and comfort and encourage and instruct, but He must do it with our lips. If we refuse to perform these offices for Him, what right have we to call ourselves members of His body in vital union with Him?—J. Strong.

S. F. BALDERSTON'S SON

Wall Paper and Decorations

Window Shades Made to Order

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILA.

WANTED

back numbers and volumes of

American Friend
Western Friend
Friends' Review
Gospel Expositor
Christian Worker
Western Work
Nebraska Friend

Also books, tracts, documents, bearing on Friends during the nineteenth century. Communicate with

ALLEN C. THOMAS,
Haverford, Pa.

JOSEPH B. SCATTERGOOD
House and Sign Painter
313 South 5th St., Philadelphia

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE.

Sifts the flour and mixes 20 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CYRUS CHAMBERS, Jr.) 52d & Media Sts., Philadelphia

WILLIAM S. YARNALL
Manufacturing OPTICIAN

118 S. FIFTEENTH ST., PHILA.
4th Door Below Chestnut St.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

Magazine and Newspaper Ad. Setting

(For advertisers)

If you wish a well-designed and well-set advertisement for magazine or newspaper, ask us to help you out. We have the type, the knowledge and the facilities to do the work properly. Proper type display is a grand supplement to honest, convincing text.

THE LEEDS & BIDDLE CO., Inc.
Makers of the Better Kind of Printing
1019-21 Market Street, Phila

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA. Office, 409 CHESTNUT STREET

CAPITAL, $1,000,000

ASSETS, $63,970,335.34

Surplus and Undivided Profits, belonging to Stockholders 4,026,181.15

Surplus, belonging to Insurance Account 5,635,620.25

Incorporated Third month 22, 1865. Charter Perpetual.

INSURES LIVES, GRANTS ANNUITIES, RECEIVES MONEY ON DEPOSIT, returnable on demand for which interest is allowed.

And is empowered by law to act as EXECUTOR ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, GUARDIAN, ASSIGNEE, COMMITTEE, RECEIVER, AGENT, etc.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the assets of the Company.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.

BOXES $5 AND UPWARDS

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY, President.

T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-Prest.
ASA S. WING, Vice-President.
JOS. ASHBROOK, Man. Ins. Dept.
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer.

J. R. FOULKE, Trust Officer.

DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary.

J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Assistant Trust Officer

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary.

DIRECTORS:

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY,
T. WISTAR BROWN,
HENRY HAINES,
RICHARD WOOD,
CHAS. HARTSHORN,

ASA S. WING,
PHILIP C. GARRETT,
JAMES V. WATSON,
WM. LONGSTRETH,
THOS. SCATTERGOOD,

J. PRESTON THOMAS,
ROBERT M. JANNEY,
MARRIOTT C. MORRIS,
FRANK H. TAYLOR,
JOSEPH B. TOWNSEND, Jr.

EMINENT PHYSICIANS
throughout the world recommend

QUINA-LAROCHE

AS A SPECIFIC IN CASES OF
ANAEMIA, COLDS, LA GRIPE,
SLOW CONVALESCENCE,
STOMACH TROUBLES,
TYPHOID and MALARIAL
FEVERS.

E. Fougere & Co., 30 N. William St., N. Y.

The American Friend

*"Truth is the highest thing a man may keep."
"That they all may be one."*

VOL. XI.

PHILADELPHIA, FOURTH MONTH 7, 1904.

No. 14.

THE SIGNS OF THE COMING OF THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN.

How shall we know when the kingdom has come, and what are the signs of its coming? These are questions which the disciples themselves asked at various times of their Master. One of His most remarkable answers was, "Where the carcass is, there are the vultures (or the eagles) gathered together." (Matt. 24: 28.) This is one of those strange, puzzling proverbs which Christ was fond of using, and which condenses a whole system of truth into a single sentence. The difficulty is to think through the words to the meaning which lies back of them and to grasp the idea which He wished to suggest.

Vultures are nature's scavengers. Wherever there are decaying bodies, corrupting the air, there are vultures to turn the dead and corrupting body over into new forms of life. Let us look a little further at the great scavenger processes of the world. They are everywhere to be found, in forms gigantic or microscopic. We often wonder why a good God made microbes. Well, if He had not there would be no men to live in His fair world. This invisible army of microbes, which no man can number, ceaselessly fights for us against corruption and pestilence. Most microbes are beneficent. Wherever anything is dying or decaying, there the tents of this army are pitched, and the noiseless work of cleansing the world goes on. They transform dead particles into living cells and change the deadly poisons into life. Without them the earth would be covered deep with fetid matter, and the world would be turned into a charnel house. Every mosquito that rises up from the marsh carries off in his marvelous little body some of the poison of the marsh. His music annoys us, but he has a function to fulfill, and he is doing what he can to sweeten the world. Nature won't let the world corrupt. She has a million devices for purifying it and of turning death over into new life. Every blade of grass helps in this work. Look at an old rotten log or stump and you will find it furnishing sustenance to multitudinous forms of life on the inside and on the outside. Every bit of the old log which can be utilized is being transmuted into new life, and what she cannot use this way she slowly burns up with her oxygen, so that in the midst of a dying world there is always life and health and sweetness.

Now this is all a parable of the kingdom of God! He that hath eyes to see let him see. What, we ask again, is the evidence that the kingdom is coming? Why, wherever you see the good rising up in a life and the evil being weakened; wherever you see moral and spiritual life purging away corrupt customs and vicious systems; wherever a sinner is being changed into a saint; wherever the life of God is consuming any forms of evil, there is the kingdom. It may be and often is as silent as the growing of the grass. The stupendous forces of the world are not lightning and earthquake, but those slower processes which make the earth over and which repair during the warm days of spring all the wreckage of a long winter. Again and again it has happened that one man with a genuine love in his heart has transformed an entire neighborhood, with no forces but just this quiet power of love. Old prejudices capitulated before him. Long-standing evil customs gave way to him. Hostile families became united, and the spirit of brotherhood and co-operation spread by a wholesome contagion. That is the way the kingdom of heaven comes.

As we have seen, men in Christ's day were forever asking for "signs" of the kingdom. They wanted Him to prove His spiritual authority and power by some astonishing miracle. This he refused to grant. A moment's thought makes one see why he refused. No such "sign" can be given. No "wonder" worked in the physical world could prove or verify a spiritual fact. The only "signs" there could be would be transformed lives like those of John and Peter and Paul and Mary Magdalene. They are "signs" of the kingdom of a much higher sort than changing stones to bread or water to wine ever could be. That is what Christ meant when He said there should no "sign" be given, but the sign of Jonah the prophet, for the men of Nineveh repented under his preaching. In short, the only true "sign" is transformation of life. The proof that the kingdom of heaven is coming will always be the exhibition of Christ's Spirit through men like us.

PRESERVE THE FAMILY HOME.

THE Inter-church Conference which was held in New York city on the 23d of last month was the most important gathering of the representatives of the Protestant Churches since the Ecumenical Conference on Foreign Missions. The purpose of the conference was to devise some method of remedying the looseness of the present divorce and marriage regulations. There were representatives of twelve denominations, and they spoke with one voice against the growing evil of divorce. They went farther; they resolved to make a vigorous appeal to the public in the name of the Church asking for a co-operation of all the moral forces in the nation against existing laxity of divorce laws. They went still farther. They called upon all ministers of every denomination to refuse to re-marry any divorced persons whose divorce would not be sanctioned by the Christian Church.

This is a beginning of a movement in the Christian Church which promises to grow into a powerful force for purity of family life. But the difficulty lies much deeper than these good resolutions indicate. There must be more care about first marriage. Friends have treated marriage as one of the most solemn and sacred steps in the entire life. They have made it one of the most religious acts of man. They have endeavored to help their members see the holy significance of two souls becoming one flesh, and they have done what could be done to keep them from ever looking upon marriage as a method of satisfying passion.

How can this wreck of home life be avoided if persons rush into marriage with low purposes in the thought and with little or no conception of the holy meaning of union? A marriage which begins as a convenience must sooner or later end in failure and wreck. The work of the Church lies far back of refusal to remarry divorced persons—though that is better than nothing; it must impress its members, young and old, with the glory of the home life and with the sacramental character of the marriage union. It must raise the standard of marriage, and in some way to bring the ideal of the Church more forcibly home to those who are forming the ties which end in marriage.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

FRIENDS in Philadelphia are arranging to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the erection of the Yearly Meeting House at Fourth and Arch Streets, by meetings on the premises on the afternoon and evening of Fifth-day, the second of Sixth month next. It is expected that historical papers of value will be read at both sessions, and that many Friends from the country will also attend the morning meeting for worship at that place. A formal announcement, including the names of those who will prepare the several papers, will be ready in about a fortnight.

UNDER the direction of George Cadbury an exhaustive study of the "Religious Life of London" has been made. The results of this study have recently been published in a great book bearing the title, "The Religious Life of London," edited by R. Mudie-Smith. We hope to give a review of the conclusions at a future time. The statistics of attendance of Friends at the meetings in London are not very inspiring. There are twenty-four Friends' meetings in Greater London, and the total attendance on First-day morning is 952. Nine of these meetings have evening meeting for worship, held on the same basis as the morning meeting, with a total attendance of 236. At ten of the meeting places mission meetings are held in the evening, and these are attended by 3,192 persons.

Good news has just come in from North Carolina. In the face of many difficulties the debt of $27,000 on Guilford College has been canceled. We have had a succession, during the last two years, of debt-raising. This last attempt has required very strenuous efforts, and the success yields corresponding joy. The Baltimore fire was a serious set-back, as Baltimore Friends were deeply interested in the undertaking and would have materially aided in its realization. But suddenly they found themselves almost overwhelmed with home problems and home calls. Allen Jay, however, is not easily beaten, and he worked at this task with all the energy of a young man attacking his first difficulty, and victory crowns his work. Everybody will be thankful that this splendid institution, which is devoted to the best interests of the Church, is now free of debt.

The abiding presence of God is the heritage of every child of God. The Father never hides his face from His child. Sin hides it and unbelief hides it; but the Father lets His love shine all day.—Andrew Murray.

I expect to pass through this world but once. Any good thing, therefore, that I can do, or any kindness that I can show to any fellow-creature, let me do it now. Let me not defer or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again.—Edward Courtnay.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

WORSHIP A LOST ART

BY A. F. SWIFT.

A minister told me the following: "A young preacher remarked before several others, 'I never could understand why anybody should come to hear me preach,' to whom an older minister replied, 'Perhaps it never occurred to the brother that some might come to worship Almighty God.'"

Is the young minister alone in his view of what a large proportion of people understand by worship? Condensing the definition of the word as given in the Standard Dictionary, we have this, "An act, or the acts collectively, of homage to the Supreme God, as at a given time and place, such as adoration, thanksgiving, prayer, praise and offering." To how great an extent does this idea of worship occupy the mind of the average church-goer? The old ritual worship of the Israelite pointed the way for the spiritual worship of the Christian. God, adorable, loving, omnipotent, held first place. Thanksgiving, prayer, praise and offerings, were to be presented to Him through the priest, at the appointed time and place. So much attention, however, was paid to the outward details that the inward power came to be lost, and the doctrine from the lips of Jesus, that "neither in this mountain nor yet in Jerusalem," should God be exclusively worshiped, but everywhere in Spirit and in truth, would have sounded as strange to the Jew as to the Samaritan. It is even now one of the most difficult things for many to believe, that worship does not consist in following ceremonies which are the "figures of the true."

The writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews has shown us how the ancient figures have been fulfilled. The High Priest is Jesus, who has offered Himself an offering without spot unto God, and has entered with His own blood into the holiest, having made atonement once for all and obtained eternal redemption for us. He has thus opened up for His people a new and living way, by which we may all enter into the presence of God, presenting without human priestly mediation, our adoration and prayer, thus constituting us, as we are told by John, priests unto God. Paul gives us another beautiful figure. For as the priests of old must all belong to the family of Aaron, so we have been "predestinated unto the adoption of children by Christ Jesus unto God," and become members with Him "of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named."

Not to the ministers alone then, may the worship of the Church be relegated, but each and every Christian has not only his privilege, but his duty to offer unto God through Jesus, his acts of public and private worship. Do we do it? One says: "Let us pray." How many pray beside the minister? Is he even followed with earnestness, and in the hearts of the people is there a responsive call upon the Father to answer the prayer? If in all our congregations there were such spiritual upholding of hands we should not long complain of our leanness.

The definition above quoted places adoration first as an act of worship. We are not accustomed to consider our meeting houses as especially holy, remembering George Fox's denunciation of the application of the word church, applied to a house of bricks and mortar, but we may easily go too far the other way, and forget that every place where God is, is holy. Moses stood in the wilderness field, when the voice out of the fire in the wayside bush told him, "Put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground." And it is not altogether formal when, as in some churches the words are spoken at opening, "The Lord is in His holy temple, let all the earth keep silence before Him." For our blessed Lord gave us His promise, "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them"; and surely, where He is is holy ground. In the model prayer our Lord gave us the first sentiment is adoration, "Hallowed be Thy name." Yet how little time we usually spend in our so-called worship in contemplating the majesty and glory of our God. The Psalmist understood the value of such thought in his worship. "When I consider the heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars which Thou hast ordained." And again, "Even from everlasting to everlasting, Thou art God." We might profitably search the Psalms for examples to guide us in this exalting attribute of worship. Surely it is wisely placed at the front in the definition above referred to.

Next is mentioned thanksgiving. "Oh, give thanks unto the Lord, for He is good," says David. We have read the old parable how two angels went out of the gate of heaven one morning, one with a large basket, in which to bring home the thanksgivings of men for that day, and the other with a little basket in which to bring their prayers: At evening they returned, he with the small basket, laden not only to its capacity, but with bundles and sacks of prayers beside, while the angel with a large one had only a few small thanksgivings in it. Let us try to practice more of this grace in our collective worship, and we shall find ourselves the gainers thereby.

Prayer comes next. But still let us sink ourselves out of sight for a little, while we pray first for the wider interests of God, "Thy kingdom come," and hold our own wills in abeyance, while in submission we say, "Thy will be done." We can hardly think of the greatest men of the past without thinking of the place they held as instruments used by our Lord in working out His designs in the world. We do not think so much of their personal success or failure, in the abstract, as of what God has done through them. It is not of Paul, or of Abraham Lincoln, separate from God, but of these men used of God with such grand results. So God would teach us in our worship that He would have us to understand our mission, and so thinking of it we at once see ourselves "workers together with Him," and that our interests are His, since we have made His our own.

The things we then ask for ourselves will be so clearly seen as the gifts He is more than willing to bestow, that the next step, praise, will follow naturally. Our hymns, many of them, express praise, but too often, occupied with ourselves, they do not express our praise. If our worship has proceeded thus far on these lines, however, our hearts will be ready to make melody with every hymn of praise.

And then comes, in our definition of worship, "offering," last, but not least. Sacrifice and offering were the most prominent rites of the Mosaic worship, but we for a long time dropped offering entirely out of ours, and even now almost look upon it as out of place in meeting. We, of course, have first the spiritual offering to consider, wherein, as our great High Priest offered Himself without spot unto God for us, we are bound to offer ourselves a living sacrifice to Him, for this is "our reasonable service." And this should be definitely done in our worship, not for this hour alone, but from this time forth and forever. But why is not the money offering also a part of worship. It is too often called "collection." It should be "offering." God told the worshipers of old, "Ye shall not come before Me empty." And I am convinced that the money offering has been looked upon too much as a tax, instead of a privilege. In our adoration, thanksgiving, prayer and praise, our Lord has drawn near to us, and has deepened our care for His kingdom. In order that His work may at home and abroad go forward creditably and rapidly, it should be our joy to give back to Him of what He has given us. No one received greater commendation from our Lord than did the poor widow who gave a farthing, which was all that she had. Not entirely foreign after all to the idea of worship was the thought of the shipwrecked sailors, who are said, in their peril, to have asked if either could pray, but finding that neither could proposed taking a collection.

Finally, the greatest results to the Church in all ages have come from its worship. If the sermon be dull it will not seriously affect the true worshiper, and it will likely not be dull if the Church is engaged in true worship, and praying for the messenger and message. Peter's sermon at Pentecost was followed by the conversion of three thousand people, but the descent of the Holy Spirit which inspired the sermon, and who gave the results, was preceded by a ten days' worship of the infant Church. It was in response to adoration and prayer by the united disciples that the place was shaken where they were sitting, and renewed power was given. Paul often preached with power, but it was in answer to prayer and praise, in chains and darkness, that the earthquake shook the prison, and all the bonds were loosed. It was in recognition of the unceasing prayer and worship of the Church that Peter was led out past the sleeping guard by the heavenly officer and given many added years of service. Our Lord Himself, in His earthly life, never was shown to His disciples with such proofs of divinity, even in His wonderful discourses, His works of mercy, nor even in the portents which surrounded the cross, as when worshiping on the mountain they saw Him transfigured with heavenly brightness, and the Father with spoken words acknowledged the Son.

May the Church—may our Church—return to her first love in this regard. May all our people learn to think no time so well spent as that spent in worship. May it become such a second nature to bow before God in united worship that it shall seem a great loss if we are kept from doing so, and we may be very sure God will not withhold His blessing.

Millbrook, N. Y.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

TEXTS THAT HAVE HELPED AND COMFORTED ME.

BY THEODORE L. CUYLER.

Coleridge's remark that "The Bible is the only book that always finds me," has been abundantly verified in the experience of myriads of Christians. Other cisterns of thought run dry; this divine fountain of truth is inexhaustible. For every mood of mind, for every perplexity, every emergency, there is a precious message for us. The Bible of many a veteran Christian has its margins lined with pencil marks against favorite and well-tested texts.

There is one text that has helped me wonderfully; it is that not unfamiliar one in the fifty-fifth Psalm: "Cast thy burden upon the Lord." The Hebrew word translated "burden" signifies that which is given to us to bear. The Psalmist means to say that whatever Providence appoints to us, we must lay it upon the Lord. He has cast the lot for thee; then cast thy lot upon him. It may seem at first sight as if there was a contradiction between this text and that other one, "Every man shall bear his own burden." But there is no contradiction at all. We have our duties to perform, sometimes very difficult duties; God does not release us from them, but he sustains us in the doing of them. The load laid upon us does not crush us, for he gives us strength equal for the day; we lay the load upon the strength which our loving Father imparts to us. God's wonderfully gracious offer to us in this text is to lighten our burdens by putting Himself, as it were, into our souls, and underneath the burdens. This is a supernatural process; and the whole walk of faith through life is the simple but sublime reliance upon the Almighty arm that is never seen but often felt.

This is a world of worries, and all around us are overloaded people; each one thinks his or her burden is the biggest. In the meantime our merciful Father keeps saying to every one of them, "Cast thy burden upon the Lord and He will sustain thee." As if this one offer were not enough, it is repeated again in the New Testament; "cast all your anxieties upon Him, for He careth for you." This is the more accurate rendering in the Revised Version; for the word translated "care" in our Common Version does not signify wise forethought, but that wretched thing, worry. This text has been delightfully helpful to me because I have a natural tendency to anxieties, and the reason given for rolling them over upon God is very tender and very touching. "He careth for you." He takes the deepest interest in you. He is the One who says to me, "My child, do not break yourself down with that burden." The infinite Ruler of the universe who is wise in counsel and wonderful in working—the God who guarded the infant Moses in his cradle of rushes; who sent His messenger birds to Elijah by the brook Cherith; who quieted Daniel among the ravenous lions, and calmed Paul in the raging tempests—He it is who says to us, "Roll your anxieties over on me, for I have you on my loving heart!" What fools we often are when we trudge along with bended backs and careworn hearts; and all the while God's omnipotent arm is stretched out to relieve us!

These twin-texts I have just quoted have more than once exorcised that demon of "worry," and made me move nimbly over the path of duty. Sometimes in a season of great perplexity a passage of Scripture has suddenly darted its light upon me, and made the pathway very clear to my eyes. A remarkable illustration of this occurred to me during my ministry in New York. My downtown field of labor was a very difficult one; and a very attractive call was pressed upon me from a prominent, wealthy and prosperous church in a Western city. For weeks I was perplexed and sought guidance. One day I opened that richly suggestive old book, "Cecil's Remains," and my eye rested on a passage in which Richard Cecil remarks that changes in life are often dangerous, especially if an appeal is made to selfish ambition. Then followed this text from the prophet Jeremiah: "Why gaddest thou about to change thy way?" That decided me in an instant. Never have I ceased to thank God for that little text; but for it I might have missed a distinct call from God—soon afterwards—to this city of Brooklyn, in which I have been permitted to do the most important work of my life.

We ministers are constantly required to administer consolation to afflicted souls, and we are often in sore need of heaven-sent comfort ourselves. We need lessons that only can be learned through tears, just as Paul needed a thorn in the flesh, and Joseph needed to be shut up in a prison in order that he might reach a palace and a premiership in the kingdom of Egypt. Fellow Christians! do we not all need to be taught that dark clouds often rain down precious blessings—that Christ's people are never more exalted than when laid low, never so enriched as when they are emptied, never so advanced as when they are set back by faith-trying adversities? God is a marvelous organist, and knows just what heart-strings to strike when He would evoke the melodies He loveth to hear.

If affliction drives us from him it becomes a curse; if it sends us closer to him it yields certain otherwise unobtainable blessings. Through the parted clouds of sorrow, good angels of mercy descend upon us. One of them says, "Whom he loveth he chasteneth." Another angel says, "All things work together for good to them that love God." Still another sings in our ears, "Let not your heart be troubled; believe also in me." And so as our vision gets cleansed with tears, we begin to see bright light breaking through the clouds. No cloud ever can be big enough or black enough to shut out heaven if we keep the eye of faith fixed steadily upon the everlasting Throne.

I might quote many other passages that have rendered infinite help and consolation; but I close with an incident that happened in my own family not long ago. A beloved member of my family was compelled to undergo a very severe and critical surgical operation. On the morning of the day on which the eminent surgeon was to operate, she opened her little book of Daily Light; and the text for that day at the top of the page was this: "Thou shalt be steadfast, and shalt not fear; because thou shalt forget thy misery, and remember it only as waters that pass away." Those words came like a voice from above; they were as cheering at the time as they have since proved to be prophetic. Truly God's book is a wonderful treasure-house of truth for every step in our pathway of life, and for every emergency that we encounter. Happy are they who make it a lamp unto their feet, and their song in the house of their pilgrimage!

Brooklyn, N. Y.

GOD'S SLOW MAKING OF US.

God does not make us all at once. The process is a long one, running through all the years of our life, how many soever these years may be. There is never an hour when some new touch is not being given to our life, some new line marked in our character. Countless agencies and influences minister in the making of us—the mother, the father, the home, the school, the playground, the church, books, companions, friends and friendships, joys and sorrows, successes, failures, health, sickness, roses and briars—all life's circumstances and events. These things all work upon us, yet not blindly, not without guidance. Always God is on the field, and he works in and through all experiences, unless we drive him out of our life. Hence it really is God that makes us.

But there is no period in all the years when we can say that God has finished making us. We are always in process of being made. In one of George MacDonald's books occurs this fragment of conversation:

"I wonder why God made me," said Mrs. Faber, bitterly. "I'm sure I don't know where was the use of making me."

"Perhaps not much yet," replied Dorothy; "but then He hasn't done with you yet. He is making you now, and you don't like it."

It would give us more patience with ourselves if we always remembered this. We should not get so discouraged with our infirmities, imperfections and failures, if we always kept in mind the fact that we are not yet made, that we are only in process of being made, that God is not yet through making us. It would often help us to understand better the reasons for the hard or painful experiences that come to us. God is at work on us, making us. If we yield ourselves to His hand in quietness and confidence, letting Him do what He will with us, all will be well.

At present we are not what we should be, neither are we what we shall be. The end is not yet manifest. "It doth not yet appear what we shall be." It is a comfort to us, however, to know that God has a design in all His work upon us. There is nothing accidental in any of the providences that come into our life. There is a hand that is guiding and controlling these providences, and there is a purpose running through all the events and circumstances. God is always making us, and His thought for us is beautiful and good.

We should never pass judgment upon unfinished work of any kind. An unripe apple is not fit to eat, but we should not therefore condemn it. It is not yet ready for eating, because God is not yet done making it. Its unripeness is the precise condition which belongs to it in its present stage. It is a phase of its career, and is fitting and good in its place. A child's piano-playing may be execrable to the delicate ear of a trained musician, yet there was a time in the history of the musician's own musical development when he played no better, and when his friends and his teachers complimented him on his encouraging progress, seeing even in his faulty execution the evidences of genius and the marks of improvement. We have no right to judge the work of a beginner in any art or kind of work; we should wait until he has finished it before we pass an opinion on it. No artist will submit his picture for inspection while in an incomplete state. Neither is it just to form opinions upon God's providences until they have been worked out unto the end.

We should apply this rule to all that God is doing in us and with us. We should never mistake the processes for the final result. God has not made us yet; He still has the work in hand—incomplete. Not much that is good, worthy, or beautiful, may yet have come to perfection in us. We continue to make innumerable mistakes, and to stumble and fall continually. Somehow we seem never to get our lessons learned. We think we know them, that we have fully mastered them, but when we try to put them into word or act we fail. We think we have learned patience at last, but we have scarcely got into the thick of life's events and experiences, and have begun to be tested, when our patience is gone, and we speak unadvisedly or act foolishly. We think we have faith now, and that we shall not again lose confidence through any trial; but we have gone only a little way in the darkness of some new experience when our faith falters as before.

So it is with all our lessons—we seem never able to get them wrought fully into life. But this should not discourage us. We are only learners, scholars at school, as yet. We are only children, not men. The fruit is not yet ripe. The picture is not yet fully painted. But if only we leave the fruit under the culture of the wise Husbandman it will some time grow to ripeness. The picture which seems only an outline sketch at present, dimly revealing the features of an artist's thought, at length, when finished, wins the praise of all who see it. We should be patient with our own slow progress in the Christian life, and with the growth in us of the things that belong to Christlikeness. If only we are sincere, faithful and diligent, we shall some day see our vision realized.

"One held unwritten in his heart through years
A song for which his earthly lips were mute,
Wherein were blended prayer, and peace, and tears,
Regret and hope which heaven shall bring to fruit;
A song unsung to mortal harp or lute,
Yet in his life the rhythmic fall of days
Love-tuned, the cadenced years of ministry
Wrought out before the Lord, a chant of praise,
Which now his choirs are singing by that sea
Where many mansions be."

For the same reason we should learn to wait for God until He makes known His purpose and will. Some of His ways seem very strange to us. We cannot see love in their dark lines. Nor can we see how good can possibly come to us out of the painful experiences through which we are passing. Again we should remember that we may not judge of any work in its processes, but should wait until we see it finished.

Take the story of Joseph for illustration. If the narrative ended with the account of the boy carried off to Egypt, or with the account of the false accusation against him under which he was cast into a dungeon, we should see nothing beautiful or good in it. But when we read the story through to the end, and find Joseph at last next to the king in power, using his power for the good of his own people and of the world, then we begin to understand the meaning of the dark mysteries in the earlier chapters.

Life is full of similar experiences. We must wait for the ending of the serial before we form a final opinion upon it. We must wait until the last chapter of a life is written before we judge of the manner of its ending.

It is a good thing to get into our heart a firm conviction of the truth that God is really making us. Then we shall never be afraid to submit our life to His will, knowing that He has in His thought a vision of beauty into which He is fashioning us, which He will surely realize in us unless by our own resistance or wilfulness we spoil the beauty and hinder the outworking of the divine purpose in us.—"Sunday School Times."

THE MYSTERY OF LIFE AND THE EASTER REVELATION.

In our youth we take life for granted. We reflect little, if at all, upon its significance and ultimate conclusions. We are happy in the mere fact of living, absorbed in the details of each day. But there are few men of intelligence and thoughtfulness who do not awake, at some time, to the wonder and mystery of existence, and begin to ponder and speculate upon the meaning of it all. We are driven in upon ourselves and the old, old questions which have perplexed man from the beginning weigh heavily upon our minds. We begin to ask over and over: Who am I? What am I? Whence came I? Whither am I going? Who are these around me—men like myself—mortals or immortals? What does all this earth-life signify, and in what will it end? What is that strange thing we call death? Does life go on forever, or does it end with the six feet of earth? Is there a Beyond and an infinite and eternal life? What value is to be assigned this mystical but strong testimony of my inner consciousness that I am not one in destiny with the beasts, but have my origin, nature and issue intimately involved in the being of an Ever-living One who stands to me as Creator, Father and Saviour?

We say that that man must be singularly careless and unreflecting upon whom some such meditations and persistent queries do not at times press. They come upon us frequently while we walk the streets in the midst of the hurrying throngs. They brood over our souls as we look up into the sky, as we listen to the voices of earth and winds and stars. They are started by the miracles of growth in tree and flower and grass-blade in the springtime. They invade our inmost thoughts as the accents of the preacher fall upon our ears. They compel our attention in the solemn stillness of the night before sleep overtakes us. They visit us on our beds of illness, and alike introduce themselves suddenly and uninvited in our hours of merriment.

It is only in the light of immortality that any satisfactory answers can be given to these insistent questionings. If man be indeed only dust of the ground, if the grave swallows him up forever, then there is no solution to the mysteries of life, time, earth, the universe. Only by postulating an existence beyond the tomb and limitless in duration and capacity, can any adequate meaning be at all discerned in the creation of such a being as man with all his hopes, yearnings, mental, moral and spiritual powers. But there is a satisfactory answer which comes out of the riven and empty tomb of Christ. We hear the voice which says: "Because I live ye shall live also," and we are comforted. We may not be able to solve all the deep problems which burden us with their seeming inscrutability; but, given eternity, we can be content to wait and wonder in expectation of the larger and clearer light. And our human lives which, on the supposition of death being an endless sleep, become so incapable of explanation, comprehension, or rational justification—so fragmentary, unsatisfactory, unmeaning, mocking, "a tale told by an idiot,"—on the basis of faith in the Easter message, in the argument of the deserted sepulcher in the garden, in the words of Him who said, "I was dead, and, behold, I am alive for evermore," become profoundly meaningful, reasonable, self-justifying, and worthy of themselves and of the God in whom they have their underlying being. Only upon the assumption of heaven, everlasting life, a spiritual existence in companionship with Christ in Paradise throughout the eternities, can we find any clue to the labyrinth, any key that will unlock the inner wards of the mysteries. They alone give meaning to man and life.—"Western Christian Advocate."

PASSING THE GOLDEN MILESTONE.

Alfred and Anna M. Johnson, of Richmond, Ind., celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary on Third month 23d, by a quiet home-coming of their family. They were married in 1854, in Friends' meeting, at Harveysburgh, Warren County, Ohio, of which the bride was then a member. Their first home was made in Richmond, Indiana, fifty years ago, where they resided for a short time. For forty years they lived in other places in the Central West. In 1899 they returned to make their home in Richmond, Indiana.

Alfred Johnson, who is now in his seventy-ninth year, is in good health, and very active for one of his years, and has been a minister of the gospel for many years, and is remembered as such in the yearly meetings of the West.

At the reunion of the family, on the occasion of the anniversary, the following poem, written by a sister, was read:

Jesus said unto him, if thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth. (Mark 9: 23.)

1854-1904.

Could we retrace the stretch of road
Our feet have trod these fifty years,
The simple tasks, the heavy load,
Made heavier by our doubts and fears;
Could we but see our loss is gain,
Our thwarted plans, our hopes delayed,
Are speeding us through wind and rain,
While we for sunshine only prayed;
Could we believe the setting sun
Returns with gladness on the morrow;
We'd sing of battles overcome,
Of love and faith outweighing sorrow.
Let us believe these passing years
Are foot-paths leading on to light
And trim our lamps, dispel our fears,
And wait His coming in the night.

AMY E. JOHNSON.

MARY BROWNELL.*

Mary Brownell was a birthright member, and a very prominent worker in Hartland Meeting, New York. For many years she was clerk of the Women's Meeting, and for over thirty years clerk of the "Select" Meeting, and was a valued elder at the time of her death.

She was born and always lived on the farm where she died, always glad to open her door to the Lord's servants, and very few, if any, of the "Traveling Friends" who have visited Hartland in the past sixty years have gone on their way without having enjoyed the hospitality of her home.

She was one of the pioneers, and the young people loved to hear her relate her early experiences living in the woods, and going to meeting on horseback over Corduroy roads, and how, one day, she froze her feet while sitting in meeting.

Her father died when she was ten years old, and she early learned of the responsibilities of life. After seventeen years of married life her husband was accidentially killed, leaving her with two children, which she brought up while managing her farm. After her son had grown to manhood and taken the management she was relieved of the burden, but thirteen years ago he died, and again she was left to take up the active duties of life.

* Mary Brownell, a member of Hartland Monthly Meeting died at her home in Hartland, Niagara County, N. Y., Third month 14th, 1904, in the 89th year of her age.

She was always cheerful. No one ever found her downhearted, and her testimony was that God had been so good to her, that she could trust Him, and no one doubted but that she did. Her daughter, Phebe, survives her, but on account of severe illness was not able to attend the funeral, which was held in the church, and by her request was conducted by George Hull. The large attendance indicated the respect and esteem in which she was held.

Truly a mother in Israel has been promoted.

Some Views on Present Topics.

THE PASTORAL WORK OF A CONGREGATION.

BY ISAAC SHARPLESS.

The Society of Friends has always been a hot-bed of individualism. With its fundamental ideas of direct divine guidance it could not well be otherwise. It necessarily represented the opposite extreme from catholicism, which placed all authority in the Church. Difficulties began to greet it almost immediately. The Wilkinson-Story Separation, which was a rebellion against the organization planned by George Fox, expressed an extreme view of the tendency. The Separatists claimed, among other things, that no time should be arranged for attendance at meeting, as Friends would be divinely called together whenever the right time came. Fox demanded the minimum of organization which would hold things together and objected to the extreme positions of the Separatists as incompatible with successful work. He thereby gave latitude to his followers to make the rules of the organized Church superior to individual judgment in certain cases. Just what these cases are has never been determined; but it would seem that the social pastoral care of the congregation was one of them. It is a beautiful theory that this will be done by one member for another whenever the divine guide prompts it, and if we were all sufficiently faithful and attentive this is probably all that would be needed. But, as a matter of fact, no congregation can get along without officers specially delegated to this work, and yet such officers should always urge upon the general membership the importance of unofficial action in a vast number of cases. Such officers are sometimes called "Overseers" and sometimes "Members of the Pastoral Committee," and not infrequently this becomes a committee of one. The more general the work can be made, compatible with efficiency, the better for all concerned, for a very large part of its value accrues to the workers themselves.

Pastoral care is needed in every congregation, old or young. There is no meeting among us which can dispense with it. But the needs of the membership vary vastly in the different localities. It can readily be believed that a meeting of new and uneducated Friends would need practically the exclusive time and care of one or more people, but a meeting of birth-right members has always within it many who demand encouragement, or sympathy, or advice, or rebuke. No one person is usually fit to attend to all of these demands of varying character. Gifts of widely divergent sort must be utilized to do the work effectively. Hence pastoral work confined to one individual will not usually meet the case. It may be well to have one directing head to attend to the machinery of the labor, but many diverse abilities must be drawn into the service. This then would seem to be the one efficient form and the one most in accord with our principles: that there should be for all pastoral work, outside of meetings for worship, one directing and managing leader who should give as much time to the service as the occasion demanded, with a committee associated with him of goodly size and varying qualities, who would willingly give their time and powers to the service, with also a feeling of responsibility covering the entire congregation, that each of them must be to a large extent his brother's keeper.

In the meantime the general problem of where the line shall be drawn between organized and individual effort in church work, so as to make our machinery efficient, on the one hand, and, on the other, to make it of such a character that it will allow freedom to individual consciences, remains as yet unsolved.

Haverford, Pa.

Temperance Department.

Issued Monthly, under the care of the

TEMPERANCE ASSOCIATION OF FRIENDS, OF PHILADELPHIA
YEARLY MEETING.

All communications should be addressed to

ANNA EASTBURN WILLITS, Editor, 343^d E. Main Street, Haddonfield, N. J.

At the Executive Meeting of the Temperance Association of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends, held the 28th ult., plans were submitted for the annual public meeting to be held at Twelfth Street Meeting House during yearly meeting. A number from the Association are expected to take part on the program. The time for holding this meeting was changed from Fourth-day evening to Third-day evening, which will be the 19th inst. this year. Encouraging reports were received from the meetings held by Joshua L. Baily, also from those held by Edwin P. Sellew, during the past month, at various meeting places within the yearly meeting.

The tendency of the present times is toward moderation in all things, and there are no grounds for the widely-circulated report that the habit of drink is increasing so rapidly among the women of New York that it may be expected that within a few years public drinking places where wine is served and similar in character to the barroom conducted for the use of the male population, will be opened in New York to supply the demand of the women of that city for liquor.

The Iowa State Senate voted $125,000 for a hospital for habitual drunkards. This is the first open approval of Iowa's "dipsomaniac law," which went into effect two years ago.

The St. Louis and San Francisco and the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroads, have determined no longer to allow expense accounts for wine feasts among traveling, district and general agents.

Already, before a spade is struck into the ground in Panama, far from the restraints of civilization, the liquor power is looking forward to a ten years' orgy in which to roll up a great aggregate of wealth. We find the following headlines in the New York "Herald," Third month 12th:

"Must Have Liquor for Canal Workers."
"Rear Admiral Walker Declares Laborers Cannot Be Obtained Unless Saloons Are Provided."

One feature of the remonstrances in Philadelphia, which this year is somewhat more conspicuous than it has heretofore been, is the disposition of various commercial and manufacturing firms, as well as the Rapid Transit Company, to object to new saloons in the vicinity of their establishments. The ground taken in these protests is that they have a demoralizing effect on their employees, who are apt to congregate in large numbers at drinking places during business hours or at intervals in labor. It is probable that there are but few of these applications which the judges cannot turn down without doing injustice to anybody or denying any necessary want.

USED FRANKING PRIVILEGES.

The sequel to the charges of the misuse of the franking privileges of members of Congress by advocates of the Hepburn-Dolliver original package bill, has passed, and the incident is closed, by convincing Representative Clayton that the law had not been violated.

Wilbur F. Crafts, Superintendent of the International Reform Bureau, said he has duly considered the purpose of the franking privilege, namely, to educate the public on public questions through public documents which Senators and Congressmen have a right to send out through any agency they may trust to do it, and such has been the only use of franks by the subscriber and the Bureau for which he acts, which is a philanthropic reform organization.

The following appeal is made in this column, as it is felt the more the Mission can be advertised over and against the saloon, just so much do we gain and hold for Christ. The Temperance Committee of

New York Yearly and Quarterly Meetings formed an Association and gave the first subscription, and it is hoped Friends of Philadelphia and elsewhere will start similar lines of work:

THE LORD'S SIGNAL SERVICE.

An association has been formed in New York which invites, the co-operation of churches, societies and individuals. It is called "The Lord's Signal Service," and has for its object the placing in conspicuous positions throughout the city, bulletin boards which shall have on them the places and hours where gospel mission services will be held with "A Welcome to All." Are not "the children of this world wiser than the children of light" when they appreciate and follow out so persistently keeping before the eye of the public, conspicuous advertisements?

It is believed that if our gospel mission meetings were as faithfully advertised and kept before the eye of the public many an arrest of thought would come to the careless and indifferent, followed by action in attending the meetings to which they have been thus directed and invited.

The president will present the matter at any meetings where opportunity will be given for a few words, or for Bible lesson prepared on the subject.

A. KIRK, President, 146 East 34th Street, New York City.

PREDICTS TEMPERANCE REVIVAL.

William C. Lilley, a church elder of Pittsburg, predicted at the Presbyterian ministers' meeting, in Witherspoon Hall, Philadelphia, that the next great revival which would sweep the entire country would be the temperance cause. All the Protestant denominations, he said, would take part in it, and the Catholic Church also would unite with them in one great movement to fight the evil of intemperance. Alfred Smith, conference temperance evangelist, said:

"Terrible as it may seem to us, nevertheless it is a fact that the very life of the Church is being sapped out by the complicity of our people in dirty politics and with the corrupt politics of our State. We shall not again have a great religious revival and awakening until the Church purges itself of her complicity with corruption and the liquor traffic."

ENGLAND'S DRINKING PLACES HARD HIT BY A TRUST THAT STEMS TIDE OF DRUNKENNESS.

It may be remembered that the idea of the model saloon originated in the mind of a country clergyman about two years ago, and the present Central Public House Trust is the result of his efforts to get men of means interested in his scheme. Now the society numbers among its active members the dukes of Devonshire and Norfolk, Lord Rosebery, Earl Grey, who is the head of the branch operating in London, and the bishop of Canterbury and York.

The clergyman believed that most of the excessive drinking in Great Britain was due to the fact that ordinary saloonkeepers sold only intoxicants, for he thought that if people could buy food and non-alcoholics at "pubs" and be supplied with them readily they often would choose such drinks in preference to liquor. The Public House Trust, of which Earl Gray is the president, goes on the same theory. In the "reformed" public houses which it has established all over the country, liquor is freely sold—only there is no special inducement to buy it—whereas tea, coffee, mineral waters, and food at rock-bottom prices are given special prominence. If these houses were run in the ordinary way it would be hard to carry this out, but the trust officials have solved the difficulty by making the manager of each of their places a salaried employee who thus has no interest whatever in pushing the sale of fiery drinks to the disadvantage of harmless ones.

WHAT TOTAL ABSTINENCE DOES FOR THE SOLDIER.

Under this heading the National Temperance Society, some months ago, published in leaflet form an article by Lord Roberts, showing what total abstinence has done for the British soldiers in India. In this leaflet this distinguished British General takes the same view as that held by our own Lieutenant-General Miles. Among other things, Lord Roberts says:

"If soldiers would raise the social status of their profession, they must cultivate temperance and decorum, and banding themselves together in societies, such as the Army Temperance Association, is the best means of attaining the much-desired end.

"To show in what an increasing ratio total abstinence is commending itself to our soldiers, I quote you the following figures representing the average totals of former years:

1889-90.....	13,487
1890-91.....	15,050
1891-92.....	16,948
1892-93.....	18,355
1893-94.....	22,369

THE LATEST FROM ENGLAND—BRITISH PHYSICIANS WANT COMPULSORY TEMPERANCE EDUCATION.

Arthur Chamberlain, an English manufacturer, and brother of Joseph Chamberlain, M.P., in a recent speech, said the only competitor he was afraid of was the United States, and he only feared them because of their superior education, and the fact that the people of that country drank only half as much intoxicating liquor as Englishmen.

A movement inaugurated by physicians is now on foot for the adoption by Great Britain of the educational method against drink.

About the middle of January, according to the "British Medical Journal," the Council of the British Medical Association, through a committee of its members, among whom are Sir Lauder Brunton, Sir Henry Thompson, Sir William Turner, Sir Victor Horsley and Professor G. Sims Woodhead, asked every registered physician in England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales, to unite with them in signing a petition for the compulsory study of the laws of health, including elementary instruction on the nature and effects of alcohol.

This petition, which late advices from England show has already been signed by nearly 15,000 practitioners in all parts of Great Britain, states as its raison d'être the facts, that as members of the medical profession, the signers have constantly before them "the serious physical and moral conditions of degeneracy and disease resulting from the neglect and infraction of the elementary laws of hygiene," that "much of the degeneracy, disease and accident with which medical men are called upon to deal, is directly or indirectly due to the use of alcohol, and that a widespread ignorance prevails concerning not only the nature and properties of this substance, but also its effects on the body and mind."

The petition reviews at some length the steps taken in other English-speaking countries toward securing such instruction, namely, Canada, Australia, Natal, and especially in the United States, where, the petition says, the "whole question is dealt with still more completely."

In view of the fact that this instruction is legally compulsory throughout the whole United States, and that certain opponents have vainly tried to abolish such legal requirements, and to postpone all teaching concerning the nature and effects of alcoholic drinks until the later school years, it is interesting to note the emphasis laid by this petition of British physicians upon the necessity of having the instruction compulsory and given at an early age. The signers state that under the present school arrangements in Great Britain health instruction is permissible, but, they add:

"By this method effective instruction is given to a small proportion of the pupils only. This does not appear to us to be adequate. We believe that it should be compulsory and be given at a much earlier age than at present. . . . We would urge the Board of Education of England and Wales, the Scotch Educational Department, and the Irish Educational Authorities, to include in the simple hygienic teaching which we desire, elementary instruction at an early age on the nature and effects of alcohol. . . .

"Until the four Central Educational Authorities of the United Kingdom include this subject as a part of the system of National Education, it appears to us that the mass of the pupils must fail, as at present, to receive that systematic teaching of hygiene and of the nature and effects of alcohol which alone we consider adequate to meet the present need."

Thoughtful students of the present conditions in national life in Great Britain, as in France, Germany and other European countries, are gravely concerned over the widespread drink evil with its direful consequences to individual and national well-being and prosperity. They are beginning to recognize the greater sobriety of our people and the educational methods which have helped bring about that sobriety as potent factors in the industrial and commercial success of the United States. They see, as shown by this petition from the physicians, that the hope of the nations lies in preventing the formation of drinking habits through education of the rising generation.

MARY H. HUNT.

The International Lesson.

SECOND QUARTER.

LESSON III.

FOURTH MONTH 17, 1904.

JESUS TRANSFIGURED.

Mark 9: 2-13.

GOLDEN TEXT.—A voice came out of the cloud, saying, This is my beloved Son: hear him. Mark 9: 7.

DAILY READINGS.

Second-day, Fourth mo. 11.—Jesus transfigured. Mark 9: 2-13.
 Third-day, Fourth mo. 12.—Peter's testimony. 2 Pet. 1: 16-21.
 Fourth-day, Fourth mo. 13.—Moses' shining face. Ex. 34: 29-35.
 Fifth-day, Fourth mo. 14.—Elijah's departure. 2 Kings 2: 9-18.
 Sixth-day, Fourth mo. 15.—Renewed in Christ. Col. 3: 1-11.
 Seventh-day, Fourth mo. 16.—Prayer a Christian duty. Matt. 6: 5-15.
 First-day, Fourth mo. 17.—Christ praying for his followers. John 17: 1-26

Time.—The autumn of A.D. 29, and about a week after the last lesson.

Place.—Not certainly known, but, almost without doubt one of the places of Mount Hermon, which alone fulfills all the requirements of the narratives. The traditional site—Mount Tabor—is unquestionably wrong, and is given up by all scholars.

Place in the Life of Christ.—During the last half of the third year of his ministry.

Parallel Accounts.—Matthew 17: 1-13; Luke 9: 28-36. See also 2 Peter 1: 16-21.

2. "After six days." According to the Jewish method of reckoning, which counted both days, this would be seven days, and so agree with Luke's "about eight days." "Peter and James and John." They were the chosen companions of Jesus on several important occasions—the raising of the daughter of Jairus, and in the garden of Gethsemane. "Apart by themselves." Jesus and the three apostles. This was a scene not for all. "Transfigured." Literally, "metamorphosed," "changed into another form"; the word is translated "transformed" in 2 Cor. 3: 18. Here (Mark 9: 2) it probably means simply "that his appearance was changed, was resplendent with a divine brightness." It was the divine over-coming the human.

3. "And his garments became glistening, exceeding white; so as no fuller on earth can ever whiten them." Revised Version. This verse is explanatory of the transfiguration.

4. "Elijah with Moses." The one, the typical prophet; the other, the lawgiver. Elijah was one who delivered a divine message, rather than one who foretold events, for, so far as known, he uttered no Messianic prophecy. Moses, on the other hand, was not only a law giver, but essentially a prophet also and a Messianic prophet. Therefore it is likely that there is something more in the fact of these special two being present. "These were the two men in the Old Testament who made a mysterious exit from this world, and they are the ones selected for a mysterious return in the New Testament." "Talking with Jesus." Luke says they "spake of his decease which he was about to accomplish at Jerusalem." The Greek word translated "decease," is "exodus." It is an unusual word and involves all the incidents of the last days—Christ's "passion, cross, death, resurrection and ascension."

5. In the high state of spiritual exaltation the three apostles seem to have recognized the visitants at once. From Luke we learn that the disciples were heavy with sleep, and when they were awake they saw Moses and Elijah. "Tabernacles." Tents, booths, any temporary structure.

6. "For he wist not what to answer, for they became sore afraid." Answer, not to a question, but to the situation. Luke says of Peter, "not knowing what he said." "If he had known what to say, he would not have said any so foolish a thing." "Heavenly visitors do not come to stay." It is said that if men in Galilee are caught out at night they will at once try to make a protection of branches or brushwood to protect them from the chill night winds.

7. "And there came a cloud overshadowing them: and there came a voice out of the cloud, This is my beloved Son, hear ye Him." Revised Version. The cloud hid Christ, Moses and Elijah. "Voice." Compare Luke 3: 22; John 12: 28; 2 Peter 1: 17, 18. "Hear ye Him." This verb in such connection always means, hear and obey.

8. Matthew says, "When the disciples heard it (the voice) they fell on their face and were sore afraid, and Jesus came and touched them and said, Arise and be not afraid." "Suddenly." The vision vanished suddenly. The heavenly visitants had vanished in the cloud.

9. "As they were coming down." It was natural that they should ask their Lord concerning the wonderful vision which they had seen. "They should tell no man." Such an occurrence would be misunderstood, and would be misleading to those who had not a spiritual comprehension. Such a marvelous story would only make the people still more sure that Christ would restore the outward kingdom of Israel. "Risen again from the dead." After Christ's death and resurrection the real meaning of the Transfiguration would be understood. At least it would be known that it could not have reference to an outward kingdom.

10. This verse shows how far the disciples still were from a full understanding of Christ's mission, and shows how unfitted they were to talk publicly about the wondrous scene which they just witnessed.

11. "The scribes say that Elijah must first come?" The question which troubled them was, How could Jesus be Messiah if Elijah had not come? for the scribes, who were their religious teachers, insisted that Elijah would return, according to Malachi (3: 1; 4: 5, 6), before the coming of the Messiah.

12. "Elijah indeed cometh first." In accordance with the prophecy. "How is it written?" As the coming of Elijah is foretold, so is the suffering of the Messiah foretold. Psalms 22: 6; Isaiah 53.

13. "Elijah is come." Matthew (17: 13) says, "Then understood the disciples that he spake unto them of John the Baptist." Compare also Matt. 11: 10. "Listed." Wished. The idea is that John the Baptist was treated as Elijah was. Herod and Ahab are compared. See 1 Kings 18: 17, etc.; 19: 1, etc.

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

1. "If the Son must needs go down into the valley of the shadow of death, the Father's face will shine upon Him for a moment before He enters it with a brightness which will not be obscured."

2. The Law and the Prophets disappear but the Gospel remains.

3. "For the Law was given by Moses, but grace and truth come by Jesus Christ."

Christian Endeavor

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Lindley D. Clark, 1429 New York Avenue, Washington, D.C.]

TOPIC FOR FOURTH MONTH SEVENTEENTH.

HOW CHRIST TRANSFORMS LIVES.

Rom. 12: 1, 2; Phil. 3: 20, 21.

Second-day, Fourth mo. 11.—By His presence. Ex. 34: 29-35.

Third-day, Fourth mo. 12.—By divine indwelling. Mark 9: 2-8.

Fourth-day, Fourth mo. 13.—By the Word. Jas. 1: 21, 22.

Fifth-day, Fourth mo. 14.—The heavenly image. 1 Cor. 15: 45-49.

Sixth-day, Fourth mo. 15.—By beholding Him. 2 Cor. 3: 10-18.

Seventh-day, Fourth mo. 16.—By imitating Him. John 13: 12-17.

The skeptic who challenges the records of the New Testament because they claim for Jesus a birth and life and resurrection that have never been duplicated, because such incidents are, if read, unique, have used a word that applies to Him in the whole purpose and influence of His life. He was and is unique. Christianity is to-day the teaching of Christ. Platonism had its new Platonism and Darwinism its new Darwinism, but since Christ came there has been no new name given whereby men are saved. No disciple of His ever set up a school of his own. The greatest admirer of John or Paul admires most of all their Christlikeness, and there is no cult, least of all one encouraged by them, that teaches John-likeness or Paul-likeness, but their Lord is "all and in all."

From the short years of His sowing has sprung a fruitage in every land that, with all that it has lacked of perfectness, is the world's wonder and its hope. That the bloody sea-kings of Norway and the plundering barbarians of Britain should, with the savages of Africa and of the islands of the sea, alike name the Prince of Peace as Lord, is token of the change he works—such change as no other name or influence has ever wrought.

"I beseech you therefore," says Paul. This "therefore" looks back to the gracious fact of justification, so necessary since "all have sinned," and forward to the consecration and transformation becoming to the redeemed. The world has its moulds and models, but to be fashioned according to them is to do despite to Christ and to our own souls. "How it looks," and "what people will say," are too often considerations where the test should be, "What Christ would have me do."

Our lesson readings for the week set Jesus before us in three essential ways—as Companion, Teacher and Pattern.

The very thought of His companionship brings a rest and steadfastness that means victory over weariness and worry; and that is Christlike, for already, before Gethsemane and Calvary, He could say, "I have overcome the world." But we need to take time with Him (Mark 6: 31), and to remember that two cannot walk together except they be agreed.

What He may be or fail to be as Teacher we may know from the Parable of the Sower; while as Pattern we have Him both to contemplate (Heb. 3: 1) and to imitate (1 Peter 2: 21).

"From glory unto glory! O marvels of the word!
'With open face beholding the glory of the Lord,'
We, even we (O wondrous grace!) 'are changed into the same,'
The image of our Saviour, to glorify His name."

Missionary Department.

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Herman Newman, 718 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.]

KOTZEBUE WORK.

Kotzebue, Alaska, 10th mo. 10th, 1903.

Editor THE AMERICAN FRIEND:

It seldom happens that we can send a letter from Kotzebue at so late a day as this, but the restless waters of Kotzebue Sound are not yet chained by the ice king, and a mail steamer is due to leave to-day; yet we have many grim evidences of the approach of the long, dark, dreary winter. For some days the thermometer has hovered about the zero mark. The lakes back of the mission have been frozen over, so that our school boys have been skating for a week past, but we have an ample supply of coal, food and clothing, so that we expect to "winter through in good condition," as they say of the stock back East.

Since the departure of Mattie Hadley, of Wilmington Yearly Meeting, there are but two of us here. My wife is the only white woman in several hundred square miles of country, but we are helped by a number of native missionaries who have heard in their hearts and have gladly obeyed His great command to "Go into all the world." Our outpost work seems to be most graciously smiled upon by the Master, and at several widely-distant points His message of "healing, cleansing and saving" is proclaimed at least twice a week, and in striking contrast to some places in the United States, our mid-week prayer services are quite as well attended as are the Sabbath services. Our natives feel greatly condemned if any other cause than illness keeps them from prayer meeting. Here at Kotzebue the dear Lord has blessed on an average about one hundred souls per month during the past season. . . .

12th mo. 12th, 1903.

Winter came to us about one month earlier in the season this year than last, our first zero temperature being recorded on the eleventh of Eighth month. For the past sixty days, while we have had a temperature almost continuously under the zero mark, yet we have had no extremely cold days. So far very little snow has fallen, and we are praying that we may have less than last winter, when the average depth was about seven feet.

The dear Master still smiles upon this work here, and we can see that these dear Esquimo people are growing in grace. At present we have a good standing membership of above four hundred in this mission. We have several "outposts" this season where native boys have charge of the work. Our Notak River missionary wrote us a few days ago that there had been twelve conversions at his post during the past month. From that river one boy came a distance of four days' travel recently to confess to us a fault. Very rarely do we fail to hear the fault from the lips of the offender himself. When a sin has been committed they do not wait for others to tell us of their shortcomings. All who break any of the Ten Commandments are put on probation, even when they confess it to us; and when the offense is flagrant and oft-repeated we disown them, though we do not very often have to resort to this extreme penalty. So far in the work here only about 5 per cent. of those converted have backslidden, though, of course, it is very hard for them to break at once with their old-time superstitions.

Intelligent natives here tell us that prior to the coming of the missionary they had no belief in a future existence. They only had a belief in one spirit, and that was an evil one, who caused them to be ill, and to meet accident and death, and in time of trouble they sought to propitiate this evil spirit, through the ministrations of the sheman or medicine man—a belief that has almost died out in this neighborhood, for they can see the quick results that follow when they use the white man's medicine, though I have never yet been called to the side of one who was very ill that one or more natives were not praying for the recovery of the sick one, so that we have come to give but the simplest remedies. The health of the natives keeps very good. The past season there has been but one death, and that not in the immediate village. One cold Sabbath evening one of our reindeer herders and his wife came to the mission. They had come twenty miles over the ice, pulling in a small sled the corpse of their only child. There were frozen tears on the face of the little brown mother, for after all the Esquimo Rachel is very like her white sister.

Although we do not see much of sunlight so far as the star of day is concerned, many amusing things happen. Some days ago we asked a little girl about the spiritual condition of the Esquimo in a certain district. The reply was, "They are good now; almost all of them pray and wash." We thought that very good evidence indeed of their conversion. Another man who called for medicine and was given some, returned a few days later, saying that the medicine was good and had cured him, and to show that he valued it he took some from his pocket, where he had kept it safely and tightly wrapped up. Doubtless many would have better health in the United States if they carried their medicine in their pocket.

One evening after Otha's "Mother Meeting" had adjourned a number of Esquimo women were in "mission home." Presently a little native girl remarked, "When many women stop in house 'plenty talk,' " quite unconscious of the fact that a similar charge had been laid at the door of other than Esquimo women.

The seal and salmon catch was very light last summer, and so far but very few white fish have been caught through the ice. It may interest some to know that the latter are caught in nets set under ice several feet thick. With a native knife fastened to a long pole several holes are cut in the ice, and by means of a pole and ropes the net is set and drawn out in perhaps a temperature as low as 50 degrees. The white fish caught in this manner weigh about ten pounds and make an excellent food. It is sad to think they are not more plentiful. Only a few days ago a young woman came to the mission and smilingly told us that at her eglo "Food not, water only." Yet at this time, when hunger is often felt, these wonderful people are cheerful and smiling. Pray much for them.

Faithfully His and thine,

DANA THOMAS.

Correspondence.

Dear Friend: As chairman of a yearly meeting's Committee on Peace, I wish to give the following call to your members:

"Wanted: In every home of Friends in all of the yearly meetings as an antidote to the war and saloon party papers now so generally read, "The Messenger of Peace," published in Baltimore, and "The Home Guard," published in Hyde Park, Chicago. These two papers are edited by Friends, are good, and up-to-date on the Christian issues of war and temperance, and both can be had for the price of one, twenty-five cents per annum, in clubs of twenty or over. None of us are too poor or too good to subscribe for and read them.

Will not all of our committees on peace and on temperance and others interested send for specimen copies, and see that our members have the opportunity of subscribing on these liberal terms. Remit to "Messenger of Peace," with duplicate list of subscribers. G.

Kansas City, Mo., Third month 31st, 1904.

Dear Friend: The Friends' Meeting House here was destroyed by fire on the 23d. The fire was discovered about four o'clock in the afternoon, and it is supposed to have been caused by some defect in the electric wiring, and may have been burning between the ceiling and the roof for some time, as it spread over the entire roof within a very few moments of its first discovery, while there was no sign of fire in the meeting room when the firemen arrived. The ceiling commenced to fall while they were trying to protect some of the furniture, and three of the firemen were slightly cut.

The entire roof was burned off, and the frame walls left standing, but in a high wind the next day the north end was blown out, and the firemen pulled down most of the side walls and chimney in order to prevent them falling on the next building.

The insurance was $1,000 on the building and $250 on the furniture. A part of the furniture was saved, but we estimate that the damage is greater than the amount of the insurance.

The trustees secured the use of a hall at 1222 McGee Street, and met there last First-day, and will meet there again next First-day, which is our regular monthly meeting, and they will then probably decide whether to continue to meet in that hall.

Thine truly,

FRANCIS A. WRIGHT.

Dear Readers: We wish to call your attention to the needs of Friends' North End Mission at Wichita, Kansas, which is located in the northern part of the city, near the packing houses, where from 600 to 700 men are employed, men of families, whose children know nothing of Christ and His teaching. There is only one small church in that part of the city, while ten joints are running wide open, with all their accompanying vices, each striving to claim these children as their victims. Mission work was commenced about one year ago, under the auspices of Rose Hill Quarterly Meeting. Through earnest efforts and hard work a Sabbath School was organized in a very humble way, in the home of a kind brother, who removed the furniture from his house every Seventh-day evening, and replaced it Second-day morning, so that his home might be made a place for worship on the Sabbath. The Lord prospered the work, and it outgrew these humble surroundings. A store-room was rented near-by, right in the midst of this needy field, but the Sabbath School has increased in numbers even beyond our fondest hopes. Many of these children formerly spent their Sabbath in breaking God's laws and looking upon scenes of crime and vice that would bring a sense of remorse upon the face of every Christian. But the Lord is gracious, and has wonderfully blessed the work. Alvin George held a series of meetings, and the Lord was with him in great power as he preached the word, and visited among the people. Thirty-five confessed Christ as their Saviour and twenty-five, joined Friends.

The mission has been so wonderfully blessed of the Lord that the store-room has become too small and a meeting-house has become a necessity; consequently the committee purchased two lots, situated on the corner of Twenty-first and Main Streets, and work was commenced two weeks ago, on the morning of Third month 7th, at 8 o'clock. The cornerstone was laid in the presence of a large congregation, and since then the work has gone steadily on.

But we need money to carry on the building of the mission. There is no field in all Kansas Yearly Meeting so worthy, "so whitened unto the harvest," and which will bring forth such rich fruits as this work of North End Mission, in the making of noble men and women of these boys and girls and Christian workers for God. Can you not, dear readers, help us in this work? Every dollar invested in this mission will speak in eternity, and we appeal to you in behalf of these neglected children, many of them from Catholic homes, to help us with your money. The hard-working people around the mission are poor—do not even own their own homes—yet they have done the best they could, and that which means much sacrifice to them. May the Lord so inspire you for this work of North End Mission that you will help us, even as the Lord hath prospered you in basket and in store. We need the funds, and need them now. May God bless you in giving for this work! All funds should be sent to the treasurer, Wm. W. Worth, 134 Charles Street, Wichita, Kansas.

Steamer Grosser Kurfürst,
Mid-Ocean, Third month 14th, 1904.

Editor of THE AMERICAN FRIEND:

At the request of many friends I will attempt to send a few lines concerning our voyage. We have had a delightful voyage thus far, with a delightful people on board. Our vessel is so large as not to be greatly affected by the waves, except that one day—the third day out from New York—we realized what it meant to be rocked in the "cradle of the deep," which resulted in sea-sickness with many of the passengers. We have 811 delegates on the boat, from all parts of the United States, Canada and Mexico, to be joined by 400 more at Gibraltar, from Europe.

We travel 360 miles per day—24 hours—and each day have our position indicated on the map. We are now in the latitude of Cape Hatteras, and are nearing the Madeira Islands, off the coast of Africa, where we expect to land day after tomorrow. We have not, for days, seen a living thing in sea or sky; even the sea-gulls ceased to follow our course after two days out from New York. The time is so pleasantly spent with meetings of different kinds, forming new acquaintances, etc., etc., that we almost begrudge the sleeping hours. Yesterday—the Sabbath—was an especially full day. We were awakened from a deep sleep in the early morning by the strains of sacred music given by the ship's band in the parlor adjoining our state-room. At 10.30 the great dining-room was cleared for religious meeting, and Dr. Rotts, chairman of the International Lesson Committee, preached a most inspiring sermon from a part of the 107th Psalm. He strikingly compared the voyage we are now taking to the voyage of life; his references to the 25th and 26th verses, "He commandeth and raiseth the stormy wind, which lifteth up the waves thereof," were the more appreciated by us as we had only a few days before been personal witnesses of such a scene; and then as we looked out upon a "sea of glass" almost as placid as a mill pond, he quoted the 29th verse. "He maketh the storm a calm, so that the waves thereof are still." The request was made, that in closing, we rise and sing that beautiful hymn that is sung each Sabbath morning on every Christian ship that floats the seas. The first verse is as follows:

"Eternal Father! strong to save,
Whose arm doth bind the restless wave,
Who bids the mighty ocean deep,
Its own appointed limits keep;
Oh, hear us when we cry to Thee,
For those in peril on the sea."

The afternoon was devoted to Bible School work, and Marion Lawrence, of Ohio, secretary of the International Sabbath School Association, acted as superintendent. Classes were distributed to different parts of the ship, and the report at the close showed something more than 500 present, with a collection of just $100 for the International work. Dr. Jessup, of more than fifty years' experience as missionary in Syria, is with us, and says that he had a great desire to cross the ocean with these Christian people, where there would be no gambling, nor drinking, nor profanity on board. We have also had talks by Jessie Ackerman, who has several times been around the world in W. C. T. U. work. Poets, preachers—200 of them—teachers uncounted, and musicians of distinction, make up our company. There are eighteen Friends on board. We expect to reach our destination, Jerusalem, near the middle of next month; then in a few days will attend the great World's Sunday School convention there.

Sincerely, L. ELLA HARTLEY.

P. S.—We have had one meeting of the Friends' delegation for getting acquainted, at which time I was appointed to send notes to THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

Third month 18th. Since writing the enclosed letter we landed for a day at the Madeira Islands—a most enchanting spot. Expect to reach Gibraltar in the morning, where we mail letters, and there will be hundreds of them.

L. E. H.

Things of Interest Among Ourselves.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND will be sent to a new subscriber from now until First month 1st, 1905, for $1.00.

Lewis W. McFarland, who has been located at Lowell, Kansas, has removed to Vermilion Grove, Ill., where he will serve as pastor in the meeting.

J. Warren Elder and wife recently closed a series of meetings at Independence, Kansas, in which the gospel was preached with great force and clearness, and many were definitely blessed.

George W. Willis, of Cleveland, Ohio, closed a series of meetings at Iowa Falls, Iowa, on the 20th ult. Many souls were definitely blessed, and many more signified a desire for a better life.

Our friend, Percy Bigland, whose sojourn in and about Philadelphia this winter has given pleasure to his many friends, has arrived safely at his home in England, where he is busily engaged in his studio.

We are glad to report that after three months' illness, and consequent absence from meetings, Amos Sanders, of Brooklyn, is again able to take up his regular duties. He is still not restored to complete health, but he is making good progress in the right direction.

An important conference for ministers and workers of North Carolina Yearly Meeting was held at High Point on Sixth- and Seventh-days of last week. It was attended by Allen and Naomi Jay, Rufus M. Jones and Miriam Harrison, from a distance. Fuller reports will be given next week.

Estella Hammond, a minister of Long Lake Monthly Meeting, Mich., labored in Shawnee Quarterly Meeting, Oklahoma, during the winter months. She held eighty meetings, and visited one hundred and twenty-seven families. There were twenty-six conversions and renewals, and quite a number were added to Friends. Many in Oklahoma who were opposed to woman ministry were convinced and won. She is now located as pastor at Caven, Kansas, which will be her address.

Harry R. Keates has been holding a very helpful ten-days' series of meetings in Whittier College, which has resulted in added earnestness and power.

A very successful two-weeks' meeting, conducted by Jonathan M. Jay, closed at Chambersburg, Ohio, on the evening of the 28th ult. A full salvation was preached. Many testified to a deepening in spiritual life, some to heart cleansing, and all to having been much benefited. Nineteen professed conversion, five of whom made application for membership.

Wabash Quarterly Meeting, Ind., was held at Old Wabash Meeting House, the 26th and 27th ult. One of the heaviest rainfalls for years just preceded the meeting, causing great inundations, preventing a great many from attending, as the electric car service was suspended. Joseph O. Binford, general superintendent, was present and preached with great clearness both Seventh- and First-days, giving the address on Seventh-day evening on temperance, which was clear and practical.

Friends everywhere should realize that our friend, Dr. Richard H. Thomas, of Baltimore, has been, and still is, passing through a period of serious illness. He had plans made for important future work and service, but his physical condition now demands long and complete rest. We sincerely hope and we believe that this beloved brother and efficient servant of the Lord may again be restored to health. Few men among us have performed such large service with such limited physical strength.

Elwood Scott, a minister from Marion, Ind., has finished his evangelistic work in Wilmington Yearly Meeting, where he held six series of meetings—one at Westboro, Fairfield and Highland, in the limits of Fairfield Quarterly Meeting, and Harveysburg, and Suzer's Creek, in Miami Quarterly Meeting, and Sabina Meeting in Center Quarter. His labors were very acceptable and helpful. Many were converted or reclaimed, and the members strengthened. A number were added to the church. His teaching was clear and convincing, and his appeal for sinners was earnest and forceful.

The dates of the summer conferences of the Young People's Missionary Movement are officially announced as follows: The Western Conference at Winona Lake, Ind., Sixth month 17th to 26th; the Southern Conference at Lookout Mountain, Tenn., Seventh month 1st to 10th, and the Northern Conference at Silver Bay on Lake George, N. Y., Seventh month 22d to 31st. The purpose of these conferences is to afford a practical training school for missionary workers in Sabbath Schools and Young People's Societies, and to combine with such training the facilities for rest and recreation that most Christian workers are obliged to seek in connection with their brief summer vacations.

Charles Stalker and wife, on their way to India, stopped over one month in Palestine. They spent six days at the mission at Ramallah; attended the monthly meeting, and had a number of meetings at the school. Their visit was a means of spiritual blessing to all, and many of the teachers witnessed to definite blessing as the doctrine of the baptism of the Holy Spirit was clearly presented to them. If Friends at home but realized what a blessing they can be to missionary work by visiting the field in the fullness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ there would be certainly more who would have a concern to help the work in the foreign field in this way. Many missionaries in Palestine still speak of the blessings they received when John Dorland visited the Holy Land.

President R. L. Kelly, of Earlham College, delivered an excellent sermon at the morning service in the meeting at Knightstown, Ind., the 20th ult., on the subject, "John the Baptist." He presented many good thoughts. At the evening service the other congregations in town were dismissed, and a large audience was present. He took for his text, "And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man." This, he said, referred to the physical, mental and spiritual development of the boy, and the audience was pleased with his views. Friends were again favored in the morning service, the 27th ult. Elizabeth T. Stanley, of Liberty, Ind., vice-president of the W. C. T. U., gave an able sermon from the text, "What do ye more than the rest." She said that Christian people should take a firmer stand upon moral questions than others. In the evening a union mass meeting was held at the Methodist Church. All four of the local pastors assisted in the service, and Elizabeth T. Stanley spoke. Her address was "At the Mercy of the State." It was the life story of Nellie Gray and Horace Russell, and how their lives were blighted by the liquor traffic. It was a pathetic picture, and was delivered in a most effectual manner.

A very interesting Earlham reunion was held at Long Beach, Cal., on the 16th of last month. Dr. Wm. V. Coffin presided. Eight old students were present and one teacher. Three extrustees of the college were present—William H. Coffin, Joseph A. Goddard and Job Osborne, and three present members of the Board—namely, Timothy Nicholson, Joseph R. Evans and Mary H. Goddard. It was a very enjoyable occasion.

We have just received a letter from Charity M. Barton, of Highland, Minn., which reveals a situation met with in many old meetings. We quote:

"We live in a neighborhood where there was once a Friends' meeting, but the Friends have sold their homes one after another, and moved to other parts. Only a very few of us are left with the dear old meeting house to tell the story of the past. We are conducting a little Sabbath School, which is composed mostly of children from the homes of the settlers, many of whom are Lutherans, who do not take any interest in Sabbath School work. Some of them, however, do send their children. On the 13th ult. a goodly number of older people, also young men and women, gathered, for we were at this time expecting a minister to preach for us. The time came for him to begin services, but he wasn't there. We sang, and a goodly number joined in the singing. We soon felt that God's dear Holy Spirit was most blessedly upon us."

Then follows a description of a living silence, and a spontaneous service. May this be an example for others.

The "London Friend" gives the following item upon the progress of the work in the Woodbrooke Settlement:

"An interesting account of Woodbrooke, with an interview with Dr. Rendel Harris, appeared in last week's 'Examiner,' from which it is evident that if Friends desire to participate to the full in the benefits, they will probably have to make up their minds early. Already there are more who would like to enter than there is accommodation for; and it is not likely that the three young Divinity students from Leyden now in residence will be the last from the Continent. And such an article as that in the 'Examiner' is likely to bring many more applications for admission from outside the Society. As to the Director of Studies, the writer says: 'Whether regard is had to the wide range of his scholarship or to the fervour and depth of his spirituality, there can be no two opinions about the good fortune of the Woodbrooke Committee in securing such a man for the superintendence of their Settlement. He is the man for the post.'

"I could not help thinking that 'Woodbrooke' under my good friend's direction, and with the assistance of his capable lieutenants, was destined to develop into a notable institution. It is but the day of small things as yet, but the Settlement is under the guidance of men of ideas and aspirations, and their spiritual and intellectual energy will carry them far towards the realization of their hopes of making the place a centre of educative influences of the highest order for all who may desire to furnish themselves more thoroughly for the service of God and their fellow-men."

A conference of Friends in Colorado was held Third month 12th and 13th, 1904, at Denver. Three monthly meetings were represented, viz.: Pavonia, Boulder and Denver. It was a time of great blessing. The object of the conference was to discuss the possibility and advisability of a quarterly meeting in Colorado, and to take some measures regarding an organization. All doubts and misgivings brought to the meeting vanished away under the power of the Spirit, and only unity and perfect harmony prevailed. The result was a unanimous decision for a quarterly meeting in Colorado. Resolutions regarding an organization were adopted and sent to the monthly meetings for their ratification. Realizing that there will necessarily be an elapse of time before a permanent quarterly meeting organization can be secured, and realizing, also, the need of fellowship and united effort in the Master's work in Colorado, the conference decided to hold in Denver in Sixth month an "Assembly of Colorado Friends." On Seventh-day evening of the conference occurred the W. F. M. S. and Christian Endeavor rallies. Interesting reports were given in these departments from the organizations in the various meetings. A Sabbath School conference occupied the early morning hours on Sabbath, followed by a devotional meeting. L. Maria Deane, of Peoria, was acceptably present, and preached the word in much power both morning and evening. The conference was especially enjoyed because so many present had been denied the privileges of such a gathering for many years. The fellowship of believers was indeed blessed, and united worship and consultation regarding the Lord's work was indeed strengthening.

Events and Comments.

The war news from the Far East during the past week has been official reports of slight skirmishes between the land forces. An engagement at Chengju, Korea, was the nearest approach to a battle. Several were killed and wounded.

The note circulation of the national banks now amounts to $433,247,605, or the highest ever known. Over $2,000,000 was added to it last week as a result of the surrender of deposits of public money for the Panama Canal payments—the bonds employed to secure deposits being used to base circulation on.

The exhibition of the Whistler paintings in oil, drawings in water-color and pastel, and etchings, in Copley Hall, Boston, has been remarkably successful—perhaps commanding a greater attendance than any other special exhibition ever held in this country. There have been more than 60,000 visitors, and it is said that the management has netted $16,000.

SATISFIED.

The Surgeon's Assistant in a Dangerous Case.

The surgeon who is attending a dangerous case praises the food that helped his little patient.

"I have a story to tell about what Grape-Nuts did and is still doing for my child, a story marvelous, indeed, which seems almost incredible, but which is an absolute fact.

"Two years ago in March my little four-year-old daughter was stricken down with tuberculosis of the right hip joint. We put her in charge of a specialist for treatment. He told us that our only hope of saving her hip and perhaps life in addition to his surgical treatment was to build up her system with good nourishing food to make good rich blood, bone, muscle and fat, which in time would cure the disease by absorption.

"This sounded easy, but proved a difficult case to treat, as there were so many foods recommended that did not agree with her, or that she did not like, and therefore would not eat.

"For a year and a half she barely held her own until Grape-Nuts was tried, which she liked from the first, and in two months gained two pounds in weight, where during the 18 months preceding she had lost weight.

"Now withstanding she is also just recovering from a severe attack of the whooping cough which she has had for the last three months, she has gained steadily in weight; is growing nicely and her entire recovery is promising and hopeful, and we are confident of complete success.

"Our surgeon is delighted with the rapid improvement she is making, and both he and ourselves are more than thankful that we tried Grape-Nuts."

The writer of this letter is the pastor of a church at Warrensville, Ohio. Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Thousands of physicians now prescribe Grape-Nuts food in all cases where strength is expected from food. "There's a reason."

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

It is reported that an engagement took place between the British and the Tibetans at Geru, Tibet, one day last week, in which the Tibetans were repulsed with heavy loss. There has always been much opposition to the British in this section of the country, but it was hoped that the Tibetans would not resort to an open attack. Since this has taken place it may cause war between India and Tibet.

It is now proposed to bring in Oklahoma and Indian Territory as one State, and Arizona and New Mexico as another—the two States to be known as Oklahoma and Arizona. Such is the decision of a sub-committee of the House Committee on Territories. Doubtless this will be the plan of admission finally adopted. They will be great States—in point of area, particularly "Arizona," which would almost equal Texas, with its 265,000 square miles.

There are two widows of Revolutionary soldiers living. One of these is Rebecca Mayo, now over ninety years old, who resides in the South. Stephen Mayo, her husband, had four terms of service in the Revolution, and fought at the battles of Brandywine and Germantown. At the age of twenty-four she married him, when he was seventy-seven years of age. The Committee on Pensions of Congress has reported in favor of increasing her pension from twelve dollars a month to twenty-five dollars a month. The other surviving widow is Esther S. Damon, of Plymouth Union, Vt.

At this time it is interesting to scan the relative positions of the great Powers of the world, as to their respective navies. In the table below, which we find in the "Sun," the present rank of the Powers in naval strength is shown in the first list, and their rank as it will be when the vessels now building are in service, is shown in the second:

AS THEY ARE.

Nation.	Tons.
Great Britain	1,516,040
France	576,108
Russia	416,158
Germany	387,874
United States	294,405
Italy	258,838
Japan	243,586
Austria	93,913

AS THEY WILL BE.

Nation.	Tons.
Great Britain	1,867,250
France	755,757
United States	616,275
Russia	558,432
Germany	505,619
Italy	329,257
Japan	253,681
Austria	149,833

Russia's torpedo squadrons united comprise 128 more vessels than Japan can muster, but these, too, do not appear to be at the spot where they could do the most good.

A traveler in Japan has written to a clergyman of Minneapolis that he saw in Kobe a Japanese clergyman who told him that the government is said to have appointed a Christian chaplain for each division of the army as it proceeds to the front, thus placing Christianity on an equal footing with Shintoism, the religion of the government itself, and with Buddhism, each of which has a chaplain in each division of the army. The authority for the foregoing statement also said that the War Minister, though not a Christian, had ruled that unless the correspondent speaks Japanese well, every correspondent with the Japanese army must have a Christian interpreter. The reason he gives for this ruling is that in the war with China it was only the Christian interpreter who proved reliable and a creditable representative of his country.

GREATLY REDUCED RATES TO LOS ANGELES AND SAN FRANCISCO AND RETURN VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

On April 22d to 30th, inclusive, special excursion tickets will be sold to Los Angeles and San Francisco via Southern Railway, account General Conference Methodist Episcopal Church and National Association of Retail Grocers, at very low rates, tickets good to return until June 30th, 1904. Round-trip rate from Philadelphia, $66.75; proportionate low rates from other points.

In addition to the Standard Pullman Drawing-room Sleeping-cars, operated daily, the Southern Railway operates on fast trains, tri-weekly, high-class, personally-conducted vestibuled excursion Sleeping-cars between Washington, Los Angeles and San Francisco, without change, via Atlanta, New Orleans and El Paso, in which the double berth rate is only $8.50.

Excursion Sleeping-cars leave Washington at 7.10 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa., will furnish all information.

TOUR TO THE PACIFIC COAST AND GRAND CANYON.

Rate, $105.

Via Pennsylvania Railroad, Account General Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church.

On account of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to be held at Los Angeles, Cal., beginning May 3d, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will run a personally-conducted tour to Los Angeles, visiting the Grand Canyon of Arizona en route, at unusually low rates. A special train of the highest grade Pullman equipment will leave New York, Philadelphia and Pittsburg on Wednesday, April 27th, running via Chicago and the Santa Fe Route to the Grand Canyon. Sunday will be spent at this wonderful place, and Los Angeles will be reached on the evening of May 2d. Round-trip tickets, including transportation, one double berth, and meals on special train going; and transportation only returning on regular trains via direct routes or via San Francisco, will be sold at rate of $106 from New York, $105 from Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, and $100 from Pittsburg. Tickets will be good to return at any time before June 30th. Tourists returning via St. Louis may stop off for ten days to visit the World's Fair, by depositing ticket and paying $1.00 fee. A descriptive itinerary will be sent on application to Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, Pa.

A NOBLE WORK.

BY A FRIEND OF HOMELESS CHILDREN.

"Twenty-one years ago three little children were suddenly bereft of father and mother—they were friendless and homeless; but it was only one of the many similar instances happening every day—only three little children left friendless and homeless; that was all. But it was a crucial moment in at least one life. Rev. J. G. Lemen was at that time pastor of a large church in Council Bluffs, Ia. This man, whose heart was large enough to find a place for every unfortunate one, took these children into his own home, where they shared the same loving, tender care that was bestowed upon his own little ones. It was not long before he learned of other children who had been left to the cold mercies of a selfish world. Moved with compassion, he took these, also, to his already overcrowded home. Then came the test; money was needed. He had a few thousand dollars which he had saved up for a rainy day. He little knew what the Master had in store for him; but he was obedient, and when the news came that other little helpless ones had been left alone, fatherless and motherless, with no one to care for them, and the command came to take these also, to the ordinary man, with his house filled to overflowing and a large congregation looking to him to be fed spiritually, it would have seemed like an impossibility; not so, however, with this man; it was EMPTY NOW.

How One Woman Quit Medicine.

"While a coffee user my stomach troubled me for years," says a lady of Columbus, Ohio, "and I had to take medicine all the time. I had what I thought was the best stomach medicine I could get, had to keep getting it filled all the time at 40 cents a bottle. I did not know what the cause of my trouble was, but just dragged along from day to day suffering and taking medicine all the time.

"About six months ago I quite tea and coffee, and began drinking Postum, and I have not had my prescription filled since, which is a great surprise to me, for it proves that coffee was the cause of all my trouble, although I never suspected it.

"When my friends ask me how I feel since I have been taking Postum I say, 'To tell the truth I don't feel at all, only that I get hungry and eat everything I want and lots of it, and it never hurts me, and I am happy and well and contented all the time.'

"I could not get my family to drink Postum for a while until I mixed it in a little coffee, and kept on reducing the amount of coffee until I got it all Postum. Now they all like it, and they never belch it up like coffee.

"We all know that Postum is a sunshine maker. I find it helps one greatly, for we do not have to think of aches and pains all the time, and can use our minds for other things." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The one who has to bother with coffee aches and pains is badly handicapped in the race for fame and fortune. Postum is a wonderful rebuilders. There's a reason.

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

enough for him to know that his Master approved of it and bid him to do it. As he stepped out upon His promises and obeyed the command to go forward, the way opened before him, and when he had exhausted his own competency, never doubting but that a way would be opened to supply their needs, He who owns the cattle upon a thousand hills moved upon the hearts of His faithful subjects to send of their substance, that these little, homeless ones might be cared for. Larger quarters became necessary, and they were secured. Other children were left homeless, and found under his roof not only shelter from the storm, but a loving, tender father, as all at the Home delight to call him; and, more than this in his sainted wife, now deceased, who presided over the household affairs and was continually looking after their welfare.

"From a small beginning, twenty-one years ago, the Christian Home has grown until now about two hundred and fifteen children are cared for there, and two thousand have been placed in good Christian families. The real estate consists of about twenty-five cottages and other buildings, all owned by an organization which has been formed through the efforts of Mr. Lemen with a view of making it a permanent organization. Mr. and Mrs. Lemen have been blessed with four lovely children—three sons and one daughter. All of them take great delight in the work of the Home, and on them, no doubt, the mantle of their father and mother will fall. The oldest son is giving his entire time to this work also.

"The scrupulous neatness and order that pervades the entire institution, the loving salutation of 'Hello, papa!' that rings out from every quarter as he passes about the grounds, and the remarkable executive ability he displays in all the management of the affairs of the Home, are sufficient to impress every visitor that it is no ordinary man who has been called to this great and noble work. Children are taken here from any part of the globe, and have the best possible care and training. You, my readers, wherever you may be, may have a part in this grand work. It is a labor of love in behalf of all homeless, suffering children everywhere. The children are frequently adopted by Christian people, but are never allowed to go from the Home excepting into Christian families who are properly vouched for. The Christian Home is non-sectarian, but is heartily indorsed and supported by all denominations. It takes children from every State, and is not a local affair, but belongs to the world.

"We have given this brief description of the 'Christian Home' with the hope that all who read it will become interested in its welfare. If you have money which the Master desires you to use for such purposes, send it to this Home. There is no institution that is more worthy of your gift than this.

"They publish a valuable paper called 'The Word and the Way,' subscription price, only twenty-five cents per year. We assure you that if you will subscribe for it, you will get more than your money's worth, and we hope you will forward twenty-five cents or $1.00 for yourself and three friends. Volumes might be written about this institution did space permit.

"For further information and proper

IT IS A MATTER OF HEALTH

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER
 Absolutely Pure
THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

description of the work, address Christian Home, Council Bluffs, Iowa."—"The Western Christian Advocate."

AT THE SIGN OF THE ROCKING
KEGS

You see them everywhere

NO OTHER PAINTS, STAINS, ENAMELS,
VARNISHES

are "just as good" as "NICE" and if your dealer does not have them, don't accept a substitute, but send to us for illustrated catalogue, color cards and prices.

EUGENE E. NICE

Nos. 272-274 S. Second St.
PHILADELPHIA

THEY SAID HE OWED NOTHING

when he died. A little inquiry showed he had not provided for his chief creditors,—his family. This is best discharged through a life insurance policy in the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE

921-3-5 Chestnut Street, Phila.

CORRECT FOOTWEAR

AT FAIR PRICES.

We direct attention to some of the lines that have helped to make this department one of the best places in town to buy shoes—in some respects the best place. These are only a few of our popular lines:

MEN'S "HIGH-GRADE" SHOES AND OXFORDS—very fine footwear; shown here in all the most popular leathers—$5.00.

MEN'S "S. & C. SPECIALS"—high shoes and oxfords, in patent coltskin, tan Russia calf, box calf, wax calf and vici kid; the greatest $3.50 shoe values we know of. The very newest shapes—all $3.50.

WOMEN'S OXFORDS AND RIBBON TIES—in the top notch of style at prices most women pay. Blucher oxfords, with patent colt vamps and dull backs, at $3.00. Kid oxfords, with seamless foxing and dull tops, at $3.00. Patent coltskin, ribbon ties, Spanish arched, at $3.50. Tan oxfords, the new Tuxedo last, at $4.00.

WOMEN'S "S. & C. SPECIALS"—high shoes and oxfords. We are keeping up the standard of quality in every pair; thirty styles to select from; all at one popular price—$3.00.

MISSSES SHOES—kid, in button or lace styles, with kid or patent leather tips, at $1.65. The "S. & C. School" Shoes, lace or button, at $2.00. Our "Royal Oak" lines are reduced from $2.50 to $2.00. "Right-shape" Shoes, with broad toes and Goodyear welts, at $2.50. Tan Russia calf, in lace, at $3.00. "High-grade" Shoes, at $3.50. White buckskin, lace style, at $4.00.

STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER

PHILADELPHIA

Acker has it—perfection in Coffee.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a.

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote, 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p.m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cts. per night; $3 per week

Two occupants, 50 cts. each, per night.
2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL

Phone Spruce 33-55. Clerk

FINANCIAL.6% NET

Sound, conservative first mortgages on improved realty. We examine every security and know every borrower. We make our loans with our own money and turn them over complete. In 28 years we have learned how to select the best. No one now handling western mortgages has had more experience. We give you the benefit of that experience. The quality of the securities now on hand has never been surpassed. Highest references. Write for circulars and full information free.

PERKINS & COMPANY Lawrence, Kan.6%

to 7% Choice First Mortgage Loans, Seattle and vicinity. Local and N. V. references. Established 1887. Correspondence Solicited. JAMES BOTHWELL, Seattle, Washington.

FOR SALE

$10,000—5 per cent. Gold First Mortgage Electric Light Bonds at 100 and interest. $5,000—5 per cent. Gold First Mortgage Warehouse Bonds at 102½ and interest. $5,000—5 per cent. Gold First Mortgage Guaranteed Gas Bonds at 100 and interest. $10,000—5 per cent. Gold First Mortgage Guaranteed Street Railway Bonds at 100 and interest.

HOWARD M. SWAB,Member Philadelphia Stock Exchange, Room 61, Main Floor, Bourse.Mortgages Net 6% in North Dakota

THEY are the best, gilt-edged, rock-ribbed, guaranteed 6% investment in America. Safe as government bonds and pay better.

I have been selling these mortgages for 18 years, and have never had to foreclose, and never lost a cent of principal or interest for a single customer.

I personally know every farm covered by the mortgages, as well as the farmers giving them. I know them both to be right, or I have nothing to do with them. Their land is increasing in value every day, thus increasing the value of the security.

I collect both the interest and principal free, and remit in New York exchange, without the least trouble or bother of the customer.

I will be pleased to put you in the way of finding out all about me. Write me for further information.

WALTER L. WILLIAMSON*Investment Banker*

LISBON, NORTH DAKOTA

"The Mould of a Man's Fortune,"

says Bacon, "is in his own hands." Especially is this true now, when he can, by means of Endowment Life Insurance, accumulate a fortune by moderate yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly instalments.

THE PRUDENTIAL

INSURANCE CO. OF AMERICA.

JOHN F. DRYDEN,
Pres.Home Office:
NEWARK,
N. J.

Send Coupon for Information.

Without committing myself to any action I shall be glad to receive free, particulars and rates of Endowment Policies.

For.....

Name..... Age.....

Address.....

Occupation..... Dept. 67.

HOOPING-COUGH AND CROUP.Roche's Herbal Embrocation

The celebrated and effectual English Cure without internal medicine. Proprietors, W. EDWARDS & SON, Queen Victoria St., London, England. Wholesale of E. Fougere & Co., 50 North William Street, N. Y.

The American Friend

Vol. XI

FOURTH MONTH 14, 1904

No. 15

	PAGE
EDITORIALS.—Evidences of the Resurrection.—Coming Yearly Meetings.—Editorial Note	243-244
The Missionary Journeys of George Fox in Great Britain	244
John W. Cadbury, Jr.
Rejoicing at Guilford College	245
The Society of Friends in Denmark	246
SOME VIEWS ON PRESENT TOPICS:
The Pastoral Care of the Membership	246
Abijah J. Weaver.
The Pastoral Oversight of Churches,	247
Benjamin F. Trueblood.
THE INTERNATIONAL LESSON	249
Lesson for Fourth month 24, 1904.
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR	250
Topic for Fourth month 24, 1904.
MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT	250
The Society of Friends in Japan	251
Gurney Binford.
CORRESPONDENCE	251
THINGS OF INTEREST AMONG OURSELVES,	252
DIED	253
EVENTS AND COMMENTS	254

"QUO VADIS, DOMINE?"

(Whither goest Thou, Lord?)

Lord, whither goest Thou? I see
As the years pass Thou still art leading me,
The rustle of Thy robe falls on mine ear,
Thy Voice in hours of gloom speaks words of cheer;
And yet I long to know the way by which we go;
Perplexed, I ask Thee, "Quo Vadis, Domine?"

Lord, whither goest Thou? I feel,
As on my soul Thy tender accents steal,
That the rough path Thou lead'st me must be best,
The toilsome journey makes the sweeter rest;
Yet tell me, Lord, I pray, to cheer me on my way—
The goal I fain would see, "Quo Vadis, Domine?"

Lord, whither goest Thou? How long
Before I hear the welcome welcoming song
Of those who say, "Thy traveling days are o'er,
The pilgrim's staff is needed now no more,"
When, past all doubt and pain, I ne'er shall ask again,
In sore perplexity, "Quo Vadis, Domine?"

—A. FREWEN AYLWARD.
In "Good Words."

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.50 A YEAR ❄ ❄ ❄ PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
AMERICAN FRIEND PUBLISHING COMPANY, 718 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA

EDUCATIONAL.

EARLHAM COLLEGE,RICHMOND,
INDIANA

Prof. Elbert Russell offers courses regularly in Kings, New Testament Times, Life of Christ, The Apostolic Age, Church History, New Testament Literature, Romans, John, Biblical Literature, Isaiah.

Prof. Cyrus W. Hodgkin, The Protestant Reformation.

Prof. Anna M. Demarce, New Testament, Greek.
Asst. Prof. Lindley, History of the Hebrews.
Pres. Kelly, History of Philosophy, Ethics, Psychology.

The Oakwood Seminary

UNION SPRINGS, N. Y.

Founded in 1796.

A boarding school for boys and girls under the care of New York Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Academic, College Preparatory and Commercial

Spring term begins Fourth month 5, 1904

SAMUEL H. HODGIN, Principal. LINDLEY M. STEVENS, Superintendent.

STENOGRAPHING, TYPEWRITING and MIMEOGRAPHING. Prices moderate.

MARY M. KITE

407 Lippincott Building, 12th and Filbert Sts., Phila.
Phone No. 3-33-00

STENOGRAPHER

GEO. B. COCK

Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter Street.
Telephones.

GO SOUTH OR SOUTHWEST

via the Seaboard Air Line Ry. Two daily trains from Washington with Pullman Sleepers and a la carte Dining Cars. The best service to Atlanta, Birmingham, New Orleans, Savannah, Jacksonville and Tampa. For Industrial, Resort or Manatee booklets, address W. E. Conklyn, General Agent, 1411 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER.—Careful and accurate repairing, with prompt service, has brought me the custom of many Friends. Their patronage is particularly solicited. My store is nearest to the Market Street ferries, and is easy of access from every part of the city. W. L. Berry, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

We particularly invite the attention of the readers of "The American Friend" to this column. It will be found useful for almost everyone who wishes to advertise. The cost is 50c. per line each insertion. No advertisement is accepted for less than 25c. Cash with order.

OCEAN GROVE, N. J.—Cottages and boarding houses for rent. Send for printed list. E. N. Woolston, No. 50 Main Avenue, Ocean Grove, N. J.

FRIEND! Here's a message for thee. The "Friend" Mfg. Co., Gasport, N. Y., would like to send one of their catalogs of Spraying Outfits. Will thee ask for it?

EUROPE—$170.—Select tour 41 days. Best class on steamers. Great success. Fourth year. Longer tours at higher prices. Apply at once. Levi D. Temple, Flemington, N. J.

"INDIANA YEARLY MEETING OF FRIENDS, 1844," is the title of a very instructive picture drawn by Marcus Mote. In the foreground is a group of the old-time Friends in their queer garb, while in the background stands the plain meeting-house, surrounded with trees and numerous vehicles. An excellent half-tone copy on enameled paper, 6x10 inches. Postpaid, 50c. each, 50 cents per dozen. THE AMERICAN FRIEND, 718 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

WANTED.—A thousand families of "Friends" and others to come west and buy land in Woods county, Oklahoma, while you can get good farms at half their value. Rich valley land near Friends' meeting, Stella Academy, railroad and good market. In the great wheat and alfalfa belt, and fruit in abundance, the best part of Oklahoma. Warm, healthy climate, with splendid society. Write us for circulars and price lists. References, Pastor "Friends'" Church, First National Bank of Cherokee. Very truly, VOTAW and SETZER, "Friends."

OLD-FASHIONED grandfather clocks repaired at home. If yours needs attention send me a postal or, better, call. My store is within three minutes' walk of the Market Street ferries. Repairing of clocks and watches of every kind. Prompt service and moderate prices. W. L. Berry, Watchmaker and Jeweler, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

GREAT CHICAGO THEATER DISASTER complete. 396 pages, 69 full-page illustrations; fine cloth, paper and extra print. 60c. postpaid. Address, Howard Book House, Elwood, Ind.

A YOUNG LADY, college graduate, wishes a position as companion or mother's helper, tutor to small children. Good reader, competent in instrumental music. Experienced. Address E. B., care AMERICAN FRIEND.

S. F. BALDERSTON'S SONWall Paper and Decorations

Window Shades Made to Order

302 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILA.

WANTED

back numbers and volumes of

American Friend
Western Friend
Friends' Review
Gospel Expositor
Christian Worker
Western Work
Nebraska Friend

Also books, tracts, documents, bearing on Friends' during the nineteenth century. Communicate with

ALLEN C. THOMAS,
Haverford, Pa.

JOSEPH B. SCATTERGOOD
House and Sign Painter
313 South 5th St., Philadelphia

BREAD MACHINE

For Household Use.

Sifts the flour and mixes 10 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CYRUS CHAMBERS, Jr.) 52d & Media Sts., Philadelphia

WILLIAM S. YARNALL
Manufacturing OPTICIAN

118 S. FIFTEENTH ST., PHILA.
4th Door Below Chestnut St.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

Leave it to us.

Don't fuss and fume over small details. Leave them to us. Our eight year's experience in fine printing enables us to put through a piece of work intelligently and with judgment. On your next catalog or booklet let us show what we can do.

THE LEEDS & BIDDLE CO., Inc.

Makers of the Better Kind of Printing

1019-21 Market Street, Phila.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a.
FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote, 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p.m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cts. per night; $3 per week
Two occupants, 50 cts. each, per night.
2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL

Phone Spruce 33-55.

Clerk.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA. Office, 409 CHESTNUT STREET

CAPITAL, $1,000,000

ASSETS, $63,970,335.34

Surplus and Undivided Profits, belonging to Stockholders

4,026,151.15

Surplus, belonging to Insurance Account

5,635,620.25

Incorporated Third month 22, 1865. Charter Perpetual.

INSURES LIVES, GRANTS ANNUITIES, RECEIVES MONEY ON DEPOSIT, returnable on demand for which interest is allowed.

And is empowered by law to act as EXECUTOR ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, GUARDIAN, ASSIGNEE, COMMITTEE, RECEIVER, AGENT, etc.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the assets of the Company.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.

BOXES $5 AND UPWARDS

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY, President.

T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-Prest.
ASA S. WING, Vice-President.
JOS. ASHBROOK, Man. Ins. Dept.
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer.

J. R. FOULKE, Trust Officer.
DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary.
J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Assistant Trust Officer
C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary.

DIRECTORS:

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY,
T. WISTAR BROWN,
HENRY HAINES,
RICHARD WOOD,
CHAS. HARTSHORNE,

ASA S. WING,
PHILIP C. GARRETT,
JAMES V. WATSON,
WM. LONGSTRETH,
THOS. SCATTERGOOD,

J. PRESTON THOMAS,
ROBERT M. JANNEY,
MARRIOTT C. MORRIS,
FRANK H. TAYLOR,
JOSEPH B. TOWNSEND, Jr.

The American Friend

"Truth is the highest thing a man may keep."
"That they all may be one."

VOL. XI.

PHILADELPHIA, FOURTH MONTH 14, 1904.

No. 15.

EVIDENCES OF THE RESURRECTION.

DURING the past week Christian literature has been well filled with accounts of the resurrection and with arguments for the immortality of the soul. Nearly every congregation in Christendom has heard at least one sermon on this central article of the faith. Every year the interest in this Easter theme seems keener and the grounds for faith in the endless life seem more real and coercive.

This much is sure to start with. The belief that Christ was still alive made the Church and conquered the world. The crucifixion destroyed the disciples' hopes and left them timid, weak, scattered and full of despair. They had no more confidence than has a little child who is lost in a great, strange city. Suddenly they discover that death has been conquered and that He who was crucified is risen. It is impossible to question the fact that the disciples believed that their Master was alive and that they had seen, heard and handled Him, as of old. It was this inward certainty that made the weak man bold, that put courage in the place of fear and that turned despair into confidence. It was this vision of the living Christ that made an apostle out of Saul, the persecutor—"last of all he appeared unto me also."

But that was all more than eighteen centuries ago. They believed because they saw. We who are born in these late ages, we have no such sight. We can touch no nail prints, we hear no blessed lips saying, "lovest thou me?" We sit at no breaking of bread where He is visible at the table's head. How shall we believe?

The greatest evidence there is or can be for us is the fulfilment of the promise: "You shall do greater things than I have done, because I am going on living with my Father." These words are literally fulfilled. During His earthly life-time He gathered perhaps five hundred who trusted in Him and who were in some sense His followers. He healed a few score who were sick. He preached the good news of God's love to perhaps some hundreds of His own people. He transformed completely a few households as at Bethany and in Capernaum. He disappeared from sight and became an invisible, spiritual presence. He began to work through those who believed on Him.

The results defy all figures. Followers have come by the millions from those peoples who then were fierce pagan warriors. The good news has been preached in all known lands and is being put into all known tongues. Wherever this religion has gone men and women have learned the art of healing disease and caring for the sick so that now no man is too poor to have the benefits of some Christian hospital, and no home is too poor to keep away the trained nurse who tends the sick for the love of Christ. Instead of here and there a home touched with the light of love, there are millions of homes where the alabaster box is broken to anoint this unseen Christ, and the fragrance of it rises in every Christian township. Poor, struggling men, who are in the vice of habit or in the grip of passion are still met as Paul was and are turned into missionaries and heralds of this invisible Lord. He is working His miracles every day—no longer in a narrow strip of land by the Great Sea, no longer among one people, but around the globe, through men of all colors and all languages. The power of the resurrection, the power of the living Christ is as evident as the power of the moon on the tides. It transforms men, it reforms cities, it remakes households, it orders communities, it permeates paganism, it abolishes slums, it heals disease, it raises those who were dead in sin into new creatures of holiness and joy. We sit by the shore and see the wide ocean heaving from pole to pole drawn and marshalled by an unseen force which pulls it around the globe and sweeps it up inlet and river. We see the effects and we believe in the gravitation of the moon. We see the pierced hands no longer, but we see in city and town, in home lands and in foreign countries the evil weakened and the good raised up. We see lives drawn toward one dominating Life, held and ruled by one Person who is King and Priest by the power of His endless life, and though we cannot see, we believe by the compelling evidence of facts.

COMING YEARLY MEETINGS.

PHILADELPHIA Yearly Meeting opens next week on the 18th of the month. This begins the series of yearly meetings in 1904, which follow each other in close succession, including Dublin and London Yearly Meetings, until the middle of the Eleventh month, when the series ends with Baltimore. If these sixteen religious bodies were bound together into one spiritually-organic whole, all working toward one large common end, they would be a power to be reckoned with in the Christian Church, and in the still wider human society which includes the Church. Alas, they are not so bound together, and still less have they maintained a real fellowship with the other bodies of Friends which bear the common family name.

One of the worst heresies that has ever prevailed is the heresy of ceasing to maintain love for, and fellowship with, those who do not find it possible to state their faith in the same words which we use to state our own faith with. A person may make an intellectual mistake, i. e., a mistake in his way of thinking, and still be perfectly true in his faith to Christ; but the moment his love dies out and he begins to treat part of his fellow-Christians as the heathen treats his enemy, he falls out of the true Christian fold—no matter how loudly he may proclaim himself the defender of the faith. The first article of Christian orthodoxy is Thou shalt love.

This lack of love has been for at least a hundred years the real source of weakness in our branch of the Church. It is this that has sapped our vitality and eaten the heart out of our spirituality. While we have been busy building up the walls about our independent sections and thanking God that we were not gone astray like those other misguided Friends of this ism or that, our own spiritual life has been shrinking and our own spiritual vision has been growing dim. There is no straighter, surer road to loss of spiritual life than that, and he who runs may read the guide-boards.

The first step toward a better Quakerism, whether it is in Philadelphia or in Ohio, is a return to the first principle of the Gospel, Thou shalt love. But love means always the practice of love. It means that we must go to work to understand each other and help bear each other's burdens and stop forever saying "I am holier than you are."

There is not a single yearly meeting in America that has solved the problem of maintaining an adequate spiritual ministry. It is not done by crying out against paid ministry. It is not done by setting up a pastoral system which relieves the membership of their spiritual burdens. There is no place here for throwing stones. We need to co-operate together to produce a priesthood of believers that actually works in this present world. The same thing is true of every other single principle or method of practice. We are all experimenting. We are all making failures. We all have our lessons to learn, and we all need the experience which the other groups of Friends have gained. Those very Friends who seem to Philadelphia Yearly Meeting farthest off, and least inside the common family could teach it some most essential lessons for the want of which her hands are weak and her cords short, and Philadelphia could also show these Friends in their turn what they lack for the construction of a church which shall have solidity and strength and the weight of quiet character. Will the series of yearly meetings in 1904 help toward bringing us all along toward this common purpose and this organic, spiritual oneness by which new power shall come to each single body? God grant it.

EDITORIAL NOTE.

It has seldom been the privilege of the editor to attend a more satisfactory and encouraging Conference than the one held at High Point, N. C., on the 1st and 2d of this month. Friends came up from all the quarterly meetings, and a very impressive study of the present state of the Church and its needs was made. A detailed report of the situation in each quarterly meeting was given. No attempt was made to paint fair pictures, but rather to give the exact state of things. The result was decidedly illuminating. The listeners were truly instructed and went back home with a clearer vision of what work must be done in the future. The addresses and messages from visiting Friends were deeply appreciated, but the most encouraging feature was the discovery that North Carolina Friends themselves are learning how to work out their own problems. One came away with larger hope and courage.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

THE MISSIONARY JOURNEYS OF GEORGE FOX IN GREAT BRITAIN.*

BY JOHN W. CADBURY, JR.

To any one who reads for the first time George Fox's Journal, perhaps the most striking thing that presents itself to him is the constant activity at home and abroad of this our first Quaker missionary. To give justice to the tremendous work carried on by Fox in his own country would be too large a task for the limits of this paper. We shall have to content ourselves, therefore, if we catch only an occasional glimpse of him as he hurries from place to place, and trace out the general course of his greater journeys.

*No account can be given in this paper of the extensive missionary journeys of George Fox in America, or of his two visits to Holland and Germany.

It was only by much earnest seeking, through bitter disappointment and years of sorrow and tribulation, that George Fox found out the great truth that there was only One who "could speak to his condition." Once with this in his heart, and having proved it to be a fact of the utmost reality in his own life, he was too generous not to share it with others. All around him he saw a people who were wandering in gross darkness. This is what he says of them: "Then, some time after, the Lord commanded me to go abroad into the world, which was like a briery, thorny wilderness. Priests and professors, magistrates and people, were all like a sea, when I came to proclaim the day of the Lord amongst them. . . . I saw that Christ died for all men, and was a propitiation for all; and enlightened all men and women with His divine and saving light; and that none could be a true believer but who believed in it. . . . Now when the Lord and His Son Jesus Christ sent me forth into the world to preach His everlasting gospel and kingdom, I was glad that I was commanded to turn people to that inward Light, Spirit and grace by which all might know their salvation and their way to God; even that divine Spirit which would lead them into all truth, and which I infallibly knew would never deceive any. But with and by this divine power and Spirit of God, and the light of Jesus, I was to bring people off from all their own ways to Christ the new and living way."

We find then that the first four years of Fox's missionary life (1648-1651) were spent in the Midland Counties and Yorkshire. This was very natural as they were nearest his own home.

He knew that he would meet opposition on all sides, but he determined to hold back nothing which he felt he was called to speak. As a consequence this aroused the hatred of the bigoted and narrow priests, and in the second year of his ministry we read of his first imprisonment at Nottingham.

"Now as I went towards Nottingham on a First-day in the morning, with Friends to a meeting there, when I came on the top of a hill in sight of the town I espied the great steeple house, and the Lord said unto me, 'Thou must go cry against yonder great idol, and against the worshippers therein.' When I came there all the people looked like fallow ground and the priest (like a great lump of earth) stood in his pulpit above. He took for his text these words of Peter, 'We have also a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the daystar arise in your hearts.' And he told the people that this was the Scriptures, by which they were to try all doctrines, religions and opinions. Now the Lord's power was so mighty upon me, and so strong in me, that I could not hold, but was made to cry out and say, 'O, no; it is not the Scriptures'; and I told them what it was, namely, the Holy Spirit, by which the holy men of God gave forth the Scriptures whereby opinions, religions and judgments were to be tried for to lead into all truth and so gave the knowledge of all truth. The Jews had the Scriptures and yet resisted the Holy Ghost, and rejected Christ the bright and morning star. They persecuted Christ and His apostles and took upon them to try their doctrines by the Scriptures, but erred in judgment, and did not try them aright, because they tried without the Holy Ghost. As I spake thus amongst them the officers came and took me away, and put me into a nasty, stinking prison."

His next imprisonment at Derby lasted for almost a year (Tenth month of 1650 till the beginning of the winter of 1651). Again it was his utterances in the parish church which brought him into trouble. He was given much liberty, however, and his keepers gave him permission to walk a mile outside the prison, hoping he would avail himself of the opportunity to escape. In this way he spoke in the markets and streets, through all the villages in the limits of his freedom.

In the year 1651 Fox's mission, hitherto confined to the Midland Counties, passed over into Yorkshire. In these visits many were convinced who afterwards were to take prominent places in the Society. "So Fox moved about on his missionary journey through the great County of York. He preached in Beverly Minster, apparently with something more than mere endurance on the part of the listeners, for a great lady of the neighborhood informed Justice Hotham that 'there came an angel or spirit into the church at Beverly and spoke the wonderful things of God, to the astonishment of all that were there; and when it had done it passed away, and they did not know whence it came and whither it went, but it astonished all, both priests, professors and magistrates of the town.'"

Up to this time we find Fox wandering about the towns and villages of the Midland Counties, speaking as he was lead to all classes of people. He did not realize that from his preaching there would be raised a great people whose influence would "shake" both England and America, and whose doctrines were destined to be carried to the ends of the earth. He still had no other purpose in his ministry but that of turning men from the power of darkness to the light of the gospel.

(Continued next week.)

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

REJOICING AT GUILFORD COLLEGE.

On the afternoon of the 5th a public meeting was held in Memorial Hall to celebrate the successful effort to clear the college of indebtedness.

A brief program of exercises had been arranged. The Board of Trustees called the meeting. Invitations were sent to many persons within reach of the college who had contributed to the end thus reached, and a number responded by being present. President L. L. Hobbs made some remarks upon the history of the school and college, and referred to the large part taken in educational work among Friends in North Carolina by Francis T. King, stating that he fully endorsed the change in 1888 from New Garden Boarding School to Guilford College, himself proposing the name. An excellent portrait of F. T. King, presented by him to the college, had been placed on the platform.

J. Elwood Cox, the chairman of the Board of Trustees, showed how the debt had been contracted. He stated that more than fifteen thousand dollars of it were for permanent and necessary improvements, such as cattle barn, gymnasium, furnishing Memorial and the Y. M. C. A. Halls, the erection of cottages, rent on which pays a good interest, and the establishing of an excellent system of water works, affording an abundance of pure water, and an electric light plant, power from which pumps the water at the same time the buildings and grounds are being lighted.

Brief remarks were made by Cyrus P. Frazier, of the Board of Trustees, and by D. Ralph Parker, of the Senior Class for the students, and by Julia White for the alumni. Allen Jay gave a very interesting account of his work in North Carolina nearly forty years ago, stating that he was requested by Francis T. King, on behalf of the Baltimore Association, early after the close of the Civil War, to take charge of the monthly meeting schools established by the Association and superintended in the first place by Prof. Joseph Moore, of Earlham College. His work, he said, then and now had been a work of love, and he desired, in taking leave of his friends in North Carolina, to encourage them to be faithful to occupy the field in which the Lord had given them a good place and make of Guilford College the most for North Carolina Yearly Meeting.

The college authorities gave half holiday, the large United States flag presented to the college by Joshua L. Baily was raised, and every one felt a sense of joyousness and gratitude for the conditions which made such an event possible. Free from indebtedness, with over sixty thousand dollars endowment, the outlook for Guilford College is the brightest it has ever been in its history.

This outlook is all the brighter when we consider the demand in North Carolina for the kind of work Guilford is doing. The current year the enrollment has reached 231, the largest number in any one year since the boarding school was opened in 1837.

It will also be of interest to many friends of Guilford, who have kindly contributed to the liquidation of the debt, and to whom the managers of the college desire to express sincere thanks, to know that there are now outstanding unpaid subscriptions conditioned upon bringing the endowment up to one hundred thousand dollars, amounting to $21,619.00. Therefore less than eighteen thousand dollars would bring up the endowment to one hundred thousand, and secure the payment of all conditional subscriptions. The Harriet Green Memorial Fund needs this sum, $18,000.00, adequately to endow a chair in Bible Study.

L. L. HOBBS.

THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS IN DENMARK.

The little handful of Danish Friends are earnestly fighting the battle for liberty of conscience in the matter of military service. As the law in regard to this is now under revision the Friends have presented a memorial to the government praying that all who are conscientiously opposed to fighting may be allowed to take their share in a salvage corps instead. The salvage corps is to be used wherever desired by the government in work for the relief of suffering, or in work for the public good, but is under no condition to form a part of the army. The non-combatants also say that they would be willing to give a longer time to service in this corps than is required in the regular army, and this regulation would in itself serve as a guarantee that only those who really object to military service on conscientious grounds would avail themselves of the alternative.

We feel that, should their request be granted, these Danish peace lovers will have made a valuable contribution to the solution of the problem of compulsory military service.—“Messenger of Peace” (Baltimore).

Some Views on Present Topics.

THE PASTORAL CARE OF THE MEMBERSHIP.

BY ABIJAH J. WEAVER.

The proper pastoral care of our membership, is to my mind one of the most important problems that now confronts our Church and its ministry, and is a most difficult one to treat, from the fact that the conditions and needs of our meetings are so varied that what would succeed in one place would utterly fail in another.

First, let me say, that in adopting a pastoral system similar to other churches we are in danger of overlooking and failing to develop the pastoral gifts of our membership at large, and the meeting that exchanges a live working membership for a hard-working pastor who is willing to assume the entire responsibility and attempt to do the work lone-handed is certainly the loser in the exchange. But the pastor, where there is one, usually finds himself called to a meeting after the pastoral gift in the local membership has ceased to be active, or has never been developed, and he must never forget that the greatest service he can render such a meeting is to develop its local talent in this and every other department.

That every Friends' meeting needs, and must have, either a pastor or a good, live pastoral committee, well organized and with a working head, and a definite plan of work will, I think, be recognized by all who wish to see the Church prosper, and the principles for which we stand maintained.

The word pastor means shepherd, and the Good Shepherd said: “I am the good shepherd, and know my sheep, and am known of mine,” and no pastor will ever succeed who does not take pains to become thoroughly acquainted with his flock. But the text implies more than that; it suggests that he must also give his flock an opportunity to become acquainted with him. This they cannot do while he keeps himself either hidden away in his study or under a cloak of ministerial dignity. There is nothing more destructive to the winning power of a pastor than a dignified ministerial reserve and clerical air when dealing with people who are not accustomed to attend meetings for worship. He may know them sufficiently to be able to call them by name, and yet they not know him and be able to recognize his voice as that of a true friend and shepherd. Then, if he is such a friend, they will give him their confidence more or less, so that there will come to his ears almost daily little confidences, likes and dislikes, little jealousies, petty whims, even family feuds, and a hundred other things too numerous to mention, and most of which never should have been mentioned, but woe unto that pastor who fails to keep the door of his lips.

Otherwise his visitations will become a means of spreading discord, rather than ministering to the peace and unity of the flock. Never let an individual go out to do pastoral work, whose ability to keep a guarded tongue is doubted.

On the other hand, a simple word of explanation on the part of the pastor, who holds the place of a mutual friend, will very often prevent or heal these feuds, as a very large per cent. of them are simply the failure of people of different dispositions and training to understand each other.

The pastor should endeavor to reach all classes, as no congregation can be a well-balanced, powerful influence for good that is composed of a single class, whether the class to which it caters is financial, social, intellectual or even sex. The result will be a one-sided church, out of touch with other large classes of needy humanity. The pastor who confines his work largely to the reaching of a highly-cultured class, will soon have a congregation in which intellect is at a premium, and the value of heart thoughts are largely unknown; while in a neighboring meeting where the work has all been done along the so-called heart line, we may find that the mind has been as thoroughly ignored as if God had never given us intelligence.

The results are that what started in genuine heart work degenerated into mere emotionalism, appealing to the lowest instead of the highest senses, and instead of the controlled flame that generates power and utilizes it, there is an explosion or a consuming fire that destroys all. Nor is the distinction of sex referred to a matter to be overlooked; rather it should be one of the most serious problems now before the pastoral workers, especially in our cities and larger villages; for the average pastoral call does not find the man of the house at home once in ten times, if that often, and the average man is almost inaccessible to the pastor. He is in the busy shops, or behind factory walls with "No Admittance" on every door. The pastor calls at his home over and over to find only the good wife and mother alone, the children at school, the husband at his work; she is deeply moved by the earnest prayer for her husband and little ones, but he who needed it most, and whose life is from necessity surrounded by things grossly material, fails to get the uplift that would enable him to feel that there was some one in the world that really had friendly interest in him, and was not as all other men seemed to be, seeking not him, but his.

These facts alone will largely explain why there are so many more women than men in the average congregation on Sabbath morning. This inequality of numbers I think you will find to exist only where these pastoral conditions exist; therefore, how to reach these men should be a matter of prayerful interest to every worker, and to such interested workers there will be found ways. All men have off times, as when the shop is closed for repairs. The pastor should know where every man is employed, and when the morning paper announces the shutdown take advantage of it at once to visit these homes. Business men have their slack days, when a discreet worker will be welcomed. Then there are the evening hours, when the whole family is at home. I know your evenings are all engaged with social and other duties and pleasures, but can you not spare a night or two each week for the sake of souls who cannot be reached at any other time?

All men are mortal, and will have times of indisposition when they will be compelled to give up work, and I have at times felt a real joy to know that one of these times had come to some certain individuals. It is a pastor's opportunity, for no one is so restless, and finds time hanging so heavily on his hands as the average man when shut in. The most irreligious will welcome at least a short call, which may be frequently repeated, and his friendship and confidence gained, so that he will now follow the shepherd into the fold. These and many other ways the true pastor will find of reaching men, and let us not fail to improve them, and not forget when we are deploring the non-attendance of men at our meetings for worship, that fully 90 per cent. of the usual pastoral work is being done among the women alone; while the average man lives a life of complete isolation so far as spiritual things are concerned, and about the only time the church-going people actually hunt him up is when they are securing subscriptions for the church in which his wife is a member.

Glen Falls, N. Y.

THE PASTORAL OVERSIGHT OF CHURCHES.

BY BENJAMIN F. TRUEBLOOD.

If all the members of a church were full-grown, mature Christians, there would be little need of what we call pastoral care. But no congregation is of this character. There are young people coming into and growing up in it. There are persons newly won to Christ who need instructing and encouraging. There are imperfect members in all stages of growth, indifferent and careless members, backsliding and worldly members, weak and discouraged, invalid and needy saints, all of whom need spiritual oversight and help in one way or another.

The pastoral care of a congregation, with all its variety of conditions, belongs naturally to the more enlightened, experienced, strong and well-developed members. This was the ground on which elders were appointed in the early Church. In our more enlightened and democratic times, the elders, if there is any longer need of such a body, constitute only a part of the number of whom some part of the pastoral service may rightly be expected.

Theoretically, possibly, this duty may be said to belong to the whole body of Christians in a congregation, and in some simple forms may be asked of those of even small spiritual development. Nothing does so much for one's own Christian advancement as to do something for somebody else.

The pastoral service of a congregation ought to be thoroughly and wisely organized. Organization is a necessity of every human institution. Lack of organization in this regard has been the great weakness, in many places the ruin, of our Friends' meetings. Everything has until recently been left to drift at loose ends, and disintegration has been the mournful result. We have paid dearly for our extreme individualism, with its numerous excrescences of arbitrariness and averseness to co-operation. Unless we correct it speedily we may yet pay for it with our life.

The first requisite of efficient organization of the pastoral service is a leader. In the recognition of the necessity of leadership we have been woefully deficient. In our day this necessity is absolutely imperative. A law so universal in all successful secular enterprises cannot be disregarded without peril in the work of caring spiritually for the members of the church. Without wise and trained leadership those who ought to take part in the pastoral service will do but scattering, irregular and incoherent work. Somebody must know the whole field of need and the special gifts of the workers, and thus be able to serve as a bond of union between all the parts of the membership. The experiment of going without leadership and leaving the pastoral service to the spontaneous concern of individuals and to the occasional work of committees doing their labor hastily and perfunctorily has proved itself on the whole entirely unworthy of further trial.

But pastors, or whatever the leaders of the service may be called, are not leaders if they attempt to do all the work themselves. Failure in this respect has been almost as serious in many meetings living under the new conditions as was or is that under the old. There are various aspects of the pastoral service which no one person, however wise and many-sided, can possibly do. And if he could, he ought not to attempt it. Various members of the congregation ought for their own sakes to have a share in it. The successful pastoral leader is not the man or woman who can preach the best sermons on Sabbath or make the most calls during the week, important as both these may be, but the one who finds out what the different members ought to do and can do, and sees that they get to doing it. The capacity to stir up the members and to organize them for effective service is a much greater attainment than to go ahead and do everything oneself either because one thinks he can do it better than others or because he finds it so difficult to get others to be willing to try to do anything.

An equally important requisite of efficient pastoral service is willingness and earnest desire of the members of a congregation to be organized and to have their share in the work. Without this a leader, however capable, wise and earnest in the Master's service, can, at best, do only very imperfect work. Members who are indifferent, or who are determined that things shall go their way if at all, or who hold such exaggerated notions of the Lord's guidance of individuals that they cannot take their places lovingly and loyally in an organized effort to build up and strengthen the congregation, can easily make any successful shepherding of a "flock of God" impossible. But where the mature members of a congregation are tender in spirit, patient and sympathetic toward one another, mutually preferring one another, forgiving and self-sacrificing, a congregation cannot easily grow weak and disintegrate. Has not a great deal of the failure in our churches lain just here?

In many forms of pastoral oversight, especially in families and among women and children, the service of women ought to be used much more than was once the case. Where the pastoral leader is a man, there ought to be, in all meetings of sufficient strength to afford it, a capable, tactful, devoted woman set apart to spend practically the whole of her time in pastoral work. Where from smallness of numbers or other reason this cannot be done, a good deal of most valuable pastoral service can be performed by the women of the congregation under the general oversight of the leader of the work.

It is very doubtful if the old-fashioned routine "pastoral calls" always in vogue in many denominations and in recent years in many of our Friends' churches have any longer any very useful role. This certainly is true in many places. In these days of democratic equality and general education pastoral workers ought to study how to do their work in ways which will not make those visited feel treated as inferiors or subjects, but as far as possible as co-equal members in the common brotherhood. All appearances of dictation or lecturing or of desire to interfere with the sacred rights of personality should be scrupulously avoided.

After all, the great requisite for successful pastoral service is the possession of the shepherd-spirit. Without this no machinery, no methods, no running about the neighborhood, no religious interviews, no pious and wordy praying, will do much to hold a flock steadily true to the Master. But can any professed follower of Jesus Christ find any reasonable excuse for not having the shepherd-spirit in some form and in some measure?

Boston, Mass.

The International Lesson.

SECOND QUARTER.

LESSON IV.

FOURTH MONTH 24, 1904.

THE MISSION OF THE SEVENTY.

Luke 10: 1-16.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth laborers into his harvest. Luke 10: 2.

DAILY READINGS.

Second-day, Fourth mo. 18.—The mission of the seventy. Luke 10: 1-16.

Third-day, Fourth mo. 19.—The white harvest. John 4: 31-38.

Fourth-day, Fourth mo. 20.—Great commission. Mark 16: 14-20.

Fifth-day, Fourth mo. 21.—His promised presence. Matt. 28: 16-20.

Sixth-day, Fourth mo. 22.—First missionaries sent. Acts 13: 1-5.

Seventh-day, Fourth mo. 23.—Turning to Gentiles. Acts 13: 44-52.

First-day, Fourth mo. 24.—Rest in Christ. Matt. 11: 25-30.

Time.—Late in the fall of A.D. 29, and a month or two after the Transfiguration.

Place.—Somewhere in the northern part of Perea, east of the Jordan. This district stretched along the Jordan from the Dead Sea to the Sea of Galilee.

Place in the Life of Christ.—The beginning of Christ's Perea ministry, four or five months before the crucifixion.

The account is found only in Luke.

In the interval between the present lesson and the last, Christ had been to Jerusalem at the time of the Feast of Tabernacles, as described in John 7. He then returned to Galilee and started on the Perea tour during which the incidents of the lesson took place. In Perea, so far as known, he had spent but little time.

1. "After these things." The incidents described in Luke 9. "Appointed." There is no trace of ordaining in the theological sense. "Seventy others." That is, besides the twelve. Why there should be seventy is not told. Some think to correspond with the seventy elders (Numbers 11: 16); others with the Sanhedrin. "Two and two." As he had sent the twelve (Mark 6: 7). That they might be a mutual aid. "Before his face." In advance of himself. To prepare the field for Christ. "City and place." The walled towns and the villages. There were no farm-houses; every one lived either in a town or a village.

2. "The harvest is plenteous." Revised Version. Many were to be gained for Christ. "The laborers are few." That is, compared with the plenteousness of the harvest. "Pray ye," etc. They being laborers themselves would know the extent of the field and the need of workers. "Send forth." The word is a very strong one; it means "send forth with haste and urgency." Compare Matt. 10: 5-15.

3. "Go your ways." Go to your appointed places. "As lambs," etc. The idea is that they must have simplicity and defencelessness.

4. "Carry no purse, no wallet, no shoes." The meaning is that they should make no special preparation for the journey, but go in their everyday dress. A knowledge of Oriental customs throws much light on this verse. There were very few inns, and it was expected that travelers would be entertained at private houses, so there would be little use of a purse, or of a wallet to carry food. "Shoes." These were the footwear used in the house, while sandals were worn on the journey or out of doors, and the seventy were undoubtedly supplied with these. "Salute no man." Reference is here made to the elaborate salutations so common in the East even to-day. They took up much time.

5. "Peace be to this house." The common Jewish salutation on entering a house. It was considered courteous to do this.

6. "Son of peace." One inclined to peace, one who would welcome them. "It shall turn to you again." That is, it will not rest on the household, but be as if it had been unspoken. Compare Psa. 35: 13.

7. They were to be content with what was set before them. See verse 8. "The laborer is worthy of his hire." This is probably a proverbial expression; it is also used in 1 Tim. 5: 18. The idea is, do not scruple to be entertained because you are giving fully as much as you receive. "Go not from house to house." They were to give their whole energies to the work in which they were engaged. Social visiting would take up entirely too much time.

9. "Heal the sick." This was for the double purpose of showing their compassion, and as an attestation of their mission. "The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you." This was a vital part of their mission. The message was to all.

10, 11. The message is to be given publicly "in the streets." By word and by symbol they were to express the fact of the rejection, and the fact that the kingdom of God had come near them. It was the custom of a Jew as he entered Palestine to wipe off from his feet every particle of the dust of a Gentile country, and so this symbolic act expressed utter separation.

12. "More tolerable." Why? Because the kingdom of God had not come nigh Sodom as it had come nigh them. This responsibility was greater because they had greater light, and greater opportunities. Luke 12: 47, 49.

13. "Woe unto thee!" Not an imprecation, but a statement of fact. "Chorazin." This city was not far from Capernaum, on the northwest shore of the Sea of Galilee. "Bethsaida." Somewhere near where the Jordan enters the Sea of Galilee, but its site has not been determined. Some think that Bethsaida lay on each side of the river. It was the city of Philip and Andrew and Peter (John 1: 44). None of the mighty works referred to in the verse are recorded in the gospels, but it must be remembered that only a very few can have been recorded, but that he did many "mighty works" is again and again mentioned. Compare Luke 4: 23; John 21: 25; Matt. 13: 58. Tyre and Sidon, cities of Phœnicia, which, though not of their ancient importance, were wealthy, luxurious cities, full of sin and wickedness. Like Sodom, they had not had the opportunities of the Galilean cities.

15. "And thou Capernaum, shalt thou be exalted unto heaven? Thou shalt be brought down unto Hades." Revised Version. Capernaum had been the home of Christ; it had had opportunities above other places and had rejected them. When these words were spoken all these cities were teeming with an active, prosperous population; now their very sites are uncertain.

16. "He that heareth you heareth me; and he that rejecteth you rejecteth me; and he that rejecteth me rejecteth him that sent me." Revised Version. Christ identifyeth Himself with His disciples. Their work for Him is His work. It is just as true in the twentieth century. For the success of the mission of the seventy see verses 17-24.

Christian Endeavor

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Lindley D. Clark, 1429 New York Avenue, Washington, D.C.]

TOPIC FOR FOURTH MONTH TWENTY-FOURTH.

WHAT CHRIST CAN DO FOR DARKEST AFRICA.

Isa. 45 : 11-19.

Second-day, Fourth mo. 18.—Ethiopia shall know Christ. Ps. 87.

Third-day, Fourth mo. 19.—The heathen warned. Joel 3 : 9-14.

Fourth-day, Fourth mo. 20.—A terrible fate. Jer. 9 : 25, 26.

Fifth-day, Fourth mo. 21.—Mercy promised. Jer. 12 : 14-17.

Sixth-day, Fourth mo. 22.—Pray for Africa. Matt. 9 : 35-38.

Seventh-day, Fourth mo. 23.—Ethiopia promised. Ps. 68 : 29-31.

If the question, What can Christ do for the Anglo-Saxon? has in any degree been answered, we are in so far furnished with the suggestion as to what He can do for the African. Assuredly races and conditions differ, but Philip showed the Ethiopian the same picture and met with the same response that have been found in every seeking and finding heart since John the Baptist pointed out to his disciples the "Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world."

The problems of language and remoteness and climatic and other conditions seem formidable, and so in a sense they are; but our own ancestors were far from easily reached when the Word first came to them, so that we are debtors to both Greek and barbarian; and the same grace that prevailed in the forests of Germany and Britain is ready to bring in the savage tribes of Africa when instruments are found through which it may work.

We read of the elementary beginnings of evangelization, and they seem to proceed slowly enough. One mission at and near Lake Nyassa has reduced seven languages to writing, and has in its schools an average of more than 15,000 pupils. One of its missionaries, speaking out of an abundant experience, says: "It is a hard thing to raise a population the length of the alphabet"; but while the educational work goes on, every pupil is receiving daily lessons in the Scriptures and is becoming able to carry his Bible back home to be in some measure a light-bearer.

Africa is not through with its sufferings from the greed of the so-called Christian nations, and the missionary is all too often under the necessity of disclaiming their acts. To put an end to war and oppression and intemperance is certainly Christ's desire for Africa as for the world, and is for us to accomplish in His name.

"None of us liveth to himself." The spirit of Christ forbids that we should attempt it, and the essential conditions of life assure the failure of any effort to isolate ourselves, if it should be made. If Africa cannot be raised, the whole world is held back, for more and more is every part proving its interrelation with every other part.

It is easy to speak the comforting word, that in carrying the truth to her and in her blessing we would be blessed and find enlargement; but there is need perhaps also to remember that in neglect and darkness for her there is loss and darkness for us. Failing of fruitfulness according to that which we have received, we may become as the land bearing thorns and thistles—"rejected, and nigh unto a curse."

For recent accounts of our work in Africa see THE AMERICAN FRIEND for Second month 11th and Third month 10th.

Missionary Department.

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Herman Newman, 718 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.]

AFRICA INDUSTRIAL MISSION.

The following items from the minutes of the annual board meeting are of interest:

Emory J. Rees and wife, who were accepted as missionaries one year ago, returned to America last 5th month from their former field in South Africa, for a needed rest, expect to start for British East Africa to join the other F. A. I. M. missionaries at Kaimosi about the middle of Fourth month.

On the mission farm is a waterfall high enough to furnish ample power for all machinery the mission may wish to run, also a belt containing a variety of hard and soft wood; but as a handsaw is the only means the missionaries have of reducing this to usable shape they have had to face the problem of house-building without lumber.

Knowing these facts, John A. Hasenpflug realized the necessity of a sawmill and a water wheel to generate power, and presented the matter to the Sabbath School of the First Friends' Church of Cleveland, Ohio, and they undertook to raise the money. Energetic effort has been rewarded, and as a result they expect soon to ship to Kaimosi a New Buckeye Improved Mill, that can saw timber 24 inches in diameter by 24 feet in length, and a turbine wheel capable of generating about 50 horse-power. As the mill only requires about 20 horse-power, there will be a surplus which can be applied as needs arise.

Any one desiring further information regarding the Friends' Africa Industrial Mission will please address the secretary, Emma B. Malone, 702 East Prospect Street, Cleveland, Ohio.

THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS IN JAPAN.

[The following is taken from "The Christian Movement in Its Relation to the New Life in Japan." Published at Yokohama, 1903.—Ed.]

The Society of Friends in Japan has made efforts along two different lines, namely, educational and evangelistic. The position held by Friends has by some been misunderstood. The Union Movement, Taikyo Dendo, has offered an opportunity for Friends to show themselves thoroughly evangelistic and evangelical. They have co-operated with the Taikyo Dendo and have been accepted into membership in the Japan Evangelical Alliance. In two cities special evangelistic meetings have been held with good success. The Japanese evangelists employed by Friends have gone into country towns and villages from which there have come invitations and in which they have found surprisingly increased interest in the gospel and a newly-awakened desire to hear about Christianity.

From one little seaside city repeated requests came for meetings. Now an evangelist goes there each week and is entertained and given a place for meetings free. In a neighboring village of ill repute one proprietor and his wife closed up their business, found respectable homes for all the girls in their employ, and decided to be Christians. This is the result of a magic lantern meeting held near them in July, 1901. One of our evangelists now visits them and a few of their friends each week.

In co-operation with the Japanese Christians, the Mission has made increased efforts in the way of establishing foundations and executing the work of building up communities of united faithful Christians who are really baptised into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, and who, in their daily lives, experience that essential communion of partaking of the body and the blood of Christ. It has cheered the hearts of the workers to see real deepening in spiritual life on the part of some. This with the simple confiding faith of the converts has been new evidence of the power of the gospel to save.

There have been special efforts to get men to engage in evangelistic work, and arrangements have been made for training a few men who are willing to give themselves for this work.

One of the Japanese members has opened a home for children who cannot otherwise be given home training and elementary education, and in a small way is showing forth that spirit of self-sacrifice and devotion to the good of others which is developed in all those who are loyal to Christ.

The way has not been open for much work on social problems, but some of the Friends have been quite active in temperance reform and a gift of books has been made to the graduates of the prison reform school in Tokyo.

The Sabbath School work for children has surpassed anything previously accomplished by the Mission. Work for women has been successfully carried on.

The special educational work under the care of Friends is a girls' school in Tokyo. The enrollment and attendance of this school have been greater than ever before. The school aims at developing Christian character and giving the best training which it can provide to qualify girls spiritually, mentally and physically for undertaking any honorable calling in life. Special success has been attained in the development of Christian zeal and the older girls take an active part in Christian work.

If from the experience and observation of the Friends' mission we should speak of religious progress in Japan for the past year, we should say that the Taikyo Dendo has greatly awakened the public curiosity to know the teachings of Christianity, so that requests have come from places where no Christian work is done, for information on the subject. This has created a greater demand for Christian workers and opened the way for greater activity. The growing educational institutions and commercial interests of the country also increase the demand for men that are upright and can be trusted. This makes it difficult to get the men of the right kind of natural qualifications for evangelistic work. The greatest hindrance to the work, however, is that class of men who, though convinced of the truth of Christianity, are not willing to make the sacrifice necessary to become consistent followers of Him who said, "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you."

GURNEY BINFORD.

Correspondence.

THE BOOK OF MEETINGS.

The Five Years Meeting of 1902, referred to its Evangelistic and Church Extension Board, the publication of a "Book of Meetings."

Through THE AMERICAN FRIEND, and by means of private correspondence, this subject has repeatedly been brought to the notice of Friends, and printed slips of questions designed to elicit the necessary information have been sent to every yearly, quarterly and monthly meeting embraced by the Five Years Meeting.

The returns thus far received are very incomplete. The importance of such a book is very great, but its value depends upon its accuracy and completeness.

Arrangements for its publication were made some time ago, but the printing cannot commence until the returns are all in.

Under the circumstances the committee feel compelled once more to call the attention of Friends to this subject, and to urge those to whom the printed slips of questions have been sent to promptly fill out the replies and forward them to Levi Gregory, 200 Montgomery Street, San Jose, Cal.

Should any one need more question sheets, drop a postal card to Levi Gregory at above address, and any desired number will be sent.

It is hoped that Friends will respond very promptly to this appeal that the publication of the book may no longer be delayed.

CHARLES H. JONES,

Chairman of Board.

Guilford College, N. C., Fourth month 1st, 1904.

Dear Editor: Permit me space in thy columns to acknowledge with thankfulness the loving-kindness of my Heavenly Father in supporting and strengthening me while assisting in the work of relieving Guilford College, N. C., of its debt of $27,000. I recognize His leading in this service, and I see His hand in bringing it to a successful close.

I also wish to express my gratitude to the dear friends of North Carolina, who have subscribed one-third of the whole amount, and to dear friends of Philadelphia, Baltimore and other places in our country who have responded to my personal appeal, and to the letters which I have written. To all my thoughts go out in loving remembrance.

Thy sincere friend,

ALLEN JAY.

Editor THE AMERICAN FRIEND:

Though isolated from the Society of Friends, I keep posted through THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

I feel much interested in the spirituality and doctrines of the church of my choice. I have watched carefully the comments of the FRIEND on some of the greatest hindrances (to my mind) to the spiritual upbuilding of our Society. I am confident that the Secret Orders are doing more to the injury of the different churches than any other one evil at the present time.

I have just read, carefully, the comments in the last FRIEND entitled, "The Importance of Fellowship in Christian Life."

It rejoices my heart to learn that some of our Society are waking up to the dreadful reality of the Secret Orders in the churches, and especially in our Society. Lately I was informed that in a certain, prominent monthly meeting, some of the would-be-elders were prominent Free Masons, and were causing serious trouble in the Society. Now these were not the young men, but men of mature age.

True, as you say, it is a matter that must be handled delicately and properly; and can be done so, only by those who know what the lodges really are, and why young men go to them.

Those of us who have only heard the names of such organizations feel too ignorant to say anything. Our opinions would be useless and of no value.

I cannot see how any intelligent searcher after truth can plead ignorance in regard to the question of Secret Orders of to-day.

To my knowledge there is no one sin that is more thoroughly exposed than the working and influences of the Secret Orders of to-day.

If there are any readers of THE AMERICAN FRIEND who are interested and not posted on these lines, write to the National Christian Association, 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, and you can get all the information you may desire. By all means get C. Finney and E. Ronain on "Free Masonry." These books should be in every Christian home in the land.

In conclusion, I have written this from a sincere conviction of duty, rather than from a spirit of antagonism, believing that it is our duty, as Christians and a Church, to do all we can to get people to see the dangers to which we are drifting.

To this end I remain a well-wishing friend to THE AMERICAN FRIEND and all of its readers.

I. HINSHAW.

Goldendale, Wash., Third month 29th, 1904.

ENGLISH RECORDS OF EARLY FRIENDS.

The region in and around Philadelphia may be termed the center of Quaker colonization in America, covering the period from 1675 to 1725. The descendants of these people, now numbering millions, are interested in knowing all that can be ascertained in regard to their ancestors, whose persecutions as members of a religious sect and whose trials as settlers in a new country were influential in molding the character which they transmitted to their posterity.

Having been engaged in genealogical work for more than forty years, during which I have examined the records of nearly all the Friends' Meetings in this region, it has long been my desire to visit the mother country and there obtain copies of such records of births, deaths and marriages of the families of these early settlers in Pennsylvania and vicinity as have been preserved in the place of their nativity, and to supplement this with such other interesting facts as may possibly be obtained from the voluminous archives of the Society of Friends there.

The expenses incident to such an undertaking have hitherto prevented the attempt, but having recently received some offers of liberal contributions for that purpose, I am now encouraged to present the subject to the consideration of a wider circle of interested persons. What has been done by Henry F. Waters for the early settlers of New England I hope in a measure to accomplish for the Quaker colonists of the Middle States, with whose history on this side I am probably more familiar than any other person. The field proposed is well defined and reasonably possible of being covered.

The information thus collected will be placed among the treasures of the Genealogical Society of Pennsylvania, at the Historical Rooms in Philadelphia, in a series of well-bound and indexed volumes; and as those who make it possible to accomplish such an undertaking by contributing of their means are equally entitled to credit with those who do the work, it is proposed that the title pages of these volumes shall show to whose generosity the seeker after genealogical lore is indebted for such a storehouse of facts; together with a statement of the amount contributed and the necessary expenses incurred.

To carry out this plan fully may require two or three years, but it is desirable to make arrangements in advance of going.

GILBERT COPE,

Member of Historical and Genealogical Societies of Penna.
West Chester, Pa.

Jerusalem, Third month 17th, 1904.

Editor THE AMERICAN FRIEND:

I thought it might be of interest to your readers to hear a few words from the Ramallah Mission in Palestine, as my wife and I have just returned from a week's visit to that place.

It was a time of rich blessing from the presence of the Lord. Souls sought salvation and the Holy Ghost during our stay there. The missionaries, Edward and Mary Kelsey and Rosa Lee, are laboring faithfully with cheerful hearts at the front of the battle, and God is greatly blessing their work. They gave us a warm welcome on our arrival, and spared no pains in making our stay pleasant as well as profitable. As we met and mingled our prayers with these dear friends and those under their care our hearts were made to praise the Lord for such a work in this needy land.

The work is impressive for its solidity. Many speak in high praise of the character of the work done here.

The monthly meeting we had the privilege of attending was one of peculiar interest, and would be a credit to the homeland. As we gathered in worship we felt a real spirit in the meeting, although it was in Arabic. As they prayed and sang our hearts were touched with the power of the Gospel, that it was not by might nor by power, but by my Spirit; saith the Lord. We felt very much at home, and they decided to give us a returning minute. All things were done decently and in order. We ask for prayers for the work and workers that they may be kept by the power of God until He says it is enough.

CHARLES H. STALKER.

Things of Interest Among Ourselves.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND will be sent to a new subscriber from now until First month 1st, 1905, for $1.00.

Prof. D. W. Dennis and wife have returned to their home, Richmond, Ind., after a three months' vacation in California.

Nathan H. Clark, who has been sick for some weeks, was in attendance at Westfield, Ind., Meeting, and took part in the Easter services, conducted by Sylvester Newlin.

Calvin Bond, a lifelong and most worthy Friend, who was seriously injured in a gas explosion at Carmel, Ind., on the 31st ult., is suffering greatly with his injuries, but with exemplary patience and fortitude.

President R. L. Kelly, of Earlham College, made a short trip to New Haven, Conn., and Boston, Mass., during the spring recess. He has been chosen commencement orator this year by the Indiana Dental College, located at Indianapolis.

Timothy B. Hussey, of North Berwick, Maine, has been spending some days in and about Philadelphia in the interests of the Eli and Sibyl Jones Mission in Palestine. He is now in the South studying the work of institutions for the education of the colored people.

Special Easter services were held at East Branch (formerly Gray) Meeting, Ind., Flora Holliday, pastor, preaching on the text, "He is not here, he is risen," followed by William and Ellen Buell. The meeting has been largely reinforced of late as a result of a revival, in which the labors of Cary Taylor, of Kokomo, were owned and blessed by the Spirit. During this work, in which the membership was most helpful, there were 76 hopeful conversions and renewals.

New York city friends held a tea meeting at their meeting house, Twentieth Street, Seventh-day evening, the 2d inst. The attendance was larger than at any other tea meeting this year. George A. Barton, of Bryn Mawr College, gave an address on "Sacred Sites in Jerusalem," illustrated by stereopticon views.

William C. Allen laid before the recent sitting of Haddonfield Quarterly Meeting a concern to pay a religious visit to inhabitants of the island of Porto Rico. This receiving the approval of that meeting remains to be passed on to the approaching Yearly Meeting of Ministers and Elders for its consideration.

A splendid series of meetings at Thorntown, Ind., closed the 23d ult. They began under the leadership of the pastors, F. Randolph and wife, who were afterwards joined by Willis Bond, of Watseka, Ill. Many were definitely blessed, and a goodly number added to the meeting.

The Haverford graduates of North Carolina gave a banquet to Rufus M. Jones at High Point on the evening of the 2d. Out of the seventeen Haverford men in the State, fourteen were present, so that with their wives and invited guests twenty-five gathered at the board. At the close of the banquet a permanent Haverford Club of North Carolina was organized.

Friends in South China, Maine, enjoyed a very pleasant occasion on the 26th of last month. It was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the marriage of Linwood W. and Emma Jones. Linwood W. Jones is a faithful and devoted minister in the South China meetings, and the Friends of the neighborhood met and surprised them, and left behind many tributes of appreciation.

Now that war news is occupying so much of the attention of the public it is especially desirable that Friends should be prepared with the arguments for peace. The Friends' Peace Association of Moorestown, N. J., has recently secured a large number of leaflets which will be sent without charge to any one applying therefor. Address the treasurer, Grace Evans, 205 East Central Avenue.

At Vermilion Monthly Meeting, held at Vermilion Grove, Ill., the 2d inst., the correspondent having removed from the limits of the meeting, Thomas H. Rees was appointed to fill the place. Lewis W. McFarland, late of Lowell, Kan., recently located in the meeting. Emory J. Rees and wife, both members of the meeting, expect to sail from New York on the 23d inst. for Africa, to take their place as missionaries in the African Inland Mission. The Academy is progressing nicely under the leadership of Willard O. Trueblood, ably assisted by Clare Stanley and Emory Katcliff. These teachers are all graduates of Earlham College.

Friends at High Point have built a beautiful new meeting house. It is one of the most impressive and satisfactory meeting houses now standing in this country. The lot on which it is built cost $2,000. The completed edifice itself has cost $6,433, and for seating $500, every dollar of which is paid. The house was crowded on First-day, the 3d, when it was first opened for public meetings. Allen Jay and Rufus M. Jones addressed large assemblies both morning and evening. J. Edgar Williams and Raymond Binford conducted a missionary meeting in the afternoon, and Miriam Harrison and Olive Newlin held a meeting for children at the same hour in the basement.

DIED.

HORNER.—At Green P. O., Jay County, Ind., Third month 26th, 1904, Mattie Irena Horner (nee Kunce), aged 25 years. She had a birthright membership with Friends.

HUBBARD.—At his home in Monrovia, Ind., Second month 17th, 1904, Nathan E. Hubbard, aged nearly 63 years. He was a lifelong member of Friends. Although an active business man he was deeply interested in the various lines of church work. He filled important positions with entire satisfaction to the church.

TAYLOR.—At her home, 3620 West Forty-first Street, Denver, Col., Third month 29th, 1904, Lauretta May, daughter of Isaac and Angelina Taylor, and wife of Gordon M. Taylor, in her 34th year. She was a member of Willow Spring Monthly Meeting, Mo.

VORHIS.—At Richmond, Ind., Third month 25th, 1904, Luke Vorhis, aged 76 years. He was a member of Pike local meeting, Portland, Ind., Monthly Meeting.

STATISTICS OF THE AMERICAN FRIENDS' FOREIGN MISSIONS FOR THE YEAR 1902-1903.

Number of stations with resident missionaries	22
Number out-stations where regular meetings are held ..	49
Number missionaries (men, 30; women, 54)	84
Number native helpers:
Recorded ministers	8
Unrecorded preachers	25
Teachers	66
Bible women	14
Other helpers	80
Number organized meetings	19
Number church members	2120
Number Sabbath School members	3081
Number boarding and higher schools	8
Number pupils attending boarding and higher schools ..	409
Number other schools	29
Number pupils attending other schools	1307
Native contributions	$6,013
Home contributions	$63,927

LIST OF MEETINGS TO BE HELD AT TWELFTH STREET MEETING HOUSE, PHILA., DURING YEARLY MEETING WEEK.

Second-day, Fourth month 18th.—Afternoon, 4 o'clock.

Annual meeting of The Peace Association of Friends of Philadelphia.

The annual reports of the association will be read, and the usual business in connection with the annual meeting transacted.

Dr. Benjamin F. Trueblood, corresponding secretary of the American Peace Society, will deliver an address on "The Movement Toward World Federation."

Tea from 6 to 7.15 o'clock.

Evening.—7.45 o'clock.

Annual meeting of Friends' Freedmen's Association.

The annual reports of the work for the past year will be presented.

Third-day, Fourth month 19th.—Afternoon, 4 o'clock.

Special meeting of The Foreign Missionary Association of Friends of Philadelphia.

Addresses are expected on "Quakerism in Foreign Missions and the Conditions in Cuba," by Alfred C. Garrett, and "Tidings from Japan," by Anne Morris Gleason.

Tea from 6 to 7.15 o'clock.

Evening.—7.45 o'clock.

Annual meeting of the Temperance Association of Friends of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting.

Addresses are expected from Ira S. Frame, Rebecca N. Taylor and Herman Newman.

Fourth-day, Fourth month 20th.—Afternoon, 4 o'clock.

Forty-third annual meeting of Friends' First-day School Association of Philadelphia and its vicinity.

Reports from the various schools and classes; Discussion; and the appointment of officers and committees.

Tea from 6 to 7.15 o'clock.

Evening.—7.45 o'clock.

The subject for the evening session will be "The Opportunity of the Bible School in Extending the Influence of Friends."

1. "The Building up of Schools," by Walter W. Haviland.

2. "The Teaching in the Schools," by Wm. Edward Cadbury.

There will probably be opportunity for brief discussion.

Fifth-day, Fourth month 21st.

Meetings for worship are customarily held in the meeting houses at Fourth and Arch Streets, at Sixth and Noble Streets, and on Twelfth Street below Market, on Fifth-day of Yearly Meeting Week, at 10 o'clock a.m.

Tea from 6 to 7.15 o'clock.

Evening.—7.45 o'clock.

Annual meeting of the Indian Aid Association of Friends of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting.

The Executive Committee will make a brief report for the past year.

An address will be delivered by N. DuBois Miller on "The General Progress of the Indian and the Indian Question."

Edward M. Wistar, who has recently visited the schools and meetings will give an account of the present situation.

Events and Comments.

Permanent residents of Washington are pleased with the interest Congress is showing in the improvement and beautification of their city.

A 30-cent United States postage stamp of 1869 brought $165 at an auction at the Hotel Droust in Paris, recently, and the snuff-box sold at Christie's in London for the incredible price of $32,500.

John D. Rockefeller has given to the Johns Hopkins Hospital at Baltimore $500,000, and the amount has been accepted by the Board of Trustees of that institution. The income of the hospital was seriously affected by the destruction of many houses belonging to it in the recent fire, upon which there was inadequate insurance.

The trustees of Berea College have voted to test in the highest courts of the land the new law of Kentucky forbidding them to educate white and black students at the same institution. The litigation will probably fill two years, and not until a final judicial decision has been obtained will they alter the present educational system at Berea, or take any steps beyond their present position. Andrew Carnegie's gift of $30,000 to this

ARMY TRIALS.

An Infantryman's Long Siege.

This soldier's tale of food is interesting.

During his term of service in the 17th Infantry in Cuba and Philippines, an Ohio soldier boy contracted a disease of the stomach and bowels which all army doctors who treated him pronounced incurable, but which Grape-Nuts food alone cured:

"In October, 1899, when my enlistment expired, I was discharged from the army at Calulute, Philippines, and returned to the States on the first available steamer that left Manila. When I got home I was a total wreck physically, and my doctor put me to bed saying he considered me the worst broken-down man of my age he ever saw, and after treating me six months he considered my case beyond medical aid.

"During the fall and winter of 1900 and 1901 I was admitted to the Barnes Hospital in Washington, D. C., for treatment for chronic inflammation of the stomach and bowels, but after five months returned home as bad as ever.

"I continued taking medicine until February, 1902, when reading a newspaper one day I read about Grape-Nuts, and was so impressed I sent out for a package right away.

"The result is quickly told, for I have used Grape-Nuts continually ever since with the best results, my health is so I can do a fair day's hard work, stomach and bowels are in good condition, have gained 40 pounds in weight, and I feel like a new man altogether.

"I owe my present good health to Grape-Nuts beyond all doubt, for medical science was exhausted." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Had he consulted any one of several thousand physicians we know of they would have prescribed Grape-Nuts immediately.

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

institution is now announced, and this indicates that in the end the school may be more helped than hurt financially by the new Kentucky law.

The Geological Survey will soon issue its report on mineral resources for 1902, showing that that year the total value of the commercial mineral products of the United States was $1,260,639,415, which is a gain of 16.2 per cent. over 1901. The fuels increased $26,667,743 or 6 per cent. Every variety of fuel increased in value except anthracite coal, which showed a decrease in quantity of 23,301,850 long tons and in value of $36,330,434.

Our Government refuses to comply with the order of The Hague Tribunal in the recent Venezuelan case that it should collect from the various powers the costs or the arbitration. The United States is not the bailiff of The Hague Court. It will pay its own share of the expenses, but will not do more. At the same time, it is to be hoped that satisfactory arrangements can be made to execute the court's decree in some other way, without causing the court's international prestige to be sacrificed.

The Thompson Power bill, which permits the draining of the Niagara River to an enormous extent, was put through the New York Senate last week. The measure has been passed by the Assembly, so that the veto of Governor Odell alone will prevent the spoliation of the Falls. The bill permits cities, towns and villages outside of Niagara County to use the power furnished by the company. The franchise is of unknown but immense value. It is known as one of the nagrant "grab" enactments of the session. It has received no approval, save by that locality in which it is designed to locate its operations.

Three propositions relating to the municipal ownership and operation of street railways were referred to the voters of Chicago last week, and all of them were adopted by heavy majorities. The first proposition relates to the enabling act passed by the last Legislature, which permits the cities of Illinois to own, operate and lease street railways after the act shall have been submitted to the electors of any city and approved by a majority of those voting thereon. The second authorizes the City Council to proceed without delay to acquire ownership of the street railways, and the third enables the City Council, instead of granting any franchises, to proceed at once to license the street railway companies until municipal ownership can be secured, and compel them to give satisfactory service. The roads are now operated under a temporary arrangement with the city, and the adoption of the propositions will probably have no immediate effect.

Not many weeks now remain before the St. Louis Exposition is booked to open, as it is scheduled for the 30th. Things appear to be in a pretty forward state. All the exhibit palaces have been completed for some time, and the great festival hall is to be finished, if all goes well, in a fortnight. Spring work on the landscape gardening has been begun, and millions of plants are being set out. It is estimated that the exhibit will fill 20,000 cars, and these are coming at a rapid rate, and installation is well under way.

IT IS A MATTER OF HEALTH

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

In areas under roof this exposition will far surpass all the rest, for over 250 acres are to be covered. There were 200 acres roofed at Chicago, and 125 in Paris in 1900. There are 1,240 acres in the exposition grounds at St. Louis, against 633 at Chicago, and 336 at Paris. The Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo covered 300 acres, and the combined exhibit buildings were contained in an area of 15.1 acres, not quite equaling the size of the palace of transportation at St. Louis.

OLD POINT COMFORT, RICHMOND AND WASHINGTON.

Six-day Tour via Pennsylvania Railroad.

The third personally-conducted tour to Old Point Comfort, Richmond and Washington via the Pennsylvania Railroad for the present season will leave New York and Philadelphia on Saturday, April 23d.

Tickets, including transportation, meals en route in both directions, transfers of passengers and baggage, hotel accommodations at Old Point Comfort, Richmond and Washington, and carriage ride about Richmond—in fact, every necessary expense for a period of six days—will be sold at a rate of $36.00 from New York, Brooklyn and Newark; $34.50 from Trenton; $33.00 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other stations.

OLD POINT COMFORT ONLY.

Tickets to Old Point Comfort only, including luncheon on going trip, one and three-fourths days' board at Chamberlin Hotel, and good to return direct by regular trains within six days, will be sold in connection with this tour at rate of $17.00 from New York, Brooklyn and Newark; $15.50 from Trenton; $14.50 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other points.

For itineraries and full information apply to ticket agents; Tourist Agent, 263 Fifth Avenue, New York; 4 Court Street, Brooklyn; 789 Broad Street, Newark, N. J., or George W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

Charles Baskerville, Professor of Chemistry and Director of the Laboratory in the University of North Carolina, announced before a recent meeting of the Chemists' Club in New York his discovery that thorium, hitherto known as one of the seventy primary elements, is complex in its nature. The professor has resolved thorium into two new elements. He has named one of these Carolinium, after the State, the other Berzelium, in honor of the great Swedish chemist, who, nearly a hundred years ago, discovered thorium. This is the first time it has been the good fortune of an American chemist to discover a chemical element.

Ambassador McCormick is negotiating with the Foreign Office for a treaty with Russia which will give to United States corporations the right to sue in Russian courts and to Russian corporations the right to sue in courts of the United States. Under the Russian law United States corporations can be sued, but cannot sue, in the courts of the Empire. This has caused American firms great annoyance, as well as losses, in the past. In addition, the Ambassador hopes to secure in the treaty a broad clause which will automatically give to United States corporations all privileges of whatever character now enjoyed by the corporations of any foreign country.

The case of the Interstate Commerce Commission vs. Baird, commonly known as the anthracite coal case, was decided by the Supreme Court of the United States last week in favor of the contentions of the commission. In his remarks, Justice Day said: "The railroads are all engaged in interstate commerce, and into their affairs

NO PLACE.

The Lazy One Must Stand Aside.

That dull heavy feeling from coffee may not amount to much in itself, but it's a great obstacle in the way of fame and fortune, for it kills ambition and makes one lazy and finally sick.

The successful men or women must first conquer themselves. The way to conquer that dull, stupid feeling nine times out of ten is to pay a little attention to proper food, coffee in particular will dull the senses and make one feel lazy and stupid after the first effects of the cup have worn off an hour or so after drinking it.

"I was a lover of coffee," says a New York man. "It seemed to me breakfast was nothing without it, but I noticed an hour or so after breakfast a dull, stupid feeling came over me, accompanied frequently by nausea.

"Thinking perhaps it was caused by coffee I wanted to make sure of it, so I gave up the use of coffee and drank Postum in its place. My old trouble disappeared, and I learned to look forward to my Postum with as much eagerness as I used to look to coffee, and instead of being bad in its effect, Postum is very healthy and I feel 'fit as a lord' right along." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason why Postum helps toward fame and fortune when used in place of coffee, the drug drink.

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

and methods of doing business the Commission sought to and is lawfully authorized by the commerce act to make investigation. The Commission has the right to know how interstate traffic is conducted, the relations between the carriers and its shippers and the rates charged and collected. We see no reason why contracts of this character, which have direct relation to a large amount of carrying trade, can be withheld from examination as evidence by the Commission." Simultaneously with the decision of the Coal Trust it handed down a decision in favor of the city of Chicago against the People's Gas Company. This decision sustained an ordinance passed by the city which compelled the gas concern to reduce the price to 75 cents a thousand feet.

NOTHIN' TO SAY.

Nothin' to say, my daughter, nothin' at all to say!

G'yirls that's in love, I've noticed, ginerly has their way!

Yer mother did, afore you, when her folks objected to me—

Yit here I am, and here you air—and yer mother—where is she?

You look lots like yer mother, purty much same in size;

And about the same complected; and favor about the eyes;

Like her, too, about her living here—because she couldn't stay;

It'll most seem like you was dead—like her! but I hain't got nothin' to say.

She left you her little Bible—writ yer name acrost the page;

And left her ear-bobs fer you, ef you ever come of age.

I've allus kept 'em and g'yarded 'em, but ef yer goin' away—

Nothin' to say, my daughter! nothin' at all to say!

You don't rikollect her, I reckon? No; you wasn't a year old then!

And now yer—how old air you? W'y, child, not "twenty!" When?

And yer nex' birthday's in April? and you want to get married that day?

I wisht yer mother was livin'!—but—I hain't got nothin' to say!

Twenty year! and as a good a girl as parent ever found!

There's a straw ketched onto yer dress there—I'll bresh it off—turn round.

(Her mother was jes' twenty when us two run away!)

Nothin' to say, my daughter! nothin' at all to say!

—James Wantcomb Riley.

THAT BOY OF YOURS.

How can you expect to keep your boy at home unless you provide better entertainment for him than he can find elsewhere? Do not expect him to be an old man? Remember that you were once a boy with a boy's love for fun. Can not you revive a little of that old-time liking, and enter into your son's sports? Do you ever try to make a comrade of him? Probably he would enjoy hearing of some of those old-time recollections over which you and your neighbor, when he comes in of an evening, laugh so heartily.—Inez McFee.

No good grocer sells a lamp-chimney without MACBETH on it

You need to know how to manage your lamps to have comfort with them at small cost. Better read my Index; I send it free.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

FRIENDS' LIBRARY,

142 N. Sixteenth St., Philadelphia.

CHANGE OF TIME OF OPENING.

The library will hereafter be open on week-days from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., and from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m., except during the Seventh and Eighth months.

Fourth month 1st, 1904.

Faith and hope

Will teach me how to bear my lot—
To think almighty wisdom best,
To bow my head, and murmur not.
The chast'ning hand of One above
Falls heavy, but I kiss the rod;
It gives the wound, and I must trust
Its healing to the self-same God.

—Eliza Cook.

CEREAL FOODS

without cream are not appetizing, but good raw cream is not always easy to get. Borden's Peerless Brand Evaporated Cream is superior to raw cream, with a delicious flavor and richness. Use it for general cooking purposes. Borden's Condensed Milk Co., proprietors.

Established 1860

150 Varieties

Esterbrook's Steel Pens

Sold Everywhere

The Best Pens Made

HOOPING-COUGH AND CROUP.

Roche's Herbal Embrocation

The celebrated and effectual English Cure without internal medicine. Proprietors, W. EDWARDS & SON, Queen Victoria St., London, England. Wholesale of E. Fougere & Co., 30 North William Street, N. Y.

FINANCIAL.

FOR SALE

$10,000—5 per cent. Gold First Mortgage Electric Light Bonds at 100 and interest. $5,000—5 per cent. Gold First Mortgage Warehouse Bonds at 102½ and interest. $5,000—5 per cent. Gold First Mortgage Guaranteed Gas Bonds at 100 and interest. $10,000—5 per cent. Gold First Mortgage Guaranteed Street Railway Bonds at 100 and interest.

HOWARD M. SWAB,
Member Philadelphia Stock Exchange,
Room 61, Main Floor, Bourse.

6% to 7% Choice First Mortgage Loans, Seattle and vicinity. Local and N. Y. references. Established 1887. Correspondence Solicited. JAMES BOTHWELL, Seattle, Washington.

Mortgages Net 6% in North Dakota.

I place mortgages on land covering about one-third its value. The value of this land is constantly increasing.

I know every mortgagor personally, know his land, his integrity, his habits and his ability to pay.

These combine to make me certain that these mortgages are as safe as GOVERNMENT BONDS.

Investigate me. You can't make the investigation too rigid to suit me. I'll stand it. I've been in this business for 18 years, and never lost a cent for a customer, nor foreclosed a mortgage.

I collect the interest and principal without charge and remit in New York exchange. Write to me for further information.

WALTER L. WILLIAMSON

Investment Banker

Lisbon

North Dakota

The
New Century

TYPEWRITER

does the BEST WORK and lots of it, EASILY.

Strong, Thoroughly Built,
Superior in results to any other.

Write for

"THE BOOK OF THE NEW CENTURY."

AMERICAN WRITING MACHINE COMPANY,
1033 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

"Sir!" exclaimed the injured party, "you stuck your umbrella in my eye."
"Oh, no," replied the cheerful offender, "you are mistaken."
"Mistaken?" demanded the irate man, "you idiot, I know when my eye is hurt, I guess."
"Doubtless," replied the cheerful chap, "but you don't know my umbrella. I borrowed this one from a friend to-day."
—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Acker has them—those artistic Parisian Bon Bons.

TO SUIT EVERYBODY! JUST OUT!

For Sunday Schools.

Young People's Societies,

Revival Meetings, etc.

100 New Songs.

256 Pages.

Bound in cloth.

Young People's Songs of Praise

4

EDITIONS:

REGULAR,

EPWORTH LEAGUE,

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR,

BAPTIST Y. P. UNION.

25c. per copy. RETURNABLE SAMPLE FREE
THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York-Chicago.

JOSEPH G. FOGG

UNDERTAKER AND EMBALMER

S. W. Cor. Sixteenth and Race Sts.

Phone Spruce 44-38-W.

PHILADELPHIA.

Suburban orders promptly attended.

GO-CARTS AND BABY CARRIAGES

Best of all are the Bloch and Heywood makes, which we have in all the most desirable styles; and the English Perambulators, too.

More of the $12.50 Bloch Go-carts at $10.00; some customers were disappointed in the last lot—come too late. These Carts have full-roll bodies, bicycle tubing gear, nutless wheels, rubber tires and china handles. Bloch and Heywood Go-carts range in price from $5.00 to $35.00—many different styles.

The Heywood and Bloch Baby Carriages, with full-roll bodies and handsome cushions, are handsomer than ever. An especially good Bloch at $10.50. Others at $12.50, $16.00, $23.50, $40.00 and $50.00.

Folding Go-carts are handy little things. They can be folded up very compactly to carry on the cars to the Park or to the country. From $2.50 to $8.00.

Lace Covers

Perhaps a new one is needed to brighten up a parasol which is still good. We show a great many beautiful effects in the popular laces. You may pay anywhere from $1.00 to $10.00.

STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER

PHILADELPHIA

The
NEW Crimson Rambler
"Philadelphia"

Pronounced by experts to be "the most magnificent Crimson Climbing Rose in existence." It is a descendant of the Old Crimson Rambler, but far finer and better in every way.

The plants are hardy as oaks and will grow 10 to 15 feet in a season. A prodigious bloomer, often 15,000 to 20,000 blossoms on a single plant by actual count. The effect is dazzling and beautiful beyond description.

For making Rose arbors, screens or hedges "Philadelphia" is unsurpassed. For training up the side of a porch it is "ideal." We are the introducers of this beautiful rose, and now have splendid plants in all sizes.

PRICES.
Pot (One year at 25c each; 10 for $2.00, postpaid)
Plants (Two " 50c " 10 " 4.00, express.
Extra Size Field Grown Dormant Plants.
Before shipping these we trim them back to proper size for planting.
2 to 3 ft. at 75c each 5 for $3.00, express.
3 " 4 " " $1.00 " 5 " 4.00 "
4 " 5 " " 1.50 " 5 " 6.00 "
Send for Special Prices in large quantities; also our New Floral Guide, 136 pages, telling all about Roses and 400 other choice plants. Free.

THE CONARD & JONES COMPANY,
Box X, West Grove, Pa.
"Growers of the Best Roses in America."

DREER'S Garden Book for 1904

should be in the hands of every lover of flowers, grower of vegetables, and farmer in the country. Contains 208 pages and six high-class full page colored plates, illustrating Hardy Chrysanthemums, Asters, Poppies, Garden Pinks and Vegetables. Full of valuable cultural information and hints on the beautifying of the home, garden and surroundings.

Sent by mail to any address on receipt of 20c in stamps or silver. With each copy we send free one package each, Dreer's Superb Branching Asters, Fringed Japanese Pinks and Select Shirley Poppies.

HENRY A. DREER,

714 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

He was overboard, struggling for life and shouting for help. Some one threw him a crowbar. The intention was kindly, but the act was inconsiderate. Consider the aid you intend for your family.

PENN MUTUAL LIFE

921-3-5 Chestnut Street, Phila.

Yale College Library

The American Friend

Vol. XI FOURTH MONTH 21, 1904 No. 16

	PAGE
EDITORIALS.—The Call to the Ministry— What Shall the Isolated Young Friend Do?—Editorial Note . . .	259-260
Some Weighty Words of Counsel, . . .	260
The Missionary Journeys of George Fox in Great Britain	262
John W. Cadbury, Jr.
BELIEF AND FAITH	264
WILLIAM GASTON COFFIN	265
SOME VIEWS ON PRESENT TOPICS: Church Work	265
Levi D. Barr.
THE INTERNATIONAL LESSON	266
Lesson for Fifth month 1, 1904.
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR	267
Topic for Fifth month 1, 1904.
EDUCATIONAL	268
CORRESPONDENCE	268
THINGS OF INTEREST AMONG OURSELVES,	269
DIED	269
EVENTS AND COMMENTS	270

We need, in this day of deepening insight, increasing labour, and heavier-pressing burden of the soul—now, more than ever, we need to know a God who is not only above us, but also with us and for us. A God who is willing to suffer with his suffering children; a God who himself freely pays the greatest price that ever can be paid for the vindication of the holy law of life and the redemption of mankind from evil; a God whose sacrifice is the Atonement, taking away the sins of the world, covering alike the transgressions of the ignorant and the degraded and the deeper offences of the enlightened and the privileged, and giving to all who repent a sure pledge of Divine forgiveness and help—to believe in such a God is peace and courage and a new hope for the world. Where shall the men of to-day find this Immanuel, this present, sympathizing, suffering, redeeming Love?

On the Cross of Calvary this God is revealed, crowned with thorns and enduring death for our sake.

*"The very God! think, Abib; dost thou think?
So the All-great were the All-loving, too,—
So through the thunder comes a human voice
Saying, 'O heart I made, a heart beats here!
Face my hands fashioned, see it in myself!
Thou hast no power, nor mayest conceive of mine,
But love I gave thee with myself to love,
And thou must love me who have died for thee!'"*

—HENRY VAN DYKE.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.50 A YEAR PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
AMERICAN FRIEND PUBLISHING COMPANY, 718 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA

EDUCATIONAL.

EARLHAM COLLEGE,RICHMOND,
INDIANA

Prof. Elbert Russell offers courses regularly in Kings, New Testament Times, Life of Christ, The Apostolic Age, Church History, New Testament Literature, Romans, John, Biblical Literature, Isaiah.

Prof. Cyrus W. Hodgkin, The Protestant Reformation.

Prof. Anna M. Demaree, New Testament, Greek.

Asst. Prof. Lindley, History of the Hebrews.

Pres. Kelly, History of Philosophy, Ethics, Psychology.

The Oakwood Seminary

UNION SPRINGS, N. Y.

Founded in 1796.

A boarding school for boys and girls under the care of New York Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Academic, College Preparatory and Commercial

Spring term begins Fourth month 5, 1904

SAMUEL H. HODGIN,
Principal.LINDLEY M. STEVENS,
Superintendent.STENOGRAPHING, TYPEWRITING and MIMEOGRAPHING. Prices moderate.

MARY M. KITE

407 Lippincott Building, 12th and Filbert Sts., Phila.
Phone No. 3-33-00

STENOGRAPHER

GEO. B. COCK

Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter Street.
Telephones.

GO SOUTH OR SOUTHWEST

via the Seaboard Air Line Ry. Two daily trains from Washington with Pullman Sleepers and a la carte Dining Cars. The best service to Atlanta, Birmingham, New Orleans, Savannah, Jacksonville and Tampa. For Industrial, Resort or Manatee booklets, address W. E. Conklyn, General Agent, 1411 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER.—Careful and accurate repairing, with prompt service, has brought me the custom of many Friends. Their patronage is particularly solicited. My store is nearest to the Market Street ferries, and is easy of access from every part of the city. W. L. Berry, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

We particularly invite the attention of the readers of "The American Friend" to this column. It will be found useful for almost everyone who wishes to advertise. The cost is 50. per line each insertion. No advertisement is accepted for less than 25c. Cash with order.

OCEAN GROVE, N. J.—Cottages and boarding houses for rent. Send for printed list. E. N. Woolston, No. 50 Main Avenue, Ocean Grove, N. J.

FRIEND! Here's a message for thee. The "Friend" Mfg. Co., Gasport, N. Y., would like to send one of their catalogs of Spraying Outfits. Will thee ask for it?

EUROPE—$170.—Select tour 41 days. Best class on steamers. Great success. Fourth year. Longer tours at higher prices. Apply at once. Levi D. Temple, Flemington, N. J.

WANTED.—A thousand families of "Friends" and others to come west and buy land in Woods county, Oklahoma, while you can get good farms at half their value. Rich valley land near Friends' meeting, Stella Academy, railroad and good market. In the great wheat and alfalfa belt, and fruit in abundance, the best part of Oklahoma. Warm, healthy climate, with splendid society. Write us for circulars and price lists. References, Pastor "Friends" Church, First National Bank of Cherokee. Very truly, VOTAW and SETZER, "Friends."

OLD-FASHIONED grandfather clocks repaired at home. If yours needs attention send me a postal or, better, call. My store is within three minutes' walk of the Market Street ferries. Repairing of clocks and watches of every kind. Prompt service and moderate prices. W. L. Berry, Watchmaker and Jeweler, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

GREAT CHICAGO THEATER DISASTER complete. 396 pages, 69 full-page illustrations; fine cloth, paper and extra print. 60c. postpaid. Address, Howard Book House, Elwood, Ind.

A YOUNG LADY, college graduate, wishes a position as companion or mother's helper, tutor to small children. Good reader, competent in instrumental music. Experienced. Address E. B., care AMERICAN FRIEND.

Barlow's Indigo Blue

Will not spot or streak clothes

In use for fifty years is proof that it is the best. All grocers sell it. Free samples mailed.
Depot, No. 233 N. Second Street, Philadelphia.

S. F. BALDERSTON'S SONWall Paper and Decorations

Window Shades Made to Order

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILA

WANTED

back numbers and volumes of

American Friend
Western Friend
Friends' Review
Gospel Expositor
Christian Worker
Western Work
Nebraska Friend

Also books, tracts, documents, bearing on Friends during the nineteenth century. Communicate with

ALLEN C. THOMAS,
Haverford, Pa.

JOSEPH B. SCATTERGOOD
House and Sign Painter
313 South 5th St., Philadelphia

BREAD MACHINE

For Household Use.

Sifts the flour and mixes 10 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CYRUS CHAMBERS, Jr.) 52d & Media Sts., Philadelphia

WILLIAM S. YARNALL
Manufacturing OPTICIAN

118 S. FIFTEENTH ST., PHILA.
4th Door Below Chestnut St.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD
27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

HOOPING-COUGH AND CROUP.Roche's Herbal Embrocation

The celebrated and effectual English Cure without internal medicine. Proprietors, W. EDWARDS & SON, Queen Victoria St., London, England. Wholesale of E. Fougere & Co., 50 North William Street, N. Y.

EMINENT PHYSICIANS
throughout the world recommend

QUINA-LAROCHE

AS A SPECIFIC IN CASES OF ANAEMIA, COLDS, LA GRIPPE,
SLOW CONVALESCENCE,
STOMACH TROUBLES,
TYPHOID and MALARIAL
FEVERS.

E. Fougere & Co., 30 N. William St., N. Y.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA. Office, 409 CHESTNUT STREET

CAPITAL, $1,000,000

ASSETS, $63,970,335.34

Surplus and Undivided Profits, belonging to Stockholders 4,026,151.15

Surplus, belonging to Insurance Account 5,635,620.25

Incorporated Third month 22, 1865. Charter Perpetual.

INSURES LIVES, GRANTS ANNUITIES, RECEIVES MONEY ON DEPOSIT, returnable on demand for which interest is allowed.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the assets of the Company.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.

BOXES $5 AND UPWARDS

T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-Prest.
ASA S. WING, Vice-President.
JOS. ASHBROOK, Man. Ins. Dept.
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer.

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY, President.

J. R. FOULKE, Trust Officer.

DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary.

J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Assistant Trust Officer

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary.

DIRECTORS:

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY,
T. WISTAR BROWN,
HENRY HAINES,
RICHARD WOOD,
CHAS. HARTSHORNE.

ASA S. WING,
PHILIP C. GARRETT,
JAMES V. WATSON,
WM. LONGSTRETH,
THOS. SCATTERGOOD.

J. PRESTON THOMAS,
ROBERT M. JANNEY,
MARRIOTT C. MORRIS,
FRANK H. TAYLOR,
JOSEPH B. TOWNSEND, Jr.

The American Friend

"Truth is the highest thing a man may keep."
"That they all may be one."

VOL. XI.

PHILADELPHIA, FOURTH MONTH 21, 1904.

No. 16.

THE CALL TO THE MINISTRY.

THE New York "Independent" printed last month (the issue of the 10th) a pathetic article by a young man of 32, who tells the public why he is giving up the ministry, and who names his experience "A Soul's Tragedy." The article is pathetic, not because one man has decided to give up the ministry and takes the opportunity to pour out his pessimism on the reading public. That is pathetic, but much more pathetic is the revelation which the article gives of the fact that this man had gone into the ministry with little or no insight into what it really means to be a minister. The very reasons which he gives for leaving the ministry ought to have been reasons for him to become a truer minister. He says that he feels a revulsion at the type of men with whom he has to associate; that only little men go into the ministry; that the minister of to-day is more or less dishonest; that he does not work as hard as other men do; that he poses as being above what he is entitled to rank; that the ministry imposes restraint and constraint, and finally he questions whether the Church is to have any perpetuity apart from its mission and the utility of its service in the world.

Of course here are some pretty good reasons why an honest, earnest man should not become, or continue to be, a mere professional minister. But if there are in the ministry to-day "little men," half-dishonest, posing for more than they are, and living a lazy life because they are above hard work, surely that is reason enough why a noble, earnest, courageous soul should give his life to show what a genuine minister of the Lord can be. The Church does not want professional ministers, who are posing as better than the men they seek to help. It does not want handbox clergymen, who sit in libraries and prepare pretty sermons for their benighted, toiling brothers. Let all such go out of the ministry as soon as they can find some honest work to do.

But let no man forget this fact: This world has nothing higher or nobler to show than the true minister of Jesus Christ, who has come to his task because he is called to it, and because he sees what it means to be an ambassador in Christ's stead. Shall we shrink from our ministry because it brings us in touch with repulsive types? To a genuine minister no types of men are repulsive, and the more crooked and needy the life with which we are thrown, the more heartily we must work to save it and free it from all that makes it seem repulsive. It is an unwarranted slander on humanity to imply that those who minister for Christ find it necessary to be dishonest, or puffed up, or unnatural, or professional. The true minister is a simple, honest, straightforward, divinely natural person, who works hard for his Master, because he loves His service and loves the men he serves. Supposing the Church does have no perpetuity beyond its mission of service, what then? Is not its mission of service large enough to appeal to any generous soul? Why, if one could be able to minister to one little child in the name of Christ and could help that little being to become spiritual where he would have been bestial without such help, would not that be worth going into the ministry for? Men die on battlefields because it is supposed to be a way of serving country; we need rather a lot of volunteers, who give themselves, live this life of actual service to country and race, because the love of Christ constrains them to this true ministry.

WHAT SHALL THE ISOLATED YOUNG FRIEND DO ?

HERE are some questions which one of our subscribers, a deeply interested young man, asks:

"I am in the profession of teaching. Naturally, it is best for me to secure a position in which I feel that I can do most good for myself and to those around me. I cannot depend on the chances of securing a position in Friends' communities, and it may be that the remainder of my life will have to be spent apart from Friends. Even at this early period of my life such questions as these naturally occur to me: 'Is there enough difference between the Friends and other religious denominations to warrant me in keeping my connection with them, while it is not probable that I shall live in a Friends' community again during my life?' 'Shall I change my church membership as I move from place to place?' I may say that in this village there are four Protestant churches, Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist and Episcopalian. It is a large number for a village of 500, so that no Friend can say that it is my duty to preach a new doctrine here."

It is perfectly evident that that particular village does not need another place of worship or another variety of Christianity. Four kinds for five hundred inhabitants are surely enough! It would be a great step if there could be a massing of the spiritual forces in all the small villages of the country, and the best thing a Friend could do in such a community would be to use what influence and power he might have to draw the existing churches together. A young Friend who has a position in a community isolated from his own people should not be in a hurry to join a new church fellowship unless the circumstances require it. He should at once, of course, enter into cordial relations with some Christian body and co-operate as fast as possible with its members in all right Christian activities. The time has come when almost all Churches welcome such co-operation and are glad to give an earnest Christian young man large opportunities for helpful service. It will not hinder him at all, under ordinary circumstances, to keep his membership in some Friends' meeting; in fact, it will make it easier for him to help harmonize and unite all the religious forces of the community because he will be able to rise above all narrow, sectarian consideration. If he is wise and tactful and convinced of our spiritual conceptions he can sow the seed of truth even better than he could by starting a separate meeting of his own. So long as a young person's position is still unsettled and he is likely to change locality frequently, it is better to remain attached to the Church of his childhood, and to carry with him as much of its influence as he can. Some day he may again find himself in a community in which there is a congregation of his own people, and then he is all ready to go in as an organic member with them, and he will be all the more valuable for his varied experiences in other communities. Such a young man, however, must make use of all possible means to enlighten himself and to deepen his grasp upon the essential views of his own denomination. There is no point in remaining a Friend and in holding one's original membership if one does not know what it means to be a Friend, and does not see some truths which seem to him worth the devotion of a life.

This seems the best course for a person who is not yet fixed and settled for life. The case is somewhat different for one who has a permanent home in a community away from Friends. If he has children to bring up, and is to be himself a settled member of the community, it is generally best to have a definite church home. In some instances, perhaps, the family ought to make their home the nucleus of a new Friends' meeting. This has often been done, and many of our most flourishing meetings have begun by such faithfulness. It can be done to-day as well as in earlier days, and should be done where the cause of truth would best be promoted by such a course. In other cases a man's life will count for the most if he joins some existing organization, where he can work for the good of the neighborhood, and where his children will find the right nurture.

EDITORIAL NOTE.

WE HAVE already given notice that a Summer School of Religious History will be held at Haverford College from the 15th to the 25th of Sixth month. The program contains the names of a number of eminent men and of solid spiritual teachers. There can be no question that this will be a very important occasion, and that those who are able to be present will receive enlightenment and inward strength. Those desiring further information should address President Isaac Sharpless, Haverford, Pa.

SOME WEIGHTY WORDS OF COUNSEL.

(Our Friend, Allen Jay, after spending some weeks in North Carolina, wrote a letter to the members of that Yearly Meeting. It contains so much of general interest and value that we publish a large part of it for the benefit of our readers.—Ed.)

Dear friends, give yourselves to meditation; study the Bible, especially the New Testament and particularly the words of Jesus. Let them become food to your souls. Remember that truth is many sided and that no man can see or comprehend it all. Do not take one view of the Gospel and push that until it becomes a hobby. Do not condemn others who may present the Gospel as they see it. Always remember that God has not given you a monopoly of the Spirit, and be careful that you do not indulge in that spiritual pride which will lead you to think that every one must have the same religious experience that you have had or they are not saved. And, above all, be careful about excommunicating those who do not see everything just as you do; leave that business to the Pope of Rome, for your fanatical bulls will not hurt the Church, neither God's children, but must sooner or later result in making you self-righteous Pharisees. It is mournful to see persons who have lately had a religious experience of some particular phase of the truth take their Bible and start out feeling they know it all, setting up a standard for God's children to walk by, condemning the Church and proclaiming destruction to those who were in the Kingdom of God when they were born, and whose religious life is so deep and full that it has reached a point beyond noise and confusion. Their life is hid with Christ in God. They are engrafted in the vine whose roots are within the wall, while they are the fruit hanging outside for the world to behold. Dear ones, ever remember that your lives speak so loud that the world cannot hear your words.

THE DUTY OF THE CHURCH TO THOSE WHO ARE CALLED.

"The harvest is great but the laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that he will send more laborers." The Church that believes in the ministry and prays for it will have it. The Church that fosters the ministry will find that God is willing to confer His gifts. The lifeless church will experience the time when the Word of the Lord will be scarce. The minister is not the only one who should make sacrifices. The church that is willing to help bear the burden will receive the blessing. Seek out those who have received the call, encouraging them to faithfulness; help them to find time for study and opportunity to exercise their gift.

ELDERS AND OVERSEERS.

In this day of activity in the churches and when many are running to and fro claiming they are led by the Spirit, it is important that we should have elders and overseers who have understanding of the signs of the times and know what Israel ought to do. God desires elders and overseers to lead and feed the flock, those who can lay their hands on those who are called of God, helping them and encouraging them to faithfulness; elders who know how to go and put their arms around those who have made mistakes and bring them back in line with the church work, to teach the beginners more perfectly the way of life and show them how to present the truth so as to win souls, those who can feed the lambs and sheep of the flock. Happy is that meeting which has elders whose voices are sometimes heard in vocal prayer and testimony and who are ever on the watch to speak a word of comfort and cheer to those who attend our meetings, not forgetting the stranger within our gates.

FAMILY WORSHIP.

It is sorrowful to believe that there are those who belong to the Church who do not have family worship in their homes, who fail to call their children together, read a portion of the Holy Scripture in a reverential spirit and engage in prayer. Let this prayer be vocalized; and if the Spirit is sought, the voice of prayer will certainly often be heard. The father should remember that as priest of the family he should take charge of this service. If the families are faithful at home in worshiping God, when they come together in public worship, the spirit of worship will cover the meeting, and those who come in will know that God is with you.

It may be that there are children who have never heard their parents' voices in prayer for them. They go out into the world without the remembrance of a father's or mother's prayers to strengthen them in the battles of life.

MEETING FOR WORSHIP.

Hold all your meetings in the power of the Lord. Dear friends, you cannot afford to neglect public worship. There is a blessing coming from this service that will help you in your spiritual growth. In the time of silence learn to listen to the voice of the Spirit; hold communion with God; let Him speak to your souls. Strong is that Christian who enjoys this silent fellowship with his Creator. But having learned to hold this communion, do not forget that there may be others who need the help of human voices in prayer and testimony. Do not quench the Spirit in vocal service called for, for by so doing you may be robbing and losing that spiritual life which God would have you enjoy. Labor to have your meeting a time of spiritual upbuilding, where God's children will be strengthened and built up in the most holy faith, and sinners coming among you will be constrained to acknowledge that God is with you.

EDUCATION.

Your children are the most precious treasures you have, of much more value than your houses or lands. Seek to give them a good education by having good schools in your neighborhoods, and where practical near your meeting house, so they can attend your meetings. Let heart and mind be trained together. Develop the spiritual along with the intellectual. In this way you will avoid intellectual pride on one hand and fanaticism on the other. Where possible send your sons and daughters to Guilford College, so they may be better prepared for the service that God may call them into.

MEETING FOR BUSINESS.

Be loyal to the Church; take an interest in your business meeting; pay your meeting money; be liberal in the support of all the church work; do not find fault with the work of the church, especially before your children, and then wonder why they do not enjoy going to meeting and taking part in church work. Many a man has begun judging and finding fault with the work of the church and lost his spiritual life, and, in some instances, found himself entirely outside of the pale of society. Cultivate a love for the yearly meeting and all of its work. It as a whole is more likely to be right than one or two individuals. Faultfinding tends to produce spiritual pride, saying, "I am better than thou art."

THE SEPARATION.

It is sad that a few of the members of this yearly meeting have felt like withdrawing from its fellowship. The yearly meeting has borne long with them, but they were not in harmony with the body and chose to draw off. Do not find fault of them. Let them say what they may about you, never reply. Keep in the sweetness of the Spirit of Christ and do not suffer discouragement to arise, but go in unity and love into the work that the church is engaged in, remembering it is a great work, and that you dare not turn aside to listen or talk with those who are engaged in pulling down the wall of our Zion; always abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much as ye know that your labor in the Lord is not in vain. Finally, brethren, be strong in the Lord. Farewell.—"The Friends' Messenger" (N. C.).

When hope unfolds its petals, happiness springs into full bloom.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

THE MISSIONARY JOURNEYS OF GEORGE FOX IN GREAT BRITAIN.

BY JOHN W. CADBURY, JR.

(Continued from last week.)

In the year 1652, on the summit of Pendle hill, there came to him perhaps the greatest revelation of his life. From this time until his death he went forth on his journeys with a new and definite purpose, the founding and establishing of a Society. He speaks thus of his experience: "As we traveled we came near a very great hill, called Pendle hill, and I was moved of the Lord to go up to the top of it; which I did with difficulty, it was so very steep and high. When I was come to the top I saw the sea bordering upon Lancashire. From the top of this hill the Lord let me see in what places he had a great people to be gathered. As I went down I found a spring of water in the side of the hill, with which I refreshed myself, having eaten or drunk little for several days before.

"At night we came to an inn and declared truth to the man of the house, and wrote a paper to the priests and professors, declaring 'the day of the Lord, and that Christ was come to teach people Himself, by His power and spirit in their hearts, and to bring people off from all the world's ways and teachers, to His own free teaching, who had brought them and was the Saviour of all them that believed in Him.' The man of the house spread the paper abroad and was mightily affected with the truth. Here the Lord opened unto me and let me see a great people in white raiment by a river side coming to the Lord; and the place that I saw them in was about Wensleydale and Sedburgh."

We must not overlook the fact that it was in the summer of this same year that Fox paid his first visit to the Fells of Swarthmoor Hall. Probably he little dreamed all that this home was to mean to him in after years. After many a weary day of preaching, after cruel treatment from the hands of the mob, after months of unjust and bitter imprisonment, here he was always sure of warm hearts and an open welcome, and sympathy and encouragement were never begrudged at this Bethany.

Friendly thought now centered around Swarthmoor Hall, and at this time there swept over the country a great revival which marks the beginning of the great spread of Friendly truths among the nation.

William Crouch speaks thus of the times: "In the year 1652 the Quakers did wonderfully increase; and now were added unto them men of dignity and fame; and whereas, such as had anything to speak to the people were obliged to take the opportunity of market places, streets or casual conflux of the people; upon which oftentimes followed insurrection, imprisonments and being bound in chains, now they began to meet in houses."

At this time also began the widespread evangelistic movement carried on by many Friends coming forward to travel in the ministry. This is what William Beck says of it:

"The labor of years in other parts of England had brought George Fox but few co-workers in missionary enterprise, but when these northern districts were reached some sixty earnest spirits were suddenly found, filled with a holy enthusiasm to spread everywhere the views that had brought peace to their souls through his ministry.

"These threescore zealous missionaries left house and home and going forth two and two together traveled mostly on foot, taking little or no money with them, depending for food and lodging on the kindness of those to whom their message might be acceptable. They coveted no man's silver or gold or apparel, nor sought for profit or honor to themselves, but full of pious zeal desired that others might come through their ministry to participate in the blessings they had themselves found by accepting Christ Jesus as their Teacher and Guide, through His Spirit in the heart."

It was very evident that a new enthusiasm had been instilled into the Church as this method of preaching was an unknown thing in England. As Amelia M. Gummere has recently said, "Quakerism at once set a man moving, and I do not find mention of any body of people, outside the army, who were such inveterate travelers as the new-made Quakers."

George Fox was now understood to be the leading spirit in all this movement, and we find these missionaries referring their doubts and perplexities to him. Fox very modestly makes very little mention of this part of his career, which must have taken much of his time and thought. We know, however, from letters which are still in the possession of Friends in England, that these men relied almost implicitly on his opinions and looked up to him as almost a superhuman being.

George Fox made short circuits from Swarthmoor and held large meetings in which many were converted. But in spite of his growing popularity persecution continued. At Lancaster, while preaching in a church, he was attacked by the mob and left senseless on the ground outside. When he came to himself he stood up, and stretching out his arms, he said, with a loud voice to the crowd, "Strike again; here are my arms, my head and my cheeks." Hereupon a devout Mason struck a blow with all his might with his "walking rule staff" on the outstretched hand of the heretic. The blow was so severe that both Fox and the bystanders thought at first he had lost the use of his hand forever. "But I looked at him in the love of God (for I was in the love of God to them all that had persecuted me), and after awhile the Lord's power sprung through me again and through my hand and arm, so that in a moment I recovered strength in my hand and arm in the sight of them all."

Soon after this we find him at Carlisle, where he held some large meetings. He was, however, soon committed to prison "as a blasphemer, a heretic and a seducer." Here he was kept for some time and suffered much from the cruelty of the jailer.

In 1654, after Fox was liberated from his imprisonment at Carlisle he traveled through Yorkshire and Lincolnshire, meeting with his usual strangely-varied adventures. In one place a company of butchers who had sworn that they would have his blood, came to one of his meetings. But their threats of bodily injury came to naught, and when asked by their neighbors why they had not killed him, according to their oath, they could only answer that he had so bewitched them that they could not do it. No doubt there was something in the very appearance of this tall, grave, fearless man, which laid a very powerful spell on meaner spirits.

After an absence of three years Fox returned home. Here he was not well received by the people, and was finally put into prison. It was, however, as a result of this that Fox was sent to London and interviewed Cromwell face to face, and this was the beginning of the friendship which existed between these two great spirits, and which lasted until the Protector's death.

After traveling in the Midlands, Fox directed his step to the western counties of England, where there had been hitherto no Quaker preaching of any importance. It was in this journey while in Cornwall that he was committed to Launceston jail. Here he experienced one of the longest and most terrible of his many imprisonments, lasting almost eight months. But even in the vile dungeon called Doomsdale the great spirit of Fox was not daunted, and his words come ringing across the centuries clear and bold. "I told them," he says, "that if all the spirits and devils in hell were there, I was over them in the power of God and feared no such thing; for Christ our priest would sanctify the walls and the house to us."

After Fox made another circuit through the home counties and parts of Lincoln and York, he broke new ground by making visitations to Wales and Scotland. At Haverford West, in the southwestern part of Wales, George Fox tells us the "People were a kind of Independents, but it was a wicked town and false. We bade the innkeeper give our horses a peek of oats; and no sooner had we turned our backs than the oats were stolen from our horses." Again, at another great town (the name of which he seems to have forgotten)—"In that inn also I turned but my back to the man that was giving oats to my horse, and looking around again, I observed he was filling his pockets with the provender. A wicked, thievish people, to rob the poor dumb creature of his food. I would rather they had robbed me." "Next day," he writes at the Straits of Menai, in the northern part of Wales, "being market day, we were to cross a great water. Not far from the place where we were to take boat many of the market people drew near to us, amongst whom we had good service for the Lord, declaring the word of life and everlasting truth unto them. . . . After the Lord's truth had been declared unto them in the power of God, and Christ the free teacher set over all hireling teachers, I bid John-ap-John (Fox's companion) get his horse in the boat, which was then ready. But there having got into it a company of wild gentlemen, as they called them; whom we found very rude, and far from gentleness, they, with others, kept his horse out of the boat. I rode to the boat's side and spoke to them, showing them what unmanly and unchristian conduct it was, and told them they showed an unworthy spirit below Christianity or humanity. As I spoke I leaped my horse into the boat amongst them, thinking John's horse would have followed, when he had seen mine go in before him; but the water being deep John could not get his horse into the boat. Wherefore I leaped out again on horseback into the water and stayed with John on that side until the boat returned. There we tarried from eleven in the forenoon to two in the afternoon before the boat came to fetch us; and then we had forty-two miles to ride that evening; and when we paid for our passage we had but one groat left between us in money."

This incident brings out a new trait in Fox's character, that of a kindness so great that he cared more for his horse's comfort than his own. Fox evidently grew very fond of his own horse and was an expert rider. This we may gather from the incident, and also that when he was mobbed by the students at Cambridge he was able to keep his saddle, while his companion was unhorsed.

After holding great and powerful meetings throughout Wales he went to Swarthmoor for a few months.

The priests of Scotland, where Fox next traveled, were up in opposition as soon as he entered the country. After visiting several places in the South he came to Edinburgh and preached there. He was soon brought to trial and commanded to leave the nation "by that day sen night." Fox told his friends that he would stay, though the Council issued a cart-load of warrants against him. Leaving Edinburgh he traveled through the Lowlands, but soon returned in the face of the enemy. He held a large meeting there, and "the Lord's power and immediate hand carried us over the heads of all."

We have not time to speak of the two and a half years' imprisonment which Fox suffered at Lancaster and Scarborough, in 1655 and 1656, when he was half-starved and kept in a cell unprotected from the cold and rain.

Although Fox does not complain of these long times of confinement, they must have been hard to bear. He thoroughly realized how much work there still was to be done, and doubtless he often longed to get out again into the thick of the conflict.

It was now twenty-three years since Fox left his home on his first missionary journey, and during these years there had arisen a great people throughout the land. Although yearly meetings had been established, he saw that it was imperative to have Friends united in smaller groups. With this end in view, in 1666, he started on his great tour of organizing monthly meetings through the length and breadth of England. Practically everywhere he went, he tells us, "that monthly meetings were settled in the Lord's everlasting power."

The last fifteen years of George Fox's life we must pass over briefly. His missionary activities are now taken up by his pen, as year by year he finds himself less able to bear the long journeys which he took in his younger days. At two separate intervals he spent about four years restfully at Swarthmoor, perhaps the happiest part of his life, though hurried over in the Journal almost as though he were ashamed of having allowed himself so long a rest by the wayside.

About two years before his death, while in London, we see him taking an active interest in the passing of a bill for Indulgence.

"About the middle of the First month, 1689, I went to London, the Parliament then sitting, and engaged about a bill for Indulgence. Though I was weak in body, and not well able to stir about, yet so great a concern was upon my spirit on behalf of Truth and Friends, that I attended continually for many days, with other Friends, at the Parliament house, laboring with the members that the thing might be done, comprehensively and effectually."

On Eleventh month 13th, 1691, Fox died in London, valiant up to the very end for the truth which only two days before he had powerfully preached to his people.

The great endurance of Fox, his endless enthusiasm and energy, his influence with the people, the lofty ideals which he held and carried out to the letter in his own life, his unflinching faithfulness to duty, his constant self-depreciation, even in times of prosperity, his absolute dependence on the Inner Light for every action, these are some of the attributes which make his name stand out conspicuously among the greatest of the missionaries that England has ever produced.

Philadelphia,

BELIEF AND FAITH.

Belief, at least in its common acceptation, has no higher meaning than intellectual assent to the truth of a proposition, and this assent is necessary and inevitable as soon as sufficient evidence is presented. Suppose the case of a man on trial for murder, and that two witnesses testify that they saw the accused strike the blow which caused death. Must not the jury believe that the accused is guilty at least of the killing? Faith also unfortunately has been given this same meaning; but what servant of God would dare to let a sin-burdened soul understand that this was all it meant, as he directed him to the "Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world"? How true it is, however, that as a result of this continual degrading of faith from its higher to its lower meaning multitudes of men in all ages who have given assent to certain religious doctrines have actually considered themselves as exercising faith. Belief is passive, it exists, it looks backward to the evidence on which it rests. Faith is intelligent, active choice. It rests on the past, but it also looks and moves forward. Belief in the aggregate is like a library; we are constantly receiving tracts, pamphlets and volumes. A few we keep open on the library table, that some special passages may constantly give us comfort, strength and inspiration; others we place on some convenient shelf, that we may reach them when we will; while still others are pushed farther and farther back, until, long forgotten, they become dust-covered and moth-eaten, and occasionally the ragman comes along, and we collect those that are no longer of any use and bundle them into his cart, that they may give place to others more suited to our age and needs. Many of our individual beliefs are ever changing. The man who does not believe this year something which he did not believe last, and who does not disbelieve now something which he believed then, is not advancing mentally as he should. But faith is as steadfast as its object, and cannot be lost until that object ceases to be to us what it was when that faith was born. If I have faith in a man's business ability, my faith must continue as long as that ability is the same to me as it was at first, no matter even how our relations may have changed. If this be so, then, as God never changes—as he is the same yesterday, to-day and forever—how is it that men who have once trusted God as Father, Friend, Guide, Counselor, are said to lose faith in him? Ah! it is because our faith is so intimately connected with our beliefs, and these are so easily influenced by the tempter, who seeks to have us believe when we change that it is God changing, or to have us judge God by some of those who claim to represent Him, and to have us blame Him for their failures.

It is true, faith supposes some antecedent belief; but it is not itself, that belief, and the little child, without any elaborate beliefs, may have as real and perhaps as strong faith as the most learned professor of theology. How much does a little child need to know about his father in order to have implicit faith in him? Does he need to know his height or age, his ancestry or politics? No; all that he feels, rather than knows, is that he is his father, and that this father loves his child. One evening, a father and his little daughter, who had been spending the afternoon at a neighbor's, started through the darkness for home. It was the first time she had been away from home at night; and she began to be troubled about the way. "I can't see our house, papa. I don't know the way. Where are we going?" she asked anxiously. He replied, "I can see the road, and if you keep hold of my hand, I will take care of you." Then she said, as if chiding and comforting herself, "Yes, you do know the way! don't you, papa? You will take care of your little girl, 'cause you love her; don't you, papa?" After this, she only grasped his hand a little tighter, and trudged cheerfully onward wherever he led.

In point of importance belief is to faith what the pavement at the door of a temple is to the most precious gem in its most sacred shrine. Is it any wonder that many, seeing the name of what they are told to seek, namely, faith (with the meaning of belief), inscribed on the pavement at the door of the temple of Christianity, mistake it for the real object of their search and never enter the temple at all? I would have it known that the temple is open to all, from its outer gate to its central shrine, but I would have it as certainly known, without possibility of mistake, that it is not enough to stand on the pavement at the gate; that in the Holy of Holies must be sought that precious gem whose light reveals the Father's face and the loving heart of Christ. It is not enough to say that faith has legitimately the same meaning as belief. It is as logical to say that because a diamond is a stone and a paving block is a stone, therefore diamonds should be used for paving.

We would not be misunderstood, however, as wishing to depreciate a knowledge of or belief in doctrine; we only insist that these should not be confounded with what is so much more important than either, namely, true faith in Jesus as our Saviour, and knowledge of Christ from personal acquaintance with him as our Friend and Master—first a doing of His will as a result of this faith and acquaintance and personal love, and then as great a knowledge of doctrine as our mental capacity will permit.—“Christian Work and Evangelist.”

WILLIAM GASTON COFFIN.

William Gaston Coffin, son of Elihu Coffin, was born near Guilford Court House, Guilford County, North Carolina, Second month 22d, 1811, and died at Fort Scott, Kansas, Second month 1st, 1904, aged nearly 92 years.

His early life was one of constant toil. His boyhood was spent on a farm, his young manhood at his trade of blacksmith and machinist. In an early day he moved to Indiana and began making a farm from the heavy timbered land. Under appointment of President Fillmore he investigated the mining interests of the Government in the Lake Superior country. He served in the Legislature of Indiana several years and took active part in the political affairs of State and nation from 1836 to 1888. He was a Whig in early life and assisted in the organization of the Republican party, with which he was identified until the close of his life. He was an ardent defender of freedom, a strong advocate of temperance reform and prohibition of the liquor traffic.

He was appointed by Abraham Lincoln to the Southern Indian Agency, which place he filled during the stormy days of the Civil War with great courage and credit to himself and honor to the Government at Washington.

He was a devoted Friend, always interested in the growth and well-being of the Church. He solicited many thousands of dollars for the building of Kansas Yearly Meeting House at Lawrence.

He was always a true friend to whomsoever needed his help, liberally contributing of his means for the aid of the poor. He was converted when a small boy, and accepted the teaching of Friends and believed in the leadership of the Holy Spirit, espousing the doctrine that the Holy Spirit dwelleth with and in His people.

He was truly a statesman and a Christian patriot, always seeking the development and growth of his State, and in the front rank of the “Society of Friends,” for better facilities for church work and progress. He was truly one of God's noblemen, whose life and work commands our admiration and is worthy of emulation.

Some Views on Present Topics.

CHURCH WORK.

BY LEVI D. BARR.

We need voices, not faded echoes. Truth, not shibboleths. Open vision, not musty records of victories of bygone days. Not “old-fashioned revivals,” but conformity of heart life to the will of God, in order that His new moves may be fully entered into. Let us cease trying to live on the record made by Fox and his contemporaries.

We live in an age essentially utilitarian. A man is not fed on a bill-of-fare. Neither may we give by any theory of life and salvation the hungry souls about us that which will satisfy. Men and women of right expect to find within our gates the bread and water of life. And to receive from us in daily life inspiration and encouragement, we are to have open vision, scanning the heavens for the signals of advance in the campaign of action. As we go forward we are sure to evince our ignorance of the situation if we keep our eyes astern. Jesus said, “I must be about my Father's business.”

Let the membership of the Church feel that “it is my duty to attend my own church regularly.” A soldier may desert in time of battle, and not affect the result of the conflict ultimately. But he has done all that one soldier could do to produce such. We need conscience quickened as to personal responsibility to God and our beloved Church. We have a lot of wandering stars, religious tramps, who care more about getting some kind of food for which they have a peculiar liking than do they care to assist in putting their shoulders to the wheel and by sacrifice and service help in building up the waste places. It is a favorite hobby with certain classes that they go here and there in order to get food for their souls. And from the bumps and knots manifested in their lives and characteristics one would suppose they dined on rocks and stumps. One of the greatest hindrances to an aggressive campaign are these easy-going, conscienceless church members, who are quite as much at home with the Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist or Congregationalist as with the Quakers. Really, since they fly the flag of all countries, hail from no country and no port in view, we may well consider them pirates.

Every man should be in his place promptly and regularly, and with an eye, ear and understanding for the eternal fitness of things, for methods which succeed in some localities fail in others. A merchant studies the needs of his customers and offers them special inducements. He studies to please and attract. Yet we drone along, challenging every new move. If it does not appear in ancestral garb, it is snubbed—a device of the devil. Poor business, but true!

Now as to needs. First, Let the interested membership take stock of resources: A, as to numbers; B, as to ability and fitness. Second, Organize for work. Let the intellectual, social and spiritual life of the membership be diligently inquired into, and let it be the care of these committees to furnish just such intellectual, social and spiritual opportunities as shall best conserve the needs. Put people to work who are willing to work. We need not pray less, but we need to work more, and concerted action is imperative. Opportunities for work lie all about us. Don't put off speaking to men about salvation until death is about to overtake them. Our God is the God of the living. Human need, sin and sorrow are all about us. Let us seek to minister to these needs as opportunity affords. Let the home, factory, field, farm, store and school room become pulpits from which voices ring out clear and sweet the joy He gives and hope He imparts.

In my own charge, in Los Angeles, the young men and women visit the county hospital each Sabbath afternoon, and find such time a splendid opportunity to preach and sing. The effect upon the young people is dynamic. They come into the Christian Endeavor meeting Sabbath evening and the services that follow, with new experiences of victory and conquest.

Let the batteries that have been too long turned in the direction of the armies of redeemed be planted to face the enemy. And let us be as quick to discover duty and enjoy privilege and share responsibility as we are to scent heresy. Let the sharp nose of the heresy hunter be pressed against the trail of the enemy, that we may take up our march together. And may the keen blade of criticism be broken on the breastworks of the common foe, rather than plunged into the hearts of the brethren. Let the Church take comfort and stick to work.

We should not let the insane idea possess us that we are not doing God's work, simply because we are not in some new field. The oft-tilled ground and orchard makes it possible to pioneer, and the Church of Christ must not desert her past and responsibility. Neither let any one become disheartened because some one, forsooth, insists that the only true fishing is to be done in cesspools. All this is well and good in its place, but Jesus said, The son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost. Seeking and saving—two things! It is not enough to bring men to Christ. They must be saved, powers developed, character established, built up. Let every Sabbath School teacher, every Christian mother, every pastor, elder and overseer take courage and move forward.

In the face of tremendous opposition, panoplied with a mighty power, anchored by a mighty faith, we trust and hope and pray and exclaim with the Apostle, "Who shall separate us from the Love of God!"

Los Angeles.

And so among the ruins of our pride we grow to be loving children of the Most High.—Wm. Mountford.

The International Lesson.

SECOND QUARTER.

LESSON V.

FIFTH MONTH 1, 1904.

PRAYER AND PROMISE.

Luke 11: 1-13.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Ask, and it shall be given you; seek and ye shall find.—Luke 11: 9.

DAILY READINGS.

Second-day, Fourth mo. 25.—Prayer and promise. Luke 11: 1-13.

Third-day, Fourth mo. 26.—Sincerity in prayer. Matt. 6: 1-15.

Fourth-day, Fourth mo. 27.—In his name. John 16: 23-33.

Fifth-day, Fourth mo. 28.—Ask in faith. 1 John 5: 9-15.

Sixth-day, Fourth mo. 29.—Importunity in prayer. Luke 18: 1-8.

Seventh-day, Fourth mo. 30.—Prayer answered. 2 Kings 20: 1-11.

First-day, Fifth mo. 1.—Testimony of experience. Ps. 34: 1-10.

Time.—The last month of A. D. 29. Not long after the last lesson.

Place.—In Perea, but exact place not known.

Place in Life of Christ.—Not far from the close of the third year of His ministry. After Feast of Dedication. See John 10: 22, 40.

Parallel Passage.—Matthew 6: 9-13; 7: 7-11.

1. "As he was praying." The whole statement infers that it was no unusual thing, as we know from other places. Jesus needed communion with God; how much more then do believers in Jesus need it. "As John also taught his disciples." Nothing is known of such a form.

2. "And he said unto them, When ye pray." The form here given differs from that in Matthew, both in expression and in length. This fact of difference shows that the evangelists did not consider an exact formula needful, provided the spirit was right. Matthew says, "After this manner." That this was the view of the Early Church is shown by the fact that the Lord's Prayer does not appear in any ritual earlier than the third century. There is no objection to those using it who wish, "but it should not be imposed on the worshiper as a law." The best texts omit "our" and begin "Father." In the Old Testament God is seldom spoken of as Father, and when He is, it is as the Father of the nation, not as of an individual. See Deut. 32: 6; Isa. 63: 16; Jer. 3: 4, 19; Mal. 1: 6; 2: 10. It was reserved for Christ to reveal the true relationship of God to man. It has been pointed out how totally free the prayer is from anything Jewish. It is adapted to those of every race, and of every age. "Hallowed be thy name." May thy name (name as representing all attributes) be sanctified, treated as holy. Every petition must recognize God's character and holiness, and in every petition this should be openly and actually expressed. "Thy kingdom come." "May there be perfect obedience and allegiance of all created beings to thy will." May thy reign of righteousness extend over all the earth. The words "Thy will—earth," do not occur in the best manuscripts and are omitted in the Revised Version.

3. "Give us day by day our daily bread." This is a prayer for needful earthly physical sustenance, and is authority for bringing such needs before our Heavenly Father. The word translated "daily" is found only here and in the corresponding place in Matthew. Scholars differ as to its meaning—it may mean “daily” or it may mean “necessary” or “needful.” The real sense of the passage is clear in any case. Matthew says “this day.” Luke “day by day.” Luke brings out the necessity for the continual gift, while Matthew emphasizes the necessity for the immediate present.

4. “Forgive us our sins.” “Forgive” means to put away so that he who puts them away “remembers them no more forever.” “For.” We can ask because we do it ourselves. Those who are unforgiving will be unforgiven. The word trespass so often used in repeating the Lord’s Prayer is from the Episcopal Prayer Book, which uses in that case Cranmer’s version. “And bring us not into temptation.” Revised Version. Probably the word “temptation” is used in a wide sense and includes not only what are usually called temptations, but also trials of every kind. That God tempts us is undoubtedly untrue, that He allows us to be tempted is unquestionably true. Compare Jas. 1: 13, 14; 1 Cor. 10: 13. If when tried or tempted we can feel as James exhorts us it will be well. Jas. 1: 2, 12.

5, 6. “Midnight.” In the East traveling is frequently done at night to avoid the heat of the day. According to Eastern customs the request was not specially unseasonable.

7. The family occupied one room; to rise would therefore disturb all.

8. Note that it was not the bread that he minded, but the trouble. “Importunity.” Persistence; literally, “shamelessness,” as it appeared to the man. The lesson taught by this parable should not be mistaken. It is not taught that one must worry God by persistent asking for something, but that, if a selfish man who cares only for his own comfort can be induced to yield, how much more will a loving Father hear the prayers of His children, and give to them that which they need. “We should never conceive of prayer as though it were an overcoming of God’s reluctance, when it is, in fact, a laying hold of His highest willingness.” Compare Luke 18: 1-8.

9. “I say unto you.” These words are emphatic. “Ask,” etc. These commands all refer to the parable just spoken, and they are all in the present tense. “Ask,” and continue asking; seek, and continue seeking; knock, and continue knocking. Compare Matt. 7: 7-11; 21: 22; Mark 11: 24; John 16: 23.

10. Note that no exception is made; it is “every one” in each case. That which is given is in accord with that which is asked, sought or knocked for. It is one of God’s laws that the way to get is to ask, or seek.

11, 12. Another self-evident example is given to make the teaching still more clear. In answer to prayer God neither gives that which is useless (a stone), nor harmful (a serpent or a scorpion).

13. “Evil.” Evil as compared with God, weak, imperfect. “Holy Spirit.” The greatest of all gifts. Matthew says “good things.” Luke includes everything. Compare Rom. 8: 32.

Christian Endeavor

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Lindley D. Clark, 1429 New York Avenue, Washington, D.C.]

TOPIC FOR FIFTH MONTH FIRST.

ANSWERED PRAYERS.

Acts 4: 23-31.

Second-day, Fourth mo. 25.—A promise to answer. Isa. 30: 19-26.

Third-day, Fourth mo. 26.—Sometimes answered soon. Isa. 65: 23-25.

Fourth-day, Fourth mo. 27.—Sometimes after delay. Luke 18: 1-8.

Fifth-day, Fourth mo. 28.—Not in our way. 2 Cor. 12: 7-10.

Sixth-day, Fourth mo. 29.—Beyond what we ask. Eph. 3: 14-21.

Seventh-day, Fourth mo. 30.—In trouble. Ps. 50: 14-17.

When the disciples prayed God answered, and they straightway ratified their words by their actions. They were ready to use the opportunities they asked for, and this readiness was an element that could not be spared from their praying. They believed that God was working through them and willed still to so work, and this belief held them up to the boldness of the prayer they offered and of the preaching that followed.

If we only felt the dependence of God upon us, the limitations within which He has chosen to work, our prayers would be more confident and answer-bringing, as we realized that His purpose to accomplish great things is to be wrought by and through us as fully and rapidly as human desires coincided with His.

Prayer is the communing not only of dependents with the One who promises to supply all their needs, but of those whom He has called friends with the Christ who is pleased to make known to us His perfect will. The intimacy of true prayer forbids surprises at answers, and when we feel that the continuance of old conditions is “just what we expected,” we may assure ourselves that we did not pray, for prayer expects an answer.

Muller, whose orphanage is a monument to the reality and power of prayer, said that of ten persons for whom he had prayed daily for thirty years eight were, at the time of his remarks, converted; of eighteen persons for whom he had thus prayed for twenty years fourteen were converted, and so on for shorter periods. Here is long persistence, as of one who has learned that we “ought always to pray and not to faint,” and while the results are not so striking in a way as are some others of his own experience, they may mean more to us as a key to a life of faith and an example of patient continuance in well-doing.

Whitefield and Livingstone were mighty men in their generation, and that they should die upon their knees was a fitting close to the lives that they had lived. Philip Doddridge, writer of many hymns and an author whose books contributed much to stimulate piety in his day, said: “The more I pray the better I study; it may seem a riddle, but when I pray most, I write most.”

This life here is a part, not a whole. It is worth while to struggle, however shapeless and crude the work is, when we have to lay it down at night; for there is a to-morrow coming.—Bishop Brooks.

Educational.

EARLHAM COLLEGE.

The growing interest in Bible Study at Earlham College is one of the notable phases of educational work among Friends at the present time, and promises much for the future of the Church. During the past college year ninety-three students have taken one or more of the courses offered in the Department of Biblical Literature and Interpretation, of which Prof. Elbert Russell is the head. There are now thirteen term courses offered in Biblical work, each of which stands for five hourly recitations per week for an entire college term. The total enrollment in all Biblical courses has been 214, which means that students have taken on an average of more than two terms' work each. During the year thirty-five different students have enrolled in the class in the Life of Christ. All this work has been supplemented by a number of volunteer Bible classes in charge of different members of the Faculty and leading workers in the Christian Associations. It is pleasant to know that there are now seventeen students in Earlham College looking forward to the ministry, and three student volunteers.

Additions to the equipment of the Biblical Department during the year include $100 worth of new books and a set of stereopticon slides by vote of the Trustees of the College; a very fine and expensive model of Palestine, donated by William Penn Henley, of Carthage, Ind., and a copy of Tissot's illustrations of the Life of Christ, by Indianapolis Friends.

The outlook for the future is very encouraging. During the summer school, beginning Sixth month 13th, and lasting six weeks, Prof. Russell will offer Biblical work, and it is hoped many Friends will take advantage of the opportunities thus afforded for an increase of their knowledge of the Bible. The Trustees of the College have recently chosen Murray S. Kenworthy to be an assistant instructor in this department for the year 1904-5. Murray S. Kenworthy graduated from the Biblical course of Earlham in 1900, and since that time has spent two years as pastor of the Friends' Meeting at Paoli, Ind., and two years in a like work at Kokomo, Ind., where he is located at the present time. He is one of the clerks of Western Yearly Meeting, and is devoted to all phases of work among Friends. It is the purpose of the management of the College to introduce courses to meet the needs of students who have not had sufficient preparation to enter regular college classes.

The general religious life of the College during the year has been very gratifying. The membership roll of the Christian Associations and average attendance at their devotional meetings has been larger than ever before. There has been marked success in adapting the meetings to student needs. In this connection should be mentioned a series of "Life Work Meetings," at which men of high standing in the various vocations of life have pointed out the opportunities of their vocations for Christian service. Much encouraging work has been done by the Missionary Committees. It certainly means much for the future of Quakerism that some of the strongest of our college students are dedicating their lives to service within our own beloved Church.

Christ pitied because He loved, because He saw through all the wretchedness and darkness and bondage of evil; that there was in every human soul a possibility of repentance, of restoration; a germ of good which, however stifled and overlaid, yet was capable of recovery, of health, of freedom, of perfection.—Dean Stanley.

Correspondence.

Editor of THE AMERICAN FRIEND:

I want to correct errors which are being brought to bear upon the public in many Eastern and Middle States by placards being posted up by railroad companies and perhaps helped by real estate scalpers to the effect that there is a wonderful need of carpenters and plasterers and brick masons in this part and other parts of California, and that wages are very high, etc., etc., and that the railroad is giving cheap rates, etc. There are cheap rates here at present, but the rates double on going back, which many are now trying to do. The facts are that there are now and have been for some time hundreds of men here out of employment, and likely to be for months to come. Now I write this because I wish to do unto others as I would that they should do to me, to warn the public against these swindling schemes perpetrated by those caring only to make the dollar.

Fraternally thy friend,

THOS. K. BUFKIN.

Pasadena, Cal.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND:

Nathan T. and Esther G. Frame came to Cherokee Meeting, Cherokee, Okla., Second month 27th and joined in a meeting begun by the local minister, John E. Snively, and continued four weeks. The Lord owned the work from the beginning by the Spirit endowing the speakers with power and the hearers with understanding until germination, growth and fruitage was the result.

These God-called and anointed workers spoke to the needs of the people and clearly enunciated the doctrine of the Gospel as Friends see it.

Never has the Gospel been preached in Cherokee with more power and with clearer illustration until sin and its consequences, hell and its horrors and heaven and its bliss seemed to live and move in our midst.

Old men, bent with age, were touched, and tremblingly fell at the altar crying for pardon. Young men who a few weeks before laughed at the power of the cross sought and found its power to save. Almost every young woman in the town who was not saved entered the kingdom and at some of the special services the long chancel rail was filled with children, with many more kneeling at the chairs, and in their childish simplicity prayed for themselves and others.

Faithful and loyal to the church and her mission in the world, both in public service and in private conversation, many of the converts came to Friends.

We cannot give the exact number of persons receiving definite blessings in the meetings, but from the crowded audience at the closing service came hundreds of "Praise unto the Lord" for His mercy and blessing in sending Brother and Sister Frame to Cherokee.

A liberal collection, expressive in some measure of the value of work done, was taken, amounting to over $130, though not a dollar was asked for by them.

Cherokee Meeting is young, but growing very rapidly, having over 170 members, with prospect of a number more soon. May the Lord give many more days to these His faithful workers, and the church make way for their useful service. J. E. S.

Cherokee, Okla.

Things of Interest Among Ourselves.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND will be sent to a new subscriber from now until First month 1st, 1905, for $1.00.

Harry R. Keates is being much blessed in his work in Pasadena, Cal.

Fairfield Quarterly Meeting, Western Yearly Meeting, will be held at New Vienna, O., the 29th and 30th.

Lewis E. Stout recently visited Bethel, a meeting point near Plainfield, Ind., and delivered a temperance lecture.

La Crosse Monthly Meeting was held at Hillside on the 2d instant; six persons were received into membership. Constance Day was recorded as a minister of the gospel.

Martha Pratt, a member and for many years a minister in New England Yearly Meeting, is living with her daughter, Hannah Pratt Jessup, in Indianapolis. She is now 86 years of age, and is confined to the house.

The Executive Committee on the Centennial Anniversary of the Arch Street Meeting House in Philadelphia has decided to hold the reunion Seventh-day, Sixth month 4th, instead of Fifth-day, the 2d, as was announced.

Eliza P. Williams is engaged in revival meetings at Nekoma, Kan.; there have been about twenty professions thus far. Deep conviction rests over the people of the community, many of whom have for years been very sceptical.

Professor W. O. Trueblood has resigned his place as principal of Vermilion Academy, and has accepted a call to pastoral work in the meeting at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. As yet no one has been secured to take his place in the Academy.

Cherokee Monthly Meeting, Cherokee, Okla., was duly set up by the Quarterly Meeting's Committee on the 16th ult., and a temporary clerk chosen and the needed committees for permanent organization were appointed. The monthly meeting will occur on the evening of the third Fourth-day of each month, at 7.30 p.m.

Elizabeth Larkin was granted a minute for evangelistic service in Indiana, Western and Wilmington Yearly Meetings, in Tenth month last, but was compelled to return to her home early in Twelfth month on account of ill-health without finishing the work she felt called to do. She is improving in health and hopes yet to be able to accomplish the service.

A series of meetings held at Dublin, Ind., was conducted by the pastor, Charles Swander, ably assisted by Hiram Wollam, of Smithfield, O. Estella Manley Teas, who recently located in the meeting, rendered acceptable service. A remarkable outpouring of the Holy Spirit was manifested in the community, and many of the church members were led into a deeper, richer and more satisfactory experience. There were also thirty-two professed conversions and renewals. One beautiful feature of the work was that much of it was entirely voluntary.

Eber N. Gause says in a letter received from him, Mound City, Kan., "I had believed for a long time that it was my duty to preach on the subject of baptism from a Quaker standpoint in the Congregationalist Church where I have been preaching for the past two years. On last First-day, Third month 27th, 1904, I announced that I would preach on that subject the following First-day. The house was filled to its fullest capacity; all the standing room was occupied and many turned away for the want of room. I was wonderfully favored. There were many expressions of satisfaction." Another writer says he was reminded of some of our quarterly meetings several years ago, when the children were crowded up on the rostrum to give room for the older ones.

Charles L. Jessup, of Indianapolis, who for the past four years has been an agent and block man over six counties for the McCormick Harvester Company, now merged into the International Harvester Company of America, sailed on the 9th instant for the British Isles in the interest of this corporation in that country during the next six months. Until taking up his present occupation he was prominently and widely known in reform and church work, in which his health became much impaired. His friends will be pleased to know of his success and rapid advancement, and to know also that commercial life has in no wise lessened his interest in the great movements to which his time and energy were formerly given, but that he is actively engaged in the Gideon movement for Christian traveling men; also the Y. M. C. A., of which he is a sustaining member, and as heretofore he is winning souls for God along his way.

Emeline H. Tuttle, who for nearly five years has rendered acceptable service as pastor in the meeting at Woonsocket, R. I., expects to remove to Indianapolis, Ind., early in Sixth month, to reside with her son, Joseph E., who will engage in business there after his graduation from Earlham College with the class of '04.

Fred J. Cope, of Columbus, O., began a series of meetings with Friends at New Vienna, O., Third month 4th, and continued three and a half weeks. In all forty-five sessions were reported. The gospel was preached with clearness. As a result sinners were converted, backsliders reclaimed and believers sanctified. Ten united with Friends. A. M. Gibson is serving the meeting as pastor.

At its last meeting, held on the 3d of Second month, the Council of the Friends' Historical Society approved the suggestion of the secretaries that the series of manuscripts in the possession of Friends' Reference Library at Devonshire House, London, known as "The First Publishers of Truth," should be printed under the rule of the Society, which runs thus: "As supplements to its periodical, the Society shall from time to time, as means allow, print various documents of interest, which subscribers shall be able to obtain at a reduced rate."

These MSS. were sent up early in the eighteenth century at the request of London Yearly Meeting, in answer to inquiries as to those that "first brought the message of glad tidings among them," and their sufferings, and also what Friends received these messengers and their message. The series is of very considerable interest as throwing light on the origin of the Quaker movement in most of the districts of Great Britain.

The sentiments expressed by George Fox in his will regarding early records do not appear to have resulted in any action down to the present. He says, "All the passages and travels and sufferings of Friends in the beginning of the spreading of the truth . . . will make a fine history. . . . It is a fine thing to know the beginning of the spreading of the Gospel after so long night of apostasy, since the apostles' days." We may be glad that at last, after two centuries, an effort is being made to give practical effect to these sentiments. The manuscripts will be closely followed as to wording and spelling, where these do not obscure the sense; and an introduction, some notes, and a full index will be supplied. The work will be issued in five parts at intervals and offered, in the first instance to members of the Society at 60 cents a part as issued, or $2.50 for the whole paid in advance; but should this not exhaust the edition the remainder will be offered to the public at 75 cents per part. Orders should be sent to the London office of the "Journal," Devonshire House, Bishopsgate Without, E.C., or to the American office, 718 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

DIED.

RATLIFF.—At the home of her son, Professor Ryland Ratliff, Danville, Ind., Third month 23d, 1904, Susan Ratliff, in her 74th year. She was converted when about 30 years of age, and later was recorded a minister of the gospel by Mississinewa Monthly Meeting, near Marion, Ind. In the exercise of her gift she traveled in Indiana, Ohio, New York, Maryland, North Carolina, the New England States and Canada. Her strong faith in God, coupled with her love for humanity, gave her an earnest message for the world which was clearly and forcefully delivered to the edification of her hearers.

BOND.—At the home of his son-in-law, Charles Gurley, in Westfield, Ind., Third month 31st, Charles Bond, at the age of 87. He was a birthright Friend.

BOTTROFF.—At San Diego, Cal., Third month 19th, 1904, Lewis, infant son of Alvis and Eda Bottroff.

DRAPER.—Suddenly, on Third month 5th, 1904, S. C. Draper. He was a young man of recognized ability, honest and sincere in life and word, exhibiting in his daily deeds a true Christian faith. He was a member of Butternuts Monthly Meeting, and at the time of his death was principal of the Grammar School at Ithaca, N. Y.

FAWCETT.—At her home in Whittier, Cal., Third month 16th, 1904, Elizabeth A. Fawcett, widow of Smith Fawcett and daughter of Thomas and Mary Painter, in the 70th year of her age. Her end was peace.

JOHNSON.—At her home, near West Middleton, Ind., Third month 27th, 1904, Rachel Johnson, wife of Fleming Johnson, aged over 69 years. She was a lifelong member of Friends, and identified with all its interests. She was always ready for any service to which the Master called.

Events and Comments.

The Russian Government has given notice that newspaper correspondents using wireless telegraphy will be treated as spies and shot. This raises a new question in warfare not yet settled, and the outcome will be awaited with interest.

Andrew Carnegie has established a "Hero Fund," endowing it with $5,000,000, the interest on which, $250,000 annually, is for the benefit of the dependents of those losing their lives in heroic effort to save their fellow-men, or for the heroes themselves, if injured only. Provision is also made for medals to be given in commemoration of heroic acts, and some gifts may be made to uninjured heroes.

For some time a number of large publishing houses have been issuing periodical books on which they have received the benefit of second-class mail matter rates. This privilege was considered an abuse of the law by Postmaster-General Smith, and he made a ruling against it in 1902. Cases were instituted against him by three book concerns, and the Supreme Court handed down its decision last week sustaining the Postmaster-General's ruling.

Russia met with an overwhelming disaster at Port Arthur last week. The battleship Petropavlovsk, the flagship of Vice-Admiral Makaroff, was destroyed by the explosion of a floating mine or a submarine vessel just outside the entrance to the harbor, and the Admiral and nearly all of his crew perished. Two other Russian vessels have met with disaster. The same day an explosion occurred on board the Missouri, an American battleship, while in target practice off Pensacola, Fla., and thirty-two men have died as a result. Modern war vessels seem to be quite as disastrous to their owners as to enemies.

The reports of the Mosely Educational Commission which visited the United States in the autumn of 1903 are, on the whole, exceedingly complimentary to our system of public education. The commission was composed of twenty-six members, the most of them specialists in one or more branches of instruction, and all of them Englishmen of experience in educational affairs. The subjects submitted to the commission for investigation were the development of individuality in the primary schools the social and intellectual effects of the wide distribution of secondary education, the effect of specific instruction in business methods and applied science, and the present state of opinion as to the value of technical university instruction, with reference to the requirements of business life.

By the consummation of a Colonial treaty between Britain and France three elements threatening the peace of both nations are removed. By the terms of the treaty the present political situation in Morocco and in Egypt remains unchanged, and a full agreement is reached regarding Egyptian finances. Great Britain recognizes the right of France to guard the tranquillity of Morocco, while France will not impede the action of Great Britain in Egypt, and Great Britain adheres to the convention of 1883 for the neutrality of the Suez Canal. In Newfoundland France foregoes exclusive fishing rights on the French shore, though retaining her right to fish. The Bait bill of 1886 is modified so as to give Newfoundlanders the right to sell bait to the French fishermen. France obtains three concessions regarding territory in West Africa. The importance to the world at large of such a settlement is scarcely to be estimated. The removal of the French monopoly from the Newfoundland coast, the further improvement of Egyptian affairs, the extension of orderly influences into Morocco, will be of advantage to all who have or may have dealings with those countries. The example supplied by the treaty will have marked effect in utilizing the arts of diplomacy for securing the peace of the world.

The value of home and faithful marital love, and the uplifting office of motherhood, assume more gracious and divine proportions as we discover their beauty and the absolute need of our hearts for their solace, their inspiration and their blessed influences of restraint and self-denial. These, may heaven forbid that we should ever outgrow, but into all the fullness of these we may—if we are to do our best, we must—infuse every ray of new light, every helpful discovery, every amelioration and adorning gift progress has brought into the world.—Selected.

MEMORY MAKER.

Food With Certain Elements Required in the Brain.

Poor memory means an ill-nourished brain. The proper food to help and nourish the brain will thus help the memory, as in the following case:

"I have not known what it is to enjoy real good health, not having seen a well day in over twenty years and taking medicine most of the time until about a year ago.

"At that time I was suffering greatly from nervous prostration and general debility, the result of several severe illnesses, from which I never expected to fully recover.

"My memory was also so poor that it caused me much chagrin at times.

"I had often heard how Grape-Nuts had helped other people's memory, and that it was a brain food. Finally I was put on Grape-Nuts for my meals.

"I was so pleasing to the taste I enjoyed eating it, and after a time I saw such an improvement in my health generally that I gave up medicine altogether. Am not even using laxatives now that I had been unable to do without for years. Grape-Nuts helped my nerves, gave me strength, increased my weight ten pounds, and I can now work and walk better and enjoy life as I never expected to again.

"When my friends remark how well I look and act, I tell them it is all due to Grape-Nuts. My doctor never sees me but he smiles with genuine pleasure at my improved condition, for he is an old friend, and would like to see me perfectly well, knowing how long and how much I have suffered." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

IT IS A MATTER OF HEALTH

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD'S WASHINGTON TOURS.

The Pennsylvania Railroad's eighth three-day personally-conducted tour to Washington will leave New York, Trenton and Philadelphia April 28th. Round-trip rates—only difference being in the hotel selected in Washington—are $10.50 or $13 from Trenton, $9 or $11.50 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other points. Tickets cover railroad transportation for the round trip and hotel accommodations. A special side trip to Mt. Vernon may also be taken. All tickets good for ten days, with special hotel rates at expiration of hotel coupon. For itineraries and full information apply to ticket agents, or Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, Pa.

"INDIANA YEARLY MEETING OF FRIENDS, 1844," is the title of a very instructive picture drawn by Marcus Mote. In the foreground is a group of the old-time Friends in their queer garb, while in the background stands the plain meeting-house, surrounded with trees and numerous vehicles. An excellent half-tone copy on enameled paper, 6x10 inches. Postpaid, 5c. each, 50 cents per dozen. THE AMERICAN FRIEND, 718 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

A mortgage is like Deacon Smith's mule, "Dreadful sot in its ways." It has a habit of bobbing up regularly. While you live you can take care of it. After that—well, you'd be wise now to consult the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE

921-3-5 Chestnut Street, Phila.

THERE IS ALWAYS TIME FOR PRAYER.

Should the new dawn, breaking, a burden bring,
That your soul deems hard to bear,
Seek a boon of grace for a little space;
There is always time for prayer.

With a lift of heart let the day begin,
And a moment's respite spare,
Ere you press along with the toiling throng;
There is always time for prayer.

When your tired feet falter upon the path,
Tough to pause you do not dare,
Would you find the stress of the noon grow less?
There is always time for prayer.

When the late light dies with the setting sun,
Would you taste a balm for care?
With a lift of heart let the day depart;
There is always time for prayer.

There is always a time in the morning's prime
And the golden noontide fair,
There is always time 'neath the even-chime,
There is always time for prayer.

—Edith H. Kinney.

A wise and witty preacher in Chicago recently made this sharp but true remark: "A boy's best friend is not his mother, if she give all her time to clubs or societies or church work." It is easy for some people to become so deeply interested in even good work that they neglect the immediate home work, which is for them the most important work in the world.

DIDN'T LIKE IT.

Soon Found Why.

Coffee has a terrible hold on some people.

"About eight years ago I was a great sufferer from stomach trouble; my liver was all out of fix and a wise doctor forbid tea and coffee. At that time I was so weak I could hardly walk, absolutely poisoned.

"One day I noticed Postum in the store, and, having read about it, I bought a package and made some. I did not like it, but tried it again, and followed directions carefully. It was not long before I liked it better than any other drink, and it has brought me out of all the old coffee troubles, too.

"I can now eat what I want, am strong and healthy, and the effects of Postum on me were so good all our family soon drank it.

"In summer, when the weather is hot, I do not have that 'all gone,' feeling now for when I drink a cup of Postum it refreshes and strengthens, but never has the bad after-effect like coffee.

"Postum is like everything else; it needs to be made right, and there is no better way than the directions on the package." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

THE STUDENT CONFERENCE AT NORTHFIELD.

The Northfield Student Conference will be held at East Northfield, Mass., Seventh month 1st to 10th. This conference has been held upon the invitation of Mr. D. L. Moody and members of his family each summer since 1886 under the direction of the Student Department of the International Committee of Young Men's Christian Associations. Its purpose is to build up the Christian life of students and to train them for leadership of the varied organized Christian work of their institutions. It is attended annually by about 700 men from 130 colleges and preparatory schools. The daily program consists of morning and evening platform meetings in the auditorium, normal Bible classes, conferences on college Young Men's Christian Association work and life work meetings on Round Top. The missionary feature under the direction of the Student Volunteer Movement for Foreign Missions, is always prominent and consists of normal classes for training in leading home and foreign mission study classes, a missionary institute for the discussion of methods and missionary addresses. The athletics in the afternoons bring out friendly rivalry between the colleges. Among the speakers for this year are G. A. Johnston Rose, of Cambridge, England; Charles Cuthbert Hall, of New York; Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., of New Haven; R. A. Falconer, Halifax; Robert E. Speer, John R. Mott and S. H. Hadley, of New York city. This is one of a series of seven conferences which are held annually for the students of different sections of the country. Two of these, the Southwestern Conference, at Ruston, La., and the Pacific Coast Conference, at Pacific Grove, Cal., are held during the winter holidays. The remaining four are held as follows: For the Lake Erie group, at Lakeside, O., Sixth month 17th to 26th; for the West, at Lake Geneva, Wis., Sixth month 17th to 26th; for the South, at Waynesville, N. C., Sixth month 10th to 19th, and for the Pacific Northwest, at Gearhart Park, Oregon, Fifth month 28th to Sixth month 5th. The training at these conferences of from 1,700 to 2,000 of the strongest Christian men for leadership of the Christian work in the institutions for higher learning in the United States and Canada has a marked influence on the religious life of the colleges of these two countries.

Bobby had returned from his first tea-party, his round face wreathed in smiles. "I hope you were polite, Bobby," said his mother, "and remembered your 'Yes, please,' and 'No, thank you,' when things were passed to you." "I remembered, 'Yes, please,'" said Bobby cheerfully, "but I didn't have to say 'No, thank you.' I took everything every time it was passed."

"But," said the British nobleman, haughtily, "I am offering for your daughter and her paltry fortune a title which is among the proudest in Europe. Is that not enough?"

"No," replied Hardsense, "I want something to boot, and I'm itching to do it right now."—"Public Ledger" (Philadelphia).

A Chance Courtship

is a story of an unconventional love match, well told and beautifully illustrated. The small picture above only suggests the real charm of these illustrations. As a bit of readable fiction the story is well worth writing for. It is contained in a handsomely bound book of 128 pages, a portion of which is devoted to the attractive mountain and lake resorts along the Lackawanna Railroad. It is a book you will like to see. It may be had by sending 10 cents in postage stamps to T. W. LEE, General Passenger Agent, Lackawanna Railroad, New York.

AT THE SIGN OF THE ROCKING KEYS

You see them everywhere

NO OTHER PAINTS, STAINS, ENAMELS, VARNISHES

are "just as good" as "NICE" and if your dealer does not have them, don't accept a substitute, but send to us for illustrated catalogue, color cards and prices.

EUGENE E. NICE

Nos. 272-274 S. Second St.
PHILADELPHIA

Y. F. A. Building,
140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a.
FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.
 Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote, 25 cents.
 Dinner, 12 to 2 p.m.
 Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.
COMFORTABLE ROOMS:
 One occupant, 75 cts. per night; $3 per week
 Two occupants, 50 cts. each, per night.
 2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL
 Phone Spruce 33-55. Clerk.

FINANCIAL.

6% NET Sound, conservative first mortgages on improved realty. We examine every security and know every borrower. We make our loans with our own money and turn them over complete. In 23 years we have learned how to select the best. No one now handling western mortgages has had more experience. We give you the benefit of that experience. The quality of the securities now on hand has never been surpassed. Highest references. Write for circulars and full information free.
PERKINS & COMPANY Lawrence, Kan.

6% to 7% Choice First Mortgage Loans, Seattle and vicinity. Local and N. Y. references. Established 1887. Correspondence Solicited.
JAMES BOTHWELL, Seattle, Washington.

FOR SALE

$10,000—5 per cent. Gold First Mortgage Electric Light Bonds at 100 and interest. $5,000—5 per cent. Gold First Mortgage Warehouse Bonds at 102½ and interest. $5,000—5 per cent. Gold First Mortgage Guaranteed Gas Bonds at 100 and interest. $10,000—5 per cent. Gold First Mortgage Guaranteed Street Railway Bonds at 100 and interest.

HOWARD M. SWAB,
 Member Philadelphia Stock Exchange,
 Room 61, Main Floor, Bourse.

Mortgages Net 6% in North Dakota

THEY are the best, gilt-edged, rock-ribbed, guaranteed 6% investment in America. Safe as government bonds and pay better.

I have been selling these mortgages for 18 years, and have never had to foreclose, and never lost a cent of principal or interest for a single customer.

I personally know every farm covered by the mortgages, as well as the farmers giving them. I know them both to be right, or I have nothing to do with them. Their land is increasing in value every day, thus increasing the value of the security.

I collect both the interest and principal free, and remit in New York exchange, without the least trouble or bother of the customer.

I will be pleased to put you in the way of finding out all about me. Write me for further information.

WALTER L. WILLIAMSON
Investment Banker
LISBON, NORTH DAKOTA

Over One Million Endowment Policies

are in force in this country, representing ultimate accumulations of over Two Billion Dollars. Wouldn't you like to join this vast army of money savers? The most progressive, enterprising, farsighted and successful young men of America are included in its ranks. Send Coupon for Information.

Of those who take out Endowment Insurance at age 30, 80 per cent live to reap the reward of their foresight at the end of 20 years.

THE PRUDENTIAL

Insurance Co. of America

JOHN F. DRYDEN

Prest.

Home Office

NEWARK

N. J.

Name _____ Age _____

Address _____

Occupation _____ Dept. 67.

Fill in this Coupon.

Without committing myself to any action I shall be glad to receive, free, Particulars and Rates of Endowment Policies

For $_____

NEGLECTED OPPORTUNITIES

(For advertisers)

Every letter that you send out ought to contain some advertising matter about your business, be it booklet, folder, circular or just a slip. It entails no extra expense for postage, and your correspondent receives it at a time when he is interested. This is one of the opportunities for effective advertising that business men often neglect.

THE LEEDS & BIDDLE CO., Inc.
 Makers of the Better Kind of Printing
 Phone _____ 1019-21 Market Street, Phila.

Acker has it—that Maleberry Coffee.

Women's Stylish Shower Coats

These three numbers are new, and of course have all the latest style-touches. The Women's Shower Coats we show this spring are as good examples of the tailoring art as can be seen anywhere:

At $7.50 WOMEN'S SHOWER COATS—of fancy mixed cloths, in a light weight. Loose fly front, half-fitting back, notched collar and revers, double capes; sleeves finished with cuffs; inserted pockets; two-piece belt at waist. Reduced from $10.75.

At $10.00 WOMEN'S SHOWER COATS—of cravenette cloth, in tan and gray. Collar and revers well tailored; double split capes, loose fly front, semi-fitting back; full sleeves, neat cuffs, belt at waist, standing lap pockets. Reduced from $12.00.

At $12.00 WOMEN'S SHOWER COATS—of sicilian mohair, in blue, black or gray. Collarless, with broad band of material at neck, pointed over shoulders, trimmed down front; two narrow pointed split capes; full sleeves, with neat cuffs; two inverted plaits down back.

STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER
 PHILADELPHIA

The American Friend

Vol. XI

FOURTH MONTH 28, 1904

No. 17

PAGE

EDITORIALS.—A Great Work.—Love as the Principle of Fitness for the Kingdom	275-276
Philadelphia Yearly Meeting	276
Why Was Jesus Tempted? Rollin A. Sawyer.	277
The Unity of Life James E. C. Sawyer.	278
The Task of Happiness	279
English Laws of the Olden Time J. Lindley Spicer.	280
Some Recent Religious Books	280
SOME VIEWS ON PRESENT TOPICS: Pastoral Care Robert E. Prehn.	281
THE INTERNATIONAL LESSON Lesson for Fifth month 8, 1904.	282
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR Topic for Fifth month 8, 1904.	283
CORRESPONDENCE	283
THINGS OF INTEREST AMONG OURSELVES, 284
BORN.—DIED	284
EVENTS AND COMMENTS	285

THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE CAPTAINS OF INDUSTRY.

I know of no trust more sacred than that given into the hands of the captains of industry, for they deal with human beings in close relations, not through the media of speech or exhortation, but of positive association; and by this they can make or mar. Granted that the material is often poor, the intellects often dull, then all the more sacred the trust, and all the greater the responsibility. The rich and powerful manufacturer, with the adjuncts of education and good business training, holds in his hand something more than the means of subsistence for those he employs. He holds their moral well-being in his keeping, in so far as it is in his power to mold their morals. He is something more than a producer; he is an instrument of God for the upbuilding of the race.

—CARROLL D. WRIGHT.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.50 A YEAR * * * PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
AMERICAN FRIEND PUBLISHING COMPANY, 718 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA

WANTED

back numbers and volumes of

American Friend
Western Friend
Friends' Review
Gospel Expositor
Christian Worker
Western Work
Nebraska Friend

Also books, tracts, documents, bearing on Friends during the nineteenth century. Communicate with

ALLEN C. THOMAS,
Haverford, Pa.

JOSEPH B. SCATTERGOOD
House and Sign Painter
313 South 5th St., Philadelphia

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE.
Sifts the flour and mixes
10 lbs. of best bread in 3
minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for booklet. Agents wanted.
Scientific Bread Mach. Co.
(CYRUS CHAMBERS, Jr.)
52d & Media Sts., Philadelphia

WILLIAM S. YARNALL
Manufacturing OPTICIAN

118 S. FIFTEENTH ST., PHILA.
4th Door Below Chestnut St.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD
27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

VALUE

Any printer will take a big price for his work if he can get it. But don't pay the price unless you get the value. We try to give value every time and our prices are not high, as our customers tell us.

THE LEEDS & BIDDLE CO.

Makers of the Better Kind of Printing
Phone 1019-21 Market Street, Phila.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a.

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote, 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p.m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cts. per night; $3 per week

Two occupants, 50 cts. each, per night.
2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL
Phone Spruce 33-55. Clerk.

The odor left by a highly-scented toilet soap is not agreeable to people of refined tastes. The simple purity of Ivory Soap is generally preferable to any perfume. Ivory Soap leaves only a comfortable feeling of perfect cleanliness.

IT FLOATS.

I believe the first test of a truly great man is his humility.—Ruskin.

The distance between indolence and activity is the distance between nothingness and infinity.

Barlow's Indigo Blue

Will not spot or streak clothes

In use for fifty years is proof that it is the best. All grocers sell it. Free samples mailed. Depot, No. 233 N. Second Street, Philadelphia.

Acker has them—those luscious Caramels.

HOOPING-COUGH AND CROUP.

Roche's Herbal Embrocation

The celebrated and effectual English Cure without internal medicine. Proprietors, W. EDWARDS & SON, Queen Victoria St., London, England. Wholesale of E. Fougere & Co., 50 North William Street, N. Y.

The American Friend

*"Truth is the highest thing a man may keep."
"That they all may be one."*

VOL. XI.

PHILADELPHIA, FOURTH MONTH 28, 1904.

No. 17.

A GREAT WORK.

ABOUT ten miles out of Jerusalem stands the little village of Ramallah, which is now one of the brightest spots in the whole land of Palestine. In this little village, not far from the home of the prophet Samuel, a practical attempt is being made to give back to the inhabitants of the Bible land some of the life and light which has come to us from that land. Since the year 1889 American Friends have been carrying on in this place a Training School for the Girls of Palestine.* They are taken from the ages of 8 to 12 years, and are kept in the Training Home until they have learned Arabic and English, and until they have been taught household duties, so as to fill any station in life to which they are likely to be called. A Friends' meeting has been built up in the community, to which the girls go, and they are well-trained in the Bible, which they quickly learn to love. The mission has a medical dispensary and employs a trained physician, who ministers to the sick over a wide territory; and a Bible woman goes about visiting and comforting the poor, tending the sick and calling in the doctor where he is needed. This opens the way for reaching the people spiritually, and it makes the people eager to have their children go to the school from which so many helpful things come to them. There are now about forty girls in attendance. Six or eight are graduated each year, many of whom are now employed in teaching day schools in the surrounding villages. Those of the graduates who have married have found for husbands the best men of the land, and they have made model homes wherever they have gone. The influence of the school goes wherever one of these trained girls goes.

The time has now fully come for giving the boys all the advantages which the girls are receiving. In fact, the work will largely fail of its purpose if the enlightened women have no husbands suited to unite with them. Friends have long realized that this further step was a necessity, and a boys' school has already been opened in a rented building, where twenty-two boys are being trained. The accommodations are by no means adequate for the work required, and a good, solid building must be put up, suited for teaching all sorts of industrial work, such as carpentry, blacksmithing, shoemaking and stonecutting, so that these boys can earn a good living and make good homes in their own country. They will learn, as the girls have, their own language and English. They will be taught in the Bible, and they will form their early lives under the influences of the Christian religion.

All this work at Ramallah has been done on a sound, solid basis. The buildings themselves are an education to the people. The mission is free of debt; it is carefully and wisely managed, and its work has impressed all who have visited it and examined it. It is well supported, and those who are carrying it on are profoundly interested in it. The Christian Endeavorers of New England Yearly Meeting propose to furnish the funds for the running expenses of the Boys' School. The great concern now is to secure the money which will be needed to buy the land and erect the building for this new school. It would be difficult to conceive of a better investment of funds. The Girls' School building seems built to stand forever. It is as solid as the hill on which it stands. It is proposed to have another one like it. Friends who give here may rest assured that their money will be doing a great work in the land of the Bible long after they will have ceased to have any use for money themselves. This is the only way to transform Palestine. The people there must be trained to a better and truer civilization. They must learn how to work and how to make homes; they must find out how to care for their own sick and teach their own school, and, finally, how to preach the Gospel in their own tongue. All this is well begun. It is a momentous work, and it deserves some of our spare dollars.

In the middle ages Christians organized great crusades to conquer the Holy Land and to get possession of the sepulcher of the Lord. How infinitely nobler is our undertaking—to carry the love and light of Christ back to this land and put it into the hearts and lives of these people!

* This work in Palestine was begun in the year 1869 by Eli and Sybil Jones. The mission was managed and supported jointly by English and American Friends until 1888, when it was transferred to the care of New England Yearly Meeting, and the Training School was opened the year following.

LOVE AS THE PRINCIPLE OF FITNESS FOR THE KINGDOM.

Love, as Christ reveals it, means readiness to share everything which the self possesses, including life itself. The world has been slow in discovering what a very poor and empty thing a bare individual life would be—a life that just kept itself and lived unto itself and enjoyed itself. The moment you succeed in imagining such a life, you see at once that there is nothing there to make a kingdom out of, nothing which is fit to survive in a perfect society. Such a self would be as valueless in the kingdom of heaven as the vermiform appendix now is in the human organism. There is no function for either! Life expands and can expand only as it shares itself and gives itself out. This is true at every biological stage. In the very lowest stage, where the entire structure is a single cell, the new cell is formed only as the old one gives up half itself by a mysterious inward movement. And as life progresses it continually discovers some higher way to share or give itself. Sociology has the same story to tell. Civilization has won its permanent victories as men have learned higher ways of co-operation—i.e., of sharing what they possessed.

Now, Christ raises this principle of self-sharing and outgiving to its highest degree. He traces it back to the nature of God as its source. God so loved that He gave Himself. He is the infinite shepherd who goes out after all sheep who are not in the safe fold. Redeeming love is always symbolized by the cross. The New Testament does not reveal God as a mighty creator or an omnipotent sovereign, but as a Father who shares everything which His children suffer, and who even takes upon Himself their sin and makes them see what it costs Him.

Christ says to His followers: "You are to love even as I have loved you." The kingdom of heaven is a perfect co-operative society, and can exist only on this principle of love—of self-sharing. In the great judgment scene (Matt. 25: 31-46) the selection is determined entirely by this principle of co-operation and self-giving. To the "blessed" God says, "Come, inherit the Kingdom; for I was hungry, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in: Naked, and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me: * * for inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye did it unto me." As soon as you realize that the kingdom is a living organic group, you see that you could not be in it and of it unless you were contributing to the life of the whole. Isolate yourself and center your efforts upon your independent self, and you become a dead branch—you are not fit for the kingdom.

PHILADELPHIA YEARLY MEETING.

The annual gathering of Friends of Philadelphia for 1904 opened the 18th instant with that reverence and dignity so characteristic of this yearly meeting. Few visitors were present, but the faithful members who are left from those who have directed the affairs of the Society in years gone by were in their accustomed places. Much earnestness was manifest in an effort frankly to face the questions before the meeting. The laying down of Salem Quarterly Meeting came up early and called forth some interesting discussion. Several spoke of the great changes which have taken place in the Society within a generation, especially in the rural meetings. Many of these have been totally deserted, and all of them have suffered heavy losses. These losses were attributed to changing social conditions, especially the movement of Friends from their farms to the city, and to the abandonment of the more simple home life. Some concern was expressed lest these causes were yet at work within the yearly meeting, and this called forth earnest exhortation to maintain the "simple life of former days."

Another matter of interest was the resignation of John E. Carter from the Meeting for Sufferings. He has served in that body since 1878 and has rendered excellent service. He is yet well qualified to fill the position, but the significance of the resignation was suggested in his remarks when he cited the fact that, while the Meeting for Sufferings was made up of middle-aged and elderly men, the latter class predominated, and that it was his desire that in choosing his successor the meeting would select a younger man.

The answers to the queries called forth exhortations for individual faithfulness. It was suggested that this involved personal work as "we meet men by the way." Much encouragement was felt because of the opposition to oaths which seems to be growing among people other than Friends.

The reports on education showed a slight decrease in the number of children between the ages of 5 and 21, but they also showed an increase in the attendance in the primary schools. Nearly all Friends' children are in schools or colleges except those who have already completed their school work. About 25 per cent. of them, however, are in public schools, where they are exposed to the teaching of militarism and music; but such cases cannot be avoided.

Much care and money are expended yearly for the education and religious instruction of the Doukhobors in Canada, and for the Indians in Western New York. As an experiment a number of Doukhobors were brought to the United States during the last year in order to instruct them in our modern methods of life. The task is proving to be a very difficult one, and the time has been too short to pass judgment upon the undertaking. The young Doukhobors, however, seem to take up our vices quite as readily as they do our virtues. In Canada they are very slow to perceive the advantages of a school education, and it was the feeling of the meeting that this phase of the work should not be pushed, but that religious instruction should continue and secular learning would follow in the natural course of events.

The meetings of the various associations for departmental work which are held during the yearly meeting time opened with the meeting of the Peace Association at which Benjamin F. Trueblood delivered an address on "The Movement Toward World Federation." His discussion was confined to two phases of the subject, that is, the growing force of arbitration, and the disarmament movement. Some of the recent treaties were dwelt upon at length. The war in the East was cited as a powerful factor in bringing the Western nations together, since it affords an object lesson, the like of which they desire to escape. He justified The Hague Court in its disposition of the Venezuelan case, stating that since Venezuela had promised the belligerent powers preferential payment it was merely a matter of asking her to keep her word. He cited the partial disarmament of Chile and the Argentine Republic as the most significant act in recent history.

The reports from the work of the First-day Schools were very encouraging. They showed, on the whole, an increase in attendance. One new class was organized and has done good work for eight months. One school reported a home department and a cradle roll; it also has supported a mission school in North Carolina. An outline for graded Bible Class work was prepared and copies were distributed for future use.

The addresses and discussions in connection with the work were the most illuminating and practical in connection with the yearly meeting. They touched upon a number of vital questions which confront the Society and dealt with them in a sane and modern way. The central thought was that the dynamic Christian life is the true one. If Friends possess the mystery of the happy life they are not doing their duty in cultivating it among themselves alone, but should find some effective way of passing it on to others. It is generally admitted that the silent worship of Friends is not well adapted to accomplish this end among young people, and especially children. With the present organization of the Society the most effective way of doing this is through Bible Classes. Here it is brought about through instruction, and also through personal influence. The end to be attained is Christian character, not some particular mode of expressing it. The instruction should be adapted to the varying ages of children, carefully observing the laws of mental development. They should be taught about the man Jesus first as a man. Later, as the nature unfolds, deeper spiritual truths should be presented. In this way the outward instruction can be made to co-operate with the inward Spirit, and conditions be so perfected that the soul is compelled to believe. To complete the system of propaganda, the meetings for worship should supplement the Bible Class work so that the young Christians may be attached to Friends with that intimacy which will create the most helpful fellowship.

The Freedmen, Missionary, Temperance and Indian Associations all held meetings, and their reports showed that much substantial work had been done during the past year. A steady growth has obtained in nearly every branch, and the future is promising. Reports from these departments appear in our columns from time to time, and from them we may expect to gain inspiration as the work proceeds.

WHY WAS JESUS TEMPTED?

BY ROLLIN A. SAWYER.

This is the greater question. The doctrine of the Atonement by His death has taken precedence of the doctrine taught by His temptation at the beginning of His life. Yet we believe that Jesus was greater and nearer to us men when He faced temptation in solitude than when He suffered on the cross. It is simply a question of values and of degrees. Whether we say He died for us, or He died with us, His resurrection is the chief factor in His service to His fellow men. So if you say He was tempted for us, or He was tempted with us, it makes no change in the relation of that solitary struggle to the wrestling souls that have known the conflict.

It may seem revolutionary to speak of Christ's triumph in the wilderness as of more significance to us than His death on Calvary. But that is a matter of standpoint mainly. The origin of our theological dogmas is a thing of exigence, if not of chance. The dogmas concerning the death of Jesus came earliest into prominence for two reasons: one, the close connection of His death with the sacrificial idea in Judaism and its relation to the resurrection as the point of contest with unbelievers; and the other, a real doubt in the minds of the early Fathers as to the actuality of the Lord's being tempted. It is not too much to say that down to the time of Augustine men were shy of the dogma as to a real temptation of the Son of Man. As to Calvin, his treatment of it has been a subject of criticism since the days when Servetus wrote his caustic notes on the margin of the Institutes. It is too late to pretend that Calvin or his disciples have ever faced the real doctrine and difficulty of the temptation of Jesus with anything like the frankness of their treatment of His death.

This significant fact has been often utterly overlooked. When men have called attention to it they have been rebuffed or rebuked. We remember that when Norman McLeod was sorely troubled on this matter, even such a man as William M. Taylor said it was evidence of a loss of faith. To these men it has seemed all-sufficient to interpret the death of Christ, and let every other fact, no matter what its significance or mystery, go unstudied and unexplained.

Now, the difficulty is one of consistent interpretation. If you say that Christ died as divine for the sins of men, then you must say that He was tempted as divine so as to be the deliverer of tempted men. Then the necessity for limiting Christ's death, and also His temptation in its scope and power so far as men are concerned, becomes an urgent issue. And we not only have up all the old questions: "Can God die?" "Can God be tempted?" but we are pushed into an acceptance, and the explanation, of a dogma of limited atonement more and more offensive and absurd as our notions of election become absolute and arbitrary as designed for God's personal glory.

Let it be understood once for all that the consensus of Christian feeling, judgment, conviction is finally fixed against this narrow and arbitrary limitation of the work of Jesus. The system that insists upon it must be abandoned, for the Church of to-day does not, and cannot be made to, hold it. And unless the temptation of Jesus is put on the same plane of service with His death, you have either to deny its reality or else blink at it as the old theologians have done, to their shame and our sorrow.

The issue is quite distinctly before us. No time could be more fit to make our peace with it, or to make up our minds about it. Why was Christ Jesus led up into the wilderness to be tempted by the devil? Oh, don't hide away from it by a half denial! If you deny that fact will you deny Gethsemane? If not, why not? And if Jesus was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin, then are we able to be tempted and yet not sin?

For here his fellow men are face to face with the fact that to fall under the temptation is a personal sin. Will you dare to say it is a necessary sin? For ages of our strong theology men have been made the weakest sort of sinners. Oh, they say, we are all alike! The drunken lawyer meeting his minister on the street cried: "You are no better than I am, for Bunyan said so!" And this extravagance of presumption has shaded down into a secret permission to indulgence because "the flesh is evil."

Frankly, the time has come to look on that solitary figure fighting his winning battle, as the model, not for ministers, not for "the elect only," but for manhood in all conditions. And when a man in fair health of body and soundness of mind sneaks behind his depravity to commit sin, he should stand convicted both of the crime and a contemptible cowardice besides! We have taught men their weakness in order to drive them to a trust in Jesus, till we have made fools of them. It is time to teach them their strength, to make them strong and brave and wise enough to follow Jesus to his victory over sin. For the world, the flesh and the devil combined need not, and should not, make a sane man go wrong.

The answer to our question begins to break through the mists and glooms of our dogmas and our disputes. Jesus came to manifest the personality of God and the possibilities of man. Whatever else, this must be admitted. And as He stood against evil, so must every sound manhood. As He died and rose from the dead, so may we!—"Christian Work and Evangelist."

THE UNITY OF LIFE.

BY JAMES E. C. SAWYER.

Human life is ordinarily very fragmentary. Most people are alive only in spots. Sharp division lines are run between things secular and things sacred. Average people find an apparently impassable gulf yawning between their imagination and the homeliness of their environment. Our sorrows seem antagonistic to our affections. Ideals exist entirely apart from the petty tasks and trials of daily life. The work that taxes the hands and the brain too often seems remote from those loftier elements of being wherein consists the value of personality. Millions of people, if they could only be assured of a comfortable support, would drop out of their daily work as unconcernedly as kernels of corn and wheat slide out of an elevator.

Even those people who have intimate and prosperous relations with both business and society often have little unity and strength of character. Their lives are filled with doings, events and nominal pleasures; their wealth or ability or position makes their life multitudinous of details; but all their doing and getting and enjoyments and ambitions are chaotic; there is no deep principle that unifies their life, making character harmonious, beautiful and strong. In the streets of our great cities one often sees one of the great wagons of an express company piled high with a great number of packages of varying size and value; but every package is directed to a different individual, and when the wagon has made its rounds it comes back empty. Many men and women are like such a wagon. When in mid-career they are loaded up with enterprises, engagements, pleasures, undertakings, frivolities, plans and ambitions, and they cut quite a figure; but as health declines and old age comes on, one by one all of these things are taken from them, and they are left empty, or death suddenly tips out the whole ill-assorted cargo and they go forth into the unknown naked and poor. There is no unity in mere things. The more of them a man has the worse he is distracted, unless there be living principles by which they are all handled, principles all of which grow from one deep and unifying center.

A noble purpose tends to the unity of life, and yet even a noble purpose is not sufficient. The unity toward which it tends may be the narrowness of a straight line rather than the roundness of a well-orbed and symmetrical character. Loftiness of purpose has sometimes seemed to promote impatience with the interruptions and impediments occasioned by ordinary conditions. To the man of high aims the small duties, cares and trials of life have often been fruitful of positive distress. In their devotion to principle some have scorned what is sweetest and most lovely in human nature; and in striving to accomplish some far-away noble end, they have neglected the duties lying nearest them and have fretted at the salutary limitations of social relationships and responsibilities.

Christ gives unity to human life because He affords it an ideal which is broad as well as lofty. He was completely, because divinely, human. His humanity is sufficiently ample to be the ideal of those of all ages, all lands, all social conditions; of those of every pursuit and of the most varying gifts and of every environment of joy or sorrow. Everything that is human in us finds response in Christ. He is an ideal and example for the lowliest as well as for the sublimest duties. Those who differ most from each other in temperament, genius and environment find equal help and inspiration in His character and sympathy. All seeming contradictions of human nature and human experience are resolved by Him.

Christ makes us alive in the depths of our being. Work, suffering, society, pleasure, visions and daily drudgery are all dignified and brought into relationship when we are alive in the depths. It is only the superficial life that is really fragmentary. Nothing less than Christ can make us alive through and through. As pictured on a map the earth seems fragmentary. Countless little spots called islands, larger islands called continents, even the continents torn to pieces by mountain chains and rivers. This fragmentary appearance is because the map gives only a surface view. The mountains and the islands are united underneath the sea. In the depths the earth is one great continent holding the oceans in its arm.

Christ inspires sufficient love to bring out all the harmonies of human nature. An uninstructed child at a great organ could only evoke isolated and fragmentary notes, and would more frequently produce discords than harmonies. The noblest of human ambitions, the purest of earthly affections, the grandest of human employments, can only call out a part of the music of our nature. The love of Christ touches the whole of it, and all harmoniously.

Williamstown, Mass.

THE TASK OF HAPPINESS.

BY ELIZABETH W. DENISON.

Is it an arbitrary and absurd dictum to inform people that they must be happy, a duty as binding upon us as it is to be good? It would appear that happiness ought to be a spontaneous condition of mind, and that when it is lowered, or perhaps elevated, to the level of a duty, the very constitution of the evanescent thing vanishes. But we are not speaking of the physical joy of young children, which is like that of lambs at play, or of the unthinking and more or less selfish feeling that goes with robust health and temporal prosperity. Not much of that sort of happiness is the portion of the bone and sinew of this world, of those who are destined to labor, or the still heavier fate, to endure. What we have in mind is a settled cheerfulness, a genuine pleasure in little things, a grateful heart that insists upon seeing beauty and goodness in everything. Is not this what we must have been made for? If we were really "loved into being," the great Fountain of Love must have meant ultimate joy and blessedness for us, to be arrived at somehow, sooner or later. We will not look for an example to those whose lot is cast in pleasant and prosperous places, with love to soften every blow and share every sorrow. "Little admiration," as the Irish say, if they are happy. Life will take care of them, and faithfully measure out their due share of the "cup of bitterness" which is needful. But as we all know, there are those who seem to be born to suffering and discipline, or, as a townsman of mine once said, "they're picked out to bear things." We can be sure that their testimony is worth having. One of the notable ones, who "by the vision splendid is on her way attended," shall speak for us. Here is Helen Keller, shut into what might well be darkness and sadness unspeakable, who with all her earnest heart says: "Since I consider it a duty to myself and others to be happy, I escape a misery worse than physical deprivation." And also, "I recognize the beneficence of the power which we all worship as supreme. I make a friend of this power, and straightway I feel glad and brave and ready for any lot heaven may decree for me." It is the might and independence of her spirit that refuses to be limited by any bodily privation. And the spirit within every one of us is capable of this fine optimism. Thank God, we need not settle down into the gloom of inherited evil. A determined spirit can well leave all these things behind. The impossible can be achieved; and our daily prayer should be, "Lord, that our eyes may be opened."

Here we are, going to school in a world of beauty and interest beyond words to describe, placed here to develop the best there is in us, each in his own measure. We are not expected to attain perfection—He knoweth our frame—but just to grapple along, doing the best we know how. Sometimes that "best" seems like dead failure, but we are not the judges. This very ignominious and aggravating defeat, which we are now regretting, may have been the one thing needed for our real advancement. We are far from being in sight of the finishing of things. We are still little children in the Father's primary school. Grade after grade lies before us, stretching away into the immortal life. It is a long distance from the five-finger exercise to the divine sonata. This thought of the eternal life is a wonderful tonic for the soul. Suppose every hope unfulfilled, and what the world calls failure our close and constant companion. Yes, the five-finger exercises are humdrum and hard. The "a-b-abs" are terribly difficult and almost more than we can endure. But think of the splendid vista even now opening before us, the vista with absolutely no end! Think of the bodily limitations taken away—the freedom and satisfaction of the liberated spirit; the amazing possibilities of achievement; the eternal "marching on," as now, in the presence of our God.—"The Interior."

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

ENGLISH LAWS OF THE OLDEN TIME.

BY J. LINDLEY SPICER.

From a book entitled "A Collection of Authentick Useful Precedents in All Cases, Which do Properly Concern, or are Relating to, the Office of a Justice of the Peace." Printed in London in 1706.

This book is owned by Thomas R. Baker, Macedon, N. Y.

Upon the flyleaf is written in a bold, clear hand:

"Know all men by these presents that I am of Oyster Bay, in Queens, on N. York Island. Augustine Weekes. Ejus Manus Scriptoria, Anno Domini 1750. His hand Wrighting. Augustine Weekes, His Book."

OATHS.

"The declaration of Fidelity and Subscription of a Profession of the Christian Belief to be subscribed to by such Dissenters who scruple to take an Oath according to the statute."

"I, —, do sincerely promise and solemnly declare before God and the World, that I will be true and faithful to Queen Ann. And I do solemnly profess and declare that I do from my Heart abhor, detest and renounce as impious and Heretical, that damnable Doctrine and Position, that Princes Excommunicated or deprived by the Pope, or any Authority of the See of Rome, may be deposed or murdered by their Subjects, or any other whatsoever. And I do declare, That no Foreign Prince, Person, Prelate, State or Potentate ought to have any Power, Jurisdiction, Superiority, Preheminence, or Authority, Ecclesiastical or Spiritual within this Realm."

And shall subscribe a profession of their belief in these words:

"I, —, profess Faith in God the Father, and in Jesus Christ his Eternal Son, the true God, and the Holy Spirit, one God blessed forevermore. And do acknowledge the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament to be given by Divine Inspiration."

"Justices of the Peace, by this act may require any Dissenter going to Meetings to make and subscribe the Declaration, and to take the Oaths or Declaration of Fidelity aforesaid."

"* * * Every Person so doing, shall be exempt from all the Penalties made against Popish Recusants or Nonconformists, and enjoy all the Advantages which other Dissenters ought to do by Virtute of this Act."

"In cases where by Law an Oath is required a Quaker shall, instead of the usual form, be permitted to make His or Her solemn Affirmation or Declaration in these Words, viz.: 'I, —, do declare in the presence of Almighty God, the witness of the truth of what I say.'"

"Which shall be adjudged and taken to be of the same Force and Effect as if the Quaker had taken the Oath in the usual Form; and if such person shall be convicted of wilful falsity therein, he shall incur the same Penalties as for wilful Perjury."

"No Quaker shall by virtue of this Act, be qualified to give Evidence in any Criminal Cause. To serve on any Jury, or to bear any Office of Profit in the Government."

TITHES.

"Where any Quaker shall refuse to pay or compound for great or small Tythes, or any Church Rates, The Two Justices of the Peace (not being any ways interested in the said Tythes of Patronage of the Church) may examine the Complaint, and by Order under their Hands and Seals, direct the payment thereof (not exceeding 10£), which upon refusal to be paid may be levied by Distress, by Warrant from either of the said Justices."

"The Party grieved may Appeal to the next Quarter Sessions, whose Judgement shall be Final, and no certiorari to be allowed."

"In case of Appeal no Warrant of Distress shall be granted till the Appeal be determined."

"This Act being Temporary was continued from the 22 of November, 1702, for 11 years, and from thence to the end of the next session of Parliament."

MEETINGS.

"No Assembly for Religious Worship shall be allowed, till the place of meeting be certified to the Bishop of the Diocese or to the Archdeacon, or to the Justices of Peace at the Quarter Sessions, and registered or recorded there respectively."

"Doors must not be locked or bolted at the time of such meeting."

"If one shall strike or draw a weapon in a Church or Church yard with an intent to strike, He shall have one of his Ears cut off, or be burnt in the Cheek with the letter (F) for want of Ears."

The last sentence seems to imply that the offender shall be branded only in case both ears have been cut off for previous offenses.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

SOME RECENT RELIGIOUS BOOKS.

Few Christians realize how profoundly the original gospel message was transformed by its contact with Judaism and with paganism, or how the primitive seeds of truth were buried under the mass of customs and practices and philosophies which sprang up during the long mediæval period. Friends have always claimed that they were reviving primitive Christianity, but they have not sometimes been quite clear enough in their ideas about primitive Christianity. Loran D. Osborn has written a valuable book, which is published by the University of Chicago Press, on "The Recovery and Restatement of the Gospel." It is a thoroughly good book. It tells in a clear and straightforward way how the gospel was obscured by the foreign influences which came in upon it in the formative days of the Church, and then he presents in a convincing and reverent way the steps toward a recovery of the primitive message and the restatement of it in the language of the present time.

T. Rhondda Williams is an English Congregational minister, who has many ideas in common with Friends, and who is presenting to his great congregation in Bradford a fresh and vital message which has much of apostolic power such as we need in all our congregations. Two of his books are on the writer's shelves, "God's Open Doors," a volume of short sermons, and "Talks to Boys and Girls," a collection of short addresses to young people, full of points and possessing the important merit of being interesting. They are both books which set one thinking and which let one see the character of the splendid man who wrote them.

The Outlook Company has recently published two of the most satisfactory books which have come from Lyman Abbott's pen—"The Other Room" and "The Great Companion." We have never seen a more comforting treatment of the great mystery of death than that which is given in his "Other Room." There is not a jarring line in it, and it helps the soul to see the light. "The Great Companion" is also a beautiful and enlightening message upon the age-long quest for a living God, who is here found as the God in whom we live and have our being.

Doubleday, Page & Co. have issued a volume of sermons by Dr. W. S. Rainsford, entitled "The Reasonableness of Faith." These sermons, like the man, are always interesting, and full of fresh surprises. They are genuine, strenuous, earnest, and full of allusion to current affairs. It is a good, healthy message aimed to set men moving toward truer life and action.

Some Views on Present Topics.

PASTORAL CARE.

BY ROBERT E. PRETLOW.

It is cheering to one who looks hopefully to a future for the Church to see the two subjects of an intelligent ministry and of pastoral care of the membership claiming increased attention among Friends.

A solution of both questions has been sought, and partly found, in the adoption, by a large section of the Church, of the "pastoral system." But the success of the really pastoral part of this work has been far from all that is desirable.

In many places the pastor is expected merely to be present at the meeting for public worship once in one, two or four weeks, and perhaps spend the Sabbath day in the neighborhood. The support furnished him by the Church meets only a small fraction of the cost of living, and he is compelled to devote most of his time and energy to securing a livelihood. Whatever the character of the ministry may be under such circumstances, the amount of pastoral work must necessarily be very small or wholly wanting. It is from places under such arrangements as these that come the most discouraging reports as to the "failure of the pastoral system."

In larger meetings, where the public calls upon the pastor are many and insistent, taxing to the limit his time and energies, the pastoral work necessarily suffers. In the one case the provision of such a measure of support as will leave time for pastoral work, as well as preaching, and in the other the installation as pastor's assistant of some one specially gifted for personal work, would greatly increase the measure of success.

But in no meeting, however well within the range of the physical powers of a pastor its labors may be, can all of the needed personal work be done by any one person. A large share of it must necessarily be done by the pastor. But the very fundamental fact that Christianity is a brotherhood is negated if there be not the manifestation of brotherliness among the membership.

In this much depends upon the ministry. It may be scathing in its denunciation of evils within and without the Church; it may be brilliant and logical, presenting in a way to silence opposition some of the great dogmas of the Church, and yet contribute nothing to the solution of our problem. But in so far as it is instinct with the Spirit of Christ, and fosters the development of brotherly love, in so far will it incite to acts expressing sympathy and helpfulness among the body of the Church.

It is the duty of the pastor to study the capacities and gifts of the members and seek wisely to encourage and assist them in the exercise of their powers in ways that will contribute most to the unity and efficiency of the Church. And these gifts do not always manifest themselves either in the meeting for worship or the formal "religious opportunities" in families. The Church should be the center of a healthy social life for its members and attenders. The personal contact thus established often opens the way both for giving and receiving spiritual help.

But all plans and efforts at system are valueless unless underneath them there is real spiritual life and a genuine love for men.

Wilmington, Ohio.

Christ can and does transform men. He changes their character. Now, character is the hardest thing in the world to change. It can't be done by will. It can be done by Christ. He can take a drunkard and break his chains. He can take a sinner and save him. He can do this in an instant, or he can do it by steady process of change. Read Hadley's book, "Down in Water Street," to see how instantaneously and supernaturally Christ can change men. And just as supernaturally, though slowly, He is changing other men. The world would be hopeless if it were not for the presence in it of such a power.—Robert E. Speer.

"Labor as though the success of this life and the life eternal rested upon you alone. And yet keep to that sweet humility which allows others to build upon the low foundation of that which you have begun, but could not finish. Keep in mind the idea that it is the work itself that is of consequence to the world, and not the worker."

The International Lesson.

SECOND QUARTER.

LESSON VI.

FIFTH MONTH 8, 1904.

WATCHFULNESS.

Luke 12: 35-48.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching.—Luke 12: 37.

DAILY READINGS.

Second-day, Fifth mo. 2.—Watchfulness. Luke 12: 35-48.

Third-day, Fifth mo. 3.—Reason for watchfulness. Matt. 24: 32-42.

Fourth-day, Fifth mo. 4.—Be ready. Matt. 24: 43-51.

Fifth-day, Fifth mo. 5.—Wise and foolish virgins. Matt. 25: 1-13.

Sixth-day, Fifth mo. 6.—Remember and hold fast. Rev. 3: 1-6.

Seventh-day, Fifth mo. 7.—Children of light. 1 Thess. 5: 4-11.

First-day, Fifth mo. 8.—Watch and pray. Luke 21: 25-36.

Time.—Not long after the last lesson.

Place.—Some place beyond the Jordan, in the district of Perea.

Place in Christ's ministry.—As in last lesson, some time in the latter part of His ministry.

Parallel Accounts.—This passage as a whole is found only in Luke, though similar teaching is found in Matt. 24: 42-51; Mark 13: 33-37. Compare also Luke 21: 34-36. The preceding verses of the chapter should be read.

35. "Be girded about." The flowing robes of the Orientals were ill-fitted for traveling or moving about rapidly. It was, therefore, the custom to gird them. A faithful servant would keep himself girded, so he would be ready to answer his master's call promptly. "Lamps burning." So that when the master came all would be ready.

36. Another and fuller picture of readiness. The time of the master's return was uncertain.

37. "Blessed." It is the same word as that used in the Beatitudes; literally, "happy," it means the greatest felicity. "Watching." Alert. The idea is that the servants were in a state or attitude of watchfulness or readiness. It was no sudden thing, but a condition. Had the master come hours before or hours later, he would have found them in the same condition. This is further brought out in Verse 38.

39. Another illustration of the need of watchfulness. "Thief in the night" was a proverbial expression for unexpected events. Compare 1 Thess. 5: 2; 2 Pet. 3: 10; Rev. 3: 3; 16: 15. "Goodman," an obsolete word, meaning master. "Broken through." Literally "dug through." The walls were made of earth, or hardened mud.

40. "Be ye also ready; for in an hour that ye think not the Son of Man cometh." R. V. The only safe way is to be ready, then, whenever the hour comes, it will make no difference.

41. "Peter said." Always ready to speak. From what follows it would seem that Peter referred specially to what was said in Verse 37. It should always be remembered that our accounts must be greatly condensed. "Us." "The Twelve. In Mark 13: 37 Christ says, "What I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch."

42. "Who then is the faithful and wise steward?" As he does so often, Christ answers one question by asking another, which, however, suggests rather than answers. A steward was an upper servant who had charge of his master's property. Compare Eliezer, Abraham's steward. The inference is that Peter and all should act the part of wise stewards. "Portion of food in due season." Give out rations sufficient, and at the regularly appointed times, daily, weekly or monthly.

43. "Blessed." Happy. "So doing." Carrying out his appointed and regular duties. Waiting in a state of watchfulness does not mean idleness, but fulfilling duties to the best of one's ability, but at the same time being conscious of the possibility of the return of the master.

"Do thy duty that is best,
Leave unto thy Lord the rest."

44. The reward of faithful service is more service, and service often in a higher and more important field. Too often small service is neglected because it seems small, when such service is intended as a test of faithfulness, and as a preparation for higher service. It is said that a young man once came to Stephen Girard and asked for employment, saying he was willing to do anything. The banker doubted him, but showed him a pile of bricks, saying, "Here is a wheelbarrow, wheel all those bricks over there, and then come to me." The young man did so, and came to Girard and told him the work was done. "Very well," said the old man, "wheel them back to where you found them," and the young man, without a word, did so, and then told Girard he had done it. "Well," said Girard, "you will do," and he gave him work.

45. Having spoken of the faithful steward, he now pictures the unfaithful steward. "In his heart." He does not speak his thoughts, but acts upon them. "My lord delayeth his coming." As if to say, He will not come yet, there is plenty of time yet awhile. "Shall begin to beat." Not only neglecting the servants, but abusing them, and probably because they were faithful to their master. "And to eat and drink and be drunken." Self-indulgence, carousing at his master's expense; not simply neglecting his duties, but actively injuring his master. It has been well said that the most common forms of sin in high places are oppression and self-indulgence.

46. The result of such action. "Cut him asunder." Such would be the punishment in those days for such offenders. "And will appoint his portion with the unfaithful." R. V. This is the correct translation. The steward was unfaithful, therefore he belongs with the unfaithful.

47, 48. A general principle is stated in these verses which should never be overlooked. The amount of light which a person can get is always taken into account. Those who voluntarily shut their eyes to the light, or who neglect opportunities to get light, are held responsible for the neglect. Those to whom much is given, whatever it may be, will be held responsible for what they have. Compare Matt. 25: 13 ff.; Luke 19: 11 ff.

"The height of His divinity is seen in the breadth of His humanity."

Christian Endeavor

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Lindley D. Clark, 1429 New York Avenue, Washington, D.C.]

TOPIC FOR FIFTH MONTH EIGHTH.

CROWNS TRODDEN UNDERFOOT.

Isa. 28: 1-7; Rev. 3: 11.

Second-day, Fifth mo. 2.—Abuse of wine. Prov. 20: 1-3.

Third-day, Fifth mo. 3.—Wine and woe. Prov. 23: 29-32.

Fourth-day, Fifth mo. 4.—Wine excludes the Spirit. Eph. 5: 15-21.

Fifth-day, Fifth mo. 5.—Wine and wantonness. Esther 1: 1-12.

Sixth-day, Fifth mo. 6.—Wine and folly. 1 Sam. 25: 4-11, 36-38.

Seventh-day, Fifth mo. 7.—Wine and ruin. Deut. 29: 19-20.

With striking figures the prophet depicts the false and fading glory of Ephraim at a time when Israel was struggling to throw off the Assyrian yoke, not by the help of Jehovah, but by the aid of Egypt. Enslaved by strong drink (see Amos 4: 1 and 6: 6), they had rejected their crown of glory and chosen a fading flower. "The mighty and strong" Assyrian would be the hand of God to overthrow and to punish these besotted ones, and to bring a "residue of His people" to a sense of their true privilege of a fadeless diadem of beauty in Him.

Is there any less certainly a woe to the false crown of pride of those who are mighty to drink strong drink to-day? If men deny special providences and judgments, and say that only natural causes moved Assyria to conquer Samaria, the fact of her overthrow in the midst of her indulgences is none the less tragic. Evil does react upon the evil-doer. Name it as we will, the Power that fixed the moral order of the world makes loss and suffering a consequence of sin as truly as effect follows any cause. The Psalmist did not see it at first; but when he "considered their latter end," he knew the real lot of the wicked.

The penalty of intemperance is one that follows closely on the heels of the transgression, and the crowns that God has promised fall away in quick succession when once the appetite for strong drink is in command. The crown of physical perfection and control, of intelligence and clear judgment, of business success and self-respect, of manhood, fatherhood, domestic happiness, honor in the community, influence in the State, power in the Church, the salvation of their own souls and their right of imageship to Christ—all these, the crowns of glory that are offered every man, are shattered and trodden down when self-indulgence and appetite hold dominion.

Perhaps we have the power to resist, and do resist. Do we also seek to destroy the works of the devil that we may weaken his power to tempt and overthrow the weak? Every help we can secure for ourselves and every aid we can give another, everything we can do to make right choices easy and wrong ones difficult, to remove temptation and banish the strongholds of sin, comes in line with the bounden duty of us who remain to do the works of Christ, whose offer to all men is of a "crown of life."

I will utter what I believe to-day, if it should contradict all I said yesterday.—Wendell Phillips.

Self-love is not a part of the heart, but its disease, preying upon it, and ossifying it, as far as it reaches over it; and nothing but self-love is the cause why our hearts are only fragments, and little more than splinters and slivers of what they ought to be; it is that, instead of loving ourselves in others in God, and His world, and our brother men, we love ourselves in distinction and separation from them, and therefore in opposition to them; that instead of finding our chief happiness in the utmost expansion of our feelings, we shut them up within our own breasts, where they must waste and crumble, and moulder and rot.—"Guesses at Truth."

Correspondence.

Smyrna, Asia, Fourth Month 1st, 1904.

Editor of AMERICAN FRIEND:

We arrived at Smyrna from Constantinople this morning, and many of our company have taken the train for Ephesus, while others of us remain on the ship to go ashore at noon and visit the city of Smyrna. This city has a population of something more than three hundred thousand people, and is spoken of as the Chicago of Asiatic Turkey.

We hope this afternoon to visit the tomb of Polycarp, the "angel" of the ancient church at this place, also his burial place, and said to be one of the best authenticated places we shall visit. As I write from the deck of this ship, I can look out upon the hill he was made to climb by his persecutors just before the flames were kindled about him. In his last moments he was called upon to deny his Lord, but he firmly replied, "Eighty and six years have I served Him, and He has never wronged me; I cannot deny Him." Since writing my last letter we have visited many places of interest that I shall not have time to describe. Our first stopping place after eight days upon the Atlantic was the Madeira Islands, and the beauty of the scene that met our eyes can never be erased from memory—a land of perpetual summer, with blooming plants and tropical or semi-tropical fruits. We stopped a day at Gibraltar, and there met in the street leading to the public gardens the German Emperor, who arrived near the time our ship came into port. He was easily recognized by his picture. At Algiers we got our first introduction to Oriental life and manners. There we met upon the streets the Mohammedans, with white turbans, and women with veiled faces.

At Malta we witnessed the scenes made memorable by Paul's visit to that island, as recorded in sacred history; saw where the "two seas met" and the inlet where they sought refuge from the storm. We also visited the "Church of St. Paul," over the "Grotto of St. Paul," where, tradition says, he lived while on the island.

Our three days' stay at Athens was full of interest, and, without attempting to describe the scenes so noted in classic history, viz., the Acropolis, the Theatre of Dionysius, the great amphitheatre, now being rebuilt of solid white marble and capable of seating 60,000 people, I must not fail to speak of the spot of greatest interest to Christians, Mars' Hill, where, on the Sabbath day, we assembled for worship. There, upon the craggy rocks overlooking the city of Athens—some standing and others sitting—hundreds of voices joined in reading Paul's address, beginning, "Ye men of Athens," and the voices of song and praise reverberated against the rocks and ruins that once vibrated with the praise of the goddess Minerva. At Constantinople we were happily surprised to find a Friends' Mission, and at the invitation of the English Friends in charge about ten of us Friends went and had a very interesting meeting with the inmates and neighbors nearby—sixty, I believe, in all. There Greek, Armenian, English and American joined in singing "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," the first two in the Turkish language and the last two in English. The meeting was characterized by real heart-to-heart talks by both the visitors and the visited. The Greek and Armenian men, three or four of them, expressed themselves, through an interpreter, as being greatly strengthened. All, I believe, felt that it was good to be there. Sincerely,
L. ELLA HARTLEY.

Things of Interest Among Ourselves.

Revival meetings began at Stuart, Ia., on the 17th instant, conducted by Inez and Birdie Batchelor. A good interest is manifest.

The meeting of ministers and elders of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting granted a minute to William C. Allen, of Moorestown, N. J., for religious service in the Islands of Barbados and Porto Rico.

Ellis A. and Clara E. Wells, who have been located in the meeting at Spencer, Ia., for some time, have accepted a call to Spring Bank Meeting, in Nebraska. Their postoffice is now Allen, Neb.

The Friends at Pasadena, Cal., have enjoyed a ten days' revival service, conducted by Amos Kenworthy and the pastor. The results were encouraging. Several were converted and renewed, and a large number came into the experience of sanctification.

Rosa E. Virtue is now pastor in Boise Monthly Meeting, Idaho. As a result of her evangelistic work there last winter forty-three have been added to the membership. The C. E. Society is doing good work, and the Bible School has an attendance of about seventy-five.

George Moore, pastor in Friends' Meeting at Paoli, Ind., late of Vermillion Grove, Ill., was in Westfield, Ind., on the 14th inst., visiting his aged father, Ransom Moore, who is also a minister, and who has lately removed to Westfield from his place near Eagletown, Ind.

We are sorry to learn of the death of Emma Sampson, wife of our friend David E. Sampson, of North Carolina. She had been so faithful to her husband in his blindness that the loss will be doubly great, and many readers will feel deep and tender sympathy for this faithful servant of the Lord in his loneliness.

Cornwall Quarterly Meeting was held at Cornwall, N. Y., the 13th and 14th inst. The attendance was unusually small, on account of the unusual amount of sickness and bad roads. However, those who enjoyed the privilege of attending were greatly blessed. Great freedom in prayer and testimony prevailed. Emily U. Burgess, who has recently returned from her labors in North Carolina, was present, and spoke of the work in that portion of the Master's vineyard.

J. Warren Elder, aided by his wife and daughter, held a revival meeting at Alba, Mo., recently, which continued a little over three weeks. The meetings were well attended and conviction seized the hearts of the people very strongly. About twenty-two were converted, renewed and sanctified. The revival did not close with the meetings, but some have been converted since. Alba is a mining town and a very promising town for labor.

The fourteenth annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Auxiliary of the International Medical Missionary Society will be held Sixth-day, Fourth month 29th, at 3 o'clock p.m., at the residence of Elizabeth C. Winn and Lydia E. S. Richards, Merion. The annual address will be given by Pauline Root, of India, traveling secretary of the student volunteer movement for foreign missions. P. Root is a speaker of unusual power. All who are interested in mission work are earnestly invited to attend this meeting.

Baltimore Quarterly Meeting was held at Washington, D. C., on Fourth month 16th, for the first time in its history, the meeting on ministry and oversight, at 11 a.m., being the first gathering to occupy the upper room of the meeting house. The business session of the meeting was held at 3 p.m. Besides a goodly number of the home ministers, John M. Watson, of Indian Territory, and Anna M. Votaw, of Indiana, were in attendance, both sojourning within the limits of the Yearly Meeting with minutes for service. Hugh P. and Hannah Shotwell, elders from Elba Monthly Meeting, N. Y., were also present. A letter was directed sent to Dr. Richard H. Thomas, expressing the sympathy of the meeting with him in his serious and protracted illness and its united desire for his recovery. In the evening there was an illustrated address on "Friends' Missions in Cuba," by Alfred C. Garrett, of Philadelphia, which was interesting and well attended. The house was well filled on First-day, both morning and evening, and throughout all the meetings there was a note of thankfulness and encouragement on account of the interest shown and the hopeful conditions generally prevailing in the various meetings of the quarter.

Phariba Stanley, an elderly minister in the meeting at Westfield, Ind., is in feeble health, and Jesse, her husband, being also infirm, the meeting has been for some months without her acceptable presence and help. The regular Sixth-day Bible School, taught by Sylvester Newlin, is entering on the study of the Gospel of John. This is the second year of the class, which embraces teachers from other meetings outside of Westfield.

Charles E. Lewis writes from Pacific College, Newberg, Ore.: "The spring term's work opened Fourth month 12th with very promising outlook. Third-day morning chapel was the first meeting of the students since the Oregon Intercollegiate Prohibition Oratorical Contest, held at Philomath, Ore., a few days before, and the hour was partly given up to a rather jubilant program in celebration of our victory at that contest, as Walter R. Miles, of Class '06, our representative, won first place, and will represent Oregon in the interstate contest, to be held at Portland, Ore., Fifth month 27th. One of our resident alumni, Walter C. Woodward, addressed the students briefly on 'The Man Who Wins,' and Walter Miles in a very interesting manner replied with 'How It Was Done.' The enthusiastic cheers and college 'yells' by the students were good to hear.

"The prospects for the term are very satisfactory, the enrollment being larger than that of any spring term for several years. One of the most interesting lectures we have had during this year was given in the college chapel last Fifth-day evening by Joseph Koshaba, a native of Orumia, Persia, who has been in this country nine years in educational work and is preparing to return to his native land as a medical missionary."

BORN.

VOTAW.—To Merritt and Anna Votaw, Cherokee, Okla., Fourth month 8th, a boy.

DIED.

COOK.—At her home in Earlham, Ia., Third month 27th, 1904, Elizabeth Cook, aged 67 years. She was a birthright member of Friends, and lived a consistent Christian life.

HADLEY.—At their home, near Indianola, Ia., Third month 29th, 1904, William Abel, son of J. F. and Sarah M. Hadley, aged 18 months.

HOOVER.—At his home, in Barclay, Kan., Fourth month 16th, 1904, Solomon Y. Hoover, son of Jesse and Rebecca Hoover, of Milton, Ohio, aged over 78 years. He was a life-long Friend and for many years an efficient elder. His home was Le Grand, Ia., from 1857 to 1881; since that time Barclay, Kan. His valuable service will be greatly missed in this meeting.

HUNT.—At the home of her son-in-law, H. C. Baldwin, Whittier, Cal., Fourth month 3d, 1904, Elma B. Hunt, aged 70 years. She was the wife of L. G. Hunt, who preceded her five years. She was a member with Friends at Whittier.

MCIPHERSON.—At Las Cruces, New Mexico, Fourth month 10th, 1904, Joseph Lewis McPherson, oldest son of Daniel and Eleanor McPherson, of Des Moines, Ia., and husband of Carrie Dixon McPherson, in his 49th year. He was a life-long member of Friends, and, though for years a sufferer, his faith grew stronger as the end approached.

PERISHO.—At his home, in Whittier, Cal., Third month 31st, 1904, Jesse C. Perisho, aged 33 years. He was a minister of the Gospel among Friends.

RATCLIFF.—At her home in Spiceland, Ind., Fourth month 6th, 1904, Rebecca Townsend, wife of Elisha B. Ratcliff, and daughter of Dr. Jesse and Lydia Townsend Baily. Her friends feel a great loss in the departure of this sweet, trustful life.

SAMPSON.—At her home, at East Bend, N. C., on Fourth month 16th, 1904, Emma Sampson, wife of David E. Sampson, in her 57th year. For thirty-five years she had been a "loving and faithful" wife. Her decease was very unexpected, coming after a short illness with bronchial pneumonia.

VIERS.—At San Diego, Cal., Second month 17th, 1904, Olive B. Viers, in the 27th year of her age. She was a member and overseer of San Diego Monthly Meeting of Friends.

WHITE.—At her home, Owenyo, Cal., Fourth month 29, 1904, Elizabeth D. White, wife of Benjamin White, aged 54 years. She was the daughter of Daniel and Hulda Pressnall, deceased. She was a lifelong member of Friends and an elder of Owenyo Monthly Meeting.

Publisher's Department.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND is published weekly by the American Friend Publishing Company,
718 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

RUFUS M. JONES, EDITOR.

The Directors of the Company are
JAMES WOOD, President.

DAVID SCULL, ALLEN JAY, JOHN B. GARRETT,
PETER W. RAIDABAUGH, ISAAC SHARPLESS,
RUFUS M. JONES.

Subscription Price.

Payable in advance.....$1.50 per annum.
Single copiesFive Cents each.

Checks, Money Orders and Postal Notes should be drawn to the order of THE AMERICAN FRIEND.
Advertising rates will be sent on request.
Headley Bros., 14 Bishopsgate Street, Without,
London, Agents for Great Britain and Ireland.

Events and Comments.

Toronto, Canada, suffered heavy loss last week by fire. The flames became unmanageable, and aid from other cities was sent before they could be subdued.

HAS A SAY.

The School Principal Talks About Food.

The Principal of a High School in a flourishing Calif. city says:

"For 23 years I worked in the school with only short summer vacations. I formed the habit of eating rapidly, masticated poorly, which, coupled with my sedentary work, led to indigestion, liver trouble, lame back and rheumatism.

"Upon consulting physicians some doped me with drugs, while others prescribed dieting, and sometimes I got temporary relief, other times not. For 12 years I struggled along with this handicap to my work, seldom laid up but often a burden to myself with lameness and rheumatic pains.

"Two years ago I met an old friend, a physician, who noticed at once my out-of-health condition, and who prescribed for me an exclusive diet of Grape-Nuts, milk and fruit.

"I followed his instructions and in two months I felt like a new man, with no more headaches, rheumatism or liver trouble, and from that time to this Grape-Nuts has been my main food for morning and evening meals, am stronger and healthier than I have been for years without a trace of the old troubles.

"Judging from my present vigorous physical and mental state, I tell my people Methuselah may yet have to take second place among the old men, for I feel like I will live a great many more years.

"To all this remarkable change in health I am indebted to my wise friend and Grape-Nuts and I hope the Postum Co. will continue to manufacture this life and health giving food for several centuries yet, until I move to a world where indigestion is unknown." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Ask any physician what he knows about Grape Nuts. Those who have tried it know things.

"There's a reason."

Look in each pkg. for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

The Australian Federal Government was defeated last week on the bill making the arbitration of labor disputes applicable to State employees. The Government opposed the inclusion of such employees, and has, therefore, resigned.

It seems to be the intention of the majority leaders in Congress to bring about adjournment by the 28th instant. Unless a hasty examination of the records is much at fault, this will be the shortest sitting of what is called the long session of Congress in more than eighty years.

The contract by which the ownership of the Panama Canal passes to the United States has been signed. The title to the canal route is now vested in the Government of the United States.
The document bears the signatures of President Bo and Director Richman, of the Panama Canal Company, and secures a perfect title.

The most significant event in the Far East last week was the resignation of Viceroy Alexieff. This action is said to be due to differences which have arisen between him and General Kuropatkin in regard to military measures in the Far East and to Alexieff's dislike to Admiral Skrzydloff, who has just been appointed as Makaroff's successor.

A project is on foot in Alexandria for restoring the sphinx near the great pyramid of Ghizeh to its original condition. Thick layers of soil completely cover the head of the monument, while the lower parts are obscured by accumulations of sand. It is proposed to clear all these accumulations away and to clean the head completely. When the work has been completed the sphinx will once more appear in the grandeur of its original proportions.

An archaeological undertaking of a most important character is about to be set on foot in Rome—namely, the complete excavation of Herculaneum. It is proposed that this vast work be carried out by the co-operation of Italy, with all of the civilized countries, and that there be a Central Managing Committee at Rome, with National Committees elsewhere. The promoters of the scheme have good reason to believe that it meets with the full support of the Italian Government.

The London "Times" recently published an article by Edouard Naville and H. R. Hall, in which they announce the discovery, through excavations on behalf of the Egypt Exploration Fund, of the most ancient shrine yet uncovered there.
It is the mortuary chapel of King Men-tuhetep Nebkherura, of the eleventh dynasty, B. C. 2500. It is in an exceptionally good state of preservation. A great deal will undoubtedly be learned through this discovery of the history and art of the eleventh dynasty.

The expenditures of the United States Government are much less in proportion to population than those of many other of the leading nations of the world.
Even in the case of Russia, with its population of 141,000,000, the per capita of government expenditure is about the same as that of the United States. While it is true that a larger proportion of public expenditures is borne by State and local governments in the United States than in many of the more centralized governments of Europe, these

IT IS A MATTER OF HEALTH

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

figures of the relative national expenditures of the various governments are at least interesting at the present time.

"His heart was touched with pity before His hand was touched with power."

For Safety

in the delicate process of feeding infants, Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk is unexcelled except by good mother's milk, as it is rendered perfectly sterile in the process of preparation. Lay in a supply for all kinds of expeditions.
Avoid unknown brands.

The British Friend

Published on the 15th of each month.

Being the only religious and literary review written chiefly for the general public, but from the standpoint of the Society of Friends, The British Friend offers a unique opportunity for spreading
"The Truth" among thoughtful en-quirers.

The April Issue contains:

"The Life of the Spirit," IV. D. Macfadyen, M.A.
"Bible Notes," IV. (The Prophetic Period.) A.
N. Brayshaw, L.L.B.
"A Leaf from a Log Book," F. A. Knight.
"Moral Restoration," II., George "Junior Republic," and "The Race Problem in America," (Review of The Soul of a Black Man). Edward Grubb, M.A.
"The Unrighteous Steward"; "Foundation and Superstructure," and "Prayer in Meeting." By the Editors.

A distinct feature is made of Reviews and Notices of Books, especially such as are likely to be helpful to preachers and social workers.

Subscription: 6s. 6d. ($1.58) per annum, post free.

A specimen copy may be obtained by sending 1 cent in stamps to Henry N. Hoxie, Book Department, Strawbridge & Clothier, Philadelphia.

Editor and Publisher:

EDWARD GRUBB, M.A.

Devonshire Chambers Bishopsgate, Without, Lon. E. C.

RUSSIAN POPULAR SONG.

In my trans-Blaikalian home upon the Zmiehogsmiptqvzworski,
With my brother Dimetriiiskiorbrneo-
vitch I used to play;
And our cousin Petroplanztrsvm from Djargamoguvmszowski
Oft would come to visit us and spend the day.

Ah, those happy, sunny hours of our childhood!

How I weep to think that they will come no more;

For in ruins lies the home within the wildwood,

Far away upon the Zmiehogsmiptqvzworski shore.

CHORUS.

Oh, the moon is shining bright upon the Zmiehogsmiptqvzworski,

Where the catfish browses on the new mown hay;

Through the szezamores the candle lights are gleaming,

On the banks of Zmiehogsmiptqvzworski far away.

—"Council Bluffs Nonpareil."

The requests we make of God interpret our character.—T. L. Cuyler, D.D.

CAME FROM COFFEE.

A Case Where the Taking of Morphine
Began With Coffee.

"For 15 years," says a young Ohio woman, "I was a great sufferer from stomach, heart and liver trouble. For the last 10 years the suffering was terrible; it would be impossible to describe it. During the last three years I had convulsions, from which the only relief was the use of morphine.

"I had several physicians, nearly all of whom advised me to stop drinking tea and coffee, but as I could take only liquid foods I felt I could not live without coffee. I continued drinking it until I became almost insane, my mind was affected, while my whole nervous system was a complete wreck. I suffered day and night from thirst, and, as water would only make me sick, I kept on trying different drinks until a friend asked me to try Postum Food Coffee.

"I did so, but it was some time before
I was benefited by the change, my system was so filled with coffee poison. It was not long, however, before I could eat all kinds of foods and drink all the cold water I wanted and which my system demands. It is now 8 years I have drank nothing but Postum for breakfast and supper, and the result has been that in place of being an invalid with my mind affected I am now strong, sturdy, happy and healthy.

"I have a very delicate daughter who has been greatly benefited by drinking Postum, also a strong boy who would rather go without food for his breakfast than his Postum. So much depends on the proper cooking of Postum, for unless it is boiled the proper length of time people will be disappointed in it. Those in the habit of drinking strong coffee should make the Postum very strong at first, in order to get a strong coffee taste." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

WORLD'S FAIR.

First Great Excursion via Pennsylvania Railroad, May 10.

The first opportunity afforded residents of the eastern section of the country to see, at the lowest possible rates, the great World's Fair at St. Louis, which opens April 30th, will be the coach excursion of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, May 10th. A special train of standard day coaches will be run on the following schedule, and excursion tickets, good going only on special train, will be sold from the stations named at rates quoted:

	Special Train Leaves.
New York—	A.M. Rate.
West 23d Street.....	8.25 $20.00
Desbrosses Street	8.30 20.00
Cortlandt Street	8.30 20.00

THOUGHTS BY THE SEASIDE.

I walk beside the restless sea,
And watch the crested breakers foam,
As wave on wave continually
From out their hidden depths they come.

They call to mind my fleeting days—
That with such haste are passing by,
With stormy wind or peaceful ways
"Like waves, succeeding waves, they fly."

The kings of earth have passed away,
And empires crumbled in the dust,
Since these proud billows held their sway

In might and power as at the first.

Forever on their restless course,
Forever limitless and vast,
From torrid clime to frozen north,
The bounding billows surging pass.

And, treading on the sea-girt shore,
What sacred memories thronging still,
Of One who trod the way before
And walked upon the waves at will.

And oft on life's tempestuous sea,
With tempest tost and sorely tried,
The gentle whisper, "Peace, be still,"
Has turned the raging waves aside.

Omnipotence alone controls
And rules the raging of the sea;
And in His hands the power He holds,
As on the storm-tossed Galilee.

Far-reaching thro' the horizon blue,
O'er ocean's depths His wisdom shines,
And in each varied changing hue,
We read His name "between the lines."

And from the hidden depths below,
Where lie the treasures of the deep,
Where tangled vines and sea-weed grow
His watchful vigils o'er them keep.

For He who notes the sparrow's fall,
And watches o'er each life with care;
His providence surrounds us all
On sea and land, and everywhere.

Transcending goodness, oh, how great!
How infinite in all His ways!
We recognize our low estate,
And bow in humble, heartfelt praise.

Oh, ocean! with thy myriad charms,
We leave thee with a vain regret;
Thy grandeur and thy varied forms
We never, never, can forget.

ANNA M. VOTAW.

Brooklyn	8.15	20.00
Jersey City	8.43	20.00
Newark.	8.55	19.95
Elizabeth	9.04	19.85
New Brunswick	9.28	19.50
Trenton	10.02	19.00
Bristol	10.18	18.95
Philadelphia—
North Philadelphia	10.48	18.50
Broad St. (Luncheon) Ar.	11.00
Broad Street	Lv. 11.30	18.50
West Philadelphia	11.33	18.50

	P.M.
Frazer.	12.10	18.50
Downingtown	12.25	18.45
Coatesville	12.36	18.35
Pomeroy	12.45	18.25
Lancaster	1.25	17.75
Conewago	2.05	17.00
Harrisburg	3.06	17.00
Lewistown Junction	4.32	15.75
Huntingdon	5.25	15.00
Tyrone	5.57	14.90
Altoona (Dinner)	Ar. 6.25
Altoona	Lv. 7.00	14.60
Cresson	7.35	14.30
Johnstown	8.12	13.80
Blairsville Intersection	8.50	13.35
Greensburg.	9.28	12.90
Pittsburg... { Eastern time. 10.45
	Central time. 9.45

	A.M.
Ar. Indianapolis (Breakfast)	8.30
Ar Terre Haute (Luncheon)	11.00
	P.M.
Ar. St. Louis (Union Sta.)..	4.00

Tickets will also be sold from other stations on the Pennsylvania Railroad, east of Pittsburg and south of and including Elmira, Olean and Mayville, and from stations on the New York and Long Branch Railroad, Cumberland Valley Railroad, and New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk Railroad, good going in coaches on regular trains to point of connection with special train. The following rates will apply from the stations named:

Asbury Park, N.J. $20.00	Lock Haven, Pa.	$15.95
Atlantic City, N.J. 19.65	Lykens, Pa.	17.00
Baltimore, Md. .. 17.00	Mayville, N. Y.	14.50
Bedford, Pa. 15.00	Mt. Holly, N. J.	18.90
Bellefonte, Pa. 15.55	Ocean City, N. J.	19.80
Blairsville, Pa. 13.40	Oil City, Pa.	13.75
Bradford, Pa. 15.50	Olean, N. Y.	15.50
Bridgeton, N. J. 19.25	Phillipsburg, N. J.	19.00
Burlington, N. J. 18.90	Pottsville, Pa.	18.50
Cape May, N. J. 20.10	Punxsutawney, Pa.	14.75
Chester, Pa. 18.50	Reading, Pa.	18.50
Columbia, Pa. 17.60	Salem, N. J.	19.25
Corry, Pa. 14.10	Shenandoah, Pa.	18.50
Cumberland, Md. 15.00	Sunbury, Pa.	17.00
Delmar, Del. 18.50	Warren, Pa.	14.50
Dover, Del. 18.50	Washington, D. C.	17.00
Driftwood, Pa. 15.70	Wilkesbarre, Pa.	17.00
Easton, Md. 18.50	Williamsport, Pa.	17.00
Elmira, N. Y. 17.00	Wilmington, Del.	18.50
Franklin City, Va. 18.50	York, Pa.	17.00

Proportionate rates from other points.
Returning, tickets will be good in coaches on regular trains leaving St.
Louis (Union Station) on day of validation and not later than May 19th.

For rates of fare from other stations and leaving time of connecting trains consult nearest Ticket Agent.

When you find yourself, as I dare say you sometimes do, overpowered as it were by melancholy, the best way is to go out and do something kind to somebody or other.—John Keble.

The fellowship of his sufferings is the vestibule to the friendship of our Sovereign.

Three Books You Should Have

We have three books written by the late DR. DOUGAN CLARK, Professor of Biblical Literature in Earlham College. Dr. Clark was recognized as one of the leading teachers on Holiness, and his books are full of spiritual food.

1. HOLY GHOST DISPENSATION.

This book sets forth with great clearness the joy and beauty of living in fellowship with the Holy Spirit. It should be read by all who are thirsty after the higher life. It contains 170 pages, finely printed, good paper, in strong cloth binding, price 50 cents. It treats of the following subjects: 1.—The Dispensation of the Holy Spirit; 2.—The Holy Spirit our Sanctifier; 3.—The Holy Spirit an object of Worship, Praise and Prayer; 4.—Intercessory Functions of the Holy Spirit; 5.—The Anointing and Sealing of the Spirit; 6.—The Holy Spirit's Guidance; 7.—The Striving of the Spirit; 8.—Sanctification not by Growth nor Death; 9.—Sanctification not Impeccability; 10.—Sanctification and Temptation; 11.—Be ye therefore Perfect; 12.—Preserved; 13.—A Plea for Orthodoxy; 14.—The Reckoning of Faith.

2. INSTRUCTIONS TO CHRISTIAN CONVERTS.

This book has passed through eight editions. It is one of the most valuable books to put into the hands of young Christians. The chapters are: 1.—Be Definite; 2.—Be Diligent; 3.—Be Faithful; 4.—Be Patient; 5.—Be Holy; 6.—Be Filled; 7.—Be Established. 133 pages; price 50 cents.

3. INNER AND OUTER LIFE OF HOLINESS.

This book was written just before Dr. Clark's death. In many respects it is his most spiritual work. The book has 100 pages well printed and bound; price, cloth 35 cents; leatherette 20 cents. The book treats first of INNER LIFE as a life of Peace, Faith, Full Assurance. Extinction of Selfishness, Communion with God, and Spiritual Growth. And of the OUTER LIFE: The Walk, Regulation, Habit, Meekness and Rule of Action.

SPECIAL OFFER.—The three books, in cloth binding, will be sent postpaid for $1.00.

ADDRESS,

PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION OF FRIENDS * Plainfield, Indiana

EDUCATIONAL.

EARLHAM COLLEGE, RICHMOND, INDIANA

Prof. Elbert Russell offers courses regularly in Kings, New Testament Times, Life of Christ, The Apostolic Age, Church History, New Testament Literature, Romans, John, Biblical Literature, Isaiah.

Prof. Cyrus W. Hodgkin, The Protestant Reformation.

Prof. Anna M. Demaree, New Testament, Greek.

Asst. Prof. Lindley, History of the Hebrews.

Pres. Kelly, History of Philosophy, Ethics, Psychology.

The Oakwood Seminary UNION SPRINGS, N. Y.

Founded in 1796.

A boarding school for boys and girls under the care of New York Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Academic, College Preparatory and Commercial

Spring term begins Fourth month 5, 1904

SAMUEL H. HODGKIN, LINDLEY M. STEVENS, Principal, Superintendent.

STENOGRAPHING, TYPEWRITING and MIMEOGRAPHING. Prices moderate.

MARY M. KITE

407 Lippincott Building, 12th and Filbert Sts., Phila.
Phone No. 3-33-00

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK

Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter Street.
Telephones.

GO SOUTH OR SOUTHWEST

via the Seaboard Air Line Ry. Two daily trains from Washington with Pullman Sleepers and a la carte Dining Cars. The best service to Atlanta, Birmingham, New Orleans, Savannah, Jacksonville and Tampa. For Industrial, Resort or Manatee booklets, address W. E. Conklyn, General Agent, 1411 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER.—Careful and accurate repairing, with prompt service, has brought me the custom of many Friends. Their patronage is particularly solicited. My store is nearest to the Market Street ferries, and is easy of access from every part of the city. W. L. Berry, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

We particularly invite the attention of the readers of "The American Friend" to this column. It will be found useful for almost everyone who wishes to advertise. The cost is 5c. per line each insertion. No advertisement is accepted for less than 25c. Cash with order.

OCEAN GROVE, N. J.—Cottages and boarding houses for rent. Send for printed list. E. N. Woolston, No. 50 Main Avenue, Ocean Grove, N. J.

FRIEND! Here's a message for thee. The "Friend" Mfg. Co., Gasport, N. Y., would like to send one of their catalogs of Spraying Outfits. Will thee ask for it?

A YOUNG LADY, college graduate, wishes a position as companion or mother's helper, tutor to small children. Good reader, competent in instrumental music. Experienced. Address E. B., care AMERICAN FRIEND.

GREAT CHICAGO THEATER DISASTER complete. 396 pages, 69 full-page illustrations; fine cloth, paper and extra print. 60c. postpaid. Address, Howard Book House, Elwood, Ind.

"INDIANA YEARLY MEETING OF FRIENDS, 1844," is the title of a very instructive picture drawn by Marcus Mote. In the foreground is a group of the old-time Friends in their queer garb, while in the background stands the plain meeting-house, surrounded with trees and numerous vehicles. An excellent half-tone copy on enameled paper, 6x10 inches. Postpaid, 5c. each, 50 cents per dozen. THE AMERICAN FRIEND, 718 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

TEACHER wanted for Preparative Meeting School. State experience, and address William T. Cooper, or Hannah P. Rudolph, Woodbury, N. J.

WANTED.—A thousand families of "Friends" and others to come west and buy land in Woods county, Oklahoma, while you can get good farms at half their value. Rich valley land near Friends' meeting, Stella Academy, railroad and good market. In the great wheat and alfalfa belt, and fruit in abundance, the best part of Oklahoma. Warm, healthy climate, with splendid society. Write us for circulars and price lists. References, Pastor "Friends'" Church, First National Bank of Cherokee. Very truly, VOTAW and SETZER, "Friends."

OLD-FASHIONED grandfather clocks repaired at home. If yours needs attention send me a postal or, better, call. My store is within three minutes' walk of the Market Street ferries. Repairing of clocks and watches of every kind. Prompt service and moderate prices. W. L. Berry, Watchmaker and Jeweler, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

S. F. BALDERSTON'S SON Wall Paper and Decorations

Window Shades Made to Order

602 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILA.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA. Office, 409 CHESTNUT STREET

CAPITAL, $1,000,000

ASSETS, $63,970,335.34

Surplus and Undivided Profits, belonging to Stockholders

4,026,151.15

Surplus, belonging to Insurance Account

5,635,620.25

Incorporated Third month 22, 1865. Charter Perpetual.

INSURES LIVES, GRANTS ANNUITIES, RECEIVES MONEY ON DEPOSIT, returnable on demand for which interest is allowed.

And is empowered by law to act as EXECUTOR ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, GUARDIAN, ASSIGNEE, COMMITTEE, RECEIVER, AGENT, etc.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the assets of the Company.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.

BOXES $5 AND UPWARDS

T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-Prest.
ASA S. WING, Vice-President.
JOS. ASHBROOK, Man. Ins. Dept.
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer.

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY, President.

J. R. FOULKE, Trust Officer.

DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary.

J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Assistant Trust Officer

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary.

DIRECTORS:

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY,
T. WISTAR BROWN,
HENRY HAINES,
RICHARD WOOD,
CHAS. HARTSHORNE,

ASA S. WING,
PHILIP C. GARRETT,
JAMES V. WATSON,
WM. LONGSTRETH,
THOS. SCATTERGOOD,

J. PRESTON THOMAS,
ROBERT M. JANNEY,
MARRIOTT C. MORRIS,
FRANK H. TAYLOR,
JOSEPH B. TOWNSEND, JR.

FINANCIAL.

FOR SALE

$10,000—5 per cent. Gold First Mortgage Electric Light Bonds at 100 and interest. $5,000—5 per cent. Gold First Mortgage Warehouse Bonds at 102½ and interest. $5,000—5 per cent. Gold First Mortgage Guaranteed Gas Bonds at 100 and interest. $10,000—5 per cent. Gold First Mortgage Guaranteed Street Railway Bonds at 100 and interest.

HOWARD M. SWAB,
Member Philadelphia Stock Exchange,
Room 61, Main Floor, Bourse.

6% to 7% Choice First Mortgage Loans, Seattle and vicinity. Local and N. Y. references. Established 1887. Correspondence Solicited.
JAMES BOTHWELL, Seattle, Washington.

Mortgages Net 6% in North Dakota.

I place mortgages on land covering about one-third its value. The value of this land is constantly increasing.

I know every mortgagor personally, know his land, his integrity, his habits and his ability to pay.

These combine to make me certain that these mortgages are as safe as GOVERNMENT BONDS.

Investigate me. You can't make the investigation too rigid to suit me. I'll stand it. I've been in this business for 18 years, and never lost a cent for a customer, nor foreclosed a mortgage.

I collect the interest and principal without charge and remit in New York exchange. Write to me for further information.

WALTER L. WILLIAMSON
Investment Banker
Lisbon North Dakota

The
New Century
TYPEWRITER
does the BEST WORK and lots of it, EASILY.

Strong, Thoroughly Built,
Superior in results to any other.

Write for
"THE BOOK OF THE NEW CENTURY."

AMERICAN WRITING MACHINE COMPANY,
1033 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

IN MEMORIAM.

The mortal vase seemed all too frail and slight;
A rosy spirit glowed within the clay
And shed its radiance along our way.
At last God's hand gently put out the light,
And so began the darkness of our night?
Nay—so began the brightness of her day!

The ordinary country school of to-day is just as much out of relation to the real requirements of our race as the whale is out of place on dry land, unless the purpose be to make the country-bred children utterly out of conceit with their surroundings and to send them off to the cities where as clerks they can wear clean-starched linen in a store every day in the week."—John Graham Brooks.

Established 1860

150 Varieties

Esterbrook's Steel Pens

Sold Everywhere The Best Pens Made

FOOTWEAR at Popular Prices

Quality and style go hand in hand here—both are always good. Our showing for spring and summer is the best we ever have had. Everything for young, middle-aged and aged—roomy shapes that let tiny feet grow naturally, and others that are designed especially for tender feet. Some seasonable lines:

WOMEN'S OXFORDS AND RIBBON TIES—blucher oxfords of chrome patent leather or tan Russia calf at $3.00. Blucher and regular oxfords of patent coltskin, and three-eyelet bluchers, at $3.50. Button and blucher oxfords of patent leather, and ribbon ties of tan Russia calf, at $4.00.

WOMEN'S PATENT COLTSKIN DRESS SHOES—dull tops, dull buttons, Spanish arch and Cuban heels; sizes 2½ to 7, and widths A to D—$3.50.

MISSES' SHOES AND OXFORDS—sizes 11½ to 2. Among the high shoes are our "S. & C. Specials" at $1.65, the "Royal Oak" shoes reduced to $2.00, the School shoes at $2.00, the "Right-shape" shoes at $2.50, the "High-grade" shoes at $3.00 and $3.50. In tan are high shoes and oxfords at $2.50.

CHILDREN'S SHOES—sizes 8 to 10½. The "S. & C. Specials" at $1.50, the "Right-shape" shoes at $2.00, and fine dress shoes at $2.50.

GIRLS' SPECIAL OXFORDS—with low heels, and designed for girls who wear women's sizes (2½ to 5½). Made of tan Russia calf in a very pretty shape—$2.50. High shoes of patent coltskin at $3.50.

STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER
PHILADELPHIA

Cheap chimney,
dear lamp.

MACBETH.

My Index tells what chimney fits your lamp. If you use that chimney, you get perhaps twice as much light, and save a dollar or two a year of chimney-money,

It tells, besides, how to care for lamps; even that is imperfectly known.

I send it free; am glad to.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

"Brother," said Ruth to Teddy, one day, As the children were out in the yard at play,

"I don't see how the little plants know They should send their leaves up and their roots below."

"How do you know," he scornfully said, "You should stand on your feet, and not on your head?"

—Harriet Goodrich Martin, in Youth's Companion.

JOSEPH G. FOGG UNDERTAKER AND EMBALMER

S. W. Cor. Sixteenth and Race Sts.

Phone Spruce 44-38-W. PHILADELPHIA.

Suburban orders promptly attended.

Before deciding on the new hymn book for your Church, Prayer Meeting or Sunday School, you had better see

NORTHFIELD HYMNAL

By GEO. C. STEBBINS

Substantially bound in cloth, $25 per 100

5c. each per copy extra by mail

A returnable copy for examination sent on application.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York and Chicago.

Wives sometimes object to life insurance. Widows never do; they know its value. Get particulars free. No importunity.

PENN MUTUAL LIFE

921-3-5 Chestnut Street, Phila.

Earlham College Library

LIBRARY

The American Friend

Vol. XI FIFTH MONTH 5, 1904 No. 18

	PAGE
EDITORIALS.—Religion in Work Dress.
—A Tribute to Allen Jay	291-292
POEM—"You Touched a Tender Spot, Old Man"	292
D. D. Jenkins
The Salvation Army in Germany	293
J. J. Mills.
Benjamin F. Trueblood on Arbitration .	295
Stanley Yarnall.
The Symphony of Prayer	296
E. R. Hendrix.
Is There Any Great or Little with God?	297
SOME VIEWS ON PRESENT TOPICS:
Pastoral Need	298
Mary E. Miars.
TEMPERANCE DEPARTMENT	299
THE INTERNATIONAL LESSON	302
Lesson for Fifth month 15, 1904.
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR	303
Topic for Fifth month 15, 1904.
MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT	303
CORRESPONDENCE	304
ITEMS OF INTEREST AMONG OURSELVES,	304
MARRIED.—DIED	305
EVENTS AND COMMENTS	306

ALLEN JAY.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.50 A YEAR ❁ ❁ ❁ PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
AMERICAN FRIEND PUBLISHING COMPANY, 718 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA

EDUCATIONAL.

EARLHAM COLLEGE,RICHMOND,
INDIANA

Prof. Elbert Russell offers courses regularly in Kings, New Testament Times, Life of Christ, The Apostolic Age, Church History, New Testament Literature, Romans, John, Biblical Literature, Isaiah.

Prof. Cyrus W. Hodgkin, The Protestant Reformation.

Prof. Anna M. Demaree, New Testament, Greek.

Asst. Prof. Lindley, History of the Hebrews.

Pres. Kelly, History of Philosophy, Ethics, Psychology.

The Oakwood Seminary

UNION SPRINGS, N. Y.

Founded in 1796.

A boarding school for boys and girls under the care of New York Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Academic, College Preparatory and Commercial

Spring term begins Fourth month 5, 1904

SAMUEL H. HODGIN,
Principal.

LINDLEY M. STEVENS,
Superintendent.

STENOGRAPHING, TYPEWRITING and MIMEOGRAPHING. Prices moderate.

MARY M. KITE

407 Lippincott Building, 12th and Filbert Sts., Phila.

Phone No. 3-33-00

Barlow's Indigo Blue

Will not spot or streak clothes

In use for fifty years is proof that it is the best. All grocers sell it. Free samples mailed.

Depot, No. 233 N. Second Street, Philadelphia.

GO SOUTH OR SOUTHWEST

via the Seaboard Air Line Ry. Two daily trains from Washington with Pullman Sleepers and a la carte Dining Cars. The best service to Atlanta, Birmingham, New Orleans, Savannah, Jacksonville and Tampa. For Industrial, Resort or Manatee booklets, address W. E. Conklyn, General Agent, 1411 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER.—Careful and accurate repairing, with prompt service, has brought me the custom of many Friends. Their patronage is particularly solicited. My store is nearest to the Market Street ferries, and is easy of access from every part of the city. W. L. Berry, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

We particularly invite the attention of the readers of "The American Friend" to this column. It will be found useful for almost everyone who wishes to advertise. The cost is 5c. per line each insertion. No advertisement is accepted for less than 25c. Cash with order.

TEACHER WANTED for Shelter for Colored Orphans, Philadelphia. State experience. Address Mary Ogden Conard, Lansdowne, Pa.

WANTED.—A male teacher for the commercial department at Oak Grove Seminary. George L. Jones, Principal, Vassalboro, Maine.

FOR RENT.—At Wells Beach, Maine. A small rustic cottage upon the broad shore of the Atlantic Ocean, three miles from Railroad, in a clean and quiet section; green fields in the rear, quarter mile from postoffice. Telephone and telegraph. Six rooms, five double beds and comfortable furniture. Address T. B. Hussey, N. Berwick, Me.

FRIEND! Here's a message for thee. The "Friend" Mfg. Co., Gasport, N. Y., would like to send one of their catalogs of Spraying Outfits. Will thee ask for it?

EUROPE—$170.—Select tour 41 days. Best class on steamers. Great success. Fourth year. Longer tours at higher prices. Apply at once. Levi D. Temple, Flemington, N. J.

WANTED.—A thousand families of "Friends" and others to come west and buy land in Woods county, Oklahoma, while you can get good farms at half their value. Rich valley land near Friends' meeting, Stella Academy, railroad and good market. In the great wheat and alfalfa belt, and fruit in abundance, the best part of Oklahoma. Warm, healthy climate, with splendid society. Write us for circulars and price lists. References, Pastor "Friends'" Church, First National Bank of Cherokee. Very truly, VOTAW and SETZER, "Friends."

OLD-FASHIONED grandfather clocks repaired at home. If yours needs attention send me a postal or, better, call. My store is within three minutes' walk of the Market Street ferries. Repairing of clocks and watches of every kind. Prompt service and moderate prices. W. L. Berry, Watchmaker and Jeweler, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

GREAT CHICAGO THEATER DISASTER complete. 396 pages, 69 full-page illustrations; fine cloth, paper and extra print. 60c. postpaid. Address, Howard Book House, Elwood, Ind.

A YOUNG LADY, college graduate, wishes a position as companion or mother's helper, tutor to small children. Good reader, competent in instrumental music. Experienced. Address E. B., care AMERICAN FRIEND.

S. F. BALDERSTON'S SON

Wall Paper and Decorations

Window Shades Made to Order

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILA.

WANTED

back numbers and volumes of

American Friend
Western Friend
Friends' Review
Gospel Expositor
Christian Worker
Western Work
Nebraska Friend

Also books, tracts, documents, bearing on Friends during the nineteenth century. Communicate with

ALLEN C. THOMAS,
Haverford, Pa.

JOSEPH B. SCATTERGOOD
House and Sign Painter
313 South 5th St., Philadelphia

BREAD MACHINE

For Household Use.

Sifts the flour and mixes 10 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CYRUS CHAMBERS, Jr.) 522 & Media Sts., Philadelphia

WILLIAM S. YARNALL
Manufacturing OPTICIAN

118 S. FIFTEENTH ST., PHILA.
4th Door Below Chestnut St.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

HOOPING-COUGH
AND CROUP.*Roche's Herbal Embrocation

The celebrated and effectual English Cure without internal medicine. Proprietors, W. EDWARDS & SON, Queen Victoria St., London, England. Wholesale of E. Fougere & Co., 60 North William Street, N. Y.

EMINENT PHYSICIANS
throughout the world recommend

QUINA-LAROCHÉ

AS A SPECIFIC IN CASES OF
ANAEMIA, COLDS, LA GRIPE,
SLOW CONVALESCENCE,
STOMACH TROUBLES,
TYPHOID and MALARIAL
FEVERS.

E. Fougere & Co., 30 N. William St., N. Y.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA. Office, 409 CHESTNUT STREET

CAPITAL, $1,000,000

ASSETS, $63,970,335.34

Surplus and Undivided Profits, belonging to Stockholders

4,026,151.15

Surplus, belonging to Insurance Account

5,635,620.25

Incorporated Third month 22, 1865. Charter Perpetual.

INSURES LIVES, GRANTS ANNUITIES, RECEIVES MONEY ON DEPOSIT, returnable on demand for which interest is allowed.

And is empowered by law to act as EXECUTOR ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, GUARDIAN, ASSIGNEE, COMMITTEE, RECEIVER, AGENT, etc.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the assets of the Company.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.

BOXES $5 AND UPWARDS

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY, President.

T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-Prest.

J. R. FOULKE, Trust Officer.

ASA S. WING, Vice-President.

DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary.

JOS. ASHBROOK, Man. Ins. Dept.

J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Assistant Trust Officer

SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer.

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary.

DIRECTORS:

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY,
T. WISTAR BROWN,
HENRY HAINES,
RICHARD WOOD,
CHAS. HARTSHORNE.

ASA S. WING,
PHILIP C. GARRETT,
JAMES V. WATSON,
WM. LONGSTRETH,
THOS. SCATTERGOOD.

J. PRESTON THOMAS,
ROBERT M. JANNEY,
MARRIOTT C. MORRIS,
FRANK H. TAYLOR,
JOSEPH B. TOWNSEND, JR.

The American Friend

"Truth is the highest thing a man may keep."
"That they all may be one."

VOL. XI.

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTH MONTH 5, 1904.

No. 18.

RELIGION IN WORK DRESS.—I.

ONE of the most telling parables ever spoken pictures a man robbed, wounded and helpless by the side of the high road between Jerusalem and Jericho. This poor sufferer was the victim of very bad social conditions, which made robbery and personal assault easy and common. One of the leading church officials came by and saw the sufferer. But he was too busy with "religion" and with "church affairs" to help the man. If he stopped to relieve the poor fellow's condition, doubtless the hour for the temple "service" would be past and he would miss the opportunity of praising God with the multitude.

A subordinate officer also happened along and saw the stranded victim, but he too had some religious exercise on his mind which would suffer if he waited, and so he hurried on to add his note of praise in the gorgeous temple service. A despised foreigner, with perhaps less formal religion, but with love and goodness in his heart, came by and was touched with human pity. He served the God he loved by ministering to the needs of an unknown man toward whom his sympathies went out because he had the spirit of true brotherhood. It is an ancient story—often enough preached upon—but have we really learned its deep lesson? The head knows, perhaps, but do the hands practice it?

Alas, we are often too busy with "religion" to see the very tasks which the Heavenly Father is calling us to take up. We are so absorbed waiting for "visions" that we do not see the plain duty which lies right before our face. There are churches all over the land whose members are wondering why they have so little power, who pray earnestly enough for outpourings, but who persistently neglect the problems of the neighborhood and go on their heavenward way ignorant that the path to heaven lies through this world, and that love of God carries with it love of men.

If Christ is to be our authority, and not tradition; if the New Testament is to be our guide, and not monastic theories, we must admit that the power of our religion is to be measured by what it makes us do. Some measure their religion by feelings, some by public testimony, some by liberality in giving, some by emotional shouting and leaping and groaning, some by quietness and weighty solemnity. In a complete and full religious experience there is very likely a place for all these features. But none of them reaches the heart of things. The true test of religion is deeper. To be religious, according to our Saviour, is to get a kind of life which loves to give and share all it is and all it has. The best evidence that a man has found Christ is that he goes to work to turn what he has into channels of service to his fellow men. Loving God is only half of religion: Thou art to love God with all thy being, and thy neighbor in the same way. The Church has spent many centuries perfecting its forms of worship, its ritual, its system of praise, its ways of glorifying God. The coming centuries are to be spent in discovering how the Church can serve God by serving man. Our great problems will not be over dogmatic statements of doctrine and creed, but over the solution of social issues. Instead of quarreling over abstract phrases, we shall learn how to help those who suffer and how to make our love to God count by turning it into practical application to human needs.

RELIGION IN WORK DRESS.—II.

THERE is not much gained by general statements. We need rather to have things brought down to some practical application. Charles Dudley Warner has described how he tried to kill a bear by "aiming at him all over"! The safer way is to aim at some definite part. Too often our fire misses because we aim all over. Let us talk of something definite. There are some hundreds of Friends' meetings scattered across our country—some of them fairly strong churches, and others extremely weak—like bruised reeds and smoking wicks. Every one of these little churches, whether strong or weak, is set in the life of a larger community. This community is full of social problems. Very likely it has a saloon in it, or near it. It has a large poor class, with some cases of actual suffering. It has a large number of individuals and families unconnected with any church. There are homes almost barren of religion. There are children who have no religious education. There are men there who do not believe that religion amounts to anything. There are women who live all the time on the perilous edge of despair and utter discouragement. Now the church cannot succeed if it devotes its energies solely to its own life, if it hurries by on the other side and leaves these social conditions undisturbed. It won't matter much to cry out against evil, to threaten divine judgments and to proclaim woes upon all who do not come with us. That is a poor way to help a suffering world.

The first thing needed is love, sympathy, fellow-feeling for those who make up this great class of humanity outside the walls of our meeting houses, and to get this feeling we need to know more about the actual lives of men and more about the causes of poverty and the other existing situations. There are various ways of getting at this. One way would be to organize a class of the most interested members to study social questions. They would go to work to build up a little local library of modern books on poverty and drink and other social evils—their causes and their remedies. They would meet to read and study these books, to present papers, to have discussions, and to make reports upon the actual situation in their own neighborhood. As fast as they learned they would burn with an eager zeal to help and to make their religion count.

In other places where it might not be best to begin with a study-class, a club could be organized to get hold of the boys or the girls or both. They would provide simple entertainment and exercises for them that would attract them. Here they would get personally acquainted with them, get in touch with them and work out plans for reaching their lives in deeper ways. All this work would reveal the home life of these children and would lead to ways for reaching and helping the families from which they came. The important thing is to get a real human interest awakened, for without that one's religion will always remain poor and thin.

In many communities families might be reached through mother's meetings, in which lessons in practical cooking and sewing and taking care of babies would be given. Men are harder to reach and help, but it can be done by those who get truly and deeply interested in them and who care to understand the problems of those who labor with their hands. One objection always will be: "We do not know how to do these things." It is probably true, but it only shows how one-sided our religious activities have been, and the way to learn how is to begin.

Were it not for the saloon influence, both our cities and our State would be filled with clearer heads and cleaner hands.

A TRIBUTE TO ALLEN JAY.

THERE is a popular theory that it is not safe to express appreciation of the services of men loud enough for them to hear. It is supposed that such things should be reserved for obituary notices. It is a false theory. Where one person is hurt by honest, sincere appreciation a dozen suffer for the lack of it, and never quite discover what was in them, because nobody encouraged them to do their best.

We are very glad that Friends at Richmond, Indiana, have told Allen Jay what they think of him. On his return from North Carolina the members of East Main Street Meeting gave him a reception and presented him an address of appreciation, embossed in a beautiful book, signed by over three hundred persons. Here is the address, which does not at all go beyond the truth:

Allen Jay,

Beloved Friend: We, of the East Main Street Friends' Meeting, wish to express to thee our feeling of gratitude for thy long life of service among us. We rejoice that, though over seventy years of age, thou art still in the fullness of strength and vigor, and fresh from another of the long series of victories thou hast won in the service of thy Master. Thy presence among us infuses new life into our work. We feel continually the touch of thy benignant influence. We go to our several tasks with renewed courage, fuller of confidence because of thy inspiration and guidance. Thou hast been the most important factor in transforming and determining the course of many of our lives—the influence of thy counsel and of thy consecrated life has been marked upon every one of us. Thy field of service has not been restricted, thy interests have not been narrow. Thy face and thy voice and thy life are more widely known than those of any other Friend on either side of the water. We rejoice that we have as our neighbor and our personal counsellor the most widely known and most universally beloved living Friend. We ask thee to remain in thy accustomed place among us, and we unite in offering the fervent prayer that thy days of usefulness to thy fellow-men may be extended far into the future, if it be God's will.

"YOU TOUCHED A TENDER SPOT, OLD MAN."

(President Roosevelt called on Senator Hanna during his last illness to express his sympathy. The Senator, although too ill to admit the President, wrote a note to him, in which the above words were used, being the last the Senator ever penned.)

One may have millions, all his own,
Much wealth recorded, more unknown;
Possessions vast—all men declare
Him to be "multi-millionaire";—
All this can't touch as kindness can:
"You touched a tender spot, old man."

It may be office grand and great,—
The best within the gift of State,
An office from the nation's hand,
The best within a glorious land;
This cannot touch as kindness can:
"You touched a tender spot, old man."

It may be honor and renown,
In many a city, many a town,
A brilliant summit hard to reach,
And praises loud for many a speech;
All this can't touch as kindness can:
"You touched a tender spot, old man."

D. D. JENKINS.

Smithville, N. Y.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

THE SALVATION ARMY IN GERMANY.

BY J. J. MILLS.

Recently my wife and I had the pleasure of taking tea, by invitation, with Commander and Commanderin Oliphant, of the Salvation Army, at their headquarters in Berlin. Some items in the story of the army in this country and the conditions under which it labors, as heard from their lips and gathered from other sources, may, perhaps, be of interest to the readers of the AMERICAN FRIEND.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE SALVATION ARMY IN BERLIN.

Protestant Christian work in the German Empire is, to-day, principally carried on by two organizations, the National Church and the Salvation Army. Between the two are the non-conformist churches, but they are few and feeble, and, relatively, insignificant in influence. The National Church is a powerful civil and ecclesiastical institution, holding a historical position as the modern conservator of the faith preached by Martin Luther. At its head is the Emperor, who, through the Ministry of Public Worship, directs the details of its policy and exacts from every prelate a solemn oath of faithful obedience to his royal mandates. Imperial revenues are available for its support. Its clergy are government officers for life, and, like all other high-grade State officials, must have had a complete university education. It is jealously protected by the law of the land, and to attack it or agitate against it in an offensive way, either in public speech or in writing, is an indictable offense. But, although thus buttressed within and without, it has lost, in large measure, the spiritual life and fervor that Luther infused into German Protestantism. In many of its pulpits, if not most, Christianity has come to be less a personal matter, bearing upon the soul and conduct, than a profoundly interesting subject for historical and philosophical criticism or for simple ethical homilies.

The Salvation Army, yet in its infancy, is an evangelistic and philanthropic organization, which wages, by day and by night, an aggressive warfare for the saving of the souls and bodies of men. While some of its recruits are of noble birth, a large proportion are drawn from the lower strata of society. It is without financial resources outside of the marvelous self-denial of its soldiers and the voluntary contributions of others. Many of the most active in its ranks are, like Peter and John in the eyes of the Jerusalem Council, "unlearned and ignorant men." Of them it might be said, as pagan critics sneeringly wrote of the Christians in the second century: "They are shoemakers, fullers, illiterate clowns." "They have left their tongs, anvils and mallets to preach of the things of heaven."

Commander Oliphant is of Scotch blood. He was educated for the Church of England at the London University, ordained in St. Paul's Cathedral, and some twenty years ago had charge of a mission hall in one of the poorest districts of London, with a parish of ten thousand souls. Being unable to reconcile in his own mind the extremes of wealth and poverty, the classes and the masses about him, he did what he conceived a man in whom was the mind of Christ should do—he resigned his position, with its prospects of promotion, sold all that he had, and, to use his own words, "counted it joy to join the Salvation Army." Those were days of bitter prejudice in

COMMANDER OLIPHANT.

England against the army. As many as five hundred of their number were in prison at one time. Captain Oliphant, as he was then, often returned from his work in the London slums black and blue from the assaults of the rabble. But the spirit of the Army was then, as it is now, indomitable. Its soldiers in jail improved the opportunity to pray with their fellow-prisoners and their jailers. "Put a Salvationist into a beer barrel," said the Commander to us, "and he will shout 'Halleluia' out at the bunghole!" After a series of promotions in England he became European Traveling Commissioner of the Salvation Army for a year. Then followed five years as Commander in Holland, and as many more as Commander in Sweden. The work of himself and his wife elicited the warmest sympathy from the Queen of the former and the King of the latter country. In Holland, aided by substantial municipal gifts of money, they established numerous social institutions and a farm colony which won national sympathy. In Sweden their success assumed similar striking dimensions. Two years ago he was placed in command of the Salvationist forces in Germany.

His wife is a native of Holland, and the daughter of a Dutch military officer, who was descended from a Huguenot family. A child of luxury, she was liberally educated, moved in high social circles and came little into contact with poverty, misery and vice until the work of the Salvation Army, under General Booth, attracted her attention. Going with her parents on a visit to London, she became so impressed with the spirit and mission of the army that she eventually entered one of its training homes in that city. When, subsequently, clad in the costume of a Salvationist, she took her place in the ranks as an active soldier, she spent some months as a slum officer in London. Her duties in that capacity included nursing the sick, scrubbing the dirty hovels of the extremely poor, acting as peacemaker in drunken brawls, and many other forms of self-sacrificing service. Since then she has labored by the Commander's side in fourteen different countries, notably in Holland and Sweden. She traversed with him the whole of the vast and mostly snow-covered territory of the latter country, and campaigned with him in Lapland. To-day, although she is the devoted mother of two children in a most refined home circle at the army headquarters in Berlin, she is an incessant traveler to all parts of the German Empire. She speaks five different languages, is an accomplished musician and musical composer, is gifted with rare social qualities, and is a ready and forceful public speaker.

COMMANDERIN OLIPHANT.

Germany has little to recommend it as a favorable field for evangelistic and temperance work except its conspicuous need in both lines. Its powerful standing army is the peculiar pride of the whole nation. There could, therefore, be no surprise that the people should hesitate to take the Salvation Army seriously. Then there is the ubiquitous officialdom to be reckoned with. Germany boasts of the strongest police government in the world. Everybody, excepting transient tourists, upon locating in a town or changing residence from one district in a city to another, straightway receives a summons to appear personally at the police office and give an account of himself. Thereafter the policeman, figuratively, has ever his hand upon one, regulating a hundred details of private life and conduct. If a Salvationist (or any one else) would sell papers in the streets or restaurants, or hold a meeting of any kind, indoors or out, he must first obtain an official permit from the police. Fines and imprisonment for such offenses as soliciting subscriptions without police permission, making a speech at a graveside without having advised the authorities of the intention to do so, or the distribution of handbills, are common occurrences. It is not uncommon, on going into a Salvation Army meeting in a large hall, to find the force on the platform to consist of three or four Salvationists and two policemen. The latter will insist upon the leader of the meeting at once informing them of the subject of his address, and will then proceed diligently to make official notes of all that is said and done. For one reason or another, the Salvation Army officers are continually before the police. Somebody has sold the "War Cry" outside the prescribed boundaries, or collected contributions contrary to police restrictions, or sung in the courtyard of a flat, or preached in the open air.

Again, the fact that there is in Germany far less home life, as we know it, than there is in America, must be taken into account. In the cities, the elaborately decorated and luxuriously appointed restaurant is the second home, the drawing and dining room of the thrifty, energetic, comfort-loving German masses. They are much upon the streets in their spare hours. They eat and drink, smoke and sing, and go to the concert and opera, apparently, about as assiduously as they devote themselves to the virtue-nurturing life of the home circle. The preaching of earnest spiritual Christianity must always encounter a cold reception among a people whose domestic altars have fallen down.

Another formidable barrier in the way of religious effort is found in the many forms of rationalism which abound among all classes in Germany. This is not necessarily rank unbelief. Of infidelity, pure and simple, there is evidently much. But scepticism in this country often springs from the love for speculation and criticism, which is native to the German mind. After vital religion is dormant or dead in the heart, speculative theology often tenaciously survives in the head. Evidence of this may be found in the government census returns, which require specific information concerning every man's beliefs or disbeliefs. In them the classification of dissenters from the orthodox faith includes, along with others, Rationalists, Materialists, Naturalists, Humanists, Atheists, Deists, Free Thinkers, Monotheists, Pure Reasonists, Pantheists, Secularists, Theosophists, Mystics, Cogitants and those who claim to have their "own religion." That the voice of the Salvationist should be drowned in this Babel of theological tongues would be no matter for surprise.

Further, in spite of the fact that Germany has so long been regarded as the land of high idealism, it is to-day experiencing an overwhelming wave of materialism. The spirit of industrial and commercial competition is rife, with all its attendant social and moral consequences. Under the pressure of the stupendous military system, the tremendous economic stress and strain, the philosophical and theological chaos, the widespread poverty and the prevalent material views of life, multitudes grow discontented, morbid and pessimistic, and conclude that religion is an empty fiction and morality an impossibility. Drinking is on the increase, and the announcements of suicides in the daily newspapers occasion little more comment, as a rule, than the accompanying notices of death from other causes. Within as many months three suicides by drowning have occurred in the Thiergarten in Berlin, and within the last seven days, utterly incredible though it may seem, two whole families of respectable social standing in this city, one of five members and the other of three, finding life intolerable, have each by deliberate agreement among themselves put themselves to death!

Such in meager outline is the picture of darkest Germany of to-day—that is, that portion of the population toward which the Salvation Army more especially directs its campaign. But a marked reaction has already set in among all classes. There is a growing interest in all things religious. In the last fifteen years more churches have been built in the nation's capital than were built during the preceding ninety years. A church extension movement is in progress, which contemplates the provision of a Protestant State church for every twenty-five thousand inhabitants in Prussia. A temperance crusade is under way, the earnestness and force of which may be gauged by such facts as the following: Some months ago, in Bremen, a congress of fifteen hundred people sat for four days discussing the nation's drink peril; books approaching one thousand in number dealing with the temperance question have been written and published, the most of them in the last ten years; there are numerous newspapers and magazines devoted to the reform; the imperial health office is sending out elaborate literature against the use of alcoholic drinks; the Empress takes a kindly interest in the cause, and her brother, Count Douglas, is one of the leading temperance reformers of the country.

In this reaction toward religion and temperance the Salvation Army finds its opportunity. In striking contrast to the philosophical and highly theological spirit of the German pulpit, the spirit of the typical German Salvation Army corps is always aglow with zeal. The Teuton, though he may be irreligious in life, is often a professedly God-fearing man. "When, therefore," said Commander Oliphant, "the Salvationist comes along and thunders at him about sin, and death, and hell, or reasons about judgment and righteousness, his conscience awakes, and he often falls down, thoroughly broken-hearted and deeply repentant before God." And the Army makes a good showing of results. At the end of fifteen years' occupancy of this field it has one hundred and twenty corps scattered all over the land, officered by about three hundred and fifty men and women. It has fourteen social institutions in successful operation, including rescue homes for girls in five cities, children's homes, a hotel for unprotected women and a home for discharged prisoners. It reports ninety-seven thousand meetings held in the last two years, and Gospel preaching and other addresses to an estimated total audience of two million people of all classes.

Its invasion of the German restaurant as, perhaps, its widest field, forms a chapter of peculiar interest. At first violently opposed, then good-humoredly tolerated, its officers have finally become welcome visitors in these places. Here they conduct "personal" conversations and explain the work of the Army, but decline the inevitable glass of beer to which they are invited. Sometimes the restaurant-keeper, ever ready to entertain his guests with novelties, suggests a solo from the "Kriegsruf" (the "War Cry"). The barmaid sits down to the piano and a lady Salvation officer sings. Her pure voice and innocent face are like arrow-feathers to the words, "My feet are tired of wandering in the paths of sin." When she finishes many a tear is brushed from the eyes of those present, including the barmaid at the piano.

Another novel illustration of the army's enterprise is found in its labor for the salvation of drunkards. An officer sent to a manufacturing town, for instance, begins to scour the city for social wrecks and out-of-works. Forming his soldiers into a drunkard's brigade, he details them for work on certain nights of the week. The city being poorly lighted and old-fashioned and the drunkards being numerous, he provides the members of the brigade with lanterns, leggings and twine nets resembling hammocks. A drunken man found in a cellar or in a dirty street in a helpless condition is a dead weight for a single person, but a number of soldiers can manage him very well in a net. "Result," said the Commander, with true Salvationist fervor: "Universal talk and popular sympathy for the work of the Army; souls saved; soldiers increased; money raised; a home opened for the out-of-works; many drunkards reformed; some of them now soldiers. Please note—this idea was made in Germany!"

Berlin.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

BENJAMIN F. TRUEBLOOD ON ARBITRATION.

BY STANLEY R. YARNALL.

At the annual meeting of the Peace Association of Friends of Philadelphia, held on Fourth month 18th, Dr. Benjamin F. Trueblood, secretary of the American Peace Society, delivered an instructive and encouraging address on the "Movement Toward World Federation," of which the following is a summary:

Dr. Trueblood said that the extension of railways and telegraph lines is making the world one, and is rapidly bringing about a World Federation. This is becoming a reality more as a result of economic and industrial conditions than of ethical and moral considerations. It is not for Peace workers to deplore this fact, but to work along the lines suggested by the actual conditions, always aiming to keep this united and federated world true to high ideals that transcend the sordid and the commercial.

He traced the movement toward World Federation along three lines of development: I. Arbitration. II. World Parliaments. III. Disarmament.

I. Arbitration has advanced in a century from nothing to assured victory. From the years 1820 to 1850 there were thirty arbitrations, to twenty-four of which Great Britain or the United States was a party. From 1850 to 1870 the movement advanced by rapid strides, and from 1850 to 1900 one hundred and seventy more arbitrations were made, of which sixty-three fell in the last decade of the century. Since 1900 fifty cases have been submitted to The Hague Court, to arbitration boards or to individual arbitrators. No war or permanent ill feeling has ever followed any of these decisions.

After speaking of some recent decisions of The Hague Court, Dr. Trueblood described it as an august fixed institution that will surely become as great and authoritative in the world as is the Supreme Court in the United States.

Specific treaties between individual nations to submit questions at issue to arbitration have followed the establishment of The Hague Court as a matter of course. The movement has grown more rapidly than any one dared to hope. It now seems that within two decades practically all the nations will be pledged to submit a large proportion of their disputes to The Hague Tribunal.

The following is the record of six months of arbitration treaties: England and France, England and Italy, Spain and France, France and Italy, England and Spain, Holland and Denmark, France and Holland, and six more are pending.

II. The idea of World Federation was always uppermost in the minds of such early Peace Workers as William Ladd, Charles Sumner and Elihu Burritt, but it has developed more slowly than arbitration.

The great Congress of Vienna, followed by forty years of European peace, was a prototype of a more general federation. Since that time there have been many National Conventions of smaller and larger numbers to consider specific objects. The greatest example of these was the holding in 1896 of the International Postal Union at which every nation of the world was represented. The Pan-American Congress more recently has shown the practicability of such unions for discussion and mutual understanding.

The idea of a great world parliament seems so simple and so reasonable that it is strange it has not already become a reality.

Dr. Trueblood then spoke hopefully of the efforts now progressing to have the United States take the initiative in this movement, and predicted that sooner or later the idea will become a reality and the world parliament will be the counterpart and supplement of The Hague Tribunal.

III. Disarmament proceeds slowly. As yet there is little sign superficially, and yet below the surface thoughtful Europeans feel that the problem must soon be taken up in a very practical way. France and Italy are encouraging in their attitude upon disarmament. It must logically follow on the specific arbitration treaties that are becoming general.

In conclusion, Dr. Trueblood spoke of Chili and the Argentine Republic as presenting the most conspicuous example of disarmament. These two nations were on the verge of war and were loading themselves heavily with debt to supply great warships and the most approved modern guns and rifles. Persuaded to submit their issue to King Edward, they accepted his decision gladly and diplomatic visits were paid by prominent officials to the capitals of the two countries, whose school children marched singing songs and bearing banners of peace and all ended in good will and amity. The armies have been reduced to the limits of police force for national purposes, two or more of the great warships have been sold and docks and harbors improved with the millions so secured, and two others have been turned over to the department of commerce and are now plying on regular routes developing the resources of the countries.

Finally, on the frontier of the two countries on the pass leading over the mountains at the border there has been erected a figure of the Christ, where some of the hardest fighting would have been in event of war. Spectacular, the friend of war may say, but the warrior can afford to spare a small bit of the spectacular to those who fight for the Prince of Peace.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

THE SYMPHONY OF PRAYER.

BY E. R. HENDRIX.

The great choral symphony is not Beethoven's masterpiece with its matchless, soul-melting harmonies unheard save by the soul of its deaf composer. It is the symphony of prayer, not only choral but at times too deep for language, "songs without words," unlawful to utter because no speech can articulate the unutterable longings inspired by the Holy Spirit helping our infirmities when we know not what to pray for, or how to pray as we ought. The inspired poet or artist can never give final and complete expression to his thought, nor can the soul at prayer ever voice the great deep of the heart. The finite and the infinite may have the same center but not the same circumference. Incomplete as may be our thoughts and aspirations and prayers they belong within that large circumference which includes all spiritual things.

They are but broken lights of Thee
And Thou, O Lord, are more than they.

But it is the prayer of the Son of God which makes perfect the symphony which it leads because it is in such complete accord with the voice of true prayer everywhere.

It was our Lord who first applied the term "symphony" to prayer. Jesus said to His disciples, "Again I say unto you, that if two of you shall agree (the Greek word is symphonize) on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of My Father which is in Heaven." He gives as the ground of such a large assurance and promise, "For where two or three are gathered together in My name, there am I in the midst of them." That explains the possible symphony. Hearts in perfect accord with Him must be in accord with one another. Met in His name means drawn together wholly by what He was and said, claiming His promises, made bold by His word, trusting in His authority and power. This is the perfect note which keys every heart to true prayer and makes possible the complete symphony of worship. "How to pray" like "how to play" depends on whether the instrument is in tune. However skillful the musician only jangled sounds come forth from the unstrung harp whether of few or "of a thousand strings." But it matters not how many there be that pray if they but agree or symphonize.

Paul's favorite exhortation to the Early Church was, "Be of the same mind," or, "Be like-minded." He shows how it is possible when he says, "Let this mind be in you that was in Christ Jesus." The same word, "Symphonize," described the agreement between Ananias and Sapphira when they are said to have "agreed together" to lie unto the Holy Ghost. It was so perfect an agreement between themselves that each was alike guilty of the sin that was unto death, and both suffered the signal punishment that filled the whole church with awe. Their hearts chorded not with God but with Satan, and the early disciples learned that covetousness was idolatry, Satan himself putting it in their hearts even to lie to the Holy Ghost rather than to surrender their coveted possessions. It was the same false note that cost our first parents their Paradise and has proved the undoing of many a paradisiacal home. For that is the record of only the first fall, even in Genesis. We see Noah go weeping through those same guarded gates, and sobbing Jacob leaves the household gates with memories of mingled honey and gall as does some prodigal son in nearly every book of Holy Scripture. To win the ear of man Satan will even seek to imitate the music of Heaven as he dares quote some sacred text out of its proper setting that he may tempt unwary feet. How the missing word, the familiar note of the Father's own voice was lacking in the text which Satan quoted in the wilderness. "He shall give His angels charge over thee." But God had said, "to keep thee in all thy ways." Man's ways are chosen of God and he delighteth in his steps. They are only man's true ways when they are also God's ways. "For how can two walk together except they be agreed or symphonize?"

Unless prayer were thus keyed to some perfect note what ceaseless discords would mark our worship! How we would all ask and receive not because we ask amiss that we might spend it on our lusts or unlawful pleasures. How dangerous often our prayers for temporal blessings because of our selfishness. If left to themselves two men owning adjoining farms would seek to unlock and to close the windows of Heaven at the same time, as one wanted rain for his corn and the other sunshine for his ripening wheat. What fire would be called down from Heaven upon some noted Samaritan neighbor if the keys of Heaven hung at each girdle, as at Elijah's. Is not the door of Heaven often closed with a "combination lock" requiring more than one to open it? Two at least, the smallest possible company, must be agreed, and if that other one cannot be found on earth One who ever liveth to make intercession for us has declared, "I will pray the Father." Lest we be tempted to make unwarranted use of "the power of the keys" which open Heaven, "the model prayer" which our Lord taught His disciples has but one petition for temporal things and that limits the supply to one day. Twice the word daily is repeated: "Give us daily our daily bread." The manna that is gathered up and stored for many days too often becomes unwholesome. The sweetest bread that earth can know is that which comes fresh every day from our Father's house. This is the angels' food with which God fed our fathers in the wilderness. Nor are we taught even to pray for that daily supply until we have sought first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness by praying, "Hallowed be Thy name, Thy Kingdom Come, Thy will be done on earth as in Heaven." After the soul thus symphonizes with God's will in prayer respecting heavenly things it can be trusted to pray for earthly things as it sweeps on in a moment to pray, "And forgive us our trespasses as we forgive every one that trespasseth against us."

IS THERE ANY GREAT OR LITTLE WITH GOD?

As God is infinite and limitless, while we are finite and limited, we are of course incapable of even comprehending or conceiving of the difference between God and man. But that God's standards, and God's measures of value, are utterly unlike and different from our own, we may be sure. Only as God gives us some suggestions, suited to our comprehension, in the way of help to our imaginings, can there be any hint to us in the direction of the truth that there is neither great nor small, little nor large, with God; that to God there is neither rich nor poor, as men count riches or poverty, nor even divisions of time, vast or minute, in God's ever-present eternity.

This thought is itself bewildering and dazing to humanity, but it is a vital truth, and our Lord would have us to know that the impossible and inconceivable, as we view things, are nearer the truth than what we count the proved and certain. The plain teachings of Jesus are in this direction.

"One day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day." "Are not two sparrows sold for a penny? And not one of them shall fall on the ground without your Father." "The very hairs of your head are all numbered," or, as it might, even more startlingly, be rendered, "Every separate hair on your head has its number." These are not the words of a confident mathematician, of a dogmatic theologian, of a sneering scientist, or of a misguided fanatic, but they are the words of One who spake as "never man spake," and all of whose words were truth, whether we can comprehend them or not.

A sparrow—one of those innumerable and much-despised English sparrows, for example—cannot be knocked down by a thoughtless or mischievous boy, with a stick or a stone, without its being an object of the knowledge, and therefore of the interest, of Almighty God, as truly as is the fall of Babylon or Rome, or as would be the dismemberment of China. We may say, and prove, as man sees proofs, that this cannot be so, but God, by His Son, says that it can be, and that it is. We may say that such an idea belittles God as we love to think of God. But would it not rather seem that it indicates a vaster and grander conception of God in contrast with the ever-belittling ideas of God by childish—not child-like, but childish—man? We call this the twentieth century, and we stand aghast at the ages included in the suggestion; but to God twenty centuries are no more than two ordinary days, whether the twenty centuries are in the past, or are opening before us.

With God there is neither little nor great, and again all is great and all is little. How this uplifts and expands our conception of God! And how it should uplift and expand our sense of our place in the universe, as made in the image of God, and as being the special object of God's knowledge and God's care in things least and in things greatest. Moreover, what a comfort it should be to every child of God to know that God—who is love—has more interest in and sympathy with our every need and anxiety and wish and purpose, than has tenderest father, or most loving mother, or dearest friend, or truest husband or wife, in things that they count little, but that to God are great.

What things have proved to be of most importance to us in our life experience? Has it been the great occasions, when we knew at the time, or beforehand, that an epoch in our lives was at hand? Or has it been the simple and incidental, or the "accidental," occurrence, when we had no thought of important results pivoting on our word or act? Has it not been our forced occupancy of a seat with another in a crowded railroad car? or a word with a fellow-passenger at the steamer's dining table on an ocean voyage? or a glimpse, in passing, of a face that interested us, when we yet knew nothing about its owner, and which led to inquiry about him that opened up new avenues of influence and effort? or our entering one shop or another? or our making one purchase instead of another at a counter in that shop? It has been the little things oftener than the great things that have been epoch-making in our lives, and so in the lives of most persons. And this is in accordance with the teachings of God's Word that great and little, as applied to things under God's oversight, and in which he has an interest, are according to man's estimates, but not according to God's.

What a dark world this would be if it were only great things that had God's attention! What a delightful thing it is to know that there is nothing so little as to be beneath God's notice! If one of us is a trusting child of God, it is as if the universe were existing for that one needy and faith-filled child of God. We have a right to ask trustfully for help of God in drawing every breath, in bearing any pain we must endure, in profiting by every book we read, in writing any line that we attempt, in choosing any article of food that we as God's loved ones would use, or in selecting any article of dress or apparel, in order that we may best use our means and our every endeavor in His service. In God's sight we are of more value than many sparrows; and, as God numbers each hair of our head, we may be sure that nothing that concerns one of us as His representative and child will be deemed unworthy of his attention and consideration.

What added interest and sacredness it should give to our every action and purpose in our daily life, for us to consider that we are God's children, doing all with Him and for Him, thus making every little thing a great thing, and looking at the greatest thing as only of the same priceless importance as the least!—"Sunday School Times."

Some Views on Present Topics.

PASTORAL NEED.

BY MARY E. MIARS.

An old Greek legend says that, long after the battle of Marathon, Greeks from the surrounding hills, looking down upon the field of battle, could again see the defeat of the Persian host, and in hearing the clash of arms and cries of the vanquished could keep alive in their own purposes the spirit of the invisible victors.

To-day, if we could keep before us a picture of the hard-won victories of our simple and virtuous ancestors, if we could again become imbued with the spirit with which they wrought and triumphed, we might better guide our fellows toward the love of God and man. But the strong individual life of the past is merged into community life of the present, the interests, hopes, fears and ambitions of one are multiplied in the many, with little variations. Life opens up in departments and becomes tense or lax as the feverish spirit gains or loses. Could the Church of Christ escape this changed condition and men preserve their individual hold upon the truth of the Gospel, the question of ways, means and methods of reaching and aiding the cause in the world need not have been asked.

But the interests of humanity have become numerous and common, and the multitude is swayed by the superficial thought of the moment—points of resemblance, not points of difference, describe the relations of individuals to-day, and the serious subjective decisions of our forefathers are lost in the complex and bewildering claims of daily living. Spiritual, intellectual and physical force is diffused through so many channels, we are weak and unsteady in our conduct. The grand purpose of what we are working for, the wise and beneficent plan of our God for His children, is lost from our view in what we are working at.

We have in operation to-day methods capable of reaching and aiding the multitude. The Sabbath School, with its cradle roll, home department and graded classes, the Christian Endeavor, with its various departments, are effective in so far as they are sensitized with the Spirit of Christ. But they must be vitalized by greater consecration and concentration. The picture of the Roman citizen consecrating his wealth and learning and concentrating his powers to the service of the Nazarene must be our daily contemplation, and we must contemplate this so passionately that we shall radiate that passion upon those we are laboring to save.

There are the few in almost every congregation who make their contact with the world incidental to the master-purpose. They may enter into united prayer and open ways for personal work among the outside classes. Where this is persistently followed, results will follow, for we have not outlived the day of the power of the Holy Spirit. However widening our thought or far-reaching our vision, we must hold fast to our original center; and find, as Paul found, the solution to the problems confronting us in the consciousness of God.

Lynn, Mass.

Temperance Department.

Issued Monthly, under the care of the

TEMPERANCE ASSOCIATION OF FRIENDS, OF PHILADELPHIA
YEARLY MEETING.

All communications should be addressed to

ANNA EASTBURN WILLITS, Editor, 343 E. Main Street, Haddonfield, N. J.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF PHILADELPHIA YEARLY MEETING.

The Executive Committee is glad to report that its meetings have been well attended during the past year, there having been an average attendance of 21 members, and there seems to have been a correspondingly active interest in the work.

John B. Garrett very kindly invited the Executive Committee to meet at his home at Rosemont in the Fifth month, and, after the business meeting was held, the committee enjoyed a supper and later a social time on the lawn.

To accommodate the Foreign Missionary Association the Executive Committee consented to hold the annual meeting of the Temperance Association Third-day instead of Fourth-day evening during yearly meeting week. This arrangement is expected to be permanent.

POLITICS AND LEGISLATION.

The work of this committee has been mostly by individuals and not as a committee. There has been much effective work done, but it was not under the supervision of the Executive Committee, and so is not reported to it.

COFFEE STANDS.

For six months of the year our coffee stand by the Reading market, on Front Street, above Calowhill, does a good business, by supplying coffee and lunch to truckmen and hucksters. From the Eleventh month until trade in fresh vegetables brings the men again, there is not enough business at the stand to pay to keep it open. The men take the tracts which are kept on the end of the counter, or hung upon the door in plain sight.

About two months ago a strong desire was felt to help the men working on the subway on Market Street. Accordingly two visits were made to that neighborhood to see what could be done. Three hundred pages of temperance tracts in Italian were bought, and three hundred others which were thought especially suitable for colored people. On a third visit some earnest talks for temperance were had with two overseers, and with some of the men on the sidewalks who were not working. Six Portions of Scripture were given away. Some special advice was offered to two colored men who were selling coffee, sandwiches and pies. Further attention will be given to this matter, and if any Friend has some practical suggestions to offer, such will be gladly received.

LITERATURE COMMITTEE.

During the past year 22,809 pages of temperance literature, 928 papers, 147 Portions of Scripture and 2 Bibles have been given out in the factories, shipyards, slums and outlying districts of Philadelphia. The box at the Reading Terminal has usually been kept filled. Five hundred copies of the pamphlet, "Advice to Graduates," were sent to medical students. This pamphlet, which was written several years ago, it was thought best to have revised, so a committee of doctors was appointed, who have rewritten it, and there are now 4,000 copies ready for distribution.

Three thousand, four hundred and fifty copies of an address to Friends, on the subject of intoxicating drinks, prepared by the Meeting for Sufferings, accompanied by a personal letter from the Executive Committee, calling especial attention to the pamphlet, were sent to all old Westtown scholars.

As several hundred copies of these letters were asked for, for further distribution with these pamphlets, the wording of the letter was changed so that it would be suitable for general use, and one thousand extra copies were printed.

The two pages a month on temperance in THE AMERICAN FRIEND, edited by Anna Eastburn Willits, and the one page a month in "The Friend," edited by Benjamin F. Whitson, have been faithfully kept up during the year, and we hope in this way to keep the subject of temperance before Friends generally. One issue of "The Friend," in which the temperance items appear, was sent to 700 people who do not regularly subscribe for the paper.

Elizabeth T. Colsher was engaged to distribute tracts last summer and winter and is to continue her work this summer. Since distributing tracts for this association she has started a mission and has encouraged men, women and children to go to church and Sunday School who had not previously attended either.

COMMITTEE ON MEETINGS.

This committee has tried to arrange for a series of meetings, and so far they have been held at Haddonfield, Lansdowne and Colwyn, addressed by Edwin P. Sellew, and one at Media addressed by Joshua L. Baily. These were well attended and very satisfactory.

Joshua L. Baily laid before the Executive Committee a concern to speak to Friends on the subject of temperance wherever way opens for it. The Executive Committee joined with him in his concern and hope to arrange for some meetings in the near future.

COMMITTEE ON SCIENTIFIC TEMPERANCE EDUCATION.

A committee of doctors was appointed to examine the temperance physiologies used in the public schools. As a result of their investigations they find that the temperance teaching and general physiological facts as presented in the more advanced text books appear to be accurate, duly proportioned and adapted to the pupils for whom they are intended. The elementary physiologies are not always so accurate, but each year we believe they are being improved. This committee recommends especially the Colton Physiologies, and three of the New Century Series, viz.: "Anatomy, Physiology and Hygiene," "Elementary Anatomy, Physiology and Hygiene," "Intermediate Physiology and Hygiene."

While we have investigated Scientific Temperance Instruction in our Public Schools we have not been unmindful of the schools of our own Society, and are gratified to report that the approved text books are mostly in use at Westtown, Select School and the Monthly Meeting Schools of our Yearly Meeting. We would encourage these schools to cultivate temperance sentiment through recitations and debates, as well as a wider knowledge of legislation and current events.

Ella B. Greene spent a month in the spring and two months in the fall visiting towns in Pennsylvania, principally in the coal regions, also some towns in New Jersey. She feels confident there is an increased interest in the subject of scientific temperance instruction in the schools. She met one superintendent who was a scholar when this study was first taught and was kept from drinking by what he learned at school, although his family were opposed to total abstinence.

Ella Greene has also spoken against the use of tobacco, and has noticed an improvement among the teachers. She attended the regular meeting of the Executive Committee in the Tenth month, and gave some of the details of her method of work.

MEDIA AUXILIARY.

Our Association has not been engaged in as many lines of work the past year as sometimes, yet we feel that our efforts in the temperance cause have been exerted in the right direction and have had a wholesome effect upon our town.

We have subscribed as usual for "The Temperance Banner" and "Water Lily" for a number of boys, thereby sending temperance literature into over one hundred homes. At a recent meeting of our Association we increased the appropriation for this work in order to send the papers to the girls as well as the boys.

Last autumn an application for a license for the sale of intoxicants was made by the proprietor of the Colonial Hotel in Media. Our Borough Charter prohibits the sale of such commodities within its limits, but the hotel being situated on the borough line, it was proposed to erect an addition over the line for the accommodation of the saloon. This place, though not literally within the town, would be on the main thoroughfare to and adjoining the railroad station, where hundreds of our citizens pass every day, and where many women and girls, arriving of necessity on evening trains, would be obliged to pass after dark.

It is needless to say that this attempt to evade the borough law early claimed the attention of our Association. As a Town Committee of representative citizens had been organized to prepare a remonstrance to be addressed to the court, our Executive Committee decided it would be better for us to aid them in every way possible rather than work independently. Consequently a number of our members took an active part in a large and enthusiastic town meeting, held for the purpose of arousing public sentiment against the granting of the license. They also worked untiringly in their efforts to secure signatures to the remonstrance, personally visiting, in its behalf, a number of persons prominent in public affairs.

Apart from this a committee of the Association prepared and had published in two of the local papers a letter addressed to the public, clearly stating the reasons of our Christian temperance community for opposing the license, and showing the evil effects such an institution would have upon our town.

We thankfully report that the license sought for was not granted by the court, and we feel that the temperance cause here has been greatly strengthened.

LYDIA G. ALLEX, Secretary.

The Auxiliary at West Chester has not met during the year, but we feel that the meetings held in past years have been very helpful and hope that way will open for more temperance work among our own Friends.

On behalf of the Executive Committee,

J. SNOWDON RHOADS, Chairman.

SARAH B. LEEDS, Secretary.

The annual meeting of the Temperance Association of Friends of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting was addressed by Ira S. Frame, Rebecca N. Taylor and Herman Newman. In earnest, forcible words, carrying conviction to listening hearts, the first speaker clearly presented the evil effects of tobacco. The second emphasized "no compromise." The third declared that State constitutional prohibition was the nearest approach to the ideal yet attained by the political reformer, but called attention to the fact that before this could ultimately succeed it must be supplemented with adequate methods to meet the social demands of human nature in a wholesome environment, especially in large cities. In this connection he spoke of the need in Philadelphia of more pleasant and proper places for young men to spend their evenings.

At the executive meeting held on the 25th J. Snowdon Rhoads and Sarah B. Leeds were re-elected president and secretary for the coming year. It was recommended to the Committee on Meetings to hold during the next winter a temperance meeting in each of the quarterly meetings of the Yearly Meeting. During the last month nearly 3,000 pages of literature have been distributed. Attention is being paid to the laborers on the Subway, Philadelphia. Temperance books will be placed in the mission schools under the care of Friends—a small traveling library. Other plans of work will be reported at our next monthly meeting, the last for three months.

At the Eleventh Annual Meeting of the National Retail Liquor Dealers' Association, held in the city of Pittsburg, Pa., Tenth month 13th to 16th, it was voted unanimously to raise the sum of $5,000,000 for "defensive purposes."

It was also voted to send ten picked men as lobbyists to Washington to prevent the passage of any restrictive measures, and to secure, if possible, the repeal of all laws that are obnoxious to the liquor traffic.

It was also decided to send a similar committee to every State capital for the same purpose.

Legal counsel is to assist the lobbyists.

GOOD WORD FROM MAINE.

Lillian M. N. Stevens, president of the National W. C. T. U., writes from Portland, Me., the following vigorous and encouraging letter, under date of Fourth month 6th:

"At the present time the prohibitory law is well enforced in fifteen of the sixteen counties of the State, and in the sixteenth county the conditions are much better than they would be under any form of license, and a strenuous effort is making for the turning out of the unfaithful officials. The tendency in Maine is not to change the law, but to change the officials when they fail to do their duty."

THE TAX ON DRINKS.

The United States received last year $131,000,000 of public revenue from the tax on spirits and $47,000,000 from the tax on beer, a total of $178,000,000.

The Russian Government estimates at $358,000,000 its revenue this year from the sale of liquor, which is a monopoly of the Imperial Government, except in Siberia, where on Seventh month 1st it will become a monopoly, too.

In Great Britain the revenue from excises, as the tax is called, averages $138,000,000 a year, not much less than the revenue of the United States Government from the same source, and there is, besides, the customs revenue from rum, brandy and other intoxicants, amounting to $25,000,000.—"New York Sun."

MEDICAL CRUSADE AGAINST INTEMPERANCE IN ENGLAND.

One of the most important movements looking to the well-being of the English has just been started by the medical men of Great Britain.

It is no less than to procure compulsory teaching of the nature and effects of alcohol, in conjunction with hygiene, in every primary school in the United Kingdom, by competent teachers, who themselves have been specially educated in these subjects. When a great scientific organization, with status and influence, like the British Medical Association, sets itself to wipe out intemperance, we may look for gratifying results. What better method of initiating this medical crusade could have been devised than that of instructing the rising generation on the physical and moral evils arising from the use of strong drink?

THE McCUMBER BILL.

It is hoped that the following may be pressed in the next Congress:

"Be it enacted, etc., That hereafter it shall be unlawful to sell intoxicating liquors in any building owned or used by the United States Government or in the grounds appertaining to the same. Section 2. That any violation of this act shall be deemed a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars."

TEMPERANCE WORKERS' CONVENTION.

At the Temperance Workers' Convention of Oklahoma and Indian Territories, held at Oklahoma City, Okla., Eleventh month 4th, 1903, the following resolutions were adopted:

"We declare our unswerving hostility to the saloon, as a menace to everything dear to the home, society, Church and State. We therefore demand,

"(1) The adoption of a constitution for the new State of Oklahoma, whether admitted alone or in conjunction with Indian Territory, containing an article forever prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage.

"(2) The further provision in said constitution of an article placing the sale of liquors for other than beverage purposes under control of the State.

"(3) A constitutional provision requiring the legislative Assembly to pass laws such as will thoroughly enforce such provision and such as will insure the speedy punishment and removal of all officials who negligently or wilfully fail to ferret out, discover and diligently prosecute all violators of such provision.

"(4) In event of the postponement of Statehood, we favor the petitioning of the next territorial legislature to enact a provision extending to the territorial electors the privilege offered by an effective local option law, and as the best means of accomplishing this, we recommend that the convention select a legislative committee of nine.

"(5) To conduct our campaign pending the conferring of Statehood upon the Territories, we recommend the selection of a permanent central committee consisting of one representative from each church conference, synod, convention, association, or other such general organizations as the W. C. T. U., the I. O. G. T., the Anti-Saloon League, and other temperance organizations territorially organized, and of the Civic League of Oklahoma, who shall arrange for such immediate steps as may be opportune, to promote, advance and accomplish our purposes, and we pledge ourselves to the prosecution of a campaign of active and persistent organization in the interest of bringing Oklahoma into the Union free-born and untainted by partnership with the legalized saloon."

No saloon for the city means good trade in the stores and thrift among the people.

The International Lesson.

SECOND QUARTER.

LESSON VII.

FIFTH MONTH 15, 1904.

THE PRODIGAL SON.

Luke 15: 11-24.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Come and let us return unto the Lord. Hos. 6: 1.

DAILY READINGS.

Second-day, Fifth mo. 9.—The prodigal son. Luke 15: 11-24.

Third-day, Fifth mo. 10.—Lost and found. Luke 15: 25-32.

Fourth-day, Fifth mo. 11.—The world unsatisfying. Eccl. 2: 1-11.

Fifth-day, Fifth mo. 12.—The way of transgressors. Prov. 13: 1-15.

Sixth-day, Fifth mo. 13.—Learning by adversity. 2 Chron. 33: 1-13.

Seventh-day, Fifth mo. 14.—Returning and weeping. Jer. 50: 1-7.

First-day, Fifth mo. 15.—Return. Hos. 14.

Time.—A.D. 30. Not long after last lesson.

Place.—In Perea, beyond the Jordan.

Place in Life of Christ.—Some weeks before the crucifixion.

The fifteenth chapter of the Gospel of Luke is remarkable for three parables which are found nowhere else. They are closely related, and should be read in connection with each other.

It is essential to the right understanding of a parable, at least for its primary meaning, that it should be clearly understood to whom it is addressed. From the first three verses of the chapter it will be seen that the three parables were addressed primarily to the Scribes and Pharisees, and were intended to set forth the grace of God. Of the parables that of the Prodigal Son is considered the pearl and crown of all parables. The name, which is so familiar, does not occur in the Bible. While this parable has been called the "Gospel within the Gospel" it does not cover the whole ground, but only a very important part of it. No parable has had more interpretations or had more read into it than the Prodigal Son. Note that the whole incident is an imaginary one. There are five facts clearly brought out: Sin (11-13); results of sin (14-16); repentance (17-20); divine forgiveness (20-24); Pharisaic reception of the repentant one (25-32).

11. "Two sons." The elder son may stand for the Pharisees, and the younger for the publicans and sinners, but it will not do to push the likeness too far.

12. "The portion which falleth to me." According to the Jewish customs this would be one-third, the eldest getting a double portion. (Deut. 21: 17.) His purpose was that he might be free from all restraint, and so do as he pleased.

13. "Not many days after." He realized that in his old home there were certain restraints. The freedom from restraint is what makes a residence abroad so attractive to many persons. "Riotous living." Living ruinously. He flung himself into all kinds of dissipation.

14. "And when he had spent all." This did not take long. The famine fell upon all and shut him out from the compassion of those who, under ordinary circumstances, might have taken pity on him.

15. "Joined himself." The word is a very strong one—he fastened himself. As if he would not be shaken off, saying, "You must give me something to do." "To feed swine." To the Jew this would give a picture of the greatest degradation, for to feed swine was considered the very lowest kind of work.

16. "And he would fain." So hungry was he that he longed to eat the food of the swine. "Husks." This word does not convey the right impression. The original means the fruit of the carob tree. It is a bean something like our locust bean, and was fed to horses, cattle, swine, and sometimes is eaten by men. He might have filled himself with these beans, but they would not have satisfied him. "No man gave unto him." Even this poor substitute for food was not given him. Or perhaps he filled himself with the swine's food and no one offered him anything better.

17. "And when he came to himself." Up to this time he had been, as it were, beside himself. Now he realized two things—his own wretched condition, brought on him by himself; and the conditions in his father's house. In the one, hunger; in the other, abundance.

18. "I will arise," etc. Like so many others who realize their condition, he began by making good resolutions. "As the departure from God is the essence of all sin, so the returning to God is the essence of all repentance." This is what the young man concluded to do. But it was not sufficient to return; there must be acknowledgment of error and sin. "Against heaven." He had sinned against righteousness and the moral law. "And in thy sight." There was the double sin; he had brought trouble and disgrace upon his father. Note that the son speaks of what he had done, not of the property he had lost, or of his own physical wants.

19. So great had been his transgression that he felt that he was worthy only of the lowest place, and would ask only for that if thereby he could be in his father's house.

20. "And he arose and came." All that he said might have been said through remorse, and he might have stayed where he was despite his good resolutions, and the words which he thought he would say. The all-important thing is that he did what he thought of doing; sorrow, good resolutions, "coming to one's self," are very important as far as they go, but doing is the essential thing. True repentance means turning one's back on the sin. "To his father." Rather, "towards," in the direction of his father. Note that his father seems to have been on the lookout for his son, and came to him, and his heart was full of compassion.

21. The son repeats what he thought of saying, but leaves off the servant part, seeing it would hardly do after the reception he had received. He simply states his unworthiness.

22-24. These verses describe such a reception as would be given the most honored guests, and show the thoroughness of the father's forgiveness and his great joy at the return of the lost son. Note how everything is in the strongest contrast with the condition of the son in the far country.

Christian Endeavor

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Lindley D. Clark, 1429 New York Avenue, Washington, D.C.]

TOPIC FOR FIFTH MONTH FIFTEENTH.

WHAT JOSEPH AND BENJAMIN TEACH ABOUT BROTHERLY CARE.

Gen. 43: 29-31, 34; 45: 14-22.

(Union meeting with the Juniors.)

Second-day, Fifth mo. 9.—Moses and Aaron. Ex. 4: 27-31.

Third-day, Fifth mo. 10.—Esau and Jacob. Gen. 27: 34-45.

Fourth-day, Fifth mo. 11.—John and James. Matt. 4: 21, 22.

Fifth-day, Fifth mo. 12.—Philip and Nathanael. John 1: 43-51.

Sixth-day, Fifth mo. 13.—Andrew and Peter. John 1: 40-42.

Seventh-day, Fifth mo. 14.—Christ's brethren. Matt. 12: 46-50.

When Joseph could receive his brothers with tenderness and forgiveness, he showed how much better a recompense could be given for their cruelty than to "pay them back in their own coin." The story is one of the most beautiful in literature, and we do not wonder that "Joseph could not refrain himself" after Judah's plea in behalf of the grayhaired father and the lad so reluctantly parted with. Who can say how far Judah's brotherliness and filial regard went toward opening the way for the manifestation of Joseph's love—or even toward developing his purpose of kindness to those whose treachery he knew?

The greatness of Joseph as we know him to-day does not consist in the fact that he rose to be viceroy of Egypt and master of a nation's wealth; for Egypt is in the sands, and with her fallen greatness is buried that of princes and mighty men whose names are but vague remembrances; but Joseph we know as one who ruled his own spirit and conquered with love the suspicion and distrust of those who had done him a great wrong—so great that they could hardly believe that he would not take revenge for it. His conquest was the only final one—to destroy an enemy by making him a friend.

Every Endeavorer aspires to a supremacy, for that is the spirit of Endeavor—to become great, to achieve, to overcome, but not by a strength that overthrows but that builds up; and if we read the lesson of Joseph aright, it is also the lesson of our pattern, Jesus Christ, who came not to be ministered unto, but to minister.

To the little brother set in the household with us we owe the intimate, daily duty of brotherliness, sometimes forgotten, perhaps, because of its very nearness to us; sometimes ignored in the feeling of superior strength or knowledge that comes frequently in the swift and undigested acquisitions of youth, forgetting that these ought to be used for others' sakes; but when we think rightly of home and kindred and neighborhood ties, no "use and wont" and no overweening pride will make them seem to us other than as they are—among the most precious of God's gifts to us.

Christ came to show us the way to God the Father, and in that fatherhood He makes us know the brotherhood of all men. Near and far, "all ye are brethren, and whosoever does the will of the Father is to Christ brother and sister and mother. The Bible is the book of brotherliness.

Missionary Department.

[Communications for this department should be addressed to Herman Newman, 718 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.]

FRIENDS' AFRICA INDUSTRIAL MISSION.

Any one desiring recent information regarding the Friends' Africa Industrial Mission may obtain it by sending for the pamphlet of 1904, just issued. It contains extracts from the late annual report of the mission and letters of the missionaries, a plan of the station, photographs of the missionaries, and pictures showing various phases of the work. There are also on hand some pamphlets of 1903 which will be furnished upon request.

Please address the secretary of the board,

EMMA B. MALONE,
702 East Prospect St., Cleveland, Ohio.

FRIENDS IN MEXICO.

The annual meeting of Friends was held at C. Victoria, Tamaulipas, Mexico, Third month 31st to Fourth month 3d. It was a season of spiritual uplift and encouragement to all those who attended. It is only to be regretted that the attendance was small. The work was hindered in a large part of our field by the yellow fever this past year, but it is a remarkable fact that very few of our members died of the plague. The meeting at Guemez proposes to build a meeting house, and fifty-seven dollars was raised in the face of the meeting for this purpose. Probably the most far-reaching act of the meeting was the formation of a Home Mission Board. This Board has already met and organized for work, selected a field and worker, and taken steps towards the raising of funds for his support. On last Sabbath five young ladies from Penn Institute made their public profession of faith, and were received into membership. All of them have been under Christian training in the school for one or more years.

W. IRVING KELSEY.

ALASKA CHRISTIANS.

Kotzebue, Alaska, Second mo. 1st, 1904.

The Master's work in this white field of silence goes on successfully. We do not add much to our numbers these winter days, for nearly all natives within a radius of a hundred miles are Christians and Friends, our membership at present being 472, but there is always work to do, and much of it, too, in building up and establishing in the faith those who have been converted to Christ, for of course temptation comes to the Esquimo as it does to his white brother.

Yet many times each day are our hearts gladdened by many evidences of strength of spiritual character among them. Apropos to this, five years ago a native girl of this place was taken to Nome by one of the white miners, who has since lived with her, treating her with unusual generosity and gentleness, but recently he brought her back here to her home, and she was converted at one of the mission meetings, and refused to live longer with him unwed. He left for some time and she remained with her relatives, who are about the poorest natives here, having very little to eat, but she remained true to her Christ, and a few days since the white man returned here and was glad to bring her to the mission and have a Christian marriage ceremony performed.

There is no whiskey or tobacco sold here, and it would be a drug in the market, for this is one place in the world that a man can walk about for days at a time and not have his sense of smell offended by the odor of the filthy weed; and so far as whiskey is concerned, I haven't in two years past detected the odor of it on the breath of an Esquimo. Very lately some of our people were at a mining village to the southward of us, and a miner offered a bottle of liquor to them, one of our natives taking same and promptly breaking it over a stone.

So far we have had a very pleasant winter so far as Arctic winters go, our coldest day registering 50 degrees below zero. We have not had much snow, or many windy days, and on the whole are "wintering" very satisfactorily. A few white men have been more or less severely frozen, resulting in some cases in loss of nose or limb; but we have so far heard of neither native nor white being frozen to death in this neighborhood. The winter has been so mild that we are looking for an early "spring," and hope to see vessels from the southward early in Seventh month, when we shall probably have another influx of white miners to this country, as gold has been discovered in a stream some two hundred miles back of us, but which they can best reach by passing here. Strangely enough, our greatest trouble comes from the presence of the white miner. Concerning this, permit me to quote a letter recently received from Alfred S. Moore (a Pennsylvanian), Judge of the United States District Court at Nome: "I am a friend of this quiet, kindly, docile people, and believe that it would be a lasting disgrace to the United States Government if it should permit them to be swept from the face of the earth by reason of contact with their superior in intelligence, but oftentimes inferior in morals—the white man." We pray that that day may never come.

Faithfully in His service,

DANA THOMAS.

Correspondence.

Guilford College, N. C., Fourth month 20th, 1904.

TO THE AMERICAN FRIEND:

Etta Johnston gave a missionary lecture, with views of the Holy Land and of Jerusalem, at Guilford College, on the 16th. It was arranged beforehand that such collections as were taken at this entertainment should go to the Harriet Green Memorial Fund. As the students of Guilford College had not been appealed to to make any contribution to this fund, this gave them an opportunity. The senior class, as a class, made a subscription of $50.00, and the total subscriptions amounted to $105.80.

J. Elwood Cox, of High Point, has recently received from Baltimore Friends $105.00 for this fund. Thus within the last two weeks $210.00 have been contributed for this purpose. This brings the total subscriptions up to about $7,000.

L. L. HOBBS.

Dear Friends: I have a large surplus of seed of the most delicious, early, hardy and productive melon I have grown in over fifty years' experience, and would willingly send a few to every reader of THE AMERICAN FRIEND by mail, stamps for return postage not refused, but not required to get the seed.

Address, ALEX. M. PURDY,

Palmyra, N. Y.

TO THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

As it has been made necessary for me to withdraw from the work of the Friends' Africa Industrial Mission, I desire to let the fact be known to Friends in this way, in order that funds may not be sent to me for that work as heretofore.

I desire, also, to thank the Friends who by word and act have given me encouragement, and have thus made my work in the past so pleasant.

I hope to return to Africa as soon as arrangements can be made to that end.

WILLIS R. HOTCHKISS.

Cleveland, Ohio.

TO THE AMERICAN FRIEND:

We should certainly embrace all favorable opportunities to advance the cause of peace on earth, and it appears especially appropriate for Friends throughout the world in every community in some convenient and proper way to hold suitable commemorative anniversary services on the 18th of Fifth month, or as near that date as may be most satisfactory to all.

The establishment of the Hague Court is possibly the greatest moral achievement of modern times, and is surely a great step toward the complete adoption of the principle of peace and arbitration for which this church has always been an advocate.

C. F. MORRIS.

Rockville, Ind.

Things of Interest Among Ourselves.

We are just in receipt of an encouraging report from the Ottawa Mission, I. T., where William and Lucinda George are working; also from Miami, where Jeremiah Hubbard is located.

Israel and Catharine H. Osborn, of Alton, Kansas, were unable to engage in evangelistic work the past winter on account of illness, but they are much improved and hope to be in the field soon.

Within the month ending Third mo. 6th, six persons, four of whom are young men, confessed Christ publicly and entered the class of candidates for church membership with Friends, at Gibara, Cuba.

Walter J. Aldrich, who is engaged in pastoral work at Collins, N. Y., very acceptably attended Farmington Quarterly Meeting on the 16th ult., and remained at Farmington Meeting over First-day.

Eleanor Wood, formerly of Chicago, daughter of S. Adelbert Wood, is spending a very profitable winter in England. She is especially devoting herself to social problems, and she is studying the extensive social work carried on by English Friends.

Juan Francisco Galvez, our native Cuban preacher, lately spent about two weeks each in Gibara and Holguin, Cuba, preaching the Gospel in the power of the Lord and visiting over a hundred homes with a message of love in the Lord. Special blessing was felt to attend his labors.

During the absence of Sylvester and May Jones and Dr. Pretlow at the conference in Holguin, the native members of Gibara Meeting held the regular midweek service in the power of the Spirit, one giving a Bible lesson and the others taking part in prayer and testimony. One young man professed conversion in the meeting.

The Senate bill previously referred to in these columns, legalizing marriages solemnized according to the order of Friends in the District of Columbia, was passed by the House on the 16th of Fourth month and has received the President's approval. Another matter of interest to Friends in Washington, and elsewhere as well, is the action of Congress in taking the square in which the newly-completed meeting house stands for the site of an office building for the Senate. It is not anticipated that this will entail loss, but possibly some inconvenience, as desirable locations are not easily available within the limits of expense that Friends feel they should observe.

Ellison R. Purdy, of Oskaloosa, Iowa, has been making a visit in the East, where most of his years of service have been passed. He spent two First-days with the Friends in Portland, Maine, where his ministry was greatly appreciated, and he addressed the Portland Y. M. C. A. on both these days. He found the Portland Friends' Meeting in good condition.

Over thirty children and young people, members of the Christian Endeavor Society and Sabbath School of the Friends' Meeting in Gibara, Cuba, rendered an interesting and spiritual program on the afternoon of Easter Day. For some of these it was a distinct step in advance in their faith to take part publicly as believers in the Protestant faith before the large audience assembled to hear them.

Cleo Monthly Meeting, held at Cleo, Okla., the 9th ult., was a time of great rejoicing. Thirty-two were received into membership by request, two by certificate and one by letter. This was part of the result of a revival held at the Glade school house, three miles east of Cleo, in which there were over forty conversions and renewals. These services were union meetings, conducted by Joseph Winslow, of Springdale Quarterly Meeting, Kansas, and the local Methodist minister.

Thomas C. Hodgkin, with minute signed by clerk of Smithfield Monthly and endorsed by Short Creek Quarterly Meeting, O., acceptably held fifteen services at Bridgeport, Ind., from Third mo. 15th to 25th. The Bible truth was presented in clearness and power, and a number received a baptism of the Holy Ghost. Some accessions to the meeting followed. The meeting was favored by services conducted by Lewis E. Stout in First mo., after which six united with Friends. The meetings for worship are increasing in interest and attendance.

Ellen M. Jewell, whose obituary appears in this issue, was a birthright member of Friends and was greatly interested in her work. In 1895 she married Charles M. Jones and with him immediately sailed for Palestine, where they took up the work as superintendents of Friends' Training School for Boys at Ramallah. In less than a year Charles M. Jones was taken sick and died at his post of duty, and she soon after returned to her native land. In 1901 she married Dr. Jewell, of South Portland, Maine. Living somewhat remote from a Friends' meeting she soon became interested in a church of another denomination, and was an active worker in it up to the time of her death.

Here is an interesting case of a woman minister among the Congregationalists, of whom there are many. We extract from a personal letter from Montana:

"Circumstances led me to Montana over twenty years ago, and wanting a church home I joined the Congregationalists by letter from the Friends of Salem Quarterly Meeting about twelve years ago. Nearly eight years ago I was ordained as a minister in this society, without ever having received the rite of water baptism, and now, as a widow, I am pastor over a thriving little church in this place. Still I feel that at heart I am a Friend, and I find both help and enjoyment in THE AMERICAN FRIEND."

Friends' missionaries in Cuba have been greatly encouraged and strengthened in spirit by their conference held the second week in Fourth month in Holguin. Twelve of the fifteen missionaries located at four stations in the eastern part of the island were in attendance. The following words from two letters express the feeling in which all write of it: "I cannot tell thee how I enjoyed the conference. I think I never felt the presence and power of the Holy Spirit as I did during the sessions. We surely lived on the mountain top. I trust all of us are better fitted to go on with our work. I know for myself that I shall be stronger in every way for the work." "The conference was a time of rich blessing. I feel better prepared for the work in this, our dear Cuba. The Lord has wonderfully blest us. Praise His name."

The following from the "Friends' Homiletic Journal," concerning the work at North End Mission, Wichita, Kansas, is encouraging: "Although the new meeting house was not completely finished, it was so nearly so that the opening for services took place Fourth month 10th, at 3 o'clock. President Stanley preached the first sermon to a crowded house and was ably assisted by A. A. Parker, of the St. Paul M. E. Church, who has hearty sympathy for the work in this needy field. Nathan Frame, the veteran minister and worker in the Friends' Church, spoke words of encouragement and approval. After the services a photographer took a picture of the new meeting house and the congregation, the proceeds from the sale of which are to be used in the purchasing of new seats for the Mission. The meeting in the evening was conducted by Clarkson Henshaw, Father Neal and Alvin George, the pastor, and was a beautiful consummation of the memorable day, even to the salvation of souls 'and a hungering and thirsting after righteousness.' God has wonderfully blessed North End Mission and greater results are looked for."

The following communication from Boise City, Idaho, reveals new possibilities for Friends in a new field: "The meeting is prospering, and the outlook is very encouraging. We have received about forty new members in the last two months. There is a deep spiritual power manifest. The prayer meetings are attended by all the members in reach, some coming three and four miles. John F. Hanson, of Oskaloosa, Iowa, is now with us holding some special meetings. Rosa E. Virtue has the work in charge at present. All the meetings that have been held in the different neighborhoods have been greatly blessed. Many have been converted. Anna Z. Strange held a two weeks' meeting eight miles from Boise with good results. The interest grew all the time. This field is white to harvest and the laborers are few.

"We have a beautiful valley. The fruit trees are all in bloom, gardens growing, cattle grazing in the green meadows. We have a very mild climate. The coldest this winter was 14 degrees above zero. Any Friends wishing to come West we will give a warm welcome to our beautiful valley. Any one wishing further information address Anna Z. Strange."

Thirty-five Christian Endeavorers of the meeting at Bridgeport, Ind., were entertained at the home of L. M. and Abbie Miars, on the evening of the 20th ult. It was the occasion of a literary social. The question, "Resolved, That the Lookout Committee is the most important committee of the C. E. Society," was discussed by ten speakers, the affirmative side being defended by members of the Lookout Committee, while members of the other committees spoke for the negative. The discussion was interesting, and many points of information were brought out on both sides. Deeper interest in the work of the Society was developed. Light refreshments were served. The Missionary Committee has developed a plan for a thorough study of missions by the young people. A special outline is followed and a public meeting before the Society is held once a month, in which the points learned in study are presented to the general public. This plan has been applied first to Africa, and the first meeting has been held. General interest is already aroused by this plan.

Farmington Quarterly Meeting, New York, was held at Farmington the 16th ult. Friends were much favored with the presence of J. Lindley Spicer and Elizabeth G. Underhill. Ministry of these friends was to edification. At the "Christian Endeavor Union" J. Lindley Spicer addressed the meeting on evangelistic lines, and on Fourth-day evening he lectured on the "Quaker of the Olden Time." The necessity of the "Baptism by the Holy Spirit" was largely dwelt upon by Elizabeth G. Underhill, and many personal testimonies were given. Also a large number came forward near the close of both meetings and knelt in humble prayer and consecration. The Meeting of Ministry and Oversight was largely devoted to personal experiences. Elizabeth G. Underhill and J. L. Spicer remained in Farmington over First-day, conducting special services. These Friends attended Elba Monthly Meeting, held at Batavia, after which Elizabeth G. Underhill went to Elba for special meetings, and J. Lindley Spicer remained at Batavia for one week, engaging in religious work. His visit was one of great encouragement and blessing. He entered into the needs as well as the joys of the young people, and was very helpful to all. After completing his work at Batavia he joined the Friends in special meetings at Elba.

MARRIED.

RICHIE—WOOD.—Fourth month 27th, 1904, at the home of the bride's father, Dorchester, Mass., E. Roberts Richie to Anna Sweetser Wood, daughter of Thomas Wood. Their home will be in Moorestown, N. J.

SCATTERGOOD—EMLEN.—In the Meeting House, at Germantown, Pa., Fourth mo. 27th, 1904, Mary Cope Emlen, daughter of George W. and Eleanor Emlen, Germantown, and Alfred G. Scattergood, son of Thomas Scattergood, Philadelphia.

DIED.

JEWELL.—In her home, S. Portland, Me., Fourth month 16th, 1904, Ellen Maxfield Jewell, wife of Dr. Jewell, aged 51 years. She was a member of Friends and an active Christian worker.

Events and Comments.

Dispatches from Sofia announce the serious illness of the Sultan of Turkey. The correspondent says that the Sultan has refused to accept the services of European physicians.

Beekman Winthrop, who has been chosen to succeed Governor Hunt of Porto Rico, will make the third civil governor the island has had in five years. Counting the United States military governors, the island has had five or six in all since 1898.

The socialist labor, or labor socialist, party in the Australian commonwealth has assumed the responsibilities of government with a ministry composed, with one exception, of labor members. Their experience at the head of affairs will merit the attention of the outside world.

Russia has served notice on England that she proposes to be considered in connection with the disposition of Egyptian funds, despite France's withdrawal of her objections to their use by Great Britain, in accordance with the Anglo-French agreement. The attitude is based on the fact that she is one of the six Powers which originally guaranteed to make good the deficits of the Egyptian Administration. Though there is a surplus now instead of a deficit, Russia holds that she is as much entitled to be consulted as France.

NOT ON MEAT.

Man Couldn't Regain Strength Until He Changed to Grape-Nuts.

It's a common joke to say "He eats so much it makes him poor to carry it around" when speaking of some thin, scrawny fellow who eats as much as a horse, but it is frequently true if the food is not the kind the body calls for.

A person might eat a ton of improper food and never get an ounce of nourishment from it, but put them on a Grape-Nuts diet, and four teaspoonfuls of this food (which is all nourishment) quickly brings pounds in weight and a fortune in health and strength. This has been proved over and over.

A German woman of Chicago gives an instance in her own family. It's briefly told, but the truth is there: "My husband lost his left hand in an accident and lost a terrible amount of blood, kept getting weaker for five months and finally got a terrific cough. He would eat big meals of meat and potatoes to get well, but didn't get any good from them. Finally I persuaded him to try Grape-Nuts food, and from a skeleton of 83 pounds he soon regained his normal weight of 207 pounds, and is strong and well, and declares he wants no other food for the main part of his meals.

"As for myself, my flesh was flabby. I tired so easily and my memory was so poor I could keep nothing in my head, but after three months of the Grape-Nuts diet I gained 12 pounds, my flesh is hard and firm, I am stronger and my memory has improved wonderfully. I keep a candy store, but I sell Grape-Nuts, too, for I think it is the best thing to give the children." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Look for "The Road to Wellville" in each pkg.

The Louisiana Purchase Exposition opened in St. Louis the 30th ult. Among the distinguished visitors were Secretary of War William H. Taft, who represents the President, and General A. R. Chaffee. The committee from the House of Representatives appointed to attend the opening exercises and many State Governors and their parties were also in attendance. There were in all about 250,000 visitors present.

It has been announced from an excellent Russian source that the Russian Government is about to moderate the anti-Jewish legislation. Minister of the Interior Plehve last autumn sent a circular to the provincial authorities inquiring about the situation and the causes of the distress and dissatisfaction of the Jewish population. The provincial authorities, with surprising unanimity, blamed the antiquated laws for the social and economic disorders which involved the whole country, and a commission was appointed immediately to elaborate milder legislation, and especially to improve the condition of the Jewish proletariat. The greatest change is likely to be a relaxation of the restrictions on residence.

Congress closed the 28th ult., being the shortest long session since 1860. Including the extra session of this Congress, there were introduced in the Senate 6,000 bills and in the House 16,000. The bulk of these were private bills, mainly to grant pensions or increase grants already made. A large proportion of this class of measures was given affirmative action. Several important measures of a public character were also passed and approved by the President, including the Panama Canal Government bill, reciprocity with Cuba and bills relating to the civil government of the Philippines and commerce between those islands and the United States. The Statehood bill was passed by the House, and remains for consideration by the Senate next winter. Bills intended to improve the currency reported by the Committee of the House, and a number of other public measures that were placed on the calendars, were given no attention, and no step was taken looking to making changes in the tariff schedules and readjusting duties.

There are six wars being carried on at the present time. The one which attracts the most attention is the one between Russia and Japan, but there are five other points which should not be forgotten. Far up on "the roof of the world" the British expedition of Colonel Younghusband is pressing on into Tibet towards Lhasa, sweeping the flint lock muskets and leather cannon of the Tibetans out of its path as though they were straws. The result is likely to be that Tibet will become another British dependency. Down on the hot coasts of Africa the British are having trouble at two points. Over on the East coast in Somaliland the Mad Mullah has again broken loose and is giving his British suzerain trouble, and over on the West coast in Nigeria a British punitive column has been defeated with heavy loss, and this means another column still more punitive. In Southwestern Africa the Germans are conducting a campaign against the restless and rebellious Hereros. Two officers and seven men were

IT IS A MATTER OF HEALTH

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

killed and fourteen men were wounded in a recent action, and this will stir the Germans up to severe measures. Finally our own government is still involved in war with the Moros in the Philippines, fierce southern tribes that Spain never subdued and that General Wood is now whipping into submission. Thus the world is still troubled with wars and rumors of wars, though these volcanic eruptions and rumblings are few and small compared with the vast spaces of peace in which great countries and continents repose.

"INDIANA YEARLY MEETING OF FRIENDS, 1844," is the title of a very instructive picture drawn by Marcus Mote. In the foreground is a group of the old-time Friends in their queer garb, while in the background stands the plain meeting-house, surrounded with trees and numerous vehicles. An excellent half-tone copy on enameled paper, 6x10 inches. Postpaid, 5c. each, 50 cents per dozen. THE AMERICAN FRIEND, 718 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK

Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter Street.

Telephones.

Debtors know how interest consumes them. Wise men know how interest works for them. One of the best illustrations of the latter is an investment policy in the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE

921-3-5 Chestnut Street, Phila.

NOTICE.

It may be of interest to Friends, especially to those reared in North Carolina, to know that THE FRIENDS' MESSENGER is a monthly religious newspaper, published in the interest of North Carolina Yearly Meeting. The subscription price is 25 cents per year. All business communications may be addressed to CLARA I. Cox, High Point, N. C.

THE FRIENDS' EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION will hold its fifth annual meeting at Friends' Select School, 140 North Sixteenth Street, Philadelphia, on Seventh-day, Fifth month 7th, 1904. The Association extends a general invitation to all persons interested in education.

Program. — Afternoon session, 4 o'clock:

1. Regular Business and Reports of Standing Committees.
2. Reports from Schools and Colleges Represented in the Association.
3. "The Summer Schools in 1904," J. Henry Bartlett.
4. The Value of Useful Arts and of Play as Out-of-school Occupation," Lemuel Whitaker, of the Northeast Manual Training School; Thomas K. Brown, of Westtown School.

Evening session, 7.30 o'clock:

"Tendencies in the Life and Work of the Modern School," Samuel T. Dutton, of the Teachers' College, New York.

A light supper will be served by

SOAKED IN COFFEE

Until too Stiff to Bend Over.

"When I drank coffee I often had sick headaches, nervousness and biliousness much of the time, but about two years ago I went to visit a friend and got in the habit of drinking Postum.

"I have never touched coffee since, and the result has been that I have been entirely cured of all my stomach and nervous trouble.

"My mother was just the same way. We all drink Postum now and have never had any other coffee in the house for two years, and we are all well.

"A neighbor of mine, a great coffee drinker, was troubled with pains in her side for years and was an invalid. She was not able to do her work and could not even mend clothes or do anything at all where she would have to bend forward. If she tried to do a little hard work she would get such pains that she would have to lie down for the rest of the day.

"I persuaded her at last to stop drinking coffee and try Postum Food Coffee, and she did so, and she has used Postum ever since. The result has been that she can now do her work, can sit for a whole day and mend and can sew on the machine, and she never feels the least bit of pain in her side; in fact, she has got well and it shows coffee was the cause of the whole trouble.

"I could also tell you about several other neighbors who have been cured by quitting coffee and using Postum in its place." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Look in each pkg. for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

Friends' Select School at 6 o'clock. Those expecting to take supper at the school will please notify WALTER H. WOOD, 140 North Sixteenth Street, Philadelphia, not later than Fifty-day, Fifth mo. 5th.

FRIENDS' LIBRARY,

142 North Sixteenth Street, Philadelphia.

Open on week-days from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., and from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m.

The following books have been placed in the library:

- Fry, S. M.—"Harriet Green," a sketch.
Hemenway, H. D.—"How to Make School Gardens."
Howard, Benjamin—"Prisoners of Russia."
Le Conte, Joseph—Autobiography.
London, Jack—"People of the Abyss."
McFarlane, J. H.—"Getting Acquainted with the Trees."
Nicoll, W. R.—"The Church's One Foundation."
Riis, J. A.—"Theodore Roosevelt, the Citizen."
Talbot, E. A.—"Samuel Chapman Armstrong, a Biographical Study."
Thwaites, R. G.—"How George Rogers Clark Won the Northwest."

A steel foundries plant to cost between $600,000 and $700,000 is soon to be erected in Chicago by Joseph E. Schwab, former president of the American Steel Foundries Company, who resigned the office the 16th. The plant will cover 50 acres, and it is the intention to secure a long option on 50 acres more, on which to make extensions to the plant when required. Plans have been prepared and the preliminary work is well in hand. The plant will give employment to from 1,500 to 2,000 men and the capacity will be from 3,000 to 3,500 steel castings a month.

There is no halting in department store development. Not only is John Wanamaker putting millions into a new home for his New York establishment, but contracts have just been awarded for a $5,000,000 store in Philadelphia, to be built on the site of his present place. The structural steel to be used will be furnished by the American Bridge Company for about $2,000,000. Work has been begun on the building, which is to be 12 stories above ground, with a basement and two sub-basements. It will be erected in sections. A concrete retaining wall is to be built around the entire building.

A minister or Sunday School teacher cannot ask himself a wiser question than what he must do to be of the utmost service to those for whom he labors. The proper answer to that question will do as much as anything to determine the methods of his work, and if he keep that question always before him he will find that his efforts are exerted in the right spirit.—"The Watchman."

A very able memorandum of eight pages octavo on the Russo-Japanese conflict was sent by the Berne International Peace Bureau to the powers, urging them to a joint mediation between the two powers, as provided for in The Hague Convention.—Advocate of Peace.

FRIENDS' SUMMER SCHOOL OF RELIGIOUS HISTORY IN 1904.

A second session of the Friends' Summer School of Religious History will be held at Haverford College from the afternoon of Sixth month 15th to Sixth month 25th, at noon, 1904. Courses of lectures will be given on the Life of Christ, on various aspects of truth as understood by Friends, on the application of Christianity to present-day problems, and on other topics.

Lectures will be given by George W. Knox, of New York; H. S. Nash, of Cambridge; George A. Coe, of Chicago; Catherine Albright, of England; Benjamin Trueblood, of Boston; Elbert Russell, of Indiana; T. Harvey Haines, of Ohio; Mary M. Hobbs, of North Carolina; Amelia M. Gummere, Alfred C. Garrett, Joseph Elkinton, Allen C. Thomas, Seth K. Gifford, George A. Barton, Rufus M. Jones and Isaac Sharpless, of Pennsylvania, and others to be announced later.

A series of conferences on topics of vital interest to Quakerism will be held. Daily Bible classes and excursions to points of historic interest will be a part of the program.

There will be no charge for tuition. Board will be furnished in the College Halls at one dollar a day. Application should be made to O. M. Chase, Haverford, Pa.

The tears of Christ are the pity of God. The gentleness of Christ is the long-suffering of God. The tenderness of Christ is the love of God. "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father."—A. Maclaren.

OLD POINT COMFORT, RICHMOND AND WASHINGTON.

Last Six-day Tour of the Season via Pennsylvania Railroad.

The last personally-conducted tour to Old Point Comfort, Richmond and Washington via the Pennsylvania Railroad for the present season will leave New York and Philadelphia on Saturday, May 7th.

Tickets, including transportation, meals en route in both directions, transfers of passengers and baggage, hotel accommodations at Old Point Comfort, Richmond and Washington and carriage ride about Richmond—in fact, every necessary expense for a period of six days—will be sold at a rate of $36.00 from New York, Brooklyn and Newark; $34.50 from Trenton; $33.00 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other stations.

OLD POINT COMFORT ONLY.

Tickets to Old Point Comfort only, including luncheon on going trip, one and three-fourths days' board at Chamberlin Hotel, and good to return direct by regular trains within six days, will be sold in connection with this tour at rate of $17.00 from New York, Brooklyn and Newark; $15.50 from Trenton; $14.50 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other points.

For itineraries and full information apply to ticket agents; Tourist Agent, 263 Fifth Avenue, New York; 4 Court Street, Brooklyn; 789 Broad Street, Newark, N. J., or Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

Y. F. A. Building,
140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a.
FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.
 Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote, 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p.m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cts. per night; $3 per week

Two occupants, 50 cts. each, per night.
 2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL
 Phone Spruce 33-55. Clerk.

Rush Orders Rushed

When you want a job of printing in a hurry send it to us. We make a specialty of putting through orders quickly. You'll get it when we promise.

THE LEEDS & BIDDLE CO., Inc.

MAKERS OF THE BETTER KIND OF PRINTING

Phones 1019-21 Market Street, Phila

FINANCIAL.

Extraordinary.

Never, in twenty-eight years, have we lent our name to any speculative or doubtful enterprise. We have had a deaf ear for all sorts of allurements from oil companies, but an accident has placed in our control the most valuable oil property in Kansas. This has the Seal of our approval because we know that it is genuine. ONLY ONE SUCH OPPORTUNITY COMES IN A LIFETIME.

If you want to know about it write us to-day.

PERKINS & CO., Lawrence, Kan.

6% to 7% Choice First Mortgage Loans, Seattle and vicinity. Local and N. Y. references. Established 1887. Correspondence Solicited. JAMES BOTHWELL, Seattle, Washington.

Acker has it—that English Blend Coffee.

SPECIALTIES IN SEPARATE WAISTS

A serviceable Mohair Waist? A trimly tailored blue, brown or gray Silk Blouse to wear with your new spring walking suit? A dainty, becoming white China Silk Waist? An elaborate Lace Waist to wear to teas and the theatre?

But no matter what the wanted sort of waist, count on finding it here. These money-saving opportunities to-day:

At $2.00 Black Mohair Waists—with full blouse, tucked to bust-line; neatly stitched collar and cuffs; worth $2.25.

At $3.00 White China Silk Waists—made with broad stitched tucks and trimmed with Cluny lace; tucked back and sleeves, pretty lace-trimmed cuffs and collar; worth $3.75.

At $3.75 White China Silk Blouses—elaborately trimmed with Valenciennes lace; tucked lace-trimmed sleeves, pretty lace collar and cuffs; worth $4.50.

At $5.00 Special Waists of All-over Lace—with Point Venise inserting, lace collar and cuffs; silk-lined.

At $5.00 Black Peau de Cygne Waists—with full blouse, box-plaited to yoke and tailor-stitched, plaited back, extra-full sleeves, stylish collar with tie.

STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER
 PHILADELPHIA

A Chance Courtship

is a story of an unconventional love match, well told and beautifully illustrated. The small picture above only suggests the real charm of these illustrations. As a bit of readable fiction the story is well worth writing for. It is contained in a handsomely bound book of 128 pages, a portion of which is devoted to the attractive mountain and lake resorts along the Lackawanna Railroad. It is a book you will like to see. It may be had by sending 10 cents in postage stamps to T. W. LEE, General Passenger Agent, Lackawanna Railroad, New York.

Mortgages Net 6% in North Dakota

THEY are the best, gilt-edged, rock-ribbed, guaranteed 6% investment in America. Safe as government bonds and pay better.

I have been selling these mortgages for 18 years, and have never had to foreclose, and never lost a cent of principal or interest for a single customer.

I personally know every farm covered by the mortgages, as well as the farmers giving them. I know them both to be right, or I have nothing to do with them. Their land is increasing in value every day, thus increasing the value of the security.

I collect both the interest and principal free, and remit in New York exchange, without the least trouble or bother of the customer.

I will be pleased to put you in the way of finding out all about me. Write me for further information.

WALTER L. WILLIAMSON

Investment Banker

LISBON, NORTH DAKOTA

AT THE SIGN OF THE ROCKING KEYS

You see them everywhere

NO OTHER PAINTS, STAINS, ENAMELS, VARNISHES

are "just as good" as "NICE" and if your dealer does not have them, don't accept a substitute, but send to us for illustrated catalogue, color cards and prices.

EUGENE E. NICE

Nos. 272-274 S. Second St.
 PHILADELPHIA

The American Friend

Vol. XI

FIFTH MONTH 12, 1904

No. 19

	PAGE
EDITORIALS.—What Not to Pray for.—A Single Church for Rural Dis- tricts	311-312
Baptism as Viewed by Friends	312
Earnest Workers' Anniversary	315
Benjamin Frankland	316
SOME VIEWS ON PRESENT TOPICS: Pastoral Work	316
Ellison R. Purdy
THE INTERNATIONAL LESSON	317
Lesson for Fifth month 22, 1904.
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR	318
Topic for Fifth month 22, 1904.
MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT	319
CORRESPONDENCE	319
THINGS OF INTEREST	320
DIED	320
EVENTS AND COMMENTS	321

I CANNOT. YET I CAN.

*I cannot. Yet I can,
For am not I a man?
What is a man but one
Through whom right can be done,
Chosen and willed to be
And brought forth royally?*

*I cannot. It may be
One path is closed to me.
Its closing opens more
Than I had seen before.
Why should I then lament
My way of first intent?*

*I cannot. I am blind.
Paths close before, behind:
On either side is night,
How know I which is right?
The winds and rain begin.
But is not God within?*

*I cannot. Yet I can.
This is the strength of man.
Balked hope is not defeat;
Retiring not retreat.
We find the higher way
And victory comes with day.*

RICHARD H. THOMAS.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.50 A YEAR ❁ ❁ ❁ PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
AMERICAN FRIEND PUBLISHING COMPANY, 718 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA

"My salary is $2500 per year. What would become of my family should I die suddenly?" Free booklet. No importunity.

PENN MUTUAL LIFE

921-3-5 Chestnut Street, Phila.

It takes many new beginnings to make a glorious ending.

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE.

Sifts the flour and mixes 10 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CYRUS CHAMBERS, Jr.) 52d & Media Sts., Philadelphia

WILLIAM S. YARNALL Manufacturing OPTICIAN

118 S. FIFTEENTH ST., PHILA.
4th Door Below Chestnut St.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

THE SAME POSTAGE BILL

(For Advertisers)

Covers the envelope slip, or folder, or booklet, that you send out with your letters.

Plenty of opportunity for good advertising right here. We'll help you to take advantage of it.

THE LEEDS & BIDDLE CO., Inc.

MAKERS OF THE BETTER KIND OF PRINTING

*Phones 1019-21 Market Street, Phila.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a.

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hôte, 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p.m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cts. per night; $3 per week

Two occupants, 50 cts. each, per night.

2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL

Phone Spruce 33-55. Clerk.

There is an attractiveness to a child, fresh from its bath, in clean, dainty clothes, that appeals to all and suggests an Ivory Soap cleanliness. Free from all injurious chemicals and made of vegetable oils, Ivory Soap will not injure the most delicate skin or fabric.

99⁴⁴/₁₀₀ Per Cent. Pure.

JOSEPH B. SCATTERGOOD
House and Sign Painter
313 South 5th St., Philadelphia

Barlow's Indigo Blue

Will not spot or streak clothes

In use for fifty years is proof that it is the best. All grocers sell it. Free samples mailed. Depot, No. 233 N. Second Street, Philadelphia.

Acker has them—those genuine Marshmallows.

HOOPING-COUGH AND CROUP.

Roche's Herbal Embrocation

The celebrated and effectual English Cure without internal medicine. Proprietors, W. EDWARDS & SON, Queen Victoria St., London, England. Wholesale of E. Fougere & Co., 50 North William Street, N. Y.

The American Friend

"Truth is the highest thing a man may keep."

"That they all may be one."

VOL. XI.

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTH MONTH 12, 1904.

No. 19.

WHAT NOT TO PRAY FOR.

PROBABLY every serious Christian has often felt his poverty of spirit as he bows before his Father in prayer. It is a sublime spectacle—a finite, needy mortal face to face with God, talking with Him. It is the highest activity of the soul. But what shall I say when I come before this Infinite Being? What shall I tell Him? What shall I ask for? There is nothing which so tests the spiritual quality of one's life. A person can get on pretty well with small spiritual attainments, so long as he only exhorts or testifies or preaches or gives addresses. But as soon as he begins to talk with God, we discover whether he is rich or poor in the things of the spirit. We shall now spy out the nakedness of his inward life if it exists, or we shall see the wideness of his spiritual reach. No easy flow of words, no glibness of tongue, will do here. The man who is really spiritual will show that he is acquainted with God, that he is at home in His presence. Doubtless we have all felt, as the great apostle did, that we hardly know what to pray for as we ought. It is only as a person enters more deeply into the life of the Spirit that he sees the true things to ask for, so that the increase in the power of prayer is a good test of spiritual growth. But are there not some things which we all ought to avoid praying for? First of all, of course, we ought to rise above selfish desires when we come before God. He who looks upon prayer as a means to the gratification of selfish desires—he who looks upon prayer as a short road to success—will never rise very high in the spiritual life. God becomes to him a means to some little narrow end of his own instead of being Himself the all-sufficing object of love and aspiration. This is too much like the poor idol-worshiper who beats his god when he fails to give him what he asks for!

We ought not to use prayer as a method of relieving us from our own duties and from a proper effort. No one should allow his prayers for the poor and the suffering to excuse him from his own responsibility toward them. He is, too, a poor citizen who prays for his country on election day and then goes off fishing or casts a thoughtless ballot for candidates who are pledged to the very opposite of what he prayed for!

Finally, we ought not to pray for things which dishonor God. Just here many of us fail. How often we hear the words, "O Lord, be kind and loving to us," or, "O Lord, meet with us to-day," or "Come into our hearts," or "Send thy spirit," and a whole series of expressions which imply that God is capricious or far-away or unloving. Such words show an ignorance of the revelation of God in Christ. To ask God to be loving is like asking that lead should be heavy! It is His nature to be loving. He always is. An earthly child who kept asking his human father to be good and kind and loving would be dishonoring his father—such words would grieve a father. Have I been so long time with you and you do not yet know my love? Then again there can be no need to ask God to come; to send His Spirit. Wherever any meet in His name He is there. Wherever any heart is open to the entrance of the Spirit He is there. We would never ask that the sunlight might be sent into our houses. It is the nature of sunlight to come in. The only thing which keeps it out is the closing of blinds and shutters. Fling them open and in it comes. So too God. He never stays out of a soul that makes a place for Him. To beg Him to be true to His own nature is to dishonor Him. It either means that we are ignorant of His nature, or that we are afraid to trust Him. The real trouble more often is that we pray without thinking of what our words imply—we are not putting our real meaning into our words. Such praying will not help us grow spiritually, for mere lip praying may easily become an empty form. The lesson we all need most to learn is how to make our prayers always voice the sincere purpose of our hearts.

A SINGLE CHURCH FOR RURAL DISTRICTS.*

Newell Dwight Hillis, of Brooklyn, has written the best article we have yet seen on the need for consolidating churches. It is by no means a new idea; it is already well under way in practice, and the time is not far distant when everybody will see the absurdity of having eight churches in a community of 1800 persons.

* "Consolidating the Churches," by Newell Dwight Hillis, in "Everybody's Magazine" for Fourth month.

There are few people now who know or care about many of the points of doctrine or of practice which were bitterly discussed by all ministers two hundred years ago. The Church of Jesus Christ has power, has right to exist, in so far as it succeeds in carrying out, and making real to men, the truths which Christ revealed. The great principles of Christianity which every township in America needs to have proclaimed and exhibited are not patented by any sect, and no denomination has an exclusive right to them. How ridiculous it would be for the community of 1800 persons to have eight different schools in which eight different theories of gravitation were taught, eight different ways of saying the multiplication table and eight methods of working out the problems of cube root!

Here in America we have gone to the wild absurdity of maintaining over 160 different religious sects. The economic waste is plain. Each sect has its own buildings. It must maintain its officers, its literature, its elaborate system. Other features are more serious than the economic. This spectacle of division has weakened the Church in the eyes of the world more than has any other thing. It has resulted in giving the unpopulous districts a lot of poor, little, half-supported churches, too weak and inefficient to command the respect and attention of the community.

How everything would change if all the religious forces in a neighborhood were massed. The social work of the Church could be organized so that it could really grapple with the actual needs. Instead of a lot of uninspiring Sunday Schools there would be one large school, making use of the most efficient teaching force in the neighborhood. There would, too, be power and enthusiasm in the larger group.

More and more the work of the Church is to be practical. The thought is turning away from old, dry questions of sectarian differences. Men are asking for proof that the Church is a divine institution. It must give the proof which Christ gave John's delegation—Go tell how the blind receive sight; the lame walk; the lepers are cleansed; the deaf hear; the dead are raised up; the poor have the Gospel preached unto them. That is the standing commission of the Church. Its business is with everything which is out of order, gone awry. It must carry life and healing and balm to the individual, to the home and to the civic organism. This can be done only when the followers of Christ work together and mass their forces. Sooner or later this fact will be as clear to everybody as it now is to a few.

But shall we surrender our peculiar mission, and be merged in a union of Christians who discard all that is precious to us? Such a course is neither necessary nor to be counseled. It is the mission of Quakerism to exhibit spiritual religion and to help spiritualize the world. All we ought to care for is to see the Church of Christ spiritualized. So far as other Christians are ready to recognize the presence of the Divine Spirit and to obey Him, we are ready to unite with them in efforts to minister to the spiritual needs of the world. We shall hold our own way alone, of course, if we are asked to join with others at the price of a surrender of any thing which is essential to spiritual religion. That we cannot do. Nor are we favorable to any "scheme" of church-merging. Whatever comes must come by gradual growth. We must everywhere seize every available opportunity for co-operating with other Christians in practical work, especially in rural communities, and we must prove our claim to extreme spirituality, not by our exclusiveness, but by our power to make religion count in real life.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

BAPTISM AS VIEWED BY FRIENDS.

BY ABIJAH J. WEAVER.

Mark 16: 16, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned." A. R. V.

When we come to consider the views of Friends on this subject we find that there has been an erroneous impression in regard to our attitude in the minds of many persons outside of our membership; and that is, that we are anti-Baptists, or opposed to water baptism, and fighting it. In fact, this idea has often found lodging within our membership, and good men and women have thought it their duty as Friends to antagonize the outward ordinances. We are pro-Baptists of the most pronounced sort; we believe in baptism, not simply as an outward form of receiving members into the Church, but as an absolute essential to salvation. You will notice that the text chosen so expresses it. It is the last great commission of Christ to His disciples, and the baptism referred to, therefore, must be the Christian baptism. So we understand that the Christian baptism is an absolute essential to salvation. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned," is a very positive statement, and certainly means that the baptism to which Christ has reference is an essential to salvation. We therefore conclude with Paul that there is a circumcision and baptism that is unto salvation, but that that baptism and circumcision are of the heart, and not merely an outward show in the flesh. "For we are the circumcision, who worship by the Spirit of God, and glory in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh."

If we turn to the best dictionary authorities for a definition of the word baptism, we will see that they give us no real help on the problem. They lay a foundation sufficiently broad for all the various shades of belief in regard to what the ordinance of baptism is, its mode of application, etc. We find all the following words given as included in the original meaning of the word baptism: "To merge into," "to plunge, to pour, immerse, sprinkle, dip, purify, cleanse, stain, tinge, wet, wash, heal or cleanse by healing." Thus authority can be found for not only all the various modes of baptism, but it may also mean anything from cleansing from stain, to re-staining again. If we undertake to solve the problem on this line we will speedily find ourselves involved in the thing against which the apostle wisely warns the young preacher Timotheus (2 Tim. 2: 14): "Charge them in the sight of the Lord, that they strive not about words to no profit, to the subverting of them that hear," and in fact I fear that the greater part of the difficulty has been caused in this way. We are always liable to this error when we approach a subject in the spirit of debate. We are inclined to go to the Word of God to prove our position, and by the warping of words, and the taking of texts away from their contexts, and placing them where they will be most effective in supporting our views, we weave a fabric that exactly suits our purpose, but which may not be in accord with the spirit of the teachings of God's Word. Let us see, then, if we cannot get at the spirit of the teachings of God's Word on this subject.

Now if we make enquiry as to the origin of water baptism among the Jews we will find that it is much older than the Christian era. Water baptism was one of the many Jewish ordinances by which proselytes were received into the faith. To this fact we have not only the testimony of the Jewish Talmud, but also such Hebrew scholars as Professor Delitzsch, Dean Stanley, Canon Westcott and many others of the most profound scholarship, as well as church historians. See Kimber's "Early Christian Church," page 226, or Neander's "Planting of Christianity," pages 66, 67, 68, 76.

This ordinance is also used in a great many places all through the Mosaic ritual, in the ordination and consecration of the priests. In their preparation for daily service, as well as in the preparation of all the holy vessels of the temple, and as Paul well says, "in divers washings" (Heb. 9: 10). Our Saviour also refers to the same customs in Mark 7: 4-9, when He speaks of the Pharisees cleansing the outside of the cup and the platter; with their inward parts full of extortion and wickedness. But in all of these places, as in almost all such cases, the word used by our translators is bathe, wash, cleanse, etc., instead of baptize, but in the margin of the American Revision you will find the word baptize, frequently given in the marginal reading.

Thus, when John the Baptist comes preaching his gospel of repentance, and baptizing with water, we find no Jew coming to him to ask him what this new ordinance is, or what it means, for they are perfectly familiar with it. From the Jewish standpoint, a Gentile was unclean, and not fit to associate with the chosen people of God until he had been washed, baptized, cleansed and received the marks of circumcision in the flesh. This submission to baptism was in the very nature of it, a confession of uncleanness on the part of the Gentile, and a need of purification before he could hope to stand on an equal footing with the people of God.

So John came preaching repentance, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand, and began to baptize the penitents as a token of their cleansing in preparation for the coming kingdom of God. Thus, he was using on the Jews the very means and signs that they had imposed on the Gentiles, and they so understood him. But, if we are going to bring this baptism into the Christian Church, it will be well to remember that it is a baptism unto repentance, and not a baptism unto life.

Then remember again when we consider Christ's actions in submitting to these rights and customs, that He lived all his life under the Mosaic law, subject to all its requirements, and died under the law, not having violated it. And, while the morning of the resurrection brought in a new hope, yet it was not until the day of Pentecost that the new dispensation—that of the Spirit—was ushered in. We will do well to remember, also, that nowhere in all Christ's work and teaching has He stopped to organize a Church in the sense that we mean when we speak of the Church. He has all the time busied Himself about great and fundamental principles of truth and life, leaving those principles to create their own organization as the time and need shall require it.

Nor does such a thing as organizing themselves into a church apart from Judaism enter the heads of His disciples at first. They had all along failed to understand the nature of His kingdom. To them it was to be an earthly kingdom; Christ was to be a king like David, only greater; He would throw off the despised Roman yoke and establish a Jewish kingdom that should stand forever. The crucifixion seemed to blight this hope for a time, but it sprang up again on the morning of the resurrection, and we hear Peter saying, "Wilt thou not at this time restore the kingdom?" In those last days that the Master was with them He taught them many things in regard to the spiritual nature of His kingdom, and then said, "I have many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now, howbeit when he the spirit of truth is come he shall guide you into all the truth" (John 16: 12, 13). But it was not until He did come that the real spiritual nature of the kingdom of Christ began to dawn upon them; but they did not even then think of separating themselves from the Jewish Church, but continued to attend all its services at the temple and synagogues just as before; for the promise was unto Abraham and his seed after him, so they continued to identify themselves with the Jewish Church until the persecution forced them out, and the growing bitterness at last results in the stoning of Stephen and the flight of Philip to Samaria, and here for the second time we have the gospel preached to the Gentiles, and with it the ordinance of water baptism imposed. I say the second time, for the audience at Pentecost was a mixed one, representing all nations, and they all heard in the tongue in which they were born. But remember they are Gentiles, and for that reason, and not because Christ had ever commanded water baptism, do Peter and Paul administer the water baptism. The promise had been made to Abraham and his seed after him, and a Gentile was not considered clean, hence was not worthy to associate with the sons of Abraham, much less inherit with them the promise that had so long been cherished as their richest possession; therefore, the first thing for a believing Gentile to do was to be adopted into the household of Abraham and made an heir according to the flesh, and then he might hope for the Christian baptism, which is distinctively the baptism of the Holy Spirit. So Philip takes the first steps toward making Jews of the Samaritans, and then in obedience to the leading of the Holy Spirit, hurries away to the south to meet the Ethiopian eunuch and explain the way of life to him. Here again the Jewish rite is administered to a Gentile, but when the brethren at Jerusalem had heard that the Samaritans had accepted Christ, they sent Peter and John to them, and when they came they found that notwithstanding the fact that they had received the Jewish ordinance of water baptism, yet not one of them had received the Christian baptism of the Holy Ghost, so they laid their hands upon them and prayed for them, and the Holy Ghost was given. But there was found among them one Simon, a sorcerer, who was found to be in the gall of bitterness, and having neither part nor lot with the people of God, notwithstanding the fact that he had received the Jewish ordinance.

Something like one year after this, Saul, the great leader of the persecution that has scattered a great many of the Christians among the Gentiles, is converted, and for several years the Christians have a respite. The organization in Jerusalem becomes more and more a Jewish Christian Church, so that after a period of eight or nine years after Christ had given his last great commission to them to "go ye therefore and teach all nations," they had not only failed to send out a single missionary (save only those that had been driven out), but they still held their Jewish ideas about Gentiles, and were positively opposed to mingling with them or receiving them at all, save as converts to Judaism. The proof of this is that when Cornelius, the Roman centurion, who, according to some authorities is the very one who commanded the guard that executed the Christ, desired to know more perfectly the teachings of their Christ, it became necessary for the Lord to reveal to Peter by a vision of clean and unclean beasts, that he must not call a Gentile whom God had cleansed unclean (Acts 10: 1-20).

But notwithstanding this vision and the positive command of God that he should go with the messengers of Cornelius, nothing doubting, Peter hesitated, and did not go until he had first gathered six Jews to go with him as witnesses, for he well knew that the church at Jerusalem would call him to account for having gone to the unclean Gentiles with the gospel. Having thus provided himself with the witnesses to prove that he went to the Gentiles under protest, and at the express command of God, Peter proceeds to the house of Cornelius the Roman, evidently intending to follow the usual order of baptizing with water to signify their adoption of Judaism, and then by prayer and the laying on of hands calling for the baptism of the Holy Spirit; but lo, no sooner had Peter explained the way of life and salvation by faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, than they accepted by faith, and the Holy Ghost came upon them with power. Notice the particular point in the discourse of Peter where this blessing came (Acts 10: 43), "To this gave all the prophets witness, that through His name whosoever believeth in Him shall receive remission of sins." No sooner had Peter made this statement than they accepted by faith, and the Holy Spirit did its work without the intervention of any Jewish ritual whatsoever, and Peter in astonishment asks of the strict Jews who had come with him, "Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we?" (Acts 10: 47). Or, in other words, who can refuse to admit them to the Jewish rites, seeing God has accepted them in Christ and given them the Christian baptism of the Holy Ghost, purifying their hearts?

A few days later, when Peter went up to Jerusalem, he finds just what he had anticipated; the council calls into question the propriety of his taking the gospel to unwashed and uncircumcised Gentiles, and we will find his defense recorded in the 11th chapter of Acts, in the first part of which he gives a rehearsal of the entire affair, and calls upon the six witnesses to corroborate his statements; then, in the closing statements, verses 15 and 16, he gives us a little revelation of what the Holy Spirit did for him that day; these verses read: "And as I began to speak the Holy Ghost fell on them, as on us at the beginning. Then remembered I the word of the Lord, how that he said, John indeed baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost." Here is a distinct confession that for the first time in his ministry Peter has revealed unto him a right understanding of what the Christian Baptism really was, and this revelation comes exactly in accord with Christ's statements of what the workings of the Holy Spirit should be; John 14: 26. "But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things." Against these evidences of the will of God, the most radical of the Judaizing brethren could argue nothing, so they exclaim in astonishment, "Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life" (Acts 11: 18).

(To be continued.)

EARNEST WORKERS' ANNIVERSARY.

About fifty members and friends of the Earnest Workers gathered on the stormy evening of Third month 14th, 1904, in the committee room of Twelfth Street Meeting House, to celebrate our twenty-first anniversary.

Our president read a Scripture selection, and then stated that we would dispense with the roll call and minutes. He also welcomed the visitors present, and read an article of the Constitution which describes our object. He then called for the report of the Nominating Committee, which was as follows:

President, J. Harvey Borton.

Vice-President, David R. Richie.

Secretary, Emily B. Stokes.

Treasurer, Henry Palmer, Jr.

The secretary then read, in place of an annual report, "A Brief Review of Our Origin and Growth," being a condensed history of our twenty-one years' work.

The annual report of the treasurer was then read. The auditors, Clarence Fawcett and Edwin Wright, reported that the accounts were correct.

The chairman of our Foreign Mission Committee being unavoidably absent, Herbert White, in her place, gave us "A Glimpse of Our Mission Station in Japan," which was an excellent account of the year's progress in Tsuchiura.

The last subject on the program was a report of "Our Free Kindergarten and Allied Interests," by Anna M. Shinn, who told us much of great interest concerning the year's growth in our six enterprises at Ninth and Spring Garden Streets.

The president spoke hopefully of the bright outlook for the Society, and invited remarks from our visitors.

Maria C. Scattergood expressed her special interest in the Flower Mission department, and suggested attaching Scripture text cards to the bouquets. She also offered to help start a fund for a boys' club gymnasium. Arthur Phillips said he had felt that the need of such an enterprise was very great. Anna M. Shinn stated that a gymnasium would necessitate a ground-floor room.

Asa Wing expressed his belief that our work was a help to ourselves as well as to others. He kindly offered to secure an addition to our library from the Friends' Book and Tract Association.

Joseph Calley quoted statistics which prove that kindergarten training is a great preventive of crime.

Isaac Sharpless said that a work like ours finds its reward not only in the diffusion of knowledge and the improvement of morals, but often brings out some one person who might otherwise have wasted his life, and this result is worthy of all the effort expended. Many a young person reaches a critical point in his life when he must make some great decision which concerns the issues of this life and the next. A little influence from some wise person may turn him to the right, so that his future is determined, and his life saved from shipwreck. Then, too, the reflex influence of such a result is worth much. The speaker referred also to the opposite dangers of too great religious activity, without proper direction and seriousness, and that of an easy, selfish life, denying the need for Christian work because it feels no direct call to any special work. The latter attitude he felt to be the more dangerous one. He commended our wise activity, showing real earnestness as well as the application of intelligence and common sense, which was needed to accomplish the best results. He believed we were making our work tell for the people for whom we work, for ourselves and for Friends.

Henry Hoxie felt there was a large opportunity for helpfulness before us, a niche in the work of Twelfth Street Meeting, for we might even reinforce the efforts of the overseers whose number is inadequate to reach all the sick and aged and children in need of Christian attention.

John Dillingham remarked that he was glad to see young people deserving the name of earnest by earnestly contending for the faith once given to the saints—that kind of faith which works by love, making new saints, and is given in proportion as we work it. Faith is dead without love. He said the altruism in which you earnestly work shows you that you have need of the Lord and He has need of you for supplying some things that He leaves open for you to supply. This meeting needs you and you need it. May you grow in grace as you "bear one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ." This Society should be a preparatory school for that proper shepherding of the flock which will follow when all the members of the meeting have some care one toward another and are watching over one another for good.

Walter Thompson expressed his feeling of encouragement in the presence and counsel of some of the leaders in the meeting.

David G. Alsop thought that part of our duty was to keep hopeful and not give way to discouragement, since we were abundantly able and ready to occupy the fields which are "white unto harvest." If we are discouraged when the moment comes to influence a soul for good the opportunity passes. If we use the anchor of prayer we will keep keyed up to the place where Christ would have us be.

Emma Shinn offered practical help in the finding and support of the room necessary for the suggested gymnasium. She agreed with the speaker, who advocated a greater concentration of activities, believing that as we fully occupied one field others would open before us.

The president closed the meeting by expressing his appreciation of the inspiration and encouragement these remarks had been to us all, and his belief that our prayers for the Society were being answered.

EMILY B. STOKES, Secretary.

The foundation of content must spring up in a man's own mind; and he who has so little knowledge of human nature as to seek happiness by changing anything but his own disposition, will waste his life in fruitless efforts and multiply the griefs which he proposes to remove.—Samuel Johnson.

BENJAMIN FRANKLAND.*

This servant of the Lord was born a Friend and was carefully brought up and taught in the Holy Scriptures, and early in life gave his heart to God. While employed in business in early life he taught a class in the Bethel, an interdenominational Sunday School in Cincinnati. After a few years he accepted a position as superintendent of the school and gave up his business, and entered with zeal on his new work, visiting the homes of the children and laboring for the salvation and religious training with such success that the school grew to large size, having several thousand scholars. He labored earnestly and soon became accustomed to public speaking, and developed into an able Gospel minister. Although his work was mostly outside our Society, he was in due time acknowledged as a minister, and became one of the ablest and most interesting of Friends' ministers.

After several years of successful work at the Bethel, where hundreds of souls were brought to Christ as a result of his labors, he accepted a position as superintendent of the Western Seamen's Friend Society. This transferred his labors to the large cities on the Great Lakes and involved much traveling from place to place. During several years he resided in Chicago and frequently attended Friends' Meeting, where he was always cordially welcomed, and his ministry was full of life and the Holy Spirit. But his work in the Seamen's Friend Society grew in volume and importance until he was rarely able to attend Friends' Meeting, and our Society lost to a great extent his valuable Gospel ministry. He was a thorough Friend, however, and held fully our views.

During the past few months he became very weak; not sick nor suffering. He continued his work, however, until unable to walk across the room and the pen fell from his hand from weakness. Gradually he seemed to forget all about the world and to be on a journey with the Saviour and was constantly speaking to Him, telling Him every trouble, and then they would sit down and rest for awhile and sup together and he would be so happy. He never spoke of death or darkness.

At the end, they seemed to have come to the end of the journey, he said, "Life is ended but thy grace is sufficient for us all;" drew a few short breaths and was gone. He did not seem to die at all, but just passed in his journey with the Saviour into another world, thus verifying the words of the Saviour, "I am the resurrection and the Life, whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall not die."

He left behind a wife, with whom he lived in loving union forty years, and four children, three daughters and one son, Benjamin Frankland, Jr. The following touching words were spoken at his funeral by a colored minister of the city:

My Dear Friends: It is with great sorrow in my heart that I rise on this occasion—namely, the death of our dear Brother Frankland—to say a few last words in honor of our beloved dead. There is no one present who feels more keenly the loss we have all sustained in the demise of our honored and distinguished brother than your humble speaker. It was my good fortune to meet him about three years ago, since which time I have been closely connected with him in the work that lay nearest his great soul, namely, the uplifting of fallen humanity. He was unselfish and self-sacrificing to a fault, broader than any creed, recognizing and adhering to the doctrine of the fatherhood of God and the universal brotherhood of man. Never will I forget my first meeting with him. He came to me. I did not go to him. I must confess that in this age of strife between nationality, creed and color, and race war and riot, it was somewhat of a surprise to me to see the door open and him advancing into my study. He introduced himself and explained his mission, namely, that he was hunting workers to assist in the uplifting of souls among the colored population of Cincinnati, especially along the River Front, where they had fallen very low. I was very much interested and entered into the work with him heart and soul. Never have I known such a man. He would stoop by the wayside and taking a little colored boy by the hand pick him out of the gutter and breathe words of love and comfort into his soul just the same as he did one of his own race and color. The loss of such a Friend at this period of our history, while we are passing through the most critical test seems irreparable; but we have the promise of God to provide, and yet I have been asking myself the question, "Who will take his place?" During the last days of his illness prayers went up from all of our churches that our dear Brother Frankland might be restored to us in health of body; but it was not to be, and to-day I come, bearing the tribute and sympathy of twenty thousand colored people of Cincinnati. If to any man the words of the eminent Apostle Paul are applicable they are to Benjamin Frankland: "He fought a good fight, he finished his course." In the days of American slavery the fugitive found in him a friend. He finished his course when there were no more fugitives to rescue from slavery of body, and up to the hour of his death he continued this blessed work by word, deed and prayer. May the grace of heaven rest upon his loving wife and fatherless children. May his mantle fall upon the son who survives him, and may he grow up to be as good a man as his father. "Who will take his place?"

Some Views on Present Topics.

PASTORAL WORK.

BY ELLISON R. PURDY.

It should not be forgotten that our meetings are composed of people, and we must consider pastoral work as it affects people. All efforts to maintain our principles, keep up our meetings or promulgate the Gospel which forgets this must fail. We have no principles, and no Gospel divorced from men and women.

* Died at Cincinnati, Fourth month 5th, 1904, Benjamin Frankland, a minister and member of Chicago Monthly Meeting, in the 72d year of his age.

Pastoral work should aim for immediate results. True church work does plant and water for the future, but when we excuse methods not adapted to the times by declaring that our work is for the future we plan for failure. Not so did George Fox or John Wesley. No organization or system can take the place of voluntary personal work. There must be a sense of the fact that I am "my brother's keeper," and inasmuch as the sentiment of a meeting is healthful will this conviction be prevalent, and spontaneous pastoral work be encouraged. If the sense of pastoral care be limited to one worker it is too narrow; if it stops with our pastoral committee, it is still too limited. Pastoral work must be done by those who have a special gift for it; it should also be done by all. Good work must be organized, and the organized work will not discourage, but encourage voluntary work. The personal workers' classes of Y. M. C. A.'s and colleges have lessons for our pastoral committees. Their plans are laid to strengthen the weak and to influence those not yet decided for Christ. Why should not the interests of each man, woman and child of a community be brought before a pastoral committee? It would be interesting to see the social work of a church taken up as earnestly as the "missionary work" of a political campaign, and withal in the spirit of true evangelism. In some cases Bible school classes of adults have done excellent work in the pastoral care of their members, and much has been accomplished within the small inner circles of various kinds. There is a demand in these days for the uniting of churches, so that they may be fewer and larger, and yet in our cities the smaller churches are often doing the better work, the social bonds are stronger, the workers produced for any general work larger in number, and more effective in work. This shows that it is easier to secure the best results in smaller groups, but when we come to apply this to sections within the Church, there is so much danger of forming cliques and parties that great effort must be put forth to bind all together.

In assigning pastoral work it is very important that the work to be done be given directly to the individual who is to do it. How many fine things have been buried in committees! Responsibility is often lost when given to four or five, which would be saved if committed to one.

Various classes for study can be organized, but doing something now is much more inspiring than studying about what has been done. We need not pity the young people of Fox's time because they had no early Friends to study, for they were making the history of early Friends, which, if more difficult, was also more interesting.

It is sometimes a good thing for the members of a meeting to eat together and visit together and get acquainted. No doubt Jesus will attend a rightly-conducted "church social." In addition to the many just charges against the attempt to "eat ourselves rich" and the various "church grafts," is one seldom mentioned, that the social gathering, itself a means of blessing, is diverted from its true purpose and brought into disrepute. In all these efforts there is danger, there is danger in doing anything, danger in our virtues. It is doubtful if the plan sometimes proposed of having salaried workers who are not preachers to do the pastoral work will prove satisfactory. At least it may be said that there is a demand for pastoral visiting by the one who is heard in public ministry; which must be considered.

All lines of pastoral work center in the public meeting. If the meeting is interesting, lively and spiritual, there the workers are inspired to personal and social effort, and there their work in the community is augmented. If the social pastoral work induces attendance at the meetings, in the live meeting the interest begun is carried forward. If the pastoral work produces a personal sense of the need of salvation or a desire for a deeper work of grace, the live meeting will bring this beginning to its fruition. The dull and lifeless meeting is a discouragement to social pastoral work and a hindrance to its success. Friends have been heard to say, "I could not conscientiously invite my neighbors to attend our meeting." On the other hand faithful pastoral work by minister and members contributes to the life and power of the meeting.

Oskaloosa, Iowa.

The International Lesson.

SECOND QUARTER.

LESSON VIII.

FIFTH MONTH 22, 1904.

JESUS TEACHES HUMILITY.

Mark 10: 35-45.

GOLDEN TEXT.—For even the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto but to minister.—Mark 10: 45.

DAILY READINGS.

Second-day, Fifth mo. 16.—Jesus teaches humility. Mark 10: 35-45.
Third-day, Fifth mo. 17.—Matthew's account. Matt. 20: 20-29.
Fourth-day, Fifth mo. 18.—Who is greatest? Luke 22: 24-30.
Fifth-day, Fifth mo. 19.—Lesson from a child. Matt. 18: 1-6.
Sixth-day, Fifth mo. 20.—Christ our example. Phil. 2: 1-8.
Seventh-day, Fifth mo. 21.—Humility enjoined. 1 Pet. 5: 5-7.
First-day, Fifth mo. 22.—Suffering for Christ. 2 Tim. 2: 8-14.

Time.—Two or three weeks before the crucifixion—in March, A.D. 30.

Place.—Somewhere in Perea, perhaps not far from the fords of the Jordan opposite Jericho.

Parallel Account.—Matthew 20: 20-28.

35. "James and John." In the parallel account in Matthew it is Salome, the mother of James and John, who makes the request. Probably the mother prompted them to make the request. Salome was probably the sister of Mary, the mother of our Lord, and so being his cousins they might well think that they were entitled to preference.

36. Literally, "What do you wish? What shall I do for you?"

37. "Grant," etc. These were the positions of highest honor, the right being the most so. Compare Ps. 110; 1; Mark 14: 62; Eph. 1: 20; Acts 5: 31;

Rom. 8: 34. "Glory." The glory of the Messiah when He comes into His kingdom.

38. "Ye know not what ye ask." Their ignorance was not so much regarding the greatness of the request as regarding the character of it. It showed a total misconception of the real kingdom of the Messiah. The matter was regulated not by appointment but by achievement. This is shown by the latter part of the verse. "Are ye able to drink the cup that I drink? or to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?" These are clearly figurative expressions, meaning, "Are you ready and able to go through the sacrifices and affliction which I go through with?" "Can you be immersed in that which has overwhelmed me?" They have looked at only the glory of the kingdom. Jesus points out the suffering which must precede.

39. "We are able." Probably this was the confidence of assurance based on ignorance; but it must not be forgotten that after the ascension James and John were among the bravest of the apostles, the former being the first of the twelve to suffer martyrdom. (Acts 12: 1, 2.) "Ye shall indeed drink of the cup," etc. This was fulfilled in after days.

40. "But to sit on my right hand or on my left hand is not mine to give." Honor in the heavenly kingdom is not a thing to be given or of arbitrary bestowal. Position is not a matter of personal preference, or of influence. Position in the heavenly kingdom "is for them for whom it is prepared." "Prepared" has nearly the meaning of "ordained." "Fitness and not influence decides the question."

41. "The indignation of the ten can hardly be wondered at. They showed, however, the same spirit which James and John had.

42. Christ now takes the opportunity to instruct them in what true humility and in what true greatness consists. "Accounted to rule." Apparently rule. "Exercise lordship." Better as in Revised Version: "Lord it over them." The idea is rather of a tyrannical government, such as was common at that time, and of which the Roman government was a good example. "Great ones." The rich and powerful. The essence of such government is a selfish despotism.

43. "But it is not so among you." Revised Version. The tense is present. This state of things, he says, does not obtain among you; you could not be my disciples if this was really the case among you. "But whosoever would become great." In answer to an unspoken question, such as, "Is there then no greatness in the Messiah's kingdom?" Christ goes on to say, Yes, there is a greatness to which all may aspire, and which all may reach, but it is the exact opposite of the greatness in the kingdoms of the world. Greatness here comes from service. "Minister." The Greek word is "diakonos" from which the word "deacon" is taken. Its first meaning is one who waits upon a table, or who serves—it has a very general meaning and indicates nothing in regard to the person served or waited upon. A "diakonos" might be a free man or a slave—the idea is simply that of service.

44. "And whosoever would be first among you shall be servant of all." Revised Version. In the previous verse the great were defined. Now we have the "first" described. The contrast with the ideas of worldly greatness is still more strongly brought out. To be "great" was the result of service; to be "first" requires "bond service," for the word translated servant in this verse means "slave," and never in the New Testament means anything else. Note, however, that the idea is not submission to the authority of others, but a complete effacement of self and self interests for the sake of the real interests and needs of others. Paul, thus, more than once, calls himself the "bond-servant of Jesus Christ." "Here is the parody of the kingdom of God. Instead of being lords, its great ones became servants, and its chiefs the bond-servants of all."

45. "For verily." "Even the Son of Man himself is not exempt from this rule. His kingship is also that of service." He serves men, and his life becomes the price by which men are freed from their bondage.

Christian Endeavor

TOPIC FOR FIFTH MONTH TWENTY-SECOND.

FALSE AND TRUE AMBITIONS.

Matt. 20: 20-28.

Second-day, Fifth mo. 16.—The Babel builders. Gen. 11: 1-9.

Third-day, Fifth mo. 17.—Abimelech rebuked. Judges 9: 1-21.

Fourth-day, Fifth mo. 18.—David's ambition. Ps. 131: 1-3.

Fifth-day, Fifth mo. 19.—Amaziah reproved. 2 Kings 14: 8-14.

Sixth-day, Fifth mo. 20.—The disciples corrected. Mark 9: 33-37.

Seventh-day, Fifth mo. 21.—The Pharisees condemned. Luke 20: 45-47.

The word ambition is one of those ill-starred terms which are in themselves capable of a meaning at least not objectionable, but which by usage and custom are condemned to serve for the most part to designate qualities for which we criticise rather than praise their possessors; yet a man devoid of ambition is not necessarily admirable; no negation assures that; neither is a degree of ambitiousness to be contemned. The word literally means a going about to secure votes, and is expressive of that inclination in man that seeks for the approval of his fellows and for their honorable esteem.

Ambition is like the condiments which give savor to the food and zest to the appetite—useful in right place and measure, but requiring to be kept within due bounds and proportions. So long as the main element in ambition is excellence in service and accomplishment for the sake of others, we may safely seek the pre-eminence toward which it strives; but the natural man neither appreciates nor chooses such ideals. John and James had been for months continually with Jesus, but they had ambitions quite impossible of attainment under His ordering of affairs.

When the Czar of Russia saw the engineer's sketch of a railroad route from his capital to Moscow, he criticised the detours made to avoid obstacles and to accommodate cities and towns lying somewhat to one side or the other. Laying a ruler on the map, he drew a straight line from St. Petersburg to Moscow, and said, "Here is your route; build the road here." Swamps were bridged, forests felled, valleys leveled up, and hills cut through, neither persuasion of benefit nor opposition of difficulty serving to turn the builders aside. So if ambition takes control, it may impel to the sacrifice of every grace and joy of life, the overriding of every hindrance, be it duty, love, family cares, or the bitter hostility of enemies; all are alike sacrificed or beaten down, only that the goal may be reached.

Does this remind us of Paul's "pressing toward the mark"? No one has or can conceive of a higher ideal than the Christian's, but how far the method differs from that of the conqueror whose achievements are measured by the number of nations subdued and rivals overthrown. There is high privilege and a clearly-implied obligation expressed in the words of Jesus, "That the disciple be as his Master, and the servant as his Lord"; and note the divine rule for attainment as exemplified by Him. "I am in the midst of you as one that serveth."

Missionary Department.

REPORT OF THE BOYS' ORPHANAGE, 1903.

The agricultural season of 1902-3 was an exceptionally prosperous one, and the good harvests did much to help those who had suffered in the famine of 1900. This had its effect on the orphanage, too, for of more than seventy boys who left us during the year, no less than thirty-two went away definitely in order to rejoin their relatives, and of eleven more whom we have entered as "run away" probably the majority did the same. The year closes with 302 names on the register.

The most memorable thing in the year will be the outbreak of plague. This terrible disease, which began in India in 1896, has never reached our district till this year, when it broke out in January at Hoshangabad. Strange things are told among the people of its origin, sometimes that a woman from a distant place has introduced it in a fit of anger, again that the English have started it in order to reduce the population! Our own boys are perhaps nearer to the scientific truth when they say that it is caused by a demon who is now, when the disease has died down, hiding in the houses where plague occurred ready to seize on the people again. At Hoshangabad, the epidemic became very bad, and attacked our Industrial Works compound, where several died, among others one of our apprentice boys. School and industrial work had to be suspended for a little while, but in two or three weeks regular occupations began again. Our school work has gone on much as usual, nearly all the boys getting the regular promotion in April. Of the fifteen boys who went to the Government English Middle School eighteen months ago, the majority are going on steadily; but three or four have fallen out, having lost their zeal for study, and have been put to learn trades. Miss Evens is teaching a few of these boys the typewriter, an accomplishment likely to be useful to them later.

Industrial training work has been at a disadvantage this year, for G. E. Clark being on furlough, and E. Watson spending his first year in language study, there was no missionary specially to look after it, except Alfred Taylor, the superintendent of the Industrial Works at Hoshangabad. He has about twenty-five boys as apprentices, most of them carpenters, and a few working at other trades, such as masons, and blacksmiths, in which the Industrial Works can employ them.

We intend that in future the boys shall be taught by the missionaries themselves. This has hitherto been impossible, owing to the fewness of our men. But now with three men available for orphanage work, we hope to be able to carry it out. The full scheme involves, first, some teaching in carpentry or other manual work while the boys are still at school, so that they may be better fitted for whatever trade they may take to afterwards. They should then have at least two years' apprenticeship in the orphanage under G. E. Clark or Ernest Watson, in some trade which is required at the Industrial Works. After this they would be transferred to the Industrial Works, where they would serve another year, and should then be able to earn their own living there. We can hardly work the scheme out in its entirety just yet, but the prospects are favorable for a good beginning.

Not least among those who assist are the boys' supporters at home or in India, who not only pay for them, but work for them, write to them, pray for them. It is a help that cannot be measured, but notwithstanding many sad disappointments we daily feel its value. Some boys seem to have made a start and grown a full inch offhand on hearing that they had had a supporter assigned. They perhaps realize your existence very vaguely, and the younger ones seldom remember the names, or if they do you would hardly recognize their pronunciation of them. But still they know that there is somebody to whom they can feel they belong in a special manner, and there is no doubt that this knowledge is often a great force in the forming of their character. Nor would we forget the more mundane, but very valuable gifts which blossomed out on our Christmas tree at Lahi after being sewn in many M. H. U.'s at home.

J. D. and A. MAYNARD.

Seoni Malwa, India.

Correspondence.

Noblesville, Ind., 4th mo. 28th, 1904.

To Members of the Haworth Family in America:

Upon the suggestion of a number of the family the Executive Committee of the National Association have arranged for a national meeting at St. Louis, Mo., on the 1st day of 9th mo., 1904, while in attendance at the Louisiana Exposition.

Arrangements have been perfected for hotel accommodations at either the Hotel Epworth or Indiana House, which are located within 200 feet of each other. The former, as the name indicates, is under the control and management of Christian people, and offers first-class hotel accommodations in every respect at the reasonable rate of $1 per day, exclusive of meals. The latter hotel, known as the "Indiana House," is under the management of Dr. Nathan E. Mills & Co., of Westfield, Ind., and will be conducted on a strictly moral and orderly basis. It is a plain inexpensive two-story frame building, with good new clean beds and substantial fare at the very low rate of 50 cents per bed when two occupy the same bed and 25 cents per meal. In order to secure this very low rate it will be necessary to remit $10 to William P. Haworth, at Noblesville, Ind., before 6th mo. 1st, which amount will be applied on board and lodging, when a certificate guaranteeing rooms and board at the above rates will be issued. Those wishing to be entertained at the Hotel Epworth at the reasonable rate of $1 per day, exclusive of meals, will please remit $1 to William P. Haworth, at Noblesville, Ind., before 6th mo. 1st, when a certificate will be issued entitling the holder to the above rates.

These two hotels are located on an eminence just north of the exposition grounds, within five minutes' walk of "Convention Entrance" gate, thus avoiding the annoyance and expense of using street cars to go to and from the exposition grounds. By remitting at once you are guaranteed the above low rates in company with friends and relatives, and saved the embarrassment of securing hotel accommodations after getting on the grounds.

The program for the reunion, which will be largely of a social nature, and to transact some important business pertaining to the interests of the family, will be announced at a later date. Arrangements can be had for a two days' session if desired after getting on the grounds. Arrange at once for attending the exposition on the above date and secure your hotel accommodations as indicated above, and let us greet several hundred of the descendants of our worthy ancestor, George Haworth, the emigrant. Yours in the interest of the family,

WILLIAM P. HAWORTH,
President, Haworth Association of America.

Things of Interest Among Ourselves.

Henry James is now located at Hartney, Manitoba, and is doing pastoral work in the meeting.

Isaac and Mary Snowdon Braithwaite landed in New York on the 27th of last month. They are to make a short visit in this country, mainly in Baltimore.

G. Bevan Emmott, son of George H. and Elizabeth B. Emmott, formerly of Baltimore, has come to America from his home in Liverpool to join Herbert Cash, of Oregon.

Lindley M. and Elizabeth C. F. Stevens acceptably attended Elba Meeting, New York, the 24th ult. They also visited with friends at Batavia, Collins and Union Springs.

Nine Partners' Quarterly Meeting, of New York Yearly Meeting was held at Millbrook, N. Y., the 4th and 5th inst. A notable feature was an instructive address by Amos Sanders, of Brooklyn, upon "The Four Sides of Ministerial Life."

First-day, the 24th ult., thirty-four persons were received into membership in the Indianapolis Meeting. The pastor conducted a very impressive welcome service for them, in connection with which the doctrines and belief of Friends were presented.

George B. Evans, of Farmington, N. Y., was much blessed in his service at Scipio Quarterly Meeting, held in Skaneateles, N. Y. Friends are much thought of there. One of the visiting Friend ministers was secured to preach in the Presbyterian Church at a union meeting.

Anna Braithwaite Thomas wrote recently of the health of her husband, Richard H. Thomas, as follows: "He is still confined to bed with rheumatic affection of the heart, from which he has now been suffering for over eight weeks. The doctors hope for his ultimate recovery, but they say that it will be tedious."

Allen Jay, of Richmond; Benjamin F. Trueblood, of Boston; J. Walter Malone, of Cleveland, and others, are expected to attend the forthcoming Yearly Meeting in Glens Falls, N. Y., opening Fifth mo. 26th. The day following Yearly Meeting there will be a conference especially helpful for ministers and Christian workers.

Contentnea Quarterly Meeting, N. C., which convened the 23d ult., was favored with the presence of Eli Craven, a minister from Western Quarter, and Ada Lee, a minister from New Garden Quarter. All the sessions were well attended, and encouraging reports were received. The select meeting was also well attended. A proposition to recognize the gift of the ministry of one Friend was approved.

Alma G. Dale, who has been located in the meeting at Hartney, Manitoba, expects soon to go to England for a rest and for service in meetings, as her health may permit. She is very desirous of securing information in regard to the history of the Lundy family, who settled in Falls Township, Bucks County Pa., and she asks all who can be of service to her along this line to write to her, care of Joseph E. Gould, Uxbridge, Ontario, Canada.

The Sabbath morning service at the Union Street Friends' Meeting, Kokomo, Ind., the 1st inst., was of unusual interest. The occasion was the farewell meeting for one of the aged members, Celia Hackett, who goes to Minneapolis to make her home with relatives. At the suggestion of the Christian Endeavorers and by their assistance, from a list of thirty members 70 years or more of age twenty were enabled to be in attendance. The service as conducted by the pastor, Murray S. Kenworthy, was of interest to the young and old.

Fifth month 1st was Foreign Mission Day at the First Friends' Meeting, Indianapolis, Ind. The services were arranged by the two mission societies of the meeting. The pastor, Morton C. Pearson, presented the claims of missions in the morning meeting in a message on "World Evangelization." Exercises were also held in the Bible School at 9.15 a.m. Dr. Newlin's wife, of Westfield, gave a most interesting stereopticon lecture on "Mexico and Mexican Missions" at the evening service. Large audiences were present at all the meetings, and an offering of $30.00 was received for the work.

The new meeting house at Gross, Neb., was dedicated the 10th ult. The property is free from debt. W. J. Hadley, superintendent of Iowa Yearly Meeting, preached the dedication sermon, and continued in a series of meetings, fourteen sessions in all. There were several conversions, and seven gave their names to become members with Friends. There has been no established meeting at this point heretofore, but at the next Quarterly Meeting, which will be held at Highland, Boyd County, the 14th and 15th inst., there will be a request for a monthly meeting. Gross is a small town of about two hundred inhabitants, which is located eight miles from a railroad. The country surrounding is very fertile and productive. Any one wishing to locate in this region would do well to write to Samuel Woodard, Gross, Neb.

Elizabeth G. Underhill has recently visited Oakwood Seminary, of which she writes as follows:

"Having the privilege of spending the Sabbath and the day following, Fifth mo. 1st and 2d, at Oakwood Seminary, Union Springs, N. Y., I thought perhaps a few words concerning the spiritual condition of the school might prove interesting.

"I found between thirty and forty students, and all but three were Christians. The Sabbath evening service was in charge of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Seminary, which was a meeting of much power and blessing, nearly every student taking part in both prayer and testimony. At its close two Cuban young men, students from the Gibara Mission, surrendered their hearts to Christ. During Third month a blessed wave of salvation swept over the school, and in one evening a large number of students gave themselves to the Lord without any apparent instrumental effort, but it was evidently the result of the earnest prayers of several of the saved young men and women, who for many weeks had earnestly besought the Lord for the conversion of their fellows. These, combined with the faithful labors of their caretakers, especially their loving preceptress, has brought forth a rich and abundant harvest. It is hoped that Friends throughout the Yearly Meeting may see the necessity of supporting this school in every way. The spiritual training of our children while obtaining an education should claim our thoughtful attention and care."

DIED.

AXTON.—At Darlington, Ind., Fourth month 17th, 1904, Ma-linda V. Axton, wife of Charles R. Axton, aged 35 years. She was an untiring worker in the church and a devoted wife and mother.

MONTGOMERY.—At Paoli, Ind., Fourth month 19th, 1904, Dr. James Worth Montgomery. He was a kind and sympathetic physician and a successful practitioner. He was converted a number of years ago and later joined Friends.

THORNE.—At her home, in Urbana, Ohio, Fourth month 10th, 1904, Susannah Thorne, wife of the late John Thorne, aged 60 years. The deceased was a member of Sabina Monthly Meeting, Ohio.

Events and Comments.

The Japanese forces are advancing beyond the Yalu and forcing the Russians to retreat. They have also succeeded in effecting a landing in the rear of Port Arthur, and will soon be in possession of that coveted prize.

Of the 750 delegates at the Methodist Conference, which recently convened in Los Angeles, twenty-five are women. The admission of women into the law-making body of the M. E. Church, with full rights guaranteed by the constitution, is a significant event and a step in the right direction.

A plan for the general reorganization of the Red Cross is being developed, which, if accepted, will reconcile the differences that now exist in the organization and will put it on a permanent basis of effectiveness. The plan was drawn by ex-Secretary Foster, at Senator Proctor's request, and contemplates the co-operation of the National Government in the work of the organization.

Six hundred teachers in the schools of Porto Rico are planning to visit the United States this summer. Only those teachers will come who feel able to expend at least 11 per cent. of their yearly salary to defray the expenses of the trip. Half of them will go to Harvard, repeating the interesting experiences of the Cuban teachers, and Samuel M. Vincent, a Porto Rican school commissioner, asks that $10,000 or $12,000 be raised in Boston to help the teachers through. Of the rest Cornell University will care for 200, and 100 will be distributed throughout New York.

IN AN OLD TRUNK.

Baby Finds a Bottle of Carbohic Acid and Drinks It.

While the mother was unpacking an old trunk a little 18-months-old baby got hold of a bottle of carbohic acid while playing on the floor, and his stomach was so badly burned it was feared he would not live, for he could not eat ordinary foods. The mother says, in telling of the case:

"It was all two doctors could do to save him, as it burnt his throat and stomach so badly that for two months after he took the poison nothing would lie on his stomach. Finally I took him into the country and tried new milk, and that was no better for him. His grandma finally suggested Grape-Nuts, and I am thankful I adopted the food, for he commenced to get better right away, and would not eat anything else. He commenced to get fleshy, and his cheeks like red roses, and now he is entirely well.

"I took him to Matamoras on a visit, and every place we went to stay to eat he called for Grape-Nuts, and I would have to explain how he came to call for it, as it was his main food.

"The names of the physicians who attended the baby are Dr. Eddy, of this town, and Dr. George Gale, of Newport, Ohio, and any one can write to me or to them and learn what Grape-Nuts food will do for children and grown-ups, too." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

Prices of nearly all the great classes of domestic production have materially fallen during the past year, the chief exceptions being cotton, wool, wheat, corn, oats and refined petroleum. On the other hand, prices of imported articles for use in manufacturing have advanced during the same period. This statement summarizes in a few words the picture of prices to-day compared with those of a year ago.

A report made recently by the treasurer of the athletic department of one of the large universities in this country showed that from various sources almost one hundred thousand dollars had been received this season and spent in connection with the athletic games. About two-thirds of this sum was spent in the running expenses of the various crews and teams. Among the items were such as $7,000 for sporting goods, $14,000 for traveling expenses, $10,000 for board during training, $2,500 for trophies, and so on. These figures make one pause and consider whether this college athletic business is not becoming excessive.

In speaking of the cotton crop for this season, Superintendent Galloway, Chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, says: "There will be a large crop, and I look to see very satisfactory results from the efforts to fight down the boll weevil. South of Corsicana the season is six weeks ahead of the usual condition of the crop at this time of year. Through a great part of Texas the crop has now been chopped out once. The work that is going on down there is simply phenomenal. The thirty experiment farms are all well on in their work, and the prospect is excellent for all that the department has expected to accomplish through them."

The Chicago amusement association is planning to furnish free firecrackers and torpedoes in unlimited quantity to every child in Chicago on Independence Day, in order to protect children from injury and property from damage. The ammunition, however, must be exploded in the parks and public playgrounds, under the supervision of a fireman, a physician and a member of the newly-created association. The organization is capitalized at $1,000,000. The Fourth has become a day of national humiliation, and the sober sense of the people is beginning to assert itself. A crusade in favor of a more reasonable method of expressing our joy is in order all over the country.

For the first time in seven years an effort has been made to gather divorce statistics in the United States, and the result shows that in that time the yearly average of divorce has grown from 16,436 to about 70,000, or more than 400 per cent. In Massachusetts in 1886 there was one divorce to every thirty-one marriages; in 1901 there was one to every twenty. In Ohio there had been in the former year one to every fifteen; in the latter there was one to less than eleven. In Michigan there had been one divorce to every thirteen marriages in 1886; in 1901 there was one to every nine. In Rhode Island there has been a divorce to every eleven marriages in 1886; in 1901 there was a divorce to every eight. To find a social menace parallel to this it is necessary to turn to Japan, where, it is said, there are 100,000 divorces yearly. Among other nations, American figures are unapproached. France granted in 1902 21,939 divorces. The German Empire, with a greater population, has not half the number of divorces that are attributed to France—fewer than 10,000. In England 177 absolute divorces were granted in 1901, a number which increased to 284 the next year. In Canada there were but eleven in 1900, and but nineteen in 1901 to match our probably 61,000 in 1901, which, in all likelihood, has become nearer 70,000 in the year that has just closed.

IT IS A MATTER OF HEALTH

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

FRIENDS' SUMMER SCHOOL OF RELIGIOUS HISTORY IN 1904.

A second session of the Friends' Summer School of Religious History will be held at Haverford College from the afternoon of Sixth month 15th to Sixth month 25th, at noon, 1904. Courses of lectures will be given on the Life of Christ, on various aspects of truth as understood by Friends, on the application of Christianity to present-day problems, and on other topics.

Lectures will be given by George W. Knox, of New York; H. S. Nash, of Cambridge; George A. Coe, of Chicago; Catherine Albright, of England; Benjamin Trueblood, of Boston; Elbert Russell, of Indiana; T. Harvey Haines, of Ohio; Mary M. Hobbs, of North Carolina; Amelia M. Gummere, Alfred C. Garrett, Joseph Elkinton, Allen C. Thomas, Seth K. Gifford, George A. Barton, Rufus M. Jones and Isaac Sharpless, of Pennsylvania, and others to be announced later.

A series of conferences on topics of vital interest to Quakerism will be held. Daily Bible classes and excursions to points of historic interest will be a part of the program.

There will be no charge for tuition. Board will be furnished in the College Halls at one dollar a day. Application should be made to

O. M. CHASE, HAVERFORD, PA.,

NOTICE.

The annual meeting of the Associate Executive Committee of Friends on Indian Affairs is called to meet at two o'clock p.m., on Fifth-day, the 19th of Fifth month, sessions to continue during the 20th. It is particularly requested that delegates from our several yearly meetings endeavor to be present. Place of meeting to be at Friends' Institute, No. 20 South Twelfth Street, Philadelphia.

E. M. WISTAR, Chairman.

HETTY B. GARRETT, Secretary.

YEARLY MEETINGS IN 1904.

New York Yearly Meeting at Glens Falls, N. Y., Fifth month 27th. James Wood, Clerk, Mount Kisco, N. Y.

California Yearly Meeting, at Whittier, Cal., Sixth month 22d. John Chawner, Clerk, El Modena, Cal.

New England Yearly Meeting, at Providence, R. I., Sixth month 24th. John Ellwood Paige, Clerk, 50 Chatham Street, Lynn, Mass.

Canada Yearly Meeting, at Pickering, Ont., Sixth month 24th. William I. Moore, Clerk, 60 Bleecker Street, Toronto, Ont.

Oregon Yearly Meeting, at Newberg, Ore., Seventh month 5th. Edwin McGrew, Clerk, Newberg, Ore.

North Carolina Yearly Meeting, at High Point, N. C., Eighth month 10th.

NECESSARY.

People May Go Without Food for Days, but Not Without Sleep.

Fasters have gone without food for many days at a time, but no one can go without sleep. "For a long time I have not been sleeping well, often lying awake for two or three hours during the night up to three weeks ago, but now I sleep sound every night, and wake up refreshed and vigorous," says a California woman.

"Do you know why? It's because I used to drink coffee, but three weeks ago I cut off the coffee and began using Postum. Twice since then I have drank coffee and both times I passed a sleepless night, and so I am doubly convinced coffee caused the trouble and Postum removed it.

"My brother has been in the habit of drinking coffee three times a day. He has been troubled with sour stomach and I often would notice him getting soda from the can to relieve the distress in his stomach; lately hardly a day passed without a dose of soda for relief.

"About two weeks ago he asked me for a cup of Postum—said he liked it well enough to give up coffee, and since then has been drinking Postum three times a day, and says he has not once been troubled with sour stomach." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Even after this lady's experience with coffee her brother did not suspect coffee was causing his sour stomach, but easily proved it.

Coffee is not suspected in thousands of cases just like this, but it's easily proved. A 10 days' trial works wonders, and of course, "there's a reason."

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

L. Lyndon Hobbs, Clerk, Guilford College, N. C.

Wilmington Yearly Meeting, at Wilmington, O., Eighth month 18th. James B. Unthank, Clerk, Wilmington, O.

Ohio Yearly Meeting, at Damascus, O., Eighth Month 25th. Edward Mott, Clerk, Tecumseh, Mich.

Iowa Yearly Meeting, at Oskaloosa, Ia., Ninth month 6th. Stephen M. Hadley, Clerk, Oskaloosa, Ia.

Western Yearly Meeting, at Plainfield, Ind., Ninth month 16th. Lewis E. Stout, Clerk, Plainfield, Ind.

Indiana Yearly Meeting, at Richmond, Ind., Ninth month 28th. Elwood O. Ellis, Clerk, Richmond, Ind. Anna M. Roberts, Clerk, Richmond, Ind.

Kansas Yearly Meeting, at Wichita, Kan., Tenth month 7th. Edmund Stanley, Clerk, Wichita, Kan.

Baltimore Yearly Meeting, at Baltimore, Md., Eleventh month 11th. Allen C. Thomas, Clerk, Haverford, Pa. Anna King Carey, Clerk, 838 Park Avenue, Baltimore, Md.

The anti-adulteration law passed by Congress last year has already begun to bear fruit in its effect on French wines. The strict enforcement of the law has been a bitter blow to the enormous industry of Bordeaux and other towns engaged in manufacturing adulterated wines for the United States. Many cargoes have been refused admission, and the whole industry is forced to seek another market or adopt honest standards of production.

Immigration is still noticeably large, but yet it falls considerably below the volume pouring into the country at this time last year. Steerage and second cabin arrivals at New York during the past month numbered 70,396, compared with 101,000 coming over in the month a year ago. It is to be questioned whether even this reduced volume of immigration is not larger than the country can well take care of or than present industrial conditions justify.

A LIMIT TO HAIRPINS.

A man just returned from a long journey, according to "Lippincott's," was entertained by his wife with a recital of certain improvements she had made in his absence.

"And you know," she said, "that closet that was locked for over a month, and which you said couldn't be opened except by a locksmith? Well,"—triumphantly—"I opened it."

"Well, well, how in the world did you do it?"

"With a hairpin."

"And the furnace door," she continued, "has been slopping around on one hinge for ever so long just because you were too lazy to fix it, but it's all right now."

"Well, I'm glad you had it fixed."

"Had it fixed? I fixed it myself with a hairpin."

"And then there's that crayon portrait of mother that stood in the corner for almost six solid weeks because you never would bring me any picture-hooks—"

"Well, I intended to, but—"

"O, 'but'! Well, it don't make any difference now; I got it up with a hook I made myself—out of a hairpin."

You want to know how to get my lamp chimneys.

(1) Your grocer sell them, if he is fit to be your grocer; may be he don't.

(2) If you'll write me, I'll send you my Index; that tells everything.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

"And there's Willie; you've been coaxing him and bribing him for a year, trying to break him of biting his nails, and I broke him in a week."

"With a hairpin?" he inquired, weakly.

"No!" she snapped. "Don't be a goose! With a hair-brush!"—Exchange.

We flatter those we scarcely know,
We please the fleeing guest,
And deal full many a thoughtless blow
To those who love us best.

—Selected.

EDUCATIONAL.

EARLHAM COLLEGE, RICHMOND, INDIANA

Prof. Elbert Russell offers courses regularly in Kings, New Testament Times, Life of Christ, The Apostolic Age, Church History, New Testament Literature, Romans, John, Biblical Literature, Isaiah.

Prof. Cyrus W. Hodgkin, The Protestant Reformation.

Prof. Anna M. Demaree, New Testament, Greek.

Asst. Prof. Lindley, History of the Hebrews.

Pres. Kelly, History of Philosophy, Ethics, Psychology.

The Oakwood Seminary

UNION SPRINGS, N. Y.

Founded in 1796.

A boarding school for boys and girls under the care of New York Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Academic, College Preparatory and Commercial

Spring term begins Fourth month 5, 1904

SAMUEL H. HODGIN,
Principal.

LINDLEY M. STEVENS,
Superintendent.

STENOGRAPHY, TYPEWRITING and MIMEOGRAPHING. Prices moderate.

MARY M. KITE

407 Lippincott Building, 12th and Filbert Sts., Phila.

Telephones: } Bell, Walnut 52-10
 } Keystone, Race 70-09

GO SOUTH OR SOUTHWEST

via the Seaboard Air Line Ry. Two daily trains from Washington with Pullman Sleepers and a la carte Dining Cars. The best service to Atlanta, Birmingham, New Orleans, Savannah, Jacksonville and Tampa. For Industrial, Resort or Manatee booklets, address W. E. Conklyn, General Agent, 1411 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

OUR PUBLICATIONS

Teachers' Quarterly. A 64-page commentary on the International Bible School Lessons; 24 cents per year, 6 cents per quarter.

Friends' Bible School Quarterly. (Advanced Grade.) Thirty-two pages; valuable notes on the lesson. Price, 3 cents each, in clubs to one address; single copies 5 cents, or 20 cents a year.

Intermediate Quarterly. For boys and girls of from 10 to 14. Same size and price as Bible School Quarterly.

Primary Quarterly. For primary class. Contains lesson study, questions and blackboard designs. Same size and price as Bible School Quarterly.

Lesson Sheets. Same matter as the Bible School Quarterly. Designed for visitors. Every school should have at least five, or ten copies to hand out to visitors or those who attend the school only occasionally.

Our Youth's Friend. Weekly, semi-monthly and monthly. A paper for the young people. Single subscriptions per year, weekly edition, 60 cents; semi-monthly, 30 cents; monthly, 15 cents. School subscriptions, five or more copies to one address, weekly edition, 12 cents each per quarter; semi-monthly, 6 cents each per quarter; monthly, 3 cents each per quarter.

Child's Lesson Leaf. Adapted to infant classes. One for each week, containing the lessons and lesson story, also pictures and stories for small children. Price, 20 cents a year.

Send for sample copies, free.

Statistical Blanks

The Committee appointed by the Five Year Meeting to arrange Statistical Blanks for all the Yearly Meetings has completed its work and the blanks are ready for distribution.

1. The Blank for Membership is full and complete and is so arranged that anyone can readily fill it out. There are two blanks: One for the Particular or Monthly Meetings and the other for the Quarterly Meetings. James Wood, of Mt. Kisco, N. Y., says, "They are excellent in their simplicity and completeness."

ADDRESS,

PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION OF FRIENDS, PLAINFIELD, INDIANA

P. W. RAIDABAUGH, Manager.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

We particularly invite the attention of the readers of "The American Friend" to this column. It will be found useful for almost everyone who wishes to advertise. The cost is 5c. per line each insertion. No advertisement is accepted for less than 25c. Cash with order.

TEACHER WANTED for Shelter for Colored Orphans, Philadelphia. State experience. Address Mary Ogden Conard, Lansdowne, Pa.

A YOUNG LADY, college graduate, wishes a position as companion or mother's helper, tutor to small children. Good reader, competent in instrumental music. Experienced. Address E. B., care AMERICAN FRIEND.

FOR RENT.—At Wells Beach, Maine. A small rustic cottage upon the broad shore of the Atlantic Ocean, three miles from Railroad, in a clean and quiet section; green fields in the rear, quarter mile from postoffice. Telephone and telegraph. Six rooms, five double beds and comfortable furniture. Address T. B. Husey, N. Berwick, Me.

WANTED.—A thousand families of "Friends" and others to come west and buy land in Woods county, Oklahoma, while you can get good farms at half their value. Rich valley land near Friends' meeting, Stella Academy, railroad and good market. In the great wheat and alfalfa belt, and fruit in abundance, the best part of Oklahoma. Warm, healthy climate, with splendid society. Write us for circulars and price lists. References, Pastor "Friends'" Church, First National Bank of Cherokee. Very truly, VOTAW and SETZER, "Friends."

WANTED.—A male teacher for the commercial department at Oak Grove Seminary. George L. Jones, Principal, Vassalboro, Maine.

OLD-FASHIONED grandfather clocks repaired at home. If yours needs attention send me a postal or, better, call. My store is within three minutes' walk of the Market Street ferries. Repairing of clocks and watches of every kind. Prompt service and moderate prices. W. L. Berry, Watchmaker and Jeweler, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER.—Careful and accurate repairing, with prompt service, has brought me the custom of many Friends. Their patronage is particularly solicited. My store is nearest to the Market Street ferries, and is easy of access from every part of the city. W. L. Berry, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

"Do you know, Fanny, I believe I could sit and talk to you forever."

"Yes, I believe you could."—"Chicago American."

S. F. BALDERSTON'S SON

Wall Paper and Decorations

Window Shades Made to Order

302 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILA.

A Chance Courtship

is a story of an unconventional love match, well told and beautifully illustrated. The small picture above only suggests the real charm of these illustrations. As a bit of readable fiction the story is well worth writing for. It is contained in a handsomely bound book of 128 pages, a portion of which is devoted to the attractive mountain and lake resorts along the Lackawanna Railroad. It is a book you will like to see. It may be, had by sending 10 cents in postage stamps to T. W. LEE, General Passenger Agent, Lackawanna Railroad, New York.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA. Office, 409 CHESTNUT STREET

CAPITAL, $1,000,000

ASSETS, $63,970,335.34

Surplus and Undivided Profits, belonging to Stockholders

4,026,151.15

Surplus, belonging to Insurance Account

5,635,620.25

Incorporated Third month 22, 1865. Charter Perpetual.

INSURES LIVES, GRANTS ANNUITIES, RECEIVES MONEY ON DEPOSIT, returnable on demand for which interest is allowed.

And is empowered by law to act as EXECUTOR ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, GUARDIAN, ASSIGNEE, COMMITTEE, RECEIVER, AGENT, etc.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the assets of the Company.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.

BOXES $5 AND UPWARDS

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY, President.

T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-Prest.

J. R. FOULKE, Trust Officer.

ASA S. WING, Vice-President.

DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary.

JOS. ASHBROOK, Man. Ins. Dept.

J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Assistant Trust Officer

SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer.

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary.

DIRECTORS:

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY,
T. WISTAR BROWN,
HENRY HAINES,
RICHARD WOOD,
CHAS. HARTSHORNE,

ASA S. WING,
PHILIP C. GARRETT,
JAMES V. WATSON,
WM. LONGSTRETH,
THOS. SCATTERGOOD,

J. PRESTON THOMAS,
ROBERT M. JANNEY,
MARRIOTT C. MORRIS,
FRANK H. TAYLOR,
JOSEPH B. TOWNSEND, JR.

FINANCIAL.

6% to 7% Choice First Mortgage Loans, Seattle and vicinity. Local and N. Y. references. Established 1887. Correspondence Solicited. JAMES BOTHWELL, Seattle, Washington.

Mortgages Net 6% in North Dakota.

I place mortgages on land covering about one-third its value. The value of this land is constantly increasing.

I know every mortgagor personally, know his land, his integrity, his habits and his ability to pay.

These combine to make me certain that these mortgages are as safe as GOVERNMENT BONDS.

Investigate me. You can't make the investigation too rigid to suit me. I'll stand it.

I've been in this business for 18 years, and never lost a cent for a customer, nor foreclosed a mortgage.

I collect the interest and principal without charge and remit in New York exchange. Write to me for further information.

WALTER L. WILLIAMSON

Investment Banker

Lisbon North Dakota

JOSEPH G. FOGG UNDERTAKER AND EMBALMER

S. W. Cor. Sixteenth and Race Sts.

Phone Spruce 44-38-W. PHILADELPHIA.

Suburban orders promptly attended.

The
New Century

TYPEWRITER

does the BEST WORK and lots of it, EASILY.

Strong, Thoroughly Built,
Superior in results to any other.

Write for
"THE BOOK OF THE NEW CENTURY."

AMERICAN WRITING MACHINE COMPANY,
1033 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

The Corner Stone

OF MANY A MAN'S SUCCESS HAS BEEN HIS FIRST PAYMENT ON AN ENDOWMENT POLICY IN

The Prudential

IT MAY MARK THE COMMENCEMENT OF YOUR GOOD FORTUNE IF YOU TRY IT.

Without committing myself to any action, I shall be glad to receive free particulars and rates of Endowment Policies

For $

Name..... Age.....

Address.....

Occupation..... Dept. 67.

To The Prudential Insurance Co.

of America.

JOHN F. DRYDEN,
President.

Home Office:
NEWARK, N. J.

Send Coupon
Today for Rates
at Your Age.

Quietness is next to love.

Sheetings, Muslins and Cambrics

Such a lot as one could not easily match outside of this department. Standard grades that we have reduced, or that we got at a price-concession because of our great buying power.

New York Mills Bleached Muslin—one yard wide, in lengths ranging from 8 to 20 yards; regularly 12½¢—now 10¢ a yard.

Soft-finish Cambric—in 10-yard lengths, put up in boxes; fine-spun; worth $1.50—now $1.15 a piece.

Cambric Muslin—of an excellent quality—special at 10¢ a yard.

English Long Cloths—of a fine quality, much liked for women's and children's wear; in the original 12-yard pieces; regularly $1.50—now $1.18 a piece.

Linen-finish Belfast Shrunken Muslin—a favorite fabric for waists and shirt-waist suits—special at 16¢ a yard.

Bleached Sheetting Muslin—another lot of the 2½-yard width, in 5- to 10-yard lengths; worth 31¢—now 25¢ a yard.

Featherproof Ticking of the better sort—32 inches wide, 22¢ a yard; 36 inches wide, 28¢ a yard.

West store, west aisle.

STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER
PHILADELPHIA

THE BEST

IS NONE TOO GOOD FOR THE HOME
BEAUTIFUL and DURABLE
INTERIORS and EXTERIORS

ARE SECURED BY USING

"NICE" PAINTS STAINS
VARNISHES

Our 1904 illustrated and descriptive Catalogue sent to every one interested on request.

E. E. NICE
272-274 S. 2d St.
PHILADELPHIA

At the Sign of the Rocking Kegs

Established 1860

150 Varieties

Esterbrook's Steel Pens

Sold Everywhere

The Best Pens Made

The American Friend

Vol. XI

FIFTH MONTH 19, 1904

No. 20

	PAGE
POEM.—Broadwater Voices	327
Thomas Wistar
EDITORIALS.—One Taken and Another Left.—Seven Practical Suggestions	327
Baptism as Viewed by Friends	328
Abijah J. Weaver.
Two Bodies of Friends	331
Farmington	332
J. L. Spicer.
SOME VIEWS ON PRESENT TOPICS:
Social Pastoral Work	333
Eliza H. Carey
THE INTERNATIONAL LESSON	334
Lesson for Fifth month 29, 1904.
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR	335
Topic for Fifth month 29, 1904.
CORRESPONDENCE	335
THINGS OF INTEREST AMONG OURSELVES	336
BORN.—MARRIED.—DIED	337
EVENTS AND COMMENTS	338

CHRIST THE LIVING BREAD.

'Twas August, and the fierce sun overhead
Smote on the squalid streets of Bethnal Green,
And the pale weaver, through his window seen,
In Spitalfields, look'd thrice dispirited;

I met a preacher there I knew, and said:
"Ill and o'er work'd, how fare you in this scene?"
"Bravely," said he, "for I of late have been Much cheered with thoughts of Christ, the living bread."

O human soul, as long as thou canst so
Set up a mark of everlasting light,
Above the howling senses' ebb and flow,
To cheer thee, and to right thee if thou roam,
Not with lost toil thou laborest through the night.
Thou mak'st the Heaven thou hop'st, indeed, thy home.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, in "East London."

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.50 A YEAR ❦ ❦ ❦ PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
AMERICAN FRIEND PUBLISHING COMPANY, 718 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA

EDUCATIONAL.

EARLHAM COLLEGE,RICHMOND,
INDIANA

Prof. Elbert Russell offers courses regularly in Kings, New Testament Times, Life of Christ, The Apostolic Age, Church History, New Testament Literature, Romans, John, Biblical Literature, Isaiah.

Prof. Cyrus W. Hodgin, The Protestant Reformation.

Prof. Anna M. Demaree, New Testament, Greek.

Asst. Prof. Lindley, History of the Hebrews.

Pres. Kelly, History of Philosophy, Ethics, Psychology.

The Oakwood Seminary

UNION SPRINGS, N. Y.

Founded in 1796.

A boarding school for boys and girls under the care of New York Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Academic, College Preparatory and Commercial

Spring term begins Fourth month 5, 1904

SAMUEL H. HODGIN,
Principal.

LINDLEY M. STEVENS,
Superintendent.

STENOGRAPHY, TYPEWRITING and MIMEOGRAPHING. Prices moderate.

MARY M. KITE

407 Lippincott Building, 12th and Filbert Sts., Phila.

Telephones: { Bell, Walnut 52-10
Keystone, Race 70-09

Barlow's Indigo Blue

Will not spot or streak clothes

In use for fifty years is proof that it is the best. All grocers sell it. Free samples mailed.
Depot, No. 233 N. Second Street, Philadelphia.

CHEAP EXCURSION TO ATLANTA, GEORGIA,

via Seaboard Air Line Railway, through Richmond, Raleigh and the "Heart of the Old South." Round-trip from Washington, $17.75—tickets on sale May 21st, 22d and 23d. Return limit can be extended to June 30th, 1904. Address Seaboard agents at Washington, Baltimore, or W. E. Conklyn, General Agent, 1411 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Lift thyself up, look around, and see something higher and brighter than earth, earth-worms and earthly darkness.—Richter.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

We particularly invite the attention of the readers of "The American Friend" to this column. It will be found useful for almost everyone who wishes to advertise. The cost is 5c. per line each insertion. No advertisement is accepted for less than 25c. Cash with order.

WANTED.—A male teacher for the commercial department at Oak Grove Seminary. George L. Jones, Principal, Vassalboro, Maine.

WANTED.—A few summer boarders, in Friend's family, on farm, only half mile from Meeting. Stone house, bath room; abundance of fruit, spring water, plenty of shade. References exchanged. Address, Howard M. Hoge, Lincoln, Virginia.

FOR RENT.—At Wells Beach, Maine. A small rustic cottage upon the broad shore of the Atlantic Ocean, three miles from Railroad, in a clean and quiet section; green fields in the rear, quarter mile from postoffice. Telephone and telegraph. Six rooms, five double beds and comfortable furniture. Address T. B. Hussey, N. Berwick, Me.

WANTED.—A thousand families of "Friends" and others to come west and buy land in Woods county, Oklahoma, while you can get good farms at half their value. Rich valley land near Friends' meeting, Stella Academy, railroad and good market. In the great wheat and alfalfa belt, and fruit in abundance, the best part of Oklahoma. Warm, healthy climate, with splendid society. Write us for circulars and price lists. References, Pastor "Friends'" Church, First National Bank of Cherokee. Very truly, VOTAW and SETZER, "Friends."

OLD-FASHIONED grandfather clocks repaired at home. If yours needs attention send me a postal or, better, call. My store is within three minutes' walk of the Market Street ferries. Repairing of clocks and watches of every kind. Prompt service and moderate prices. W. L. Berry, Watchmaker and Jeweler, 22 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

WILLIAM S. YARNALL
Manufacturing OPTICIAN

118 S. FIFTEENTH ST., PHILA.
4th Door Below Chestnut St.

S. F. BALDERSTON'S SON

Wall Paper and
Decorations

Window Shades Made to Order

302 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILA.

Publisher's Department.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND is published weekly by the American Friend Publishing Company,
718 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

RUFUS M. JONES, EDITOR.

The Directors of the Company are
JAMES WOOD, President.

DAVID SCULL, ALLEN JAY, JOHN B. GARRETT,

PETER W. RAIDABAUGH, ISAAC SHARPLESS,

RUFUS M. JONES.

Subscription Price.

Payable in advance.....$1.50 per annum.
Single copies.....Five Cents each.

Checks, Money Orders and Postal Notes should be drawn to the order of THE AMERICAN FRIEND. Advertising rates will be sent on request. Headley Bros., 14 Bishopsgate Street, Without, London, Agents for Great Britain and Ireland.

God does not, if we could see Him fully, send us anything but joy; the sorrow that comes with His spiritual mercies is something which we add to them ourselves.—Phillips Brooks.

JOSEPH B. SCATTERGOOD
House and Sign Painter
313 South 5th St., Philadelphia

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE.

Sifts the flour and mixes 20 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CYRUS CHAMBERS, Jr.) 52d & Media Sts., Philadelphia

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

HOOPING-COUGH
AND CROUP.*Roche's Herbal Embrocation

The celebrated and effectual English Cure without internal medicine. Proprietors, W. EDWARDS & SON, Queen Victoria St., London, England. Wholesale of E. Fougere & Co., 80 North William Street, N. Y.

EMINENT PHYSICIANS
throughout the world recommend

QUINA-LAROCHÉ

AS A SPECIFIC IN CASES OF
ANÆMIA, COLDS, LA GRIPE,
SLOW CONVALESCENCE,
STOMACH TROUBLES,
TYPHOID and MALARIAL
FEVERS.

E. Fougere & Co., 30 N. William St., N. Y.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA. Office, 409 CHESTNUT STREET

CAPITAL, $1,000,000

ASSETS, $63,970,335.34

Surplus and Undivided Profits, belonging to Stockholders 4,026,151.15

Surplus, belonging to Insurance Account 5,635,620.25

Incorporated Third month 22, 1865. Charter Perpetual.

INSURES LIVES, GRANTS ANNUITIES, RECEIVES MONEY ON DEPOSIT, returnable on demand for which interest is allowed.

And is empowered by law to act as EXECUTOR ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, GUARDIAN, ASSIGNEE, COMMITTEE, RECEIVER, AGENT, etc.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the assets of the Company.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.

BOXES $5 AND UPWARDS

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY, President.

T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-Prest.
ASA S. WING, Vice-President.
JOS. ASHBROOK, Man. Ins. Dept.
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer.

J. R. FOULKE, Trust Officer.
DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary.
J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Assistant Trust Officer.
C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary.

DIRECTORS:

SAMUEL R. SHIPLEY,
T. WISTAR BROWN,
HENRY HAINES,
RICHARD WOOD,
CHAS. HARTSHORNE,

ASA S. WING,
PHILIP C. GARRETT,
JAMES V. WATSON,
WM. LONGSTRETH,
THOS. SCATTERGOOD,

J. PRESTON THOMAS,
ROBERT M. JANNEY,
MARRIOTT C. MORRIS,
FRANK H. TAYLOR,
JOSEPH B. TOWNSEND, Jr.

The American Friend

*"Truth is the highest thing a man may keep."
"That they all may be one."*

VOL. XI.

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTH MONTH 19, 1904.

No. 20.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

BROADWATER VOICES.

Alas for him who may not know
The beauty of this favored place,
Nor, when the spring-time breezes blow,
Toward this fair island set his face
To seek the quiet Nature gives—
The outward calm of earth and sky—
Conducive to that inward peace
The voices of the world deny.

For here, to him who hath an ear
To hear the voice of Nature call,
A soul to feel her influence sweet
And humbly own her magic thrall;
There are a thousand tongues to tell,
In wind and wave, in bird and flower,
Amid the thrill of life and love,
The secrets of Creative Power.

The world, unheeding, passes by,
Nor pauses for a moment's grace
To own the loveliness around
Or seek the Author's hand to trace.
For us, let Nature ever be
The handmaid of a Father's love
To teach us of His wondrous works
And of His outstretched arms above.

And more than any outward voice
Of wind or wave or beast or bird,
The still small voice that speaks within,
O, let that inward voice be heard!—
To guide us on our pilgrim way,
To help us o'er each rugged hill,
Past every danger far or near,
If we but listen and are still.

THOMAS WISTAR.

Fifth month 1st, 1904.

ONE TAKEN AND ANOTHER LEFT.

Many of our Lord's illustrations about the coming of the Kingdom are open to two interpretations. They seem at first sight to imply a sudden, miraculous event, occurring in the visible world. It has always been difficult to make the passages of this sort fit in with numerous other passages in which the Kingdom is described as coming without observation, as being within, as being like seed or yeast which expands gradually, as being the rule and reign of God in the heart and life. This view is best stated in the words of the prayer: Thy Kingdom come, that is to say, Thy will be done on the earth as it is done in heaven. Here the Kingdom is thought of as the Divine rule or sway, which is slowly extended from life to life, until it takes in all hearts, and God's will is done in the world as it now is in the heavenly realm.

May not those passages which at first seem to imply a sudden, miraculous event also be taken so as to fit with those deeper and more spiritual conceptions? Some of them surely can be so taken. A good example of such a passage is Matthew, xxiv., 40-41: "Then shall two be in the field; the one shall be taken and the other left. Two women shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken and the other left." This plainly might mean some great event which shall suddenly separate the two workers and forever set them apart. It might also mean that right in the midst of their toil one shall find the Kingdom, shall see the meaning of life, shall work as unto the Lord, shall feel a Divine presence and have a sustaining joy, while the other shall miss it all, shall have only the sense of drudgery, the grinding and the toil. The two live and work under the same sky. They both have the same outward circumstances. They face the same practical problems and difficulties—but with an infinite difference. One has been taken up into the Divine meaning of life. He tills his field with his eyes open upon a heavenly vision. The other sees only the disagreeable task and the weary weight of an unintelligible world.

It is a parable which teaches us that religion is not a substitute for the business and occupations of life, not something to be secured by withdrawing from the practical tasks of the day's work. But rather a power and a presence which permeate and consecrate all the work to which we are called. The Kingdom is not reserved for the monk in his cell, for the bishop in his palace, for the priest at his altar. It takes possession of the man in his field; it comes to the poor peasant woman grinding her batch of meal for the scanty dinner. Christ's religion is the religion not for the ordained alone, not simply for altar and closet, but for the toiler and the weary worker as well. When the Kingdom comes it does not break the yoke of toil; it only makes it easy to bear it. It opens the man's eyes to see a wider service in his work, it enables him to find joy in it and so to grow in spirit and to get rich in God while he is doing what would be drudgery, if it were done without any illumination or vision. The great question is, Are we taken or are we left? Are we in the Kingdom or out of it? Is the sky above our heads open Godward or is it tight shut for us?

SEVEN PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

John William Graham recently made a valuable contribution in the London Friend to the discussion of "Meetings on the Basis of Silence." He closes his letter with these seven suggestions:

(i) In all times of business or professional stress, remember how poor and one-sided is outward activity not rooted in religion. Therefore always give thy tithes of service to the Society which is thy religious home.

(ii) When attracted so much to pleasure that it is a bore to attend meetings and serve on appointments, remember that the world is not built that way.

(iii) Be willing to have simple doings, so that mere sordid needs may not limit the number of homes founded and families growing up amongst us.

(iv) Support our Friends' schools, and extend their influence widely, so that all children belonging to us may start life as Friends.

(v) At Woodbrooke, or otherwise, study to make thyself an approved workman.

(vi) Do not discourage any one's genuine gift because thou dost not exactly agree with him.

(vii) Never be without such aggressive effort against evil as thy hand may find to do, in the world outside the Society's pale.

He believes that if all Friends practiced these principles our present problems would be solved. There is no question that his seven suggestions are important and far-reaching. They are meant primarily for English Friends, but they apply just as well here in America.

Emperor William, in a memorable address to the German people somewhat more than a year ago, said: "The man whose life is not founded on religion is lost." "How poor," writes our friend in a similar strain, "how poor and one-sided is outward activity not rooted in religion." Most decidedly it is. The man who cuts off his religious exercises in order to get more time for "business" and "practical life" has cut himself off from the real source of supplies, and sooner or later there will be an inward famine, which will also affect all his outward life. It is also true that it is very difficult to have the life rooted in religion without having "a religious home." Religion is not a selfish affair for one man alone. It unites men into social groups, and it always calls for some service and some personal sacrifice. In very truth "the world is not built" so that each person can seek his own ease and follow his own sweet will and still have all the advantages of religion. Suggestion iii. is also needed. A Quakerism run to luxury is a played out Quakerism. If our young members are straining so hard to keep up with the social procession that they fail to raise families and train children, if they care more for "standing" and "position" than they do for the delights of home and the joys of the hearth, Quakerism would soon become only an obsolete dictionary word. "Simple doings," "simple life" will banish sordid needs and increase happiness and purify religion.

Early preparation for a life of service is the main secret of success. The world's spiritual work cannot now be done on ignorance, if it ever could. One well-directed stroke, guided by insight, is worth a thousand aimed with shut eyes. Our Friends' institutions need to learn better how to make their work bear directly toward producing "approved workmen." It is all very well to go to "settlements" for definite religious study, but the school and college ought already to have given a keen appetite for it, and some of the armor ought already to be buckled on. The first mark of a true Christian spirit is power to appreciate the gift and service of all genuine and sincere persons. He who misses the word of truth because he can recognize only what he happens to agree with, makes his own poor, narrow life the ultimate standard, and he loses the chance to grow to anything larger.

And, finally, suggestion vii. is always needed. He is a poor Friend who is doing nothing to lessen the forces of evil in the world. The best way to grow is to engage in battle with some definite evil—to fling one's life into some contest. It has been one of the noblest features of Quakerism that it has been aggressive, that its members have fought a good fight with the world's evils. There is still no lack of opportunity for continuing this aggressive activity.

FOR THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

BAPTISM AS VIEWED BY FRIENDS.

BY ABIJAH J. WEAVER.

(Continued from last week.)

In the latter half of the 11th chapter of Acts we are told how the first real Gentile Church was established, not by the apostles, but some of the men of Cyprus and Cyrene, who came to Antioch and preached unto the Grecians the Lord Jesus, and the hand of the Lord was with them, and a great number turned unto the Lord. So that gradually there grew up a company of believers, whose ministers were not Jews, and who had simply accepted the Lord Jesus by faith, without baptism, circumcision, or any of the other Jewish rites, and yet the hand of the Lord is manifestly with them, so that a little farther on we read, "And the disciples were called Christians first at Antioch." (Acts 11: 26.) Everywhere else they were simply a new sect among the Jews, but at Antioch, they were Christians, knowing only Christ and Him crucified.

Now it appears that just about the time the council at Jerusalem had been convinced by Peter's experience at the house of Cornelius, that God had granted to the Gentiles salvation through faith, they hear of this Gentile Church at Antioch, and send out

Barnabas to strengthen and confirm them. He being a good man, and filled with the Holy Ghost, was most eminently suited for this work, and when he had seen the grace of God manifested in them, he was glad, "And exhorted them all that with purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord," then he went to Tarsus and sought out Saul, or Paul, and brought him to Antioch, and for a whole year they continued with the brethren, and the blessing of God was manifestly on the work, so that much people were added to the church. About this time occurred a famine and the persecution of the Church at Jerusalem under Herod, and the Gentile Church immediately proves its genuineness of heart, by sending Paul and Barnabas to Jerusalem with its offering for the relief of the sufferers.

Some time after the return of Paul and Barnabas from Jerusalem the Holy Ghost most positively recognizes the Gentile Church at Antioch, and says, "Separate me, Paul and Barnabas for the work whereunto I have called them." And the first foreign missionaries are there consecrated, and sent out on their missionary journey.

After a hard, but successful journey, they return again to Antioch and continue with the brethren there some years, and when something like five years has elapsed since Peter's defense of his actions before the council at Jerusalem, something occurs that shows why God had recognized the Gentile Church, instead of the one at Jerusalem, for emissaries from Jerusalem now appear at Antioch and begin to cause trouble there by teaching that unless the Gentiles be circumcised after the manner of Moses, and keep the law, they cannot be saved. They carry the Jewish element of the Church with these arguments, and the contention becomes so fierce, that it is at last determined that Paul and Barnabas shall go to Jerusalem and lay the matter before the Church there, and have a ruling made on the question. Then in the fifteenth chapter of Acts we have the formal discussion of the matter before the apostles and elders at Jerusalem, in which the Pharisee element is silenced, and the council again rules against the ordinances.

They then wrote a letter to the brethren at Antioch, giving their decision, and disclaiming any responsibility for the teachings of the men who had disturbed them on the ordinance question; they also send brethren to confirm the teachings of Paul and Barnabas. But even in this letter it was impossible for them to entirely get away from their Jewish training and the Jewish ritual. For this ritual see Lev. 17: 10-13. The letter reads: "For it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things; that ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication, from which if ye keep yourselves ye shall do well. Fare ye well."

Thus for the second time the Church at Jerusalem has officially settled that none of the Mosaic rites of circumcision, baptism, etc., that were required of the Gentile converts to Judaism, should be required of Gentile converts to Christ, and note, they have settled it so, because the Holy Ghost has insisted that it should be so.

Soon after this conference at Jerusalem Paul starts on his second missionary journey, armed with these same decrees of the Church at Jerusalem (see Acts 16: 4) as well as with letters of recommendation from Antioch, but before Paul has half way finished this journey we find him not only baptizing, but in the case of Timotheus, whose father was a Greek, actually performing circumcision. Not that Paul has changed his views in the least, but he desired to take the young preacher with him, and as it was always Paul's custom to go to the Synagogue on entering a strange city, and preach Christ to the Jews first, he thought it best that this young Greek should comply with the Jewish law, in order that they might not have reason to find fault with them on that score, and thereby hinder their work for Christ, for says he, "Unto the Jew I became as a Jew, that I might win the Jew." And still many have taken the fact that Paul did administer the ordinance of baptism, to mean that he regarded it as a Christian ordinance. To be consistent with this argument, we should also include circumcision among his Christian ordinances, but Paul has not left us to conjecture on this point, but says plainly, "For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel." (1 Cor. 1: 17.)

Paul continues his missionary work until about A.D. 58, when he is called by the Holy Ghost to go up to Jerusalem. At the same time he is repeatedly warned that bonds and affliction await him; for well the Holy Spirit knew how thoroughly the Judaizing elements had taken possession of the Church there. We have the account of how the apostles and elders received him gladly, and heard the story of the blessing of God upon the Gentiles; but, say they, "Thou seest, brother, how many thousands of Jews there are which believe; and they are all zealous of the law; and they are informed of thee, that thou teachest all the Jews which are among the Gentiles to forsake Moses, saying that they ought not to circumcise children, neither to walk after the customs. What is it, therefore? The multitude must needs come together; for they will hear that thou art come. Do therefore this that we say unto thee: We have four men which have a vow on them; them take, and purify thyself with them, and be at charges with them, that they may shave their heads; and all may know that those things, whereof they were informed concerning thee, are nothing; but that thou thyself also walkest orderly, and keepest the law. As touching the Gentiles which believe, we have written and concluded that they observe no such thing, save only that they keep themselves from things offered to idols, and from blood, and from strangled, and from fornication. Then Paul took the men, and the next day purifying himself with them entered into the temple, to signify the accomplishment of the days of purification, until that an offering should be offered for every one of them. And when the seven days were almost ended, the Jews which were of Asia, when they saw him in the temple, stirred up all the people, and laid hands on him." Acts 21: 20-27.

Then follows the story of how Paul's life was sought night and day by these Judaized Christians, who show very plainly that for all they are so very zealous for all the outward ordinances, they know absolutely nothing of the spirit of love and charity, which are the direct results of the baptism of the Holy Ghost, the only saving baptism, and without which spirit they are none of his.

Again I would call your attention to the fact that here is a plain confession on the part of the apostles and elders at Jerusalem, that notwithstanding the fact that they know that faith in Christ is to supersede all the old Mosaic ordinances; yet, for the sake of avoiding a conflict between Christianity and Judaism, they are still practicing them all, even to the extent of killing and offering sacrifices for sin, as if the blood of Christ was of none effect. And this too about twenty-seven years after Pentecost. Now can you wonder that after this experience and the cruel persecution that follows Paul the prisoner of Christ all the way to Rome, that Paul should from this time on set himself positively against this Judaizing tendency in the Church of Christ? This from his letter to the Galatians, "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage. Behold, I Paul say unto you, that if ye be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing. For I testify again unto every man that is circumcised, that he is a debtor to do the whole law. Christ is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law, ye are fallen from grace. For we through the Spirit wait for the hope of righteousness by faith." (Gal. 5: 1-5.) Or again in the third chapter and second verse, "This only would I learn of you. Received ye the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith?" It will not weaken his argument on this point in the least to read the entire letter.

Nor is Paul alone in this fight, for other of the apostles after a time come to the same position. Thus we have Peter, in his first general epistle, 3: 21, saying, "The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us by the resurrection of Jesus Christ (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God)." So Peter leaves no chance for them to believe when he is talking of the saving baptism, that he has reference to the old Jewish baptisms. Then, again, John, in his gospel, which is one of the last of all the apostolic writings, takes special pains to make this point very clear, and brings the testimony of John the Baptist in, to clear up the point that was doubtless giving some of the converts trouble. "And this is the record of John, when the Jews sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem to ask him, Who art thou? and he confessed and denied not; but confessed, I am not the Christ. And they asked him, What then? Art thou Elias? And he saith, I am not. Art thou that prophet? And he answered, No. Then said they unto him, Who art thou? that we may give an answer to them that sent us. What sayest thou of thyself? He said, I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord, as said the prophet Esaias. And they which were sent were of the Pharisees. And they asked him, and said unto him, Why baptizest thou then, if thou be not that Christ, nor Elias, neither that prophet? John answered them, saying, I baptize with water; but there standeth one among you, whom ye know not; He it is, who coming after me is preferred before me, whose shoe's latchet I am not worthy to unloose. These things were done in Bethabara beyond Jordan, where John was baptizing. The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world. This is he of whom I said, After me cometh a man which is preferred before me: for he was before me. And I knew him not: but that he should be made manifest to Israel, therefore am I come baptizing with water. And John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him. And I knew him not; but he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost. And I saw and bare record that this is the Son of God." (John 1: 19-34.) Here we have it very plainly stated that John's baptism was with water, but that Christ's baptizing should be with the Holy Ghost; so that it will certainly take a very decided twisting of these very plain statements to make water baptism the Christian baptism.

Then for fear we should try to hold to both, Paul says in his letter to the Ephesians (4: 4-6), "There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all." And that one Christian baptism must be the baptism of the Holy Ghost, for without that baptism the Church is shorn of her power. This is not only the contention of the apostles, but it has been abundantly proven by the Church in these nineteen centuries of her history. Just whenever and wherever the Church has emphasized the spiritual baptism of her ministers and membership she has grown in power and brought forth the peaceful fruits of the Spirit. But just in proportion as she has turned to and emphasized mere outward forms, has she lost her higher Christian graces. It was a consciousness of this coming apostasy that Paul plainly saw would overtake the Church, just so soon as the faithful apostles were removed, so that their influence would no longer hold in check this Judaizing element, that caused him to dwell so strongly on this matter when giving his last instructions to young Timothy, on whose shoulders the great burden of the Church was soon to fall. 1 Tim. 4: 1-3: "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the last times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron; forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth."

Now, if we will watch the development of the Church for the next one thousand years, and realize that not only the old Mosaic rites, but many of the traditions of the elders, are adopted, then the same policy that made it easy for the Pharisee to accept Christ, by simply allowing him to bring in his ceremonies with him, is soon making it equally easy for the Pagan by adopting many of his performances. This continues until it is hard to say whether the Church is Christian, Jew or Pagan.

Let us give you the testimony of an eye witness to some of these performances that are a direct outgrowth of these "Holy Ordinances."

The basilica of St. John Lateran (in Rome) is one in which all the Popes are consecrated. Near it is a little building—a gem of architecture—in which there is a great fountain for the manufacture of "holy water." You are there to see an imposing procession of Church dignitaries marching toward it. They come with a chant. They surround the tank filled with water—common water—not yet "holy."

They read and chant some more. They make the sign of the cross three times in the water. Three times they breathe into it, saying, "Receive thou the Holy Ghost."

From a sort of coffee-pot they pour a little oil in the form of a cross. They sprinkle in a little fine salt, stir it up, and wash their holy heads in it. This water is "holy" now! Bear in mind that this is the high dignitaries that do this, bishops, archbishops and cardinals. What now is this water good for? This is their answer: "Two uses: First, spiritual. 1. It drives away devils from places and persons. 2. It affords assistance against fears and diabolical illusions. 3. It cancels venial sins. 4. It imparts strength to resist temptations. 5. It drives away wicked thoughts. 6. It safely preserves those who apply it from the passing snares of the devil. 7. It obtains the presence and favor of the Holy Ghost.

"Secondly, its corporal uses are: 1. It is a remedy against barrenness, both in women and the lower animals. 2. It is a preservative from sickness. 3. It heals the infirmities of mind and body. 4. It purifies infected air and drives away plague and contagion." See article by Edmond B. Fairfield, "Homiletic Review," Second month, 1904. This performance, mark you, is not that of the Zulu medicine men, but the prelates of the original Christian Church founded at Jerusalem, and being solemnized in the midst of the enlightenment of this morning of the twentieth century.

I am fully persuaded, not only by the direct lines of historical connection, but by the positive teachings of God's Word, that all our so-called Christian ordinances are but a relic of this same confusion of Judaism and Paganism with Christianity, left over to the Protestant Church. If any man feels that he must be baptized in water, in order to satisfy his conscience, I have no objections to his doing so. But, as for myself, in harmony with the views always held by Friends, I prefer to rest my case by simple faith in the saving power of the baptism of God's Holy Spirit, without which there is no salvation, and to add to which would simply be to call in question its efficacy.

Glens Falls, N. Y.

TWO BODIES OF FRIENDS.

[Just before the opening of the Yearly Meeting at Race Street, Philadelphia, R. Barclay Spicer, Editor of "Friends' Intelligencer," wrote an article for the Philadelphia Press. This article discusses the differences between the two bodies of Friends in such a frank and straightforward manner that his statements will be read everywhere with interest. We reprint an important section of the article.—ED.]

These Friends [who are about to meet], to distinguish them from the Friends who held their Yearly Meeting at Arch Street a few weeks ago, are variously spoken of as "Race Street Friends," or "the other branch of Friends" or "Hicksites." The name Hicksite, from Elias Hicks, the most prominent minister and leader at the time of the separation, is not used by the Friends themselves and is particularly inappropriate, since they are very shy of hero worship in any form and look to Christ alone and not to any man as the head or founder of the Church.

On the other hand, the Friends who are commonly distinguished as "Orthodox" do not apply that name to themselves, since they are simply Friends and not any particular kind of Friends. Thus neither body has ever adopted any distinguishing name, and the official title of each is Yearly Meeting of Friends held in Philadelphia.

The difference between these two bodies has never been clearly defined by the Friends themselves, for they are concerned rather with religion and life than with theology. And yet the difference is a fundamental one. While both bodies hold to the principles and testimonies as set forth by the early Friends, the one holds steadfastly also to the main doctrines of "evangelical" Christianity in regard to the historical Christ and the authority of the Bible; and there is a concern that the members continue sound in this respect.

The other body (the Race Street Friends), aiming to be true to the in-dwelling Christ, in daily life, and to the word of God in the heart, does not guarantee the soundness of its members in regard to the doctrines of the evangelical churches. So that these Friends are to be classed with the modern "liberal" denominations; with this difference, that a considerable proportion of the members are orthodox in doctrine. Those of widely differing views work side by side in the religious and philanthropic interests of the Society. Doctrinal differences come out frankly in the preaching and in conversation, but headstrong controversy is avoided, and there is no friction on account of differing opinions.

In England there has been no such separation as in America. London Yearly Meeting, which meets a few weeks hence, is predominantly orthodox and "evangelical," and epistles of greeting pass between it and some of the orthodox meetings of America. It contains many able members who are not of the "evangelical" type, but these have comparatively little influence in the great Yearly Meeting. Members of the Race Street branch of Friends, when present in London, are sometimes invited by special action of the meeting to sit in the business sessions of the Yearly Meeting, but ministers with certificates would not be officially received.

Associations between American and English Friends have a tendency to draw Friends more closely together. Some English Friends, when in this country visit the meetings of both branches and are equally welcomed by both. The most that is ever likely to come about in this direction will be a better understanding of one another and more cordial interest in one another, with possible co-operation in certain lines of reform and philanthropic work. But those who feel the most friendly on the one side and the other do not consider it likely that there will ever be a coming together of the two bodies in anything approaching an organic union. Nothing would be gained and much would be sacrificed on both sides by such union, were it possible.

Philadelphia Yearly Meeting is one of seven similar bodies in this country and Canada that are in close touch with one another and together form a distinct denomination. This branch of Friends have in all some 22,000 members, of which Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has 11,052. The other six Yearly Meetings are: New York, covering the eastern part of New York State and the northern half of New Jersey; Baltimore, covering Maryland (west of Chesapeake Bay), Virginia and Southern and Western Pennsylvania; Ohio, covering the eastern part of that State; Indiana, covering Western Ohio and Central and Northern Indiana; Illinois, covering Southern Indiana, Illinois, Iowa and Eastern Nebraska; and Genesee, including the meetings of Canada and of Western New York.

FARMINGTON.

Farmington Friends' Meeting House is four miles from Macedon, Ontario County, N. Y. There are two meeting houses.

The large well-kept house upon the right belongs to the "Hicksites," but of peculiar interest to us, because in this building was held "the First General Meeting," in 1871, marking the beginning of revival influences, which have imparted spiritual life throughout the Yearly Meeting.

The movement here started has resulted in an increased membership, not only among Friends, but other denominations have also largely benefited, as they were more experienced in the care of new converts.

The smaller meeting house, upon the left, commodious and more modern, is used by the Friends of our branch. It stands upon a hill, surrounded by clumps of evergreen, artistically planted, "beautiful for situation" and a "joy" to many faithful worshippers.

From many sources I have gathered information which, if not entirely accurate, is at least interesting.

Some time after 1790 a number of Friends came into this new country from Massachusetts. They were labored with and later disowned for persisting in removing to a place so far from meeting.

It was thought their faces would be seen no more. The sturdy pioneers were of good Quaker stock, however, and hewed their logs and cleared their farms, enduring many perils and hardships, but ever mindful of the gracious, definite presence of the "Inner Light."

They established regular meetings for worship and discipline, and in 1796 constructed a Friends' meeting house of logs near the hamlet called New Salem, or by the local name, Pumpkin Hook (from certain depredations the name suggests).

In Twelfth month, 1803, this house was destroyed by fire. At some time an English traveling minister discovered this "Branch in the Wilderness," and later reported to Philadelphia the conditions.

The members here were reinstated in membership, and New York Yearly Meeting provided by quota upon its subordinate meetings £200 to build a meeting house.

This was a frame structure, perfectly plain within and without, and much larger than the former one. This building stood upon a high gravel bank in front of the present structure.

The gravel bank has long since been carted away and used in making the excellent roads stretching forth in different directions.

Caleb McCumber, who died in 1850, was an acceptable minister.

In 1808 Joseph Talcott attended Farmington Monthly Meeting and encouraged Friends to request to be established as a quarterly meeting.

In 1809 a committee was appointed to confer with others from Scipio and De Ruyter as to the above.

"Good Friends" were earnestly desired "to leave their barren hills and rocks and come here and help us, where the bush has not been so much beaten."

Farmington Quarterly Meeting was established in 1810. It was made up of Scipio, Farmington and De Ruyter Monthly Meetings.

In 1816 there was a much larger meeting house erected. A soap factory had been built upon the opposite corner, and the old meeting house was used as a storage room for soap boxes.

At the time of the separation, in 1828, the Orthodox Friends went back to the old meeting house. This house also burned, and the more modern one before mentioned is now used.

Farmington Friends propose holding a centennial to commemorate the building of the meeting house by the Yearly Meeting in 1804.

J. L. SPICER.

Some Views on Present Topics.

SOCIAL PASTORAL WORK.

BY ELIZA H. CAREY.

The social pastoral work. How shall it be done? The strong tendency toward individualism which has been an outgrowth of the doctrine of Divine Guidance as it has been taught us as Friends has produced some conditions not altogether desirable. Extreme individualism is disintegration. All history of Church or State teaches that a close compact of individuals, directed by leaders is the true embodiment of strength. To be rightly directed we must have severally learned to obey. We must not be afraid of the authority of rightly-appointed leaders.

The Friends early learned that separately people may easily be mistaken in their apprehensions of the guidance of the Spirit.

All organizations require a properly appointed and sufficiently authoritative human head in order that, in the accomplishment of their purposes, the conditions which arise where "it is everybody's business," be avoided.

I trust we shall never lose sight of this blessed doctrine of Divine guidance; but I am quite convinced that we are very much in need of a better understanding of the truth of the Divine guidance of communities, of meetings, in appointing individuals to the performance of specific work.

The business of the Church is soul-saving. Our evangelistic work has been quite reasonably well organized and energetically prosecuted, but what of our care for the results? We must acknowledge that it has been largely the old story of "everybody's business."

Have we acted in this as wisely or carefully as we would in temporal matters? If we went about to establish a home for little children we would have it well lighted, well ventilated and well supplied with cribs, cradles and beds; in fact, well fitted with all things necessary to good sanitary conditions, amusement, proper training for the mind, etc. But we would not stop here. We would seek out trained, well qualified attendants and separate them from the necessity of all other employment, so that they would not only be at liberty, but it would become their duty to give a constant, faithful attendance to the welfare of those needing their care.

Child life, physically and spiritually, are alike dependent on fostering care until strength and wisdom are developed to a point where the individual is able to walk and work and discern, and so take his place among the activities around him. It is extremely unwise to trust to a haphazard supply of this essential ministrations. Men for the most part come to Christ through personal influence, and it is equally true that almost, if not quite universally, we are able to "walk in Him" with a steadier step through this same helpful agency.

According to a somewhat extended observation it is a rare thing to find a meeting that is suffering for the need of preaching, and yet it cannot be denied that in the midst of most of our meetings there are classes that are being neglected—people that we ought to gain and hold for Christ. It is imperative that we meet and supply this need lest we meet at the last the solemn word by Ezekiel, "His blood will I require at thy hand."

The question then is how and by whom? This personal work and work in homes was once done by traveling ministers, and the elders and overseers. Why is it not so now?

I am not at all prepared to believe that our ministers and other workers do not to-day look for and receive the guidance of the Holy Spirit even as did they; and so I find but this conclusion: God is pointing us to some other method.

What are the signs of the times? Very many of our ministers feel called to locate in a community and give their entire time to this work.

However much of prejudice and tradition must be buried in so doing a careful consideration of the conditions in different places wrings from us the admission that almost if not quite the only places where this work is being done effectively are the places where there is one called of God, clothed with the sanction and authority of the Church, and whose hands are released from financial embarrassment by a liberal support, that he may devote himself entirely to the work of a pastor.

The true pastor, whether he shall do most of the preaching or not, will exercise great care that an edifying ministry is supplied in the public meetings. Edifying means building up, and the ministry that does not build up the congregation, as well as the spiritual condition of the members, is not sufficiently edifying.

He will consider it his business to observe who is absent from meeting, and see that each one is visited and encouraged. Not that he should do all, but he may say to A, B or C, "I notice the 'Allens' are not at meeting, will you call and inquire? I will see them soon also." Another and another may receive like commissions. There are the unconverted who frequently attend meeting. It means very much to them that the pastor is sure to call occasionally with an expression of interest and a word of prayer, though the home be godless and altarless.

The unsaved among us must be approached carefully and prayerfully; but he who is a diligent fisher of men will not fail to press upon these the need of salvation, that none may find cause to say that "No man hath cared for my soul."

Then there are the hotel and boarding house people. I think it would do good if we read the article in THE AMERICAN FRIEND of Second month 18th: "A Pointer"—"Boarding-house Talk"—in our meetings with some forcible comments. These people are invited to the dance, to the card table, to the theater, the saloon. We ought to be as earnest. It will be the pastor's business to find these and express interest, and then he will make it the business of some Christian Endeavorer, or young man or young woman to call on Sabbath morning, or at the prayer meeting hour, and bring them in.

There is another class coming under the pastor's especial care—those who profess conversion but have not united with the church. How many times upon inquiry I have received the answer, "Well, I have thought I should like to be a member; they have not asked me to join." I remember one bright young man added, "I suppose I might have requested any way, but really I wasn't sure they wanted me."

The preaching is important, but the personal pastoral work is no less important. It must be done or we fail in a vital point. "It must be done by those who have a gift for it, and it must be done by those who have a concern for it." It must be done by the Church, under the direction of pastors wise from above, whose gift and call from God, seconded by the authority of the church, has conferred upon them power in doing it.

Wichita, Kan.

The International Lesson.

SECOND QUARTER.

LESSON IX.

FIFTH MONTH 29, 1904.

THE PASSOVER.

Matthew 26: 17-30.

GOLDEN TEXT.—For even Christ our passover is sacrificed for us.—1 Cor. 5: 7.

DAILY READINGS.

Second-day, Fifth mo. 23.—The passover. Matt. 26: 17-30.
Third-day, Fifth mo. 24.—The traitor indicated. John 13: 21-30.
Fourth-day, Fifth mo. 25.—The first passover. Ex. 12: 21-28.
Fifth-day, Fifth mo. 26.—The living bread. John 6: 48-58.
Sixth-day, Fifth mo. 27.—The cup of blessing. 1 Cor. 10: 16-21.
Seventh-day, Fifth mo. 28.—The remembrance. 1 Cor. 11: 23-34.
First-day, Fifth mo. 29.—The upper room. Luke 22: 7-20.

Time.—Fifth-day afternoon and evening, the day before the trial before Pilate and the crucifixion.

Place.—The upper room of some house in Jerusalem, possibly the home of Mary, the mother of Mark.

Parallel Passages.—Mark 14: 12-26; Luke 22: 7-30; John 13: 1-30.

The parallel accounts should be read, as each supplies details not given by the others. Note that, except in Luke, and questionably there, there is no trace of the institution of any rite. It was to eat the Passover that Christ and His disciples met in the upper room.

17. "The first day of unleavened bread." "Thursday, the 14th of Nisan." According to the Jewish mode of reckoning the feast began after sunset on the 14th. During the Passover only unleavened bread was eaten. Ex. 12: 18. "Prepare." For a Passover supper was needed the lamb which had to be slain in the Temple enclosure between three and five in the afternoon, and cooked in a private house, the bitter herbs, unleavened bread, and wine. Ex. 12: 1-11; 14: 20; Deut. 16: 5, 6.

18. "To such a man." Mark gives the directions more fully. Mary 14: 13-16. It is altogether likely that the man was a disciple. It is not improbable that this was the same room used by the disciples after the ascension of Christ for a meeting place.

Acts 1: 13; 12: 12. "My time is at hand." The time for his trial and death.

20. "Sat down." Literally, "reclined." As is well known, it was customary at this time to recline on couches around the table. These couches were on three sides of a low table. The diner leaned on the left elbow, thus leaving the right hand free. The feet rested on the couch, and were not under the table, as with us. One side of the table was without a couch, so that the food could be placed upon the table by the attendants. Nearly all the pictures of the meal are incorrect, as they represent Christ and the apostles sitting. It was no new custom among the Jews. Esther 1: 5, 6; Amos 6: 4. According to Luke there was a strife among the disciples which should be greatest, possibly regarding their position at the table, possibly in the future. Luke 22: 24-30.

21. "As they were eating." R. V. This shows that the betrayal was no surprise to Christ.

22. "Exceeding sorrowful." This was natural. "Is it I, Lord?" In the original the expression is equivalent to, "Can it be I?" or "It cannot be I, can it?"

23. "He that dippeth his hand with me in dish." As no forks, knives or spoons were used, or even plates, the guests used their fingers, helping themselves from a common dish. As all did this, the expression simply means, my familiar friend is my betrayer. Compare John 13: 26.

24. "As it is written." Compare Ps. 22; Is. 53. "Woe." This is the statement of a fact, not an imprecation.

25. It seems likely that the other disciples did not hear the reply of Christ, and that immediately Judas went out, as described in John 13: 20, and so was not present during the rest of the supper, or when Christ gave the discourses recorded by John.

26. "Took bread and blessed," etc. He doubtless used the ordinary Jewish blessing. "This is my body." This bread which nourishes the body is a symbol of that which nourishes the soul. The spiritual feeding upon my teachings, the acquiring of my Spirit, the living my life will nourish your soul as this bread nourishes your body. Compare John 6: 53, 63.

27. "And he took the cup," etc. The expression "gave thanks," the translation of the Greek word Eucharistesas from which Eucharist comes.

28. "For this is my blood of the covenant which is shed for many unto remission of sins." R. V. This is a symbol of my blood—my life, which is given for all. Blood and life were almost synonymous terms among the Jews. The covenant is, that God through Christ would save all men that put their trust in Him. The object of the death of Christ is that we may have eternal life. John 3: 14-16; 20: 30. Under the symbol of the bread, Christ teaches that our spiritual life depends on our receiving His spirit into our hearts, and by the cup that it is only by His death that we obtain eternal life.

29. This does not mean that we will drink new wine, but a new kind of wine—it will be something different. It was probably at this time that Christ gave the discourses as recorded in John 13: 31 to 16: 33.

30. "When they had sung a hymn." There is no reasonable doubt that Christ and the Apostles sang or rather chanted Psalm 118, which was the Psalm regularly used on such an occasion.

Note.—The principal ground for the disuse of the ordinance is the belief that Christ instituted no outward rite. His teaching is that nothing is essential but a change of heart and change of life, and these are in no way dependent upon outward ceremony. Had the "Supper" been obligatory, it is inconceivable that accurate directions for its observance should not have been left. There is no reason to believe that the earliest Church looked upon Christ's words as establishing a Church rite—that grew up later. In the earliest days a simple meal was eaten together, Acts 2: 46, R. V., and the gift of Christ remembered with thanksgiving, but this appears to have been a family matter, not a church rite. There are but two or three small denominations who even attempt to eat a meal as Christ did with his disciples. It is not denied that some Christians may have thought themselves benefited by observing the rite, but the tendency is that reliance will be put on the symbol rather than on that which the symbol represents. To those who have the spiritual communion the symbol is unnecessary.

It may be added that only in Luke and in 1 Cor. 11 is there any trace of a command of continuance, and a careful reading of those passages leaves great uncertainty as to whether any requirement was made even upon those then present. The position held by Friends is the only absolutely consistent, clear and unassailable one.

Christian Endeavor

TOPIC FOR FIFTH MONTH TWENTY-NINTH.

WHAT CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR IS DOING IN MISSION LANDS.

Luke 1: 49-55.

Second-day, Fifth mo. 23.—Learning the Bible. Deut. 31: 12, 13.

Third-day, Fifth mo. 24.—The hope of elders. Ps. 144: 12; 148: 12, 13.

Fourth-day, Fifth mo. 25.—They find Christ early. Prov. 8: 17, 32, 33.

Fifth-day, Fifth mo. 26.—Christ wants the young. Matt. 18: 4-6, 10.

Sixth-day, Fifth mo. 27.—Youthful praise. Matt. 21: 15, 16.

Seventh-day, Fifth mo. 28.—Not to be despised. 1 Tim. 4: 12-16.

"Into all the world," said Christ, and to-day, in almost every land where His name is known, may be found in some form or other the symbolic words, "Christian Endeavor." The last annual report of the treasurer of the World's Union mentions grants, among others, for work in Brazil and Iceland, in India, China and Japan. Endeavor secretaries are found in these distant fields, and their labors, while great, are abundantly successful.

General Secretary Hinman, of China, reports the completion of a recent two months' tour along the coast of that country in company with Secretary Hatch, of India. Large meetings of natives and foreigners were addressed in the cities of Canton, Hongkong, Amoy and Foochow, several being held in each city in the largest churches available. Union and denominational rallies are spoken of in such an American fashion as to make us wonder until we remember how our one Master has used and blessed this organization in every land.

From India comes a word, not from our secretary, but from a missionary secretary, who reports that "Christian Endeavor has a strong hold in India," and goes on to tell how in Madura he saw seventy-five rough-looking boys following the one hundred and fifty girls of a boarding school, who were returning from church, "as if they had a right to"; and they had, for these Endeavor girls, after receiving for themselves, were giving out to others, and had organized a Sunday School for these neglectedurchins. In another city, a society of five hundred members carries on five or six schools, besides arranging for street preaching.

Brazil's National Union, organized the latter part of 1902 with fifteen societies, had thirty-five on its rolls a year later, and their national secretary reports increasing energy and bright prospects for another year of success.

Thirty-five societies, most of them the outgrowth of a single earnest society in a boarding school, is the style of argument that Persia adduces on the question of the profitableness of Endeavor mission work. Armenians, Jews and Moslems mingling in fellowship is a sight to kindle hopes of a brighter day for this land once so prominent, but fallen from her glory under Cyrus and Cambyes. English, Armenian, Persian and Hebrew are the required languages for the witnesses in a society in Teheran.

Still more cosmopolitan is an Egyptian society which has on its rolls Italians, Syrians, Armenians, Copts, Hindus, Germans, English and Armenians. Of the one hundred and forty-one societies in Africa, one on the West Coast, started by five members, now numbers two hundred; while from the Boer prison camps of the recent war two hundred Endeavorers have gone into active service as missionaries.

Japan has one hundred and fifteen societies, some of which are afloat with the Royal Navy. She supports a national magazine, and has a traveling secretary, who gives his time to the forming of new societies.

Such facts as these must give us in the home of Christian Endeavor new courage and hope for our own work for Christ's cause everywhere.

Correspondence.

Glens Falls, N. Y., Fifth month, 1904.

TO THE AMERICAN FRIEND:

New York Yearly Meeting will convene in Glens Falls this year, on the 26th of this month. All applications for homes may be sent to either of the following of the committee: Harris G. Haviland, Arthur W. Cary, Lillock J. Varney or Charles R. Eddy. Please state whether a single room or two in a room, and any other particulars which will assist the committee.

On behalf of the above,

C. R. EDDY, Correspondent.

Jerusalem, Fourth month 19th, 1904.

Editor of THE AMERICAN FRIEND:

I believe my last letter was written before Easter, consequently I will give a little summary of events since that date. We landed at Beirut the morning of the 4th inst., and were taken immediately to the American College, in the city, where a very interesting meeting was held. A few of us Friends, however, soon proceeded to the Insane Hospital five miles out, on the side of the Lebanon Mountains, which is in charge of Theophilus Waldmeier. We were delighted with the situation and surroundings. Our stay there had to be brief, as we were to return to the ship to continue our journey in the evening. We were not allowed to leave without partaking of an elaborate lunch, and having our pictures taken in the beautiful lawn in front of their dwelling. The next morning we landed at Caifa where more than 200 of us took horses for the overland trip to Jerusalem, by way of Nazareth, Sea of Galilee and Samaria; a distance of 130 miles. In the few minutes that I have to write this, I can scarcely more than mention some of the impressive scenes we witnessed on this journey. We traveled for hours at the foot of Mt. Carmel, crossed the brook Kishon, and late in the afternoon came in full view of that most enchanting scene—the Plain of Esdraelon. No word picture of mine can do justice to this basin-like valley, with the mountains of Gilboa stretching away in the distance in one direction and Little Hermon bordering the plain in another direction. I do not remember to have been quite so impressed with any scene either in the Rocky or the Allegheny Mountains. In a few hours we reached Nazareth, nestled among the hills, where we spent the night. How strange it all seemed to be really in the place where Jesus spent a quarter of a century of His earthly life; and then to be waited upon at the table, as we were, by Joseph, Solomon and David. The name of our Christian dragoman was Jesus, whom they called Esu. He was a very kind and obliging young man.

On making the journey from Nazareth to Tiberias, on the Sea of Galilee, we passed through Cana, where the children swarmed around our ponies, crying out something which I could not understand, but which Esu stated was a welcome to their village.

There was but little left in Tiberias to tell of its glory in the time of the Cæsars, but the placid waters of "Galilee, blue Galilee," are doubtless the same as when Jesus walked its shores.

"The same sky throws its arch above
As when He taught His creed of love."

We returned again to Nazareth and visited important places in the village, then started southward, making short stops at Jezreel and Nain.

We spent Sabbath, the 10th, at Shechem, situated between the mountains of Ebal and Gerizim. Here the delegates had interesting meetings. A short distance from this place is Jacob's Well, where by turns we sat upon the stone curb.

I must omit many places, but I cannot pass by Samaria, which I should have stated that we visited in the afternoon before reaching Shechem.

This place, like nearly all the Eastern towns we have seen, is situated upon quite an eminence, so much so that it seemed almost impossible to climb the precipitous heights with our horses. Here upon the summit we had a wonderful view of the surrounding country for many, many miles, and received some impression of the grandeur that must have been in the time of the Herods.

The long colonnade of massive marble pillars still stand like mighty sentinels on one side of the rectangular area, upon which a most magnificent palace once stood.

On the night of the 11th we reached Ramallah, ten miles out from Jerusalem, and Laura A. Winston, George Hartley and myself, by previous invitation, stopped at Friends' Mission there. This was the hardest day's travel we had made, having been eleven hours in the saddle, because there was no suitable place to stop short of this. Our discomfort was increased in the forenoon by a drizzling rain, followed by a cold wind in the afternoon.

The elevation of Ramallah is some three thousand feet above sea level, which made the temperature colder than the valleys.

How refreshing to our spirits it seemed to get into this Christian home, with such pleasant, cleanly surroundings. Our stay was only too short, as it was necessary to leave for Jerusalem in the early morning.

We were glad after our arduous journey overland to reach the "Holy City," and plant our feet upon Mt. Zion and Mt.

Olivet. In the few days preceding the convention, beginning the 17th, we traveled, in side trips, near one hundred miles by carriage and donkeys, and now these past three days the 800 American delegates, joined by the 400 English delegates and others, have been meeting in convention in a great tent pitched near the foot of the Mount of Olives.

This impressive gathering, with the impressive scenes about us, is certainly unique in character, and an opportunity that perhaps to the majority of us can never come but once in a lifetime.

The proceedings of the convention cannot now be entered upon as the time is near for us to go to the meeting, the last meeting of this convention.

L. ELLA HARTLEY.

Editor THE AMERICAN FRIEND:

Dear Friend: The name of Willis R. Hotchkiss having been quite generally associated in the public mind with the founding of the Friends' Africa Industrial Mission, his published announcement that he is no longer connected with that work has elicited numerous inquiries.

It is therefore right to state, for the information of all who are interested, that in the founding and management of the mission, the Board have earnestly sought for divine wisdom and guidance, and have had continuous evidence of these in locating and founding the mission and in its present very promising condition. The changed relation between the Board and W. R. Hotchkiss is due to the fact that, although the duties and relations of the three who started out together in the work were specifically understood and accepted in the outset of the undertaking, differences of judgment occurred on the field, which resulted in W. R. Hotchkiss sending to the Board his resignation and promptly starting for home. The Board, hoping that all differences would soon be adjusted, instead of accepting his resignation, retained him in its employ in this country, in the meantime endeavoring to bring about such an arrangement as would be satisfactory to all concerned. At a recent meeting of the Executive Committee, in a conference with W. R. Hotchkiss, it became evident that his demands in order to a satisfactory settlement of questions under consideration and the future organization of the work, were such as, in the judgment of the Board, the exigencies of the case did not warrant; and since the meeting of these demands was the one condition of his continuing in our employ, no alternative was left but to accept his resignation. This the Board have done, not without deep regret, and not without a high appreciation of his gifts and his former labors, and the warmest wishes for his future welfare and success.

P. W. RAIDABAUGH,

President of Friends' African Industrial Mission.

Things of Interest Among Ourselves.

The meeting at Dunreith, Ind., is prospering with Leannah Hobson as pastor. The attendance at prayer meeting is large.

Timothy Nicholson and wife, who have been visiting in California during the past winter, are now at home in Richmond, Ind.

Fred E. Smith and wife, who have been in Earlham College for the past year, are expecting to take regular pastoral work this fall.

F. W. Thomas, now at Traverse City, Mich., has a minute to attend New York Yearly Meeting. He is 82 years of age, and is fresh and vigorous.

John Riley has recently conducted a short series of meetings at Alamitos Meeting, California. Much good was done. He is now engaged in camp meeting work.

Elizabeth G. Underhill, from Ohio Yearly Meeting, engaged in meetings at Elba, N. Y., for a week recently. J. Lindley Spicer was present part of the time. Good results are reported.

Mary P. Nicholson, of Haverford, has a minute from Western District Monthly Meeting of Philadelphia (Twelfth Street), for religious service within the limits of Concord Quarterly Meeting.

The program for the Friends' Summer School of Religious History, to be held at Haverford College, Sixth month 15th to 25th, is now published, and can be secured by writing to O. M. Chase, Haverford, Pa.

A camp meeting, conducted by John J. Danks, of Hoisington, Kan.; Susie E. Allen, of Alva, and Edna Hill, of Keith, Okla., is in progress near the Bethel and Liberty meeting houses in the northwestern part of Woods County, Okla.

Levi Rees and wife passed their thirty-fifth wedding anniversary the 30th ult. Their friends now in Whittier, California, who formerly knew them in Noblesville, Ind., gave them a pleasant surprise and a social evening.

W. P. and Caroline N. Hunnicutt, who have had charge of the work at Alamitos Meeting, in California, for the last four years, expect to leave the work at the end of Sixth month. The church is in a good condition spiritually and financially. They are arranging to build an $800 cottage for the use of the pastor.

Scranton Quarterly Meeting was held at Paton, Iowa, the 24th ult. Seth Rees and wife were present. The meeting was greatly blessed by his ministry. John Bowles and Melvin Smith were also in attendance. Susan B. Sisson, who has been laboring in this quarterly meeting for some time, is expecting to close her labors here soon.

New Garden Monthly Meeting, held at West Grove, Pa., on the fourth of this month, granted minutes for religious service, to William B. Harvey to accompany William C. Allen in his visit to Barbadoes and Porto Rico; to Zebedee Haines within Haddonfield and Salem, and Burlington and Bucks Quarterly Meetings, also Muncy Monthly Meeting; and Elizabeth C. Cooper, to Haddonfield Quarterly Meeting and the meetings composing it.

New England Yearly Meeting of Friends, to be held at Friends School, Providence, R. I. Round-trip tickets at reduced rates, good going Sixth month 22d to 28th, and returning Sixth month 23d to 30th, inclusive, will be on sale at the usual points. Boarding rates, 25 cents per meal, and 50 cents per room for two persons. Extra charges for larger rooms and special accommodations. Early application for rooms should be made to Susan S. Moore, Friends School, Providence, R. I.

Spiceland Academy, at Spiceland, Ind., has in the past sent out many students who became leading and prominent men. New honors have recently come to it. At the recent Republican State Convention, held at Indianapolis, Joseph H. Stubbs was nominated for State Statistician, and Fassett A. Cotton, the present State Superintendent of Public Instruction, was renominated for the office. Both of these men were educated at Spiceland Academy. Cyrus W. Neal, for many years head of the Insurance Department in the office of the Auditor of State, was also a student of Spiceland Academy. Charles F. Griffin, ex-Secretary of State of Indiana, now deceased, and L. P. Mitchell, Deputy Comptroller of the Treasury at Washington, were also educated at Spiceland Academy.

Though relatively the number of Friends in Oregon is small, the Church is well represented in the political and official life of the State. At the recent Congressional Convention of the First District, Jesse Edwards, of Newberg, was chosen as one of two alternates to attend the Republican National Convention at Chicago in Sixth month. John Richie, of Scott's Mills, one of the clerks of Oregon Yearly Meeting, has been nominated for State Representative by the Republicans of Marion County, the county in which the State Capital is located, while B. C. Miles, of Newberg, has been renominated for the Legislature by the Republicans of Yamhill County. The latter county has also nominated Calvin Blair, a senior in Pacific College, for County Surveyor.

The President and the Secretary of State have promised to do everything possible to further our educational and missionary work in Palestine. Here is a good solid letter from the Secretary of State to the Congressman from the first Maine district:

"DEPARTMENT OF STATE, WASHINGTON.

"April 27th, 1904.

"The Honorable Amos L. Allen,

"House of Representatives.

"Sir: Referring to the letter, dated the 11th inst., which you lately left at the Department, from Mr. Timothy B. Hussey, President of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Yearly Meeting of Friends for New England, requesting the aid of the Department to obtain a firman or permit from the Sultan of Turkey to purchase more land at Ramallah, near Jerusalem, Palestine, and to build thereon an industrial school for boys, etc., I have the honor to inform you that a copy of the letter has been sent to the United States Minister at Constantinople for his information, with instructions to use his good offices with the Turkish Government to obtain the desired firman or permit.

"I have the honor to be, sir,

"Your obedient servant,

"(Signed) JOHN HAY."

BORN.

FOSTER.—To Herbert T. and Hulda C. Foster, New London, Conn., Fourth month 30th, 1904, a daughter, Sarah Louise.

MARRIED.

TORMOHLEN.—JAMES.—At the residence of Morton C. Pearson, Indianapolis, Ind., Fifth month 11th, Frederick H. Tormohlen, of Upland, and Susie M. James, of Harrisburg, Ky.

DIED.

ALBERTSON.—At the home of B. H. Albertson, Haviland, Kansas, Second month 15th, 1904, Asenath Albertson, widow of Phineas Albertson, and daughter of Isaac and Mary Wilson, in her 83d year. She was a life-long member of Friends. Although being blind for 27 years she was still interested in church work, and died in the triumph of living faith.

BARNETT.—At McLoud, O. T., Third month 26th, 1904, Flora A., daughter of Edward and Sarah Jane Hale, and wife of Edson Barnett, in her 32d year. The deceased was converted in 1891 and united with the Congregational Church. The next year she found a deeper experience of soul rest and transferred her membership to Shawneetown Monthly Meeting, of which she remained a constant member until called to her heavenly rest.

FRAZIER.—Caroline Frazier, wife of George Frazier and daughter of Jacob and Catharine Williams, died of consumption, at her home at Williamsburg, Ind., Twelfth month 22d, 1903, aged 42 years.

HAVILAND.—In Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Fourth month 24th, 1904, Judith M. Haviland, widow of the late Alexander Y. Haviland, in her 91st year.

HUSSEY.—At the home of her son, Omar G. Hussey, Waldow, Me., Third month 20th, 1904, Hannah Hussey, widow of Lincoln Hussey. She was a Friend who led a useful, quiet life, faithful to the end.

KNOWLES.—At Smyrna, New York, Fourth month 25th, 1904, Katie J. Knowles, widow of the late Joseph Knowles, aged 57 years. A member and minister of Smyrna Monthly Meeting. She was ever an earnest laborer in Christian service.

LIESTENFELTZ.—At her home in Blaskford County, Indiana, Fifth month 7th, 1904, Nancy A., wife of Jacob Liestenfeltz, aged nearly 68 years. She was a member of Friends for nearly twenty-five years, residing in the immediate vicinity of Olive Branch Local and Monthly Meetings.

NEWLIN.—At Bloomingdale, Ind., Fourth month 27th, 1904, Kersey Newlin, aged 74 years. He was a consistent member of Bloomingdale Monthly Meeting, Parke County, Ind. He lived on the same farm all his life.

PURINTON.—At his home in Starksboro, Vt., Tenth month 25th, 1903, Elisha H. Purinton, aged 76 years. He was an esteemed member of Ferrisburg Monthly Meeting.

RIDGEWAY.—At her home, La Porte, Ind., Third month 21st, 1904, Malinda Ridgeway, wife of John W. Ridgeway, aged 76 years. She was a lifelong member of Friends and an active temperance worker.

TERRELL.—At her home, Oskaloosa, Iowa, Fourth month 29th, 1904, Lydia L. Terrell, in her 74th year.

THORNBURG.—At his home, Highland, Ohio, Fourth month, 17th, 1904, Edward Thornburg, a valued member of Fairfield Quarterly Meeting, Ohio, aged 84 years and 5 months. He was a birthright Friend, and was unwaveringly loyal, spending much time and means in the work of the church, and was for many years a faithful elder. For twenty-five years he served as trustee of Wilmington College, and was actively engaged in every undertaking for the advancement of educational interests.

WYMAN.—At West Branch, N. Y., Second month 11th, 1904, Sarah Wyman, aged 79 years. She was a birthright member of Friends, and an esteemed elder of West Branch Monthly Meeting.

Events and Comments.

The Secretary of War will direct and supervise the work of the Panama Canal Commission.

The National Congress of Mothers met in its seventh annual convention in Chicago last week. Over 500 delegates were present. One of the subjects up for consideration was "divorce." The Congress strongly favored uniform laws relative to this institution.

Ten tons of gold were reduced to a molten state at the Mint in Philadelphia on Third-day last week, and again on Fourth-day. This is said to be the greatest record for mint melting yet attained in the United States. As fast as this gold is coined it is stored and certificates issued for circulation.

The monetary circulation of the country underwent another large expansion during Fourth month—no less than $16,000,000 being added to the amount outstanding. Practically all of the increase came from gold and gold certificates, and much of it was obtained at the expense of cash holdings in the United States Treasury. The circulation per capita now exceeds $31, or the highest ever known.

A FOOT RACE.

Minister vs. Boy.

"Facts are facts and stubborn things indeed," says a Michigan clergyman who had a memorable food experience.

"The fact is when a man gets all out of sorts physically because of a derangement of the stomach so that his heart action is bad, is very nervous owing to physical organs impaired and nothing he can eat of an ordinary kind will properly assimilate, it is time to call a halt. Such was my case two years ago last March, when I commenced using Grape-Nuts according to directions and have continued their use up to the present time with the result I am in better health physically and mentally than I have been for many years, having passed my 63d year.

"To demonstrate this fact I proposed a foot-race with my 11-year old boy who was very fleet on foot, and he being bare-foot imagined he could outrun his pa, but I was besting him until a slip of my foot on a muddy place caused me to stumble, and I found myself rolling in the mud in the road. I soon found my footing again undamaged, and had to join in a good, hearty laugh with my wife and daughter.

"Why should I not recommend Grape-Nuts to my friends when the food has done so much for me, for I am confident that had it not been for the help this excellent food supplied I would to-day have been past recovery. Instead of growing old now I feel younger than I have for years with more mental strength as well as physical, and can preach better sermons than ever before." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Grape-Nuts makes far healthier, keener brains. A dull worn-out brain can be remade on this food. There's a reason.

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

The Canadian Government has bought another railroad, the Canada Eastern, which is located in New Brunswick, for $800,000. The road is 136 miles long, and serves as a feeder to the Intercolonial. The Dominion seems to be rapidly realizing, in transportation, the government ownership idea.

Future attendance upon the St. Louis Exposition is, of course, not indicated by that of the early days of the show, when it is in an incomplete state and dependent almost entirely upon local patronage. But it is interesting to note that the average daily attendance since the opening day has been in the neighborhood of 20,000, or about the same as for the Chicago World's Fair during the corresponding period.

The death of the President of Peru is not an event of international importance, perhaps, although his passing may affect Peru's relations with Brazil in the matter of the perpetual Acre dispute. Brazil seems to have threatened war if the Peruvian government did not promptly withdraw its troops from the disputed territory. With this controversy pending, President Candamo, of Peru, dies of rheumatism of the stomach.

The British soldiers in Thibet have been having a peculiar experience with the art of war in high altitudes. Thibet is so high above the sea that ordinary rules are often suspended and a little scientific knowledge becomes indispensable to the successful commander. At 15,000 feet above the sea it was found that the rice ration for the men was insufficiently cooked, and the cause of this was that the boiling point of water descends rapidly as the altitude increases. The most serious difficulty attending the campaign has been the effect of the cold and high altitude upon the Maxim guns and the rifles. The oil used as a lubricant became a clog so far above the sea, and the springs in the guns had their elasticity seriously affected.

The Redemptorists, one of the few remaining religious congregations, were expelled from their monastery in Paris one day last week. A company of firemen had been assembled to scale the walls in case of resistance, but no opposition was made. The authorities occupied the building and the members of the order retired. This is simply another step in the struggle which has been going on between the government and church schools since 1901, when the French Chamber passed the association act, designed to curb the power and restrict the activities of the religious associations and congregations, particularly those conducting schools in competition with secular public instruction. The law was not vigorously enforced until M. Combes became Premier of France, 1902. Since then a determined effort has been made to destroy clerical influence. The Jesuits, Assumptionists, Benedictines and Carmelites were chiefly aimed at by the law, and were promptly expelled. The Redemptorists are among the last to be affected. Practically all of the religious institutions remaining are of this order, and their expulsion will be quietly effected, in all probability, all resistance having proved ineffective.

IT IS A MATTER OF HEALTH

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure
THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

Aspiration seeks the character of the king, ambition cares only for the condition.

MANY ATTRACTIVE TRIPS AT EXTREMELY LOW RATES, VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

The following are a few points to which extremely low rate Excursion Tickets, which are available to the general public, will be sold via the Southern Railway during the year 1904, viz.:

Athens, Ga.—Summer School, July 5th to August 6th.

Asheville, N. C.—Annual Conference, Y. W. C. A., June 10th to 20th.

Atlanta, Ga.—Annual Convention Southern Hardware Jobbers' Association and American Hardware Manufacturer's Association, May 24th to 27th.

Dallas, Texas.—General Assembly Cumberland Presbyterian Church, May 19th to 27th.

Knoxville, Tenn.—Summer School, June 29th to August 5th.

Mobile, Ala.—General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in United States, May 19th to 24th.

Monteagle, Tenn.—Monteagle Bible School, July 4th to August 4th.

Monteagle, Tenn.—Woman's Congress, August 1st to 7th.

Monteagle, Tenn.—Monteagle Sunday School Institute, August 15th to 30th.

Nashville, Tenn.—Annual Meeting Southern Baptist Convention, May 12th to 18th.

Nashville, Tenn.—Peabody Normal Summer School, June 6th to August 3d.

Nashville, Tenn.—United Confederate Veterans Reunion, June 14th to 16th.

St. Louis, Mo.—Louisiana Purchase Exposition, May to November.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—Summer School, June 14th to July 29th.

Waynesville, N. C.—Annual Conference Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., June 10th to 20th.

Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, will take pleasure in furnishing all information.

"ALL ON ACCOUNT OF THE BABY."

An ache in the back and an ache in the arms,

All on account of the baby.

A fear and a fright and a thousand alarms,

All on account of the baby.

And bottles and rattles and whistles and rings,

From cellar to attic a clutter of things,

From morning to night and to morning again

More fuss and more fume than an army of men,

And a head that is stupid for lack of its sleep,

And a heart where a flood of anxieties leap—

All on account of the baby.

A joy in the heart and a light in the eyes,

All on account of the baby.

A growing content and a growing surprise,

All on account of the baby.

And patience that conquers a myriad frets,

And a sunshiny song that another begets,

And pureness of soul as a baby is pure,

And sureness of faith as the children are sure,

And a glory of love between husband and wife,

And a saner and happier outlook on life,

All on account of the baby.

—"Christian Endeavor World."

BAD DREAMS

Indicate Improper Diet, Usually Due to Coffee.

One of the common symptoms of coffee poisoning is the bad dreams that spoil what should be restful sleep. A man who found the reason says:

"Formerly I was a slave to coffee. I was like a morphine fiend, could not sleep at night, would roll and toss in my bed, and when I did get to sleep was disturbed by dreams and hobgoblins, would wake up with headaches and feel bad all day, so nervous I could not attend to business. My writing looked like bird tracks, I had sour belchings from the stomach, indigestion, heartburn, and palpitation of the heart, constipation, irregularity of the kidneys, etc.

"Indeed, I began to feel I had all the troubles that human flesh could suffer, but when a friend advised me to leave off coffee I felt as if he had insulted me. I could not bear the idea, it had such a hold on me, and I refused to believe it the cause.

"But it turned out that no advice was ever given at a more needed time, for I finally consented to try Postum and with the going of coffee and the coming of Postum all my troubles have gone, and health has returned. I eat and sleep well now, nerves steadied down, and I write a fair hand (as you can see), can attend to business again and rejoice that I am free from the monster Coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Ten days trial of Postum in place of coffee will bring sound, restful, refreshing sleep. There's a reason.

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

NOTICE.

Annual meeting of Home for Aged and Infirm Colored Persons for the election of Managers and for other business will be held at the Home, corner of Forty-fourth and Girard Avenue, on Fifth-day, Fifth month 26th, 1904, at 3 p.m.

THOMAS H. MCCOLLIN, Sec.

YEARLY MEETINGS IN 1904.

New York Yearly Meeting at Glens Falls, N. Y., Fifth month 27th. James Wood, Clerk, Mount Kisco, N. Y.

California Yearly Meeting, at Whittier, Cal., Sixth month 22d. John Chawner, Clerk, El Modena, Cal.

New England Yearly Meeting, at Providence, R. I., Sixth month 24th. John Ellwood Paige, Clerk, 50 Chatham Street, Lynn, Mass.

Canada Yearly Meeting, at Pickering, Ont., Sixth month 24th. William I. Moore, Clerk, 60 Bleeker Street, Toronto, Ont.

Oregon Yearly Meeting, at Newberg, Ore., Seventh month 5th. Edwin McGrew, Clerk, Newberg, Ore.

North Carolina Yearly Meeting, at High Point, N. C., Eighth month 10th. L. Lyndon Hobbs, Clerk, Guilford College, N. C.

Wilmington Yearly Meeting, at Wilmington, O., Eighth month 18th. James B. Unthank, Clerk, Wilmington, O.

Ohio Yearly Meeting, at Damascus, O., Eighth Month 25th. Edward Mott, Clerk, Tecumseh, Mich.

Iowa Yearly Meeting, at Oskaloosa, Ia., Ninth month 6th. Stephen M. Hadley, Clerk, Oskaloosa, Ia.

Western Yearly Meeting, at Plainfield, Ind., Ninth month 16th. Lewis E. Stout, Clerk, Plainfield, Ind.

Indiana Yearly Meeting, at Richmond, Ind., Ninth month 28th. Elwood O. Ellis, Clerk, Richmond, Ind. Anna M. Roberts, Clerk, Richmond, Ind.

Kansas Yearly Meeting, at Wichita, Kan., Tenth month 7th. Edmund Stanley, Clerk, Wichita, Kan.

Baltimore Yearly Meeting, at Baltimore, Md., Eleventh month 11th. Allen C. Thomas, Clerk, Haverford, Pa. Anna King Carey, Clerk, 838 Park Avenue, Baltimore, Md.

Henry M. Stanley, the African explorer, who was instrumental in founding the Congo Free State and in finding the missionary-explorer, David Livingstone, died at his home in London on the 10th inst.

